Coursers are beginning to think about the Waterloo Cup, and the meetings of this month are rather shorn of their flyers, who are being kept in lavender for the plains of Altear, where Mr. Nightingale once more headed the pull on the election for judge The meetings of the ensuing week are Bywell and Belsay, on Monday; Springkell, on Tuesday; Biggar Champion, on Tuesday, &c.; Limerick, on Tuesday and Wednesday; Hewell and Hindley, on Wednesday; Eveley, on Wednesday, &c.; Baldon (O.), on Thursday, &c.; and Tinsley, on Friday and Saturday. Stonehenge has just published the first part of a "Coursing Calendar and Review," which will appear regularly every four months. Speaking of greyhound stoutness, he says—"I believe there is considerable difficulty in getting sufficient stoutness; but in combination with the blood of Bugle, as in Riot, Rantet, Ajax, &c., and also in the descendants of Blue Light, who has the Bugle and Streamer blood combined, it appears that the two qualities are as far as possible presented together.

TATTERSALL'S.—THURSDAY

LIVERPOOL STEEPLECHASE.—8 to 1 agst Muros (off.), 11 to 1 agst Feigrant (off.), 20 to 1 agst Little Charley (t.), 20 to 1 agst Hopeless Star (t.), 100 to 8 agst Iron du Quesne (t.), 100 to 8 agst Rosine (t.), 20 to 1 agst Black Swan (off.), 20 to 1 agst Sailor (t.)

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE STAKES.—7 to 1 agst Skirmisher (off.), 14 to 1 agst Adamas (t.)

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS.—25 to 1 agst Drummer (off.)

CHESTER CUP.—14 to 1 agst Leamington (t.), 50 to 1 agst Stockdale (t.), 1000 to 15 agst Cotswold (t.)

DERBY.—16 to 1 agst Blink Bonny (off.), 1000 to 35 agst Sprig of Shillelagh (t.), 1000 to 35 agst Lady Hawthorne (t.), 1000 to 15 agst Strathnaver (t.)

PRICE OF COUNTY VOTES.—Last week two rent-charges of £50 each, secured on the Collegiate School, Camberwell, were offered to public auction at the Mart, by Mr. Marsh—each of them conferring a vote for the Eastern Division of the county of Surrey, and paying £2 each per annum—sold at £60 the two.

THE AUTHOR OF "ORION."—Mr. R. H. Horne, the well-known author of the biographical sketches entitled "The Spirit of the Age," as well as of the remarkable epic, "Orion," and several other works, various in kind, but of more than average literary merit, having been an Australian for the last few years, offered himself as candidate for a seat in the Legislative Assembly of the province of Victoria, at the late general election Although he did not at present happen to be the representative of the electors of Rodney district, it is quite evident that he has a great many staunch friends there. We find in the Melbourne Herald, of Oct. 29, a report of the oration with which he was greeted in the township of M'Ivor. A gentleman named Shakspeare the proprietor of "a rich quartz reef" is named as one of his chief supporters. There was another quartz proprietor, Mr. Lyttleton, referred by him on the left hand, upon which the Herald says: "Such luck in here never yet fell to the lot of poet, ancient or modern, except in the case of Mr. Samuel Rogers, through Mr. Hope, between the two Mr. Hope's reefers, might have turned amalgamator, and secured the gold on both sides."

THE LATE MR. T. SEDDON.—A meeting was held on Monday evening, the 2nd inst., at the residence of Mr. Holman Hunt, to express the sense entertained of the merits of the late artist, Mr. Thomas Seddon. The chair was taken by Lord Goderich: and the meeting was attended by the Hon Arthur Gordon, M.P.; Mr. Ruskin, Prof. Donaldson, Mr. Tom Taylor, Mr. Anthony, Mr. Wonder, Mr. Alex Munro, Mr. Watts, Mr. Butterfield, Mr. Ford Brown, Mr. Dante Rossetti, Mr. Young (late Consul at Jerusalem), Mr. Vernon Lushington, the Rev. Mr. Maurice, and several other gentlemen. Lord Goderich commenced the proceedings by alluding to the high aim with which Mr Seddon entered upon the treatment of Eastern landscape—not in the spirit of a mere picturesque artist, but in the hope of expressing the absolute truth of nature, followed by the most sacred associations, and to the genuine self-sacrificing devotion which his career had evidenced, both in postponing the professional practice of art at an earlier period for the benefit of his family, and in afterwards undertaking two Oriental journeys, the former of which gave promise that it was forbidden to the latter to realise more completely.—Mr Ruskin moved, and Mr. Hunt seconded, the first resolution: "That an exhibition be held during the present season of the works left by the late Mr. Seddon, which shall be open to sale." The self-devotion of such men as Bellot, or those who lay down life for their native country in war, is recognised by public monuments; but these are not the only forms of self-devotion A man like Mr. Seddon no less gave his life for a worthy cause; there was nothing but good in his aim; and this he pursued with a courage worthy of it.—Mr Tom Taylor moved the second resolution:—"That out of the public subscription which it is proposed to raise 400 guineas be given for the purchase of Mr. Seddon's principal work, the oil-picture of Jerusalem, from his widow, for presentation to the National Gallery; and that if any surplus remain after the purchase and payment of the necessary expenses of the exhibition, &c., Mrs. Thomas Seddon's acceptance of it be requested." Mr. Taylor dwelt upon the value of art pursued, as Mr. Seddon pursued it, for the sake of truth; upon the resignation to the will of Providence with which he had entered upon a task both arduous and perilous; and upon the authentic excellence of the picture which it is proposed to purchase. The Society of Arts have presented to hold the exhibition from the 6th May to the end of the month.—Professor Donaldson, in seconding the motion, dwelt at some length into circumstances which exhibit the unaffected worth of Mr. Seddon's character, and his exertions for promoting art-education among the working classes—reading extracts from some of his letters, and speaking from an intimate knowledge of his family and career. Mr. Ruskin has consented to act as treasurer, and Mr. W. M. Rossetti, of 45, Upper Albany-street, as secretary. The committee includes, besides the gentlemen present at the meeting, Dr. Acland, Mr. Bruce, M.P.; the Hon Richard Cavendish, Earl Grosvenor, M.P.; Mr. James Fergusson, Mr. George Godwin, Mr. Grove, Mr. Bereseford Hope, Mr W. Marshall, M.P., Mr. Theodore Martin, Mr. Palmore, Canon Stanley, Mr. Alfred Tennyson, &c.

ELECTION INTELLIGENCE.

AYLESBURY.—The election for the borough of Aylesbury took place on Monday, when Sir R. Bethell, the Attorney-General, was returned without opposition.

CLONMEL.—The election for this borough will take place on Monday next. The only candidate who has taken the field is Mr. Bagwell, of Marlfield; and it is probable that he will be unopposed DOWNPATRICK.—The polling-booths were opened on Wednesday morning at eight o'clock, and shortly after that hour the agent of Mr Johnstone raised a technical objection to the mode of voting. The sub-sheriff stated that the objection could only be decided by a Committee of the House of Commons. One vote was then recorded for Mr. Johnstone. For Mr. Ker three votes (137 votes polled.

GREENWICH.—The first hour of the polling, which took place on Tuesday, showed that Colonel Sleigh had not the slightest chance. Sir W. Codrington took the lead from the beginning, and kept it up to the close of the poll, when the numbers were—Codrington, 2078; Sleigh, 1643. A disturbance was apprehended amongst the "roughs" at one time. They asserted that they had been employed by Colonel Sleigh's committee and, not receiving any beer or payment, they went to the tent of polling down the bar at the tap of the Portland Tavern, the headquarters of Colonel Sleigh's party. The police were called in, however, and prevented any further rioting.

HULL.—On Wednesday morning the election of a member for Parliament for this borough consequent upon the elevation to the Bench of Sir W. H. Watson, took place in front of the Exchange, at which time the nominations were assembled. Mr. Clay was the only candidate, and was returned; but considerable interest is manifested in the town as to whether the House of Commons will reject Mr. Clay as unqualified to sit in the present Parliament, on the ground that he was unseated for "bribery and corruption" in 1852

NEWPORT (ISLE OF WIGHT).—On Tuesday Mr. Kennard was returned by a majority of 20 271 to 251; over Mr Seeley in his speech on the hustings Mr. Kennard expressed his opinion that it was desirable to preserve our national institutions in the highest state of efficiency and vigour, so that this country might maintain its present position among nations.

SOUTHAMPTON. The polling took place on Tuesday, and resulted in the return of Mr. T. M. Weguelin, the Governor of the Bank of England Near the close of the poll the Liberals, who had reserved their votes for the purpose of giving them to either of the Liberal candidates who might require them, to prevent the success of a Tory, commenced polling for Mr. Weguelin, and his majority over Sir E. Butler readily increased. The following was the return at the close:—Weguelin, 1000; Butler, 868; Andrews, 119.

WEST KENT.—The nomination for a representative of this division of the county of Kent is fixed to take place at noon on Monday next at Penenden-heath, near Maidstone. The polling will take place in the various districts on the following Thursday, and, by a recent Act of Parliament, will be confined to one day only.

COUNT DE MONTALEMBERT arrived at Brussels on Saturday in time to be present at the last moments of the Count F. de Merode, his father-in-law.

A MARRIAGE is to take place a few months hence (says the Scotsman) between Lady Susan Harriet Innes Ker, the elder daughter of the Duke of Roxburghe, and James, eldest son of Sir George Grant Suttie, of Preston-grange.

WR (Edinburgh Courant) understand Mr. Thackeray is to deliver his promised lecture here for the benefit of the widow of Mr Angus B. Reach on Saturday, the 28th March 14.

CHURCH-RATES.—The amount received as Church-rates in England from Easter, 1852, to Easter, 1856, was, as reported to the Government, £465,000. The sum spent was £443,000; and the sum borrowed, £313,000.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

OWING to a large arrival of gold from Australia, and to the great reduction in the Army and Navy Estimates, we have had a much firmer feeling in the National Stocks this week, and prices have steadily advanced. The falling off in the demand for gold on Continental account, and the decline in the value of silver, have had their accustomed influence upon the large operators in the Funds, who have shown more confidence in receiving the future. Indeed, the improvement which has taken place in our public securities during the last few days has been more than we could have anticipated, and is a fair prospect of better times than we are at present experiencing; and I only regret to say, that a very few-hands are reaping the benefit of the recollected reverses we have had to carry through, for many months of which we were subjected.

The approaching discussion on the Bank Charter is looked forward to with more than usual interest, but the pretty general impression in the City is that, in consequence of the opposition already shown both by the Government and the Bank of England to any change in the present monetary system, no alteration will be attempted. It is quite clear, however, that the Committee appointed by the House of Commons to inquire into the question will be guided by the wants and intelligence of the age, and not by antiquated theories.

The purchasers of money Stock have considerably increased, and the time bargains have been both numerous and extensive. Of the £840 000 in gold received from Australia, about £300,000 has been sold to the Bank of England; but most of the remainder is expected to be sent to Paris. The shipments have been small, if we except about £70 000 forwarded to Rio. Silver is there may be chiefly attributed to an abundant supply of silver, the prospect of large arrivals from Mexico, and to a further decline of 1d. per ounce in the quotations—the last price paid for bars being 61d

The Bank of England have intimated that those customers who bank exclusively with them may have the privilege of sending in longdated bills for discount; and we understand that it is contemplated to allow interest on cash balances These changes will, no doubt, bring an increased business to the Bank; but we may fairly assume that there will be more competition for paper offered. This week the applications to the Bank for assistance have not been numerous, yet we have no decline to notice in the rates of discount. In Lombard-street short-dated bills have been taken at 5½ to 6 per cent

The Consol Market was steady on Monday, and prices were firmly supported The Three per Cents were done at 93⅝ ½; Consols, for Money, 93⅞; Ditto, for Account, 93⅞; New Three per Cents, 93⅛; New Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 76½; Long Annuities, 1885, 18⅛; India Bonds, 2ss. pm.; Exchequer Bills, 5s. 6s. prem.; Exchequer Bonds, 98¾ ¼; Bank Stock Stock was 216 and 217½; India Stock, 215. There was a firmer feeling on Tuesday, and the quotations were on the advance. Bank Stock marked 216 and 217½; India Stock, 215. The Reduced Three per Cents realised 93⅝; Three per Cent Consols, 93⅞ ⅜ 93⅝ for Money, and 93⅝ ⅜ ⅞ for the Account. New Three per Cents were 93⅝ ⅜ ½; New Two-and-a-Half Cents, 76¼; 2½ Ditto, 58; Ditto, 1885, 18 3-16. India Bonds marked 1s. premium; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. premium; Ditto, Bonds, 98¾. Prices almost generally were higher on Wednesday, and the market was somewhat buoyant. Reduced Three per Cents marked 93⅝; Consols, for Money, 93⅝ ⅜; Ditto, for Account, 93⅝ ½; New Three per Cents, 93⅜; India Bonds, 2s. to 1s. prem.; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. premium; Exchequer Bonds, 98¼ The was a further improvement in the market on Thursday, both as regards the business done and the quotations, the rise in the latter being about ⅛ to ¼. The directors of the Bank of England made no change in the rate of discount. Consols for Money were 93⅞ to 94; and for Account, 94 to 94⅛. The New Three per Cents were 93⅝ to 94⅛; and the Reduced, 93⅝ to 94⅛. Bank Stock was steady, and Exchequer Bills realised par to 3s. prem; and Exchequer Bonds, 98¾

There has been an increased business doing in most Foreign Securities, and prices have had an upward tendency Transactions have taken place in Danish Three per Cents at 85; Ecuador, New Granada, New Active, Two-and-a-Quarter per Cents, Greek Mexican Three per Cents, 21¾; Russian Three per Cents, Sardinian Five per Cents, 90¾; Turkish Six per Cents, Four per Cents, Guaranteed, 105¾ ex div.; Spanish, Three per Cents, 40; Spanish Passive, 5; Portuguese Four per Cents, 43 per cent. Venezuela Four-and-a-Half per Cents, Three per Cents, 65¾; Belgium Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 99¾; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 63; Dutch Four per Cents, 99¾; Buenos Ayres Six per Cents, 85; Brazil Five per Cents, 104; Austrian Five per Cents, 91; Brazilian Five per Cents, 100¾; Ditto Four per Cents, 90¾.

The annual statement of the Bank of France for the month, published, from which we learn that the amount of specie held at the end of January was 11,000,000 sterling, being an increase during the month of 1,200,000 sterling. The advances on Public Shares, &c., were £20,280,000; and the total profits of the Bank were £283,322 sterling.

The Peel River Land and Mineral Company have declared a dividend of 1s. per share, free of Income-tax.

All Joint-Stock Bank shares have been very firm, and the following prices have been realised:—Australasia, 96; Bank of Egypt, 1⅝; Bank of London, 36 ex div.; City, 65¾; Colonial, 24½; London Chartered of Australia, 18¾; Ditto, New, 18¾; London and County, 31⅞; London Joint-Stock, 22 ex div.; London and Westminster, 47 ex div. and bonus; New South Wales, 45¾; Oriental, 37; Ottoman, 13⅝; Union of London, 26⅝; and Western Bank of London, 41.

Miscellaneous Securities have been firm in price; but the business doing in them has not been extensive Land and West India Dock have marked 118; London, 100; Victoria, 19⅝; Australian Agricultural, 21¾; Canada Company's Bonds, 134; Canada Government Six per Cents, 110¾; Copper Miners of England, 33; London Omnibus, 34; National Discount Company, 5⅞; Ditto New, 8¾; Peel River Land and Mineral, 2¾; Peninsula and Oriental Steam, 114; Royal Mail Steam, 114; Van Diemen's Land, 14⅞; Bar o Waterwork, 5¾; East London, 1 ½; Grand Junction, 75; Lambeth Ditto, 90; West Middlesex, 130

NEW BOOKS, &c.

On March 1, No. 1, price 8d., to be completed in Ten Weekly Numbers profusely illustrated, crown 8vo.

SONGS OF ENGLAND.
By CHARLES MACKAY.
Also on March 1, No. 1, 3d., on form work "Songs," &c.,
THE MORNINGS AT LITERATURE—two very great successes occur in modern literature—but when a book does become a favourite with readers the circulation of it is something enormous—it not transcends actual. Charles Dickens's unwilling books have been sold, we are assured, to the extent of several hundred thousands. Uncle Tom's Cabin," rarely half a million in England alone; that modern of perfect que writing, "Macaulay's History," though an expensive book, consists of 11 pre-fac thousand; the "Memoirs of Captain Hocq- cane" one hundred and thirty thousand; and now Charles Reade's "Never Too Late to Mend," only recently published, is likely to run it on with the most successful."—Evening Paper.
Also, by the same Author, in one volume with an Illustration, 3s. 6d.,
THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A THIEF.
Any sent post-free on receipt of Post-office Order,
PEG WOFFINGTON
London: RICHARD BENTLEY, New Burlington-street.

RAILWAY LIBRARY NEW VOLUME.
Price 3s. 6d., boards,
PHANTOM SHIP. By Capt. MARRYAT.
The Volumes lately published are—
Owen Tudor. By the Author of "Whitefriars."
Jacob Faithful. By Captain Marryat.
The Ward. By Mrs. Trollope.
Japhet in Search of a Father. By Captain Marryat.
Percy Hall. By Tom Hood
Scattergood Family. By Robert Smith
And on Feb. 28 will be ready,
Jane Seton. By James Grant, Author of "The Romance of War."
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co., Farringdon-street.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY. BY J. H. WALSH.
In one thick volume, price 10s. 6d. half-bound,
A MANUAL of DOMESTIC ECONOMY.
By J. H. WALSH. With many Illustrations.
"A most comprehensive, accurate, and useful work than it is would difficult to improve. Everything necessary to be known in the management of a well-appointed household is here discussed, and the treatment of each subject may confidently resort to Dr. Walsh's pages for any emergency, from the creaking of a door to the seizure of the house with the "sheriff in."—Times.
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co., Farringdon-street.

COMPANION VOLUME TO EVERY EDITION OF SHAKESPEARE.
Price 1s., boards,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE NOT an IMPOSTOR; his Works and Character Vindicated from recent Attacks.
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and Co., Farringdon-street.

Just published, post 8vo, cloth, 6s.,
NATURE and ART in the CURE of DISEASE. By Sir JOHN FORBES, M.D., D.C.L. (Oxon.), F.R.S., Physician to Her Majesty's Household, and Physician Extraordinary to H.R.H. Prince Albert.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street.

Just published, 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.,
THE CONSTITUTION of the ANIMAL CREATION, as Expressed in Structural Appliances, as Hair, Horn Tusks, and Tail. By G. CALVERT HOLLAND, M.D., Honorary Physician to the Sheffield General Infirmary.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street.

MYSTERIES of MEDICAL LIFE; or, Doctors and their Dodges. By GEO. ALLISTON, M.R.C.S., Barbarian. 1 vol. 12mo. 3s. 6d.
The most comprehensive opinions of this little work have been unanimously expressed by many of the principal Medical Physicians and Surgeons of London.
Catalogue gratis
London: H. BAILLIERE, Publisher, 219, Regent-street, and 290, Broadway, New York, U.S.

Just published, price 3s. 6d., post-free,
PHYSIC and its PHASES; or, the Rule of Health and Relief Practice. By JOHN GARRON, the Modern Healing
London: H. MARSHALL, and Co., Stationers'-court; and all Booksellers.

Second Edition, 6d., post-free,
PAINLESS TOOTH EXTRACTION without Chloroform. By J. WHITEMAN WEBB, L.S.A., Surgeon-Dentist, 21, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square. At home for consultation from 10 to 4.

3s. 6d., Post-office orders, or 45 postage-stamps. Second Edition,
THE SCIENCE of LIVING and its NEW SELF-DIETARY CURE. A Pamphlet, by A. W. MOORE, M.R.C.S. Medicine, Philadelphia, S. W.

CHEAP BOOKS.—Secondhand Copies of Macaulay's History of England, Vols. 3 and 4, and many other Books, suitable for Book Societies, Literary Institutions, School and Circulating Libraries, &c., will be found in BULL'S LIBRARY CATALOGUE, at GREATLY-REDUCED PRICES. Sent post-free on application.—Bull's Library, 19, Holles-street, Cavendish-sq., London.

THE DAILY NEWS.
THE LONDON MORNING PAPER.—Price 4d.
Liberal and Independent—Early Political, General, and Commercial Intelligence.
Office, 80, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.—To be ordered of all Booksellers, Newsmen, and Newsvenders.
Also a Cheap Edition, published by Evening and to Country Circulation, in wrappers, price 1d., per quarter.

STEREOSCOPES and STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES at SPEARS, BROWNING, and CO.'s.—Hand Stereoscopes, to set on Table, from 4s. 6d. per dozen. Great variety Portable and other Views, mounted and unmounted.—Wholesale and Retail Warehouse for the Sale of Stereoscopes, Moon-glass, &c., price 1s. 6d. each, only at Spencer, Browning, and Co.'s, 111, Minories, E. The trade supplied.

NO CHARGE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crests, Creat, or Initials.—DORIGON'S Cream laid Adhesive Envelopes, 4s. per 1000; Cream Note, full-size, five quires for 6d.; thick Ditto, five quires for 1s.; Foolscap, 8s. per ream; Sermon Paper, 6s. 6d. All kinds of stationery equally cheap, at H. RODRIGUES', 21, Piccadilly, London.

WEDDING CARDS, Enamelled Envelopes stamped in silver, with arms, crest, or flowers; "At Homes," and breakfast invitations in the latest printing, in the most fashionable manner, and most superfine cards printed, for 4s. 6d. Observe, at HENRY RODRIGUES', 21, Piccadilly, London.

EVERY COUNTRY RESIDENT should send six Stamps to PARKINS and GOTTO, 25, Oxford-street, for their Specific Packet of STATIONERY. Sent post-free. No charge for Embossing Crests, Initials, or Address. Country parcels over 20s. carr. paid.

25,000 BIBLES, Prayer-Books, and Church Services, in every description of binding all type, some of the largest and best bound Stock in the Kingdom, at PARKINS and GOTTO'S, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

PARKINS and GOTTO have opened Three large Show-rooms for the display of cheap, useful, and elegant Articles in Stationery and Wedding Presents, from 1s. 6d. to 5l. suitable as a saving of 5s. on the pound.
Writing Cases, fitted, from 3s. 6d.
Travelling Bags, 9 to 18 guineas.
Ladies' Companions, secretary or rosewood, from 5s. 6d. to 42 3s.
Gentlemen's Dressing Cases. Hunting Case, with tea set, 21 car-top bottles, silver jewel drawer, 4½ Gentlemen's Travelling Dressing Cases, 6 in., 12s. 6d.
Writing and Dressing Cases combined, 30s.
Bachel Books, Letter Cases, and Writ es in lis.
Work Boxes and Jewel Cases.
Forte Monnaies and Tablets.
Despatch Boxes, from 21s.
PARKINS and GOTTO, Manufacturers, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

MORRELL'S CARMINE WRITING FLUID.—A brilliant Red Ink, boiling anti-corrosive. Is specially adapted for steel pens. Sold by all Booksellers and Stationers

THE STAUNTON CHESSMEN from 15s. to £10 1s per set. Sold at all the principal fancy repositories wholesale. JAQUES Hatton-garden, E.C. CAUTION! in order to guard against fraudulent imitations observe each set bears Mr. Staunton's signature,

NEW MUSIC, &c.

RIGOLETTO, LA TRAVIATA, IL TROVATORE, 2s. each, also 1 Lombardi, Il Barbiere, Le Prophete, and 50 other Operas for Piano, 2s. each, in THE PIANISTA enlarged series. DAY and CO., 67, Paternoster-row; or post-free, 24 stamps

THE MUSICAL SOUVENIR of BEAUTY for PARIS, 1857.—This elegant Work, edited and published in both by Miss A. Pyne, under the immediate Patronage, may be had at all Musical Libraries. Col. Sond-street.

REFLECTIONS on CHURCH MUSIC, for the Consideration of Church-goers in General. By CARL PAGE. Price 2s. 6d. "Although this volume is published at the low price of half-a-crown its contents are of great value."—Clerical Journal "We recommend this practical work to the attention of our clerical and lay readers."—English Churchman
London: GUSTAV SCHUEMANN and Co., 86, Newgate-street, E.C.

THE MUSICAL LIBRARY now contains more than 50,000 Works, Foreign and English. Subscription Two Guineas per annum. One Guinea's worth of Music for Examination. The last Supplement just published—prize to subscribers 2s. Complete Catalogue, 6s.
London: GUSTAV SCHUEMANN and Co., 86, Newgate-street, E.C.

CHEAPEST MUSICAL REPOSITORY in ENGLAND. All NEW MUSIC HALF-PRICE. Rolled Music delivered carriage free. Country Orders per return. Catalogues, one stamp.—D'ALCORN, 18, Bathbone-place, Oxford-street.

THE CONCERTINA. Manufactured solely by the Patentees, Messrs. Wheatstone and Co.—The Patent Concertina, 21 lbs., of elaborate finish, with double action, to play in five keys, or fourteen keys, 31 lbs., 42 lbs., 52 lbs., 63 lbs. The patent Concert Concertina, unrivalled in tone and of extra power, as manufactured for Signor Regondi and the most eminent performers, price 12 guineas. Rosewood Concertinas, full compass, with 48 keys, double action, may now be had from 5 guineas each.
The Patent LUTE CONCERTINA invented by Messrs. W. and Co. This novel and elegant instrument combines two separate Concertinas. The Concertina for each hand is complete and independent of the other; the left hand may be used for accompanying on the 1 semitonic other being sufficient for the performance of a melody. Price 6 guineas. The Full Instruction Book of Harmonium, Concertina and Music for these Instruments, may be had on application to WHEATSTONE and CO., 20, Conduit-street, Regent-street. London.

TOLKIEN'S 25-GUINEA ROYAL MINUTO PIANOFORTES, 63 octaves. H. T., the original Maker of a Twenty-five Guinea Pianoforte has, by the care he has devoted to all branches of the manufacture, obtained the highest reputation throughout the universe for his instruments, unequalled in durability and power. He has also a large assortment of cottages, in elegant walnut, rosewood, or mahogany cases, packed for 21 lbs. extra. H. TOLKIEN'S Manufactory, 27, 28, and 29, King-William-street, London-bridge.—PIANOFORTES FOR HIRE.

FOR THE PORTRAIT OF THE QUEEN.
Presented with the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
FRENCH-POLISHED FRAME and GLASS.
Gilt Moulding Frame and Glass, 8s.
Ditto, Rosewood, 9s. 6d.
with Gilt Slip and Glass, 5s. 9d.
Superior Ditto, Rosewood, 12s.
Can be had Cheap, List of Prices of Oval Frames, Oval Mounts, &c.
Regent-street Picture-frame Manufactory, 14, Marylebone-street
Regent Quadrant (NEAR the CHINESE TEMPLE).

THE NEW ILLUMINATED TIMEPIECE, 25s. Elegant Timepieces, 15s. each. Patent Gold Watches, Jewelled in Four Holes, 42s. Silver Watches, 25s. A rich and choice Stock of Gold Chains, all the newest Patterns, 8 to 15 Guineas. HARVEY'S Watchmakers and Goldsmiths, 128, Oxford-street and 281, High Holborn.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, LIBRARY, &c.—An extensive Assortment of ALABASTER, MARBLE, BRONZE, and PARIAN GLASS ORNAMENTS, Manufactured and Imported by J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, London.

FURNISH YOUR HOUSE with the BEST ARTICLES, they are the CHEAPEST in the end.—DEANE, DRAY, and CO.'S Priced Furnishing List may be had gratuitously on application, or sent post-free. It contains the most complete and full selection of articles from all the various departments of their establishment, and is arranged to facilitate the purchase of the different goods. In connexion Table Cutlery—[illegible] Electro-plate, Nickel-silver and Britannia-metal Goods, Baths, Lamps, Kitchen Utensils, Turnery, Iron and Brass Bedsteads, Bedding, Bed-hangings, Carpets, Oilcloths, Fenders and Stoves, Fire-irons, Chimney-pieces, Tables, Chairs, Sofas, Bookcases, Wardrobes, Dressing, Dining, and Drawing-room Furniture, Clocks, Toys, Glass, China, Stoneware, &c., will be found in that extensive and well-selected Stock which has been accumulating during the last seventy years within this Establishment, and which now occupies the whole of the premises, extending from No. 46 to No. 49, London-bridge, and Nos. 1, 2, and 3, Newman-street, and 4, 5, and 6, Perry's-place, London. Established 1826.

HEAL and SON'S NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE contains designs and prices of 150 articles of BED-ROOM FURNITURE, as well as of 70 Bedsteads, and prices of every description of Mattress, sent free by post.—Heal and Son, Bedstead, Bedding, and Bed-room Furniture Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

FLOOD'S SUPERIOR FURNITURE may be obtained of Messrs. Fortnum and Mason, Piccadilly; or at the wholesale depôt, 81, Wells-street (near the Oxford-street), W. Price one saddler per bottle.

SHERRY, the least acid of any wine imported, 30s. taking precedence of Port, Champagne, Claret, Madeira, Burgundy, Hock, and Sauterne, which follow in the order named. Free from Brandy. Brande's Chemistry of Common Life," p. 322.—"Nutty flavour, and the least acidity of any wine."—Dr. Ure, same, p. 323.—"Pure and wholesome."—Dr. HARVEY, M.D., 1, Inner Circus, Regent's-park.

UNADULTERATED WINES.—FELTOE, SONS, and CO., Importers, 26, Conduit-st. Regent-st., London (established 1815), adhere to their undeviating principle of supplying Wines free from acidity. The Nutty Sherry, 36s. each. Carriage-paid.

TWENTY SHILLINGS per DOZEN, pure and wholesome SOUTH AFRICAN Port and Sherry, suitable for dinner or dessert. Sample bottle for 24 stamps.—J. L. DENMAN, The Importer, 65, Tottenham-street, London.

THE CONTINENTAL WINE COMPANY, Birchin-lane, Cornhill, continues to supply their ALTO DOURO PORTS at 42s. per dozen. Pale or Gold Sherry, at 30s. and 36s. Country orders must contain a remittance.

CELEBRATED CANTERBURY PUNCH.—One dozen of this delicious beverage in quart bock bottles (allowed the gallon) will be forwarded carriage-free to London, bargee and bottles included, on receipt of Post-office order for 25s., payable to THOMAS PAULI DE LASAUX, Wine-merchant, Canterbury.

SALT and CO.'S EAST INDIA PALE and BURTON ALES BREWERY—BURTON-UPON-TRENT.
STORES—
London, Hungerford-wharf, Liverpool, 92, Henry-street. Manchester, 37, Brown-street. Sheffield, 12, George-street. Birmingham, Old Court House, High-street. Bristol, 13, Broad-street. Dublin, 1, Temple-lane. Edinburgh, Portbopetoun Warehouse, 1, Queen-st. Warehouse. Those Ales, in wood or bottle, are pale and wholesome, and in bottle, obtained from all respectable bottlers.

PALE INDIA ALE and STOUT, 4s. 6d. per Dozen Quarts; 2s. 9d. per Dozen Pints. Scotch Ale, 5s. 6d. per Dozen Quarts. Epsolled Sherry, 20s. per dozen. Fine old Port, 30s. per dozen. WRIGHT and WAY—38, Jermyn-street, City.

GOODRICH'S SISAL CIGARS! at his Tobacco, Snuff, and Cigar Stores, 407, Oxford-street, London, near Soho-square. Box, containing 14, for 1s. 9d. Post-free, six stamps extra. Pound Boxes, containing 108, 12s. 6d. None are genuine unless signed "H. N. Goodrich."

SPRING DRESSES.—PATTERNS of the NEW FABRICS
1 [illegible] part
1 [illegible]
Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

THE SPRING SILKS at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Striped Silks,
Check Silks,
Fancy Silks,
Plain Silks,
Broch, Silks,
at 1/6 6d.,
Gros d'Ecosse,
at 2s.
Gros Royals,
at 2/6
Moiré Antiques,
at 2/11s. 6d.
and Flounced Silks, at 10s. to £5
the Robe
Patterns sent post-free.

NEW SPRING FABRICS at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Cambric Dresses,
3s. 6d
French Muslins,
3s. 9d
Brilliants,
3s. 6d
Balzarines,
3s. 6d.
Bareges,
10s. 6d
Barèges,
12s. 6d
Mousseline de Soies,
18s.
Flounced Muslins,
7s. 6d. to 12s. 6d
Flounced Silk and Wool Fabrics,
12s. 6d. to 25s.
And fresh Patterns,
£1 5s. 6d. to £1 17s. 6d.
Patterns sent post-free.

MOURNING ORDERS
AT PETER ROBINSON'S
Family and General Mourning Warehouses
From the immense business done by this house with country customers, it is enabled to supply large orders at a very reasonable cost, and to send goods for selection to any part free of expense.
Always on hand, a very large stock of
SKIRTS, MANTLES, and BONNETS;
Also every description of Crape, made in the House, warranted of the best manufacture, and at moderate prices.
COURT MILLINERY and DRESSMAKING.
Complete suits for WIDOWS and CHILDREN'S MOURNING kept made up ready for immediate use; and a note to the warehouse, descriptive of the Mourning required, will ensure the article being sent forthwith.
Address, PETER ROBINSON, Family Mourning Warehouse, 103, Oxford-street, London.

BLACK SILKS.—Patterns of all the New Silks forwarded free. Bunges, Royals, Widows' Silks, the new Gros d'Ecosse. As recommended for dyeing. Also the [illegible] up with flounces, in great variety. Address, PETER ROBINSON, Mourning Warehouse 103, Oxford-st.

NEW FABRICS for MOURNING. THE DELHI CASHMERE, THE DEAN PRINT, THE [illegible] LAWNS, and the NEW CRAPE MARIA, all highly recommended for durability of wear. Patterns free, to be obtained only at PETER ROBINSON'S [illegible] Mourning Warehouse, 103, Oxford-street, London

MAGNIFICENT VELVET MANTLES.—The Proprietors of the SPONSALIA have purchased the Stock of an eminent French Manufacturer, who has retired from business. The magnificent works of Fenuse in Lyons, have produced for him a considerable portion of this stock, which will be sold at a REDUCTION of FIFTY PER CENT BELOW THE ORIGINAL PRICE from the established prices. The BE INON'S, with the exception of Parisian, invented by JAY and SON 171, and which cannot be purchased elsewhere, is strongly recommended for the most graceful and the most comfortable Winter Cloak. The prices in market upon an entirely plain figure.
SPONSALIA, 246, REGENT-STREET

INDIA SHAWLS, 8s. 6d. each.—FARMER and ROGERS beg to state that they have just received from their collecting agents in India several large cases of beautiful Long and Square Indian Shawls, being the remnants of 2000 pieces of Delhi shawls, at 8s. 6d. each, adapted for home and evening wear. India Shawls bought and exchanged.—The great India Warehouse, 171, 173, 175, Regent-street.

EARLY-CLOSING HOSIERY ESTABLISHMENT—HIRD'S LONGCLOTH SHIRTS, Fix for 20s. 6d., 47s. 6d., and upwards. Gentlemen are requested to choose from A. J. HIRD, 363, Oxford-street (four doors east of the Pantheon).

NEW TURNOVER COLLAR, by DARE, of Piccadilly. Three fold band, and no seam. A N Dare, 85, Piccadilly, Inventor and Registerer of the Piccadilly Collar Exchange Shirts, its half-dozen

QUALITY the TEST of ECONOMY mere Cost no Proof of Cheapness.—First-Class CLOTHING on best Terms.—Dress Coats, 3 guineas; Kr Dress Suits, 4½ guineas; accordings to height. Business established 20 years.—W. BLADON, Tailor, 96, New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill.

ALLEN'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Patent Portmanteaus, Dispatch Boxes, Dressing Cases, and Travelling Bags, with square opening by rack, for PORTMANTEAUS.—J. W. and T. ALLEN, Manufacturers, 18 and 22, Strand.

DRESSING-CASES.—At Mr. MECHI'S ESTABLISHMENTS, 112, Regent-street, 4, Leadenhall-street, and Crystal Palace, are to be seen the largest assortments of BRITISH MANUFACTURES in Dressing-cases, Work-boxes, Writing-desks, Envelope-cases, and other articles of utility or luxury, in Papier-mâché, Tortoiseshell, Ivory, and Morocco.—Manufactures and Importers of Portable Tables—Table Cutlery, Razors, Schnoss Penknives, Strops, Shaving Soaps, &c. Shipping Orders executed for merchants and captains. The prices charged at all the Establishments.

BIJOU NEEDLE-CASE, containing 100 of DEANE'S Drilled-eyed NEEDLES, post-free, for 1s. Any lady knowing twelve postage-stamps is to DEANE, DRAY, and CO., and receive this neat and valuable assortment to her work-table forwarded, free by return of post.—Deane, Dray, and Co., Opening to the Monument London-bridge. Established A.D. 1700.

VIOLETS.—BRIEDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET SCENT presents a bunch of violets fresh from the fields, a very lasting, and does not stain the handkerchiefs. Price 2s 6d. 157, New Bond-street (facing Redmayne's).

JONES'S FLESH SOAP, Is per packet, allays irritation, and produces a soft and fair skin. To be had, through any Italian Warehouseman and Colonial Jones and Sons, near the Turnpike, Islington, London.

SOAP.—JOHN KNIGHT'S PRIMROSE SOAP.—The attention of Families, Housekeepers, Laundresses, &c. is directed to this now well-known and highly-appreciated Domestic aid the, which possessing all the properties of a toilet soap, is still the most economical that can possibly be obtained for general household purposes. It is sold by most of the respectable Oilmen and Grocers in London, at the price of the common ordinary yellow soap Be particular to observe that "JOHN KNIGHT, Primrose, York-place, St. George's East," is stamped in each bar.

JAMES LEWIS'S MARROW OIL for the HAIR; Jocker Club, Frangipanni, and Wood-Violet Perfumes for the Handkerchief; and Jubilee Soap for the Skin.—Manufactory, 6, Bartlett's-buildings, Holborn; and Crystal Palace

WHITE and SOFT HANDS all through the WINTER.—The LONDON SOAP and CANDLE COMPANY, 76, New Bond-street. Sweet, Delicate, and WINTER SKIN SOAP, which, by its continual use, will produce the softest of hands and the whitest of skin even in the coldest weather and hardest water it is agreeably perfumed, and beautiful soft in use.
Sold in bars 1s. per lb. Sole depôt.

THE BEST OIL in the WORLD.—Pure French Colza Oil, 5s. per gallon.—Messrs. Lemare, of Paris—Sole Depot, the LONDON SOAP and CANDLE COMPANY, 76, New Bond-street. Makers of globes, chimneys, cottons. Repairs, &c., by French workmen, at Paris prices.

DO YOU BRUISE YOUR OATS YET?—Great Saving.—Oat Bruisers, Chaff Cutters, Mangles, 30s.; Flour Mills, Farming Implements, 20 per cent lower.
Book on Feeding, 1s.; Into, Bread Making, 2s.; post-free.
WEDLAKE and CO., 118, Fenchurch-street.

Sale by Mr. Daw.—Carnarvonshire, North Wales.—Great and attractive SALE of the magnificent Assemblage of PROPERTY at BROOM HALL, accumulated during the last sixty years within this abode of taste and virth the whole selected at an enormous expense, and with great judgment, by the late ROWLAND JONES, Esq., deceased

MR. WILLIAM DEW has the honour to announce that he has been instructed by the administrator to [illegible] by Public Competition (with all reserve) on TUESDAY, the 24th day of FEBRUARY, 1857, and fourteen succeeding days, at 11 o'clock precisely each day precisely, all the [illegible] about three miles from the town of Pwllheli, ten from Carnarvon, and twenty from the Railway Station at [illegible]
The entire, valuable, splendid collection of objects of ancient elegant taste, comprising the most costly and recherché [illegible] which has but rarely been brought to the hammer, of which the following forms a brief summary:—The Furniture comprises drawing-room and dining-room suites in mahogany and oak; rich drawing-room and Buhl and Bronze Cabinets, Tables, &c.; a superior manner, unusual and simple Wardrobes; patent portable Water-closets, and every other requisite for the sleeping apartments.
A large collection of valuable and celebrated Pictures, among [illegible] many choice Cabinets by Riesen, Dubois, Domaschino, Tessiers, Carnell, Dalel Watson, Stone, &c., &c.; beautifully-executed ormolu Busts and Statuettes; sumptuous Cabinets and Tables, of the choicest Florentine [illegible] Le Blanc Japan; ebony and marqueterie, massively mounted in ormolu; ormolu Parisian Chimney and Mantel Timepieces; and fine Organs and Pianos; also Fine Gasaliers and Chandeliers. A superb assemblage of old Dresden, Sevres, and Oriental China, amongst which will be found many pieces of extraordinary beauty, size, and rarity, of the finest order and exhibiting some of the choicest Chinese specimens, as well as services for the Dinner Table. Valuable massive 4-year-old Chestnut, Cobs, and Mares, magnificent and costly Dresden Cans [illegible] most exquisitely fitted up in high-polished silver-gilt. Upwards of 2000 ounces of Silver-gilt and Silver Plate Filigree Ornaments and Dishes, of the most massive description and finest workmanship. A large collection of superb Jewellery, in Watches, Snuff-boxes, Rings, Brooches, and Breast-pins, studded with cut lints and other precious stones, in end-ess variety, including several relics of Queens Marie Antoinette, Anne, and Charlotte; George IV., Napoleon, the present [illegible]
[illegible] Books, principally in Old Russia, and Modern, A library of Books, comprising upwards of Two Thousand Volumes, and Prints, Sketches, and Paintings, the entire collection of which are beautifully bound in Morocco and Russia, with gilt edges; an extraordinary collection of Manks, Bronze, Pistols, Guns, Old Coins, Medals, and Relics, of the most massive description and finest workmanship. A large collection of superb Jewellery, in Watches, Snuff-boxes, Rings, Brooches, and Breast-pins, studded with cut lints and other precious stones, in end-ss variety, including several relics of Queens Marie Antoinette, Anne, and Charlotte; George IV., Napoleon, the present [illegible]
[illegible] Harness, and Mackerel.
A library of Books, comprising upwards of Two Thousand Volumes, and Prints, Sketches, and Paintings, the entire collection of which are beautifully bound in Morocco and Russia, with gilt edges; an extraordinary collection of Manks, Bronze, Pistols, Guns, Old Coins, Medals, and Relics, of the most massive description and finest workmanship. A large collection of superb Jewellery, in Watches, Snuff-boxes, Rings, Brooches, and Breast-pins, studded with cut lints and other precious stones, in end-ss variety, including several relics of Queens Marie Antoinette, Anne, and Charlotte; George IV., Napoleon, the present [illegible]
Also, Two Handsome Carriages, and a light elite Phaeton, with head and German lights. Also a very compact and powerful Fire Engine (for eight hands), by Hadley and Sleaphin, perfectly new. The whole of which will be [illegible] commencing the descriptive catalogue each, which may be had ten days previously, at Messrs. Bailey (Brothers), Cornhill, London, at the principal Hotels in North Wales, and the Premises; and from the Auctioneer, at the British House, near the Railway Station Bangor
May be viewed on Wednesday, the 18th, February, and three following days, between the hours of Eleven and Four, by Catalogues admission to be obtained [illegible] which latter, in order to avoid [illegible] disappointment, can only be obtained from Thos. Ellis, Esq., Solicitor, Pwllheli, and of the Auctioneer.

CITY of LONDON HOSPITAL for DISEASES of the CHEST, Victoria-park.
Under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. Prince Albert, K.G.
President—His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, K.G.
Treasurer—H. Edmund Gurney, Esq.
The Committee have the gratification to announce that the NINTH ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL of the Charity is arranged to take place at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, on WEDNESDAY, the 18th of MARCH, and that the Right Hon. [illegible] Lord Mayor has kindly consented to preside. They take [illegible] that the Lord Mayor and [illegible] Aldermen will honour the Institution by their presence.
During the past year 242 patients were admitted into the Hospital, and 2,000 out-patients have since steadily increased in number since the foundation. Charity, amounted to 3657, or to 993 more than during the previous 12 months.
Now the Committee appeal to a larger annum is required to maintain the Charity in its present state [illegible] ty, and to continue the amount [illegible] which there still exist [illegible] Lists to the amount
The press for current income from annual subscriptions amounts to only £1 [illegible] and as the Committee [illegible] support, the Council to meet urgency appeal to the public for their kind aid in the present crisis.
Bankers, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, and Co., 54, Lombard street.
Secretary, Mr. [illegible] Rae Sec.
City Office, 6, Liverpool-street. RICHARD F. SLATER. Sec.

ST. MARK'S HOSPITAL for FISTULA, and other DISEASES of the RECTUM, City-road, London.
President—His Grace the Duke of [illegible]
Honorary Surgeon—Frederick Salmon, Esq., [illegible]
Since the foundation of the Institution 10,000 patients have received its benefits.
This Hospital is constructed to accommodate upwards of fifty beds, but the Committee regret to state that the Funds are inadequate to support even the average number of patients in the house.
The Charity is supported by voluntary contributions, which are earnestly solicited, and is [illegible] funded property or reserve fund.
The following are sums received during the past week are gratefully acknowledged:—
Adcock, Thomas, Esq., £1 1 0 | Gladdish, T. N., Esq.
Grant, Lieut.-Admiral, [illegible] (an.) £1 0 0
Richards, [illegible] 5 5 0 | Lewis Edward, Esq., [illegible]
[illegible] 2 2 0 | M. R. [illegible]
Grissell and [illegible] 10 10 0 | [illegible]
[illegible] and [illegible] [illegible]
A collection of 29 Gutlemen and Friends, at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, Strand, on the anniversary festival of the Institution, on Wednesday, 28th January, 1857, [illegible] Esq., M.P., in the chair.
Subscriptions and donations are received by the Treasurer, John Masterman, Esq., M.P., [illegible] Lombard street; or by the Secretary, Mr. James Fell; Wilshire, at the Hospital, City-road, E.C. February 10, 1857.

ORPHAN WORKING SCHOOL, Haverstock-hill.—Instituted in May, 1758, for Children of Book Boxes, and from any part of the Kingdom.—FIFTY VACANCIES are DECLARED for the PRESENT YEAR. The next ELECTION will occur in APRIL, all applications for which must be to before the 1st March. Forms may be had at the office. No Children will be [illegible] received. JOSEPH SOUL, Secretary.
Office, 32, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C.

THE COMMITTEE of the BELFAST GENERAL HOSPITAL feel that it is only due to their gifted country woman, Miss Catherine Hayes, to express their high and grateful sense of her good and benevolent spirit which induced her to give a Morning Concert in aid of the funds of the Hospital.
To Miss Hayes, therefore, and to Mdlle. Corelli, Signor Millardi, Signor Lablache, and Mr. G. A. Osborne, the Committee record their feeling of benevolence and liberality, co-operated with her on the occasion, the Committee beg, on behalf of the Charity, to tender their most grateful thanks.
Signed on behalf of the Committee,
JOSEPH ABBOTT, Chairman.
WM. ALLINGHAM, } Hon. Secretaries.
JAS. M'C THOMPSON, }

UNIVERSITY of LONDON.—Matriculation in [illegible] 1857.—The ANNUAL COURSE of LECTURES and EXAMINATIONS in preparation or in the Examination will commence on MONDAY, Feb. 23rd, 1857.
[illegible] Lecturer on [illegible] Natural Philosophy, [illegible] Lecturer on Chemistry.
By Order of the Senate, [illegible] Registrar.
W. W. JAMES, D.D., Principal.

LONDON LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited),
7, Duke-street, Adelphi, Strand, London.
Money Advanced without Sureties. Loans from £5 to £500 with or without Securities. Loans from £5 to £200 without Securities GEOLOGY and MINERALOGY.—Elementary Collections, arranged and classified for the use of beginners, can be had from Two Guineas to One Hundred; also single specimens. of J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, London.

WAX FLOWERS.—Prize Medal, 1851.—Messrs. MINORS, Modellers of Flowers to the Queen, 106, New Bond-street, beg to announce that their Spring Stock of Models and orders forwarded to the country. French Paper Flowers. Every Material at 106, New Bond-street, and Pembroke Manner, London.

THE AQUARIUM—Living MARINE and FRESHWATER ANIMALS, Ornamental Vases, glasses, and every requisite on sale. An illustrated priced and descriptive list on application. The Trade by Dealers and Workers, at their premises, 2, ALFORD LOUIS, 19 and 20, Portland-road, Regent's-park, London, W

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS for early sowing. 1s. post-free, at 1s. 6d. per annum prize.—100 fine Hardy Annuals, 1s.; 100 fine Biennials and Perennials, 1s.; 100 fine Greenhouse, 1s. A sample packet, 2s.—FROM WILLIAM KNIGHT, Florist, 67, High-street, Battle Sussex

DEAFNESS.—The Best and Cheapest Instruments are to be obtained at 309, REGENT-STREET, 311, Strand. The Auricular Reflector, the Tympanum Vibrator, and Acoustic Coreoca Descriptions (with prices,

ASTHMA.—Dr. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS, for ASTHMA, Consumption, Coughs, Colds, and all Disorders of the Breath and Lungs. They have a pleasant taste. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s. per box. Sold by all Chemists.

THE QUEEN'S THEATRE AND OPERA-HOUSE, EDINBURGH.

THE QUEEN'S THEATRE AND OPERA-HOUSE, EDINBURGH.

This newly-built theatre, designed by Mr. Bryce, is considered to be creditable to the taste and skill of the architect, both as regards the picturesque frontage of the building, and the commodious and convenient construction of the interior. The house is seated for about 1700, having three tiers of boxes and galleries. The front lines of the different tiers form a semicircle, with an ogee curve outwards; while the stage boxes between the Corinthian columns of the proscenium curve inwards, their line of vision embracing rather the front stage and the body of the house than the usual perspective of the scenery. There are two stage boxes on each side, from the omnibus box to the box crowning the arch of the pillars. The dress circle consists of open boxes, seated for 260; the second tier accommodates about 400; and the third circle consists of a capacious gallery, comfortably seated for above 600 persons. The stalls and pit, accommodating nearly 500, fill the wide area below, along with the orchestra. From every part of the house a complete view of the stage is to be obtained, while from the great majority of the seats almost the whole house is to be seen. The adoption of the semicircular, instead of the horseshoe, form of the house greatly foreshortens the distance between the centre boxes and the stage, and thus enhances both the power of the voice and the effect of the scene. Indeed, from the furthest seat of the gallery the line of vision is perfect, and the actor or vocalist will be distinctly heard in every corner. The work of painting has been executed by Mr. D. R. Hay; and the fitting up of the dress circle, stalls, &c., has been intrusted to Messrs. Potts, Cairnie, and Ray.

The arrangements for the stage were intrusted to Messrs. Grieve, Telbin, and Co., London—the working department being conducted by Mr. Bare, who fitted up the theatre for her Majesty at Windsor. The proscenium curtain and the act drop have been painted by Mr. Grieve.

The Queen's Theatre has been leased from the shareholders by Mr. Black, whose management has been characterised by great spirit and enterprise.

THE NEW HOUSE OF COMMONS.

It would be difficult to point to any edifice, ancient or modern, in which the style and character of the architecture are more completely carried out than in the new Houses of Parliament. Every apartment and means of communication throughout the vast edifice has its characteristics of the Tudor palatial style, which Sir Charles Barry has adopted. We engrave two examples of this uniform adherence to design. First is a Vestibule communicating with the Library of the House of Commons. The door panels are filled with glass and brass trellis-work; and the side and upper windows are charged with armorial badges of the Red and White Roses and Portcullis. The second instance is one of the south end Committee-rooms in the river front of the Palace: it has a beautiful window, and a ceiling divided into compartments by deep mouldings, and somewhat Holbeinesque in character. The scene shows the form in which a Committee sits.

VESTIBULE TO THE LIBRARY OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

COMMITTEE-ROOM, HOUSE OF COMMONS.

SCENES IN THE DESERT.

NOONDAY SHELTER.

THE DESERT ROUTE.

(Continued from page 116.)

VII. NOONDAY SHELTER. VIII. WAYSIDE CAFE.

We are supposed now to have past El Arish—the Egyptian quarantine station, on the Syrian frontiers. The road before us still continues hot and dusty, though not quite so monotonous as heretofore; for every two hours or so we come upon a stump of trees and a wretched little village consisting of six or a dozen hovels, and almost invariably another village just opposite to it, and as far away as you can see upon the horizon. When that direful malady the plague used to be of frequent occurrence, then one or the other of these villages would be entirely deserted, and allotted for the residence or death-place of such unhappy creatures as were stricken. On the movements of these unfortunates a strict watch was kept from the other village. The people left food and water for the use of the sick at some distance; and such among the sufferers as were able fetched it for their use. The dying buried the dead; and the plague-village was desolate and deserted for many succeeding months. Here we come upon a wild son of the desert, who, together with his camel, is luxuriating in the shade afforded by the hut and the palm-tree. Enveloped in his loose mezhlah (cloak), he avails himself of the favourable opportunity offered for airing his dubiously-washed wearing apparel, which the good woman of the house has washed for him and hung out to dry on the roof of the house. This is the last village we encounter before arriving at Khan-Younes, the Syrian frontier, from which the sanatory cordon extends to the sea on one side, and Hebron on the other. Here we meet with a group of guardians belonging to the establishment at Gaza, enjoying themselves at a wayside coffee-house (caffenè). The proprietor of the shop is amusing his guests with a tune on the Syrian banjo; the group of guardians are partaking of coffee and pipes; and one more on the alert than the others has discovered the approaching caravan of travellers, and is scrutinising it with the assistance of a veritable Dollond. This open cool caffenè is the favourite resort of native travellers; and the two camels standing in front of the house with their pack-saddles on proclaim the presence of other travellers besides those of our own caravan, which we have escorted safely from the outskirts of Grand Cairo to the Syrian frontiers, and there we must now bid adieu to them, leaving the dragoman and the guardians to battle the watch together, wrangling incessantly the whole way from Khan-Younes to Gaza, where all this squabbling terminates by the gates of the Quarantine being heavily closed and bolted upon the travellers, who remain in durance vile five days under the special charge of Doctor Gilbert Esperon, the medical officer under whose supervision this vast establishment has risen into existence.

RUINS OF CARTHAGE.—Accounts from Tunis announce that the Rev Mr. Davis, who, a few months ago, obtained from the Bey permission to explore the ruins of Carthage under certain conditions, and who has been engaged during the last two months excavating in that locality under the auspices of the British Government and the Museum, has made some valuable discoveries. An Arab having found a piece of elegant mosaic, Mr. Davis was induced to direct his excavations to that spot, and his labours were rewarded by the discovery of the remains of an ancient building, which is believed to be the Palace of Dido. After cutting through two layers of flooring, which must have been laid down at lengthened intervals, he came on a most splendid piece of mosaic of many square yards in area, and in which were delineated two heads, each three feet high, supposed to be those of Dido and Juno; besides several graceful Eastern figures, and a number of elegant devices and ornaments. Of these very interesting relics we hope, by favour of the reverend antiquary, Mr. Davis, to be enabled to engrave specimens.

WAYSIDE CAFE

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

PRIVOLOUS SUITS.—Lord BROUGHAM brought in a bill which he described as being intended to put a stop to frivolous suits, and establish cheap and speedy justice.

THE TURKISH PRINCIPALITIES.—The Earl of CLARENDON, in reply to Lord Lyndhurst, stated that under the terms of a recent firman the Turkish Divans were empowered to discuss the union of the Danubian Principalities, or any other question connected with the future administration of those provinces, in conformity with the ascertained wish of the population. He declined to express any opinion himself on that subject at present, as he was in possession of the firman, which had, he believed, been communicated confidentially to the Government.

THE WAR IN CHINA.—In answer to a series of interpellations from Lord Lyndhurst, the Earl of Ellenborough, and other Peers, the Earl of CLARENDON promised to produce a variety of returns and correspondence relating to the late proceedings at Canton.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

THE CANADIAN LOAN.—Mr. DISRAELI and LORD PALMERSTON.

MR DISRAELI: I observed with great regret and respect shared, I am sure, by the entire House that the noble Lord the First Minister of the Crown has not been in his place since the discussion on the Address Hear, hear). I hope, therefore, his colleague will be able to inform us whether there is any immediate prospect of the noble Lord being in his place. (Hear, hear).

SIR C. GREY: I saw my noble friend yesterday, and he told me he hoped to be in his place to-day. He is not here, I regret to say; but I have every reason to believe he will be here to-morrow. (Hear, hear).—Mr. DISRAELI. I wish to state that in case the noble Lord is able to be in his place I will ask for the last and largest premission of the House, before the commencement of public business, to make some observations upon a communication which I received from him on the first evening of our meeting on a matter of great moment. (Hear, hear).

THE BUDGET.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER announced that he intended to bring forward the annual Budget on Friday next.

THE WAR WITH PERSIA.—Mr. V. SMITH, in reply to Mr. Layard, stated that the Persian Ambassador in Paris was fully empowered to arrange all the questions now in dispute between his own Government and this country.

TRANSPORTATION.

Sir G. GREY moved for leave to bring in a bill to amend the Act 16 and 17 Vic., c. 99, entitled "An Act to substitute in certain cases other punishment in lieu of transportation." After describing the circumstances under which the experiment of the ticket-of-leave and licensing system had been tried, and the extent to which they were carried, the Home Secretary cited returns showing the operation of the present law. When the Act of 1853 passed there were 8000 convicts under sentence of transportation. Of that number 1055 were transported to Western Australia; of the remaining 6000 not less than 2000 have been discharged on expiration of the pressing clause, and 1250 are employed at present at Bermuda and Gibraltar; and the number actually in this country remaining, and under sentence of transportation, and who will receive tickets of leave in the course of the next few years, is about 600. It must be remembered, however, that the 1200 at Bermuda and Gibraltar will come back to England and receive their tickets of leave here. The number of licenses that have been revoked for misconduct is 466, but there is to be added to that number the licenses held by persons who have been reconvicted, and the term of whose sentence exceeds the original sentence under which they were lying, and in whose cases of course the revocation of the license can have no effect. That number is 583, and there are 95 who have been reported for misconduct, and note whose case an investigation is being made. Taking these numbers altogether and reading them as revocations of tickets of leave we have a grand total of 1144, or about 16 per cent upon the whole number of persons to whom licenses have been granted. A great many schemes have been proposed for the employment of convicts, but the truth is that there are not convicts enough to do all the work in which, if they could be profitably engaged; the real difficulty is not what they are to do while working out their sentence, but what they are to do after it has expired. The Government believe it to be their duty to make use of every facility which exists for the removal of convicts from this country. Now, Western Australia is the only colony which at present is in a condition to receive convicts under sentence of transportation; and it has been shown that in future years 250 is the largest number which we can calculate sending abroad, owing to the small number of persons now sentenced to transportation. That is the rate at which we can supply convicts to a colony, and at the same time avail ourselves of those facilities recommended by the Committee of great many witnesses, including the Governor, the Controller, Captain Henderson, Mr. Frederick Moore, Mr. How, and other men of property and influence in the colony, who were not only asked for their opinion, but were invited to deliberate upon the questions themselves, state that its natural capabilities are very great, it is very large in extent, its climate is good, it is almost entirely cut off from the rest of Australia, there are only three ports from which it is possible for convicts to escape; they cannot get across the land, and the ports are of a character that those would be very difficult to escape from. The country itself is a good producing country, growing good crops of wheat, barley, and potatoes, while the breed of horses is so excellent that they form a considerable item of export—being sent to India, whom they are considered; there is abundance of timber, of every growth, and suitable for any purpose, while, at the same time, large tracts of land are in the hands of private persons, who there would be no want of employment for labour (Hear, hear). There have been large grants of land obtained by private individuals under the impression that the land must necessarily prove a source of wealth, but it has proved, of late years, a source of [illegible] valueless, and it is only after the convict labour has been obtained that it has begun to yield a profit. There is a belief that even now from 800 to 1000 convicts might be advantageously [illegible] Western Australia and that [illegible] would be [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE CHINESE WAR.—OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS.

The papers relating to the proceedings of her Majesty's naval forces at Canton, presented to both Houses of Parliament by command of her Majesty, were published on Saturday. They include the despatches from Sir John Bowring to the Earl of Clarendon, Admiral Seymour's despatches to the Admiralty, the respective correspondence between Sir John Bowring, Admiral Seymour, and Consul Parkes, and with the Chinese authorities; documents relative to the proceedings of the French and American representatives; together with a variety of papers, the substance of which has already been made known. There is also an appendix, composed of papers dating from 1848, respecting the right of British subjects to free entry into Canton. The only expression of opinion on the part of the home Government contained in the papers will be found in the following despatches:—

THE EARL OF CLARENDON TO SIR J. BOWRING

Foreign Office, Dec. 10, 1856.

SIR,—I have received your despatches of the 13th and 16th of October, reporting what had passed in regard to the seizure, by the Chinese authorities at Canton, of the crew of the lorcha Arrow, sailing under British colours.

I have consulted the law officer of the Crown on this matter, and I have now to state to you, that I am of opinion that this act of the Chinese authorities constitutes an infraction of Article IX. of the Supplementary Treaty.

The only possible defence open to them appears to be, that the Arrow was not "an English merchant ship" within the true intent and meaning of the Treaty; but Article XVII., Rule I., in Supplementary Treaty, recognises and includes this particular class of vessel; she had a British register, British colours and papers; and even if her license had been improperly granted in August, 1854, this was a matter of British internal regulation, and to be dealt with by the British authorities. This point is evidently an after-thought on the part of the Chinese, and the only evidence of it is the uncorroborated assertion of one of the crew while in custody. No British lorcha would be safe if her crew were liable to seizure on such grounds.

I have further to observe that there do not seem to have been any such circumstances of urgency in this case as would afford any justification or excuse for the arbitrary conduct of the Chinese authorities, who were probably emboldened by the absence of any of her Majesty's ships from Canton. The Arrow was bound to Hong-Kong, and if any of her crew could be identified as having been guilty of piracy, or were even suspected of it, there would have been no difficulty in securing their apprehension and delivery, had the Chinese authorities taken the course indicated by Article IX., viz., communicating with the British Consul. Only two of her crew were charged with piracy, viz., Lam-ting-lae, and Liang-kien-foo; the third detained (Woo-a-jen, is, apparently, only wanted as a witness; and there was not the slightest pretext for seizing the other nine, who were afterwards released.

The accidental and temporary absence of the British master on board a neighbouring vessel could not affect the question. The British flag is clearly proved by the deposition of Kennedy and Leech to have been hauled down by the Chinese Mandarin crew, notwithstanding the denial of this fact by the Imperial Commissioner; but even if the thing had not been actually flying at the moment, it is obvious that the national character of the lorcha was well known to the authorities.

The expiration of the Arrow's sailing license on September 27, previous to her seizure, does not appear to have been known to the Chinese authorities; and this, again, is a matter of British regulation which would not justify seizure by the Chinese.

The principle involved in this case is most important, and the demands made by Mr. Consul Parkes appear to me to be very moderate under the circumstances. I consider that the redelivery of the three men still detained and a subsequent formal demand for their extradition before they are given up again, should be insisted on as a sine qua non. They must be considered as having been forcibly taken in breach of treaty, and without any just distribution or excuse, from on board a British vessel, and illegally detained in custody by the orders of the Imperial Commissioner, with full knowledge of all the circumstances, and in defiance of a formal demand by the British Consul.

Under all the circumstances of the case, I approve of the intention to seize and hold as a temporary security for the redress which the British commander has demanded upon Canton, if that is not obtained.

I have only to add, that I conclude you will have caused a strict inquiry to be made into the circumstances connected with the grant of the license to the lorcha in the year 1854.

I am, &c.,

(Signed) CLARENDON.

THE SECRETARY TO THE ADMIRALTY TO MR. HAMMOND.

(Received January 7.)

Admiralty, January 3, 1857.

SIR, I am commanded by my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to transmit to you copies of a letter from Rear-Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, and of such of its inclosures as have been received at this office, Foreign-office, detailing the operations at Canton; and, in laying the same before the Earl of Clarendon, I have to request that you will move his Lordship to inform my Lords what instructions are to be sent to the Admiral by the mail of the 10th instant.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) THOS. PHINN.

R. HAMMOND TO THE SECRETARY TO THE ADMIRALTY.

Foreign-office, January 10, 1857.

I have laid before the Earl of Clarendon your letter of the 3rd instant, inclosing Rear-Admiral Sir Michael Seymour's report of the late operations in the Canton river, and requesting to be made acquainted with the instructions which should be sent to him on the subject; and, in reply, I am to request that you will acquaint the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty that Lord Clarendon is of opinion that the Admiral's conduct should be entirely approved, and more especially the judgment, firmness, and moderation with which he has acted, and the respect which he has shown for the lives and properties of the Chinese people.

THE EARL OF CLARENDON TO SIR J. BOWRING.

Foreign-office, Jan. 10, 1857.

I have received your despatch of the 22nd of October last, with a report of the operations in the Canton river; and I have to acquaint you that her Majesty's Government entirely approve the course which has been adopted by Rear-Admiral Sir Michael Seymour and yourself; and I have to instruct you also to convey to Mr. Parkes a similar approval of his conduct.

Count de Courcy, the French representative, expresses to Sir John Bowring his "moral adhesion" to the course taken by the British authorities, and his recognition of the fact that our common interest direct us towards the revision of our treaties with China.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

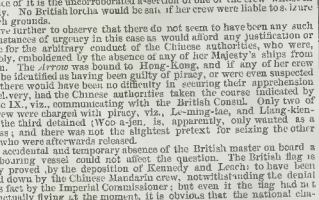
Lat. 51° 28′ 09″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above sea 34 feet.



The daily means are obtained from observations made at 6h. and 10h. a.m., and 2h., 6h., and 10h. p.m., on each day, except Sunday, when the first observation is omitted. The corrections for diurnal variation are taken from the Tables of Mr. Glaisher. The "Dew Points" and "Relative Humidity" are calculated, from observations of the dry and wet bulb thermometers, by Dr. Apjohn's Formula and Dalton's Table of the Tension of Vapour. The movement of the wind is given by a self-recording Robinson's Anemometer, the amount stated for each day being that recorded from midnight to midnight.

"MANAGEMENT" OF THE DEBT.

"THE value of a thing," says a hard-mouthed proverb, "is what it will fetch." The makers of this stern saying forgot to include a proposition as to the kindred consideration—namely, what it costs to fetch the thing. We have recently been apprised, by no meaner an authority than the Quarterly Review, that, if Mr. Briggs goes to the Tweed and catches a salmon, that fish costs Mr. Briggs from £3 to £5. We have also been edified by an anecdote of two titled sportsmen who rented a Scottish moor, and who, calculating in presence of a Highland innkeeper that each grouse they slew cost them £6, were heartily congratulated upon being such bad shots as they had proved themselves. These, however, are what are called fancy prices; and although Mr. Briggs and the other noble sportsmen cheerfully pay them when out for enjoyment—always heightened, to an English mind, by its expensiveness—they would be very much disgusted if asked to pay at the same rate for the ordinary gratifications of life—for instance, on the obtaining their dividends from the Governor and Company of the Bank of England. It is fortunate, therefore, for their peace of mind that this special gratification is paid for at a preposterous rate without the knowledge of the parties most interested.

It might not be charitable to enlighten the rich man upon the subject. In fact, as we shall speedily show, although he has, abstractedly, a right to complain, and that loudly, of the particular abuse to which we shall refer, he is, comparatively, in an advantageous position. But inasmuch as this position is incompatible with the recognised ideas of justice, and as a rectification of the abuse in question will be a positive benefit to Dives, as well as to his poorer brethren, we shall venture to lay before the public a brief explanation of what it costs to fetch a dividend. There is a peculiar propriety in inviting attention to the subject just now. The Bank Charter, which has been renewed thirteen times, is now before Parliament for a fourteenth renewal, and though, under ordinary circumstances, a recommendation to reform an objectionable feature in a system is received with singular coldness by those who work that system, a similar suggestion, by some peculiarity of human nature, meets with curiously-respectful treatment when the system itself is being overhauled by a superior power. Availing ourselves of this fact, let us produce a few figures in illustration of the proposition we desire to establish; namely, that advantage by Mr. Ingram, in the debate on Friday night (upon Sir G. C. Lewis's motion for a Select Committee on the Bank Act), that the management of the National Debt demands reform. The question is an administrative one, and may be considered entirely apart from the complex terrors of the Currency dogmas; and, indeed, it chiefly affects those to whom the most ordinary truths of finance are about as familiar as the cuneiform character, or the Homeric hymns.

The first point to which it would direct attention is the following tabulated statement. It contains a reliable estimate of the number of persons who, in 1840, received dividends on the Debt; of the number of those who, in 1850, received it; and a classification of the amounts of such dividends. A comparison of the varying numbers, in reference to amounts, at the two periods is both interesting and suggestive, in a social point of view; but our immediate object is within a more limited and arithmetical range of consideration.

| In receipt of Half-yearly dividends. | There were in 1840 | To 1850 |
|---|---|---|
| Under £5 | 86,238 persons | 89,238 persons. |
| £5 to £10 | 15,393 ,, | 12,293 ,, |
| £10 to £50 | 29,015 ,, | 23,372 ,, |
| £50 to £100 | 2a,153 ,, | 18,770 ,, |
| £100 to £200 | 14,883 ,, | 15,016 ,, |
| £200 to £300 | 3,378 ,, | 3,929 ,, |
| £300 to £500 | 2,809 ,, | 2,683 ,, |
| £500 to £1000 | 1,317 ,, | 1,181 ,, |
| £1000 to £2000 | 581 ,, | 505 ,, |
| Above £2000 | 198 ,, | 210 ,, |
| | 220,177 | 229,236 |

Remarking, in connection with a previous observation, that it will be seen from the above table that, though the gross number of stockholders will be found to have diminished during the ten years from 1840 to 1850, the smallest class of holders had increased by upwards of three thousand during that term, we now proceed to show what charge the Bank of England makes to the country—that is to say to the taxpayer—for handing to these persons, twice in the year, the dividends payable upon their stock. The cost of the machinery which keeps in daily action these alphabetised gentlemen, whom Mr. Weller the elder conceived to be what he was pleased to call Reduced Counsels, and whom he justifiably regarded as alive, is shown by the following detail: In 1845 the gross amount of "management" charges made by the Bank of England to the month of March was £252,051; in 1850 it was £251,457; in 1853 it was £247,853; in 1855 it was £252,000; and in the current year it is £247,339. The previous tabulated statement is calculated to 1850, when 229,736 persons took dividends, and as sufficient approximation to precision it may be said that it costs nearly £1 per head to hand over the dividend.

Now, in the first place, it may seem to be doing business a little in the way of Mr. Briggs and his salmonicide to make the payment of ten pounds cost one pound. The machinery which requires so much oil must surely resemble that which Lord Palmerston, we recollect, amused the House of Commons by describing, in his inimitable way, a few years ago, an American contrivance, by which a steam-engine, we forget how many horse-power, and certain horses, combined their forces for the purpose of drawing corks from bottles. When the Duke of Piccadilly, weary of wheel ratile, runs down to his ancestral mansion for a day or two of quiet, a system of stewardship and swindleship comes into action; and his mutton-chops during that repose cost him ten times as much as the best dinner he could give at the Reform Club. But these splendid feats are not for every-day life, nor even to be performed in the case of Brown and Jones twice a year. If those persons had to pay out of their pockets a tenth of their dividend for receiving the rest, the Bank, which owed its existence to one revolution, would certainly end it in another. But why do Jones and Brown look calmly on and see the Bank paid, out of the taxes to which they contribute, at that extortionate rate? This is one thing for Brown and Jones to consider. But there is another. Not only is the dividend paid in a very costly but in a very incommodious and clumsy manner. Lord Palmerston's machinery did draw the cork, the Duke does get his chops at their weight in sovereigns, and the dividend is paid, but in how troublesome and roundabout a way! Either the stockholder must personally attend, and be identified (a very inconvenient proceeding, as a thousand matrons and elderly maidens will witness, and as any man of business who does not happen to have his business near the Bank will confirm), or he, or she, must give a power of attorney, which is duly stamped, costs a great deal of money, and requires elaborate signatures and attestations, and which leaves one's income at the mercy of a second person—a proceeding which is at all times disagreeable, and which has of late years been occasionally found to be equivalent to self-ruin. Add to this that those who reside at a distance from the Bank, and receive their dividends secondhand, have to incur either the risks of postal transmission or the expense of banker's commission, which, upon the half of the attorney's commission, makes a very appreciable percentage upon income already heavily taxed.

The Bank dividend system, therefore, is at once very costly and very clumsy. Before we adduce an instance or two of a different kind of management, let us meet an objection which will, no doubt, be urged to our estimate of its cost. It will be said—indeed the fact is patent even upon the ill-arranged accounts by which it is sought to mystify the national auditors—that the Bank returns to the nation, under the 7 and 8 Vict., c. 92, the sum of £180,000 for exclusive privileges, and that this reduces the management expenses to an average of about £90,000. Probably, on second thoughts, this excuse will be kept out of the case, for it is not one to which the Bank will find it very politic to call attention. A worse bargain was never made for the nation—a bold word, too—than this. There is not a great private bank that would not gladly give four times the amount for a concession of the exclusive privileges now in the possession of the Bank of England.

But look for a moment at the case of other associations where a dividend has to be paid. Compare the cost of managing the department of railway administration. We will take two instances. The Manchester and Sheffield Railway Company had at the last closing of the books 4900 shareholders, and a capital of £9,000,000. The entire cost of making out all the necessary documents making these shareholders to draw their income for half a year is under £63; and for a year, £125 13s. 2d. This represents, instead of the Bank cost of a pound, the sum of sixpence to each shareholder. Now, take the Midland Railway, its share capital is £16,147,714, and its debenture debt £4,838,866 (the principle involved in dependents of amount; but we give these formidable figures because the Bank of England is supposed by thousands to represent an ever-springing fountain of gold and silver not to be measured by ordinary rule); and it has about 10,000 shareholders and 2400 debenture-holders. In 1856 the total expenses of the dividend department were £366. In addition to this extraordinary difference of expense, the shareholder's income is received without personal attendance, without expensive documents, without risk, and without inconvenience. The railway warrant is the railway banknote.

The attention of the public need only be called to the difference of the two systems to insure an expression of popular feeling upon the subject. The present is the time for such expression, and the room in which the Committee is about to sit is the place in which suggestions upon the point will be considered, unless the House itself should be compelled to take the matter up. It is impossible that in a practical country so ridiculous an anomaly as the dividend system will be permitted to last. There are, of course, many reasons why it will be defended by the great company which works it. The more difficulty there is thrown in the way of removing money, the longer it is likely to accumulate; and no commercial man need be reminded how valuable even a few days' retention of small sums, multiplied by thousands, in the present delicate and sensitive state of our money system. The unclaimed dividend books show that the Bank raise no ideal and imaginary obstacle in the way of timidity, indolence, or want of knowledge of business. And that the dividend system has worked for many years is reason enough with those who call themselves safe men to resist its reformation. The case which we have made out, however, is too strong to leave it probable that the system can survive even a cursory examination by those to whom the subject is instructed. Without unduly pressing these remarks by the suggestion of substitutes for the existing arrangements (the nearer the approach to the simplicity of a well-checked and vigilantly-watched railway share department the better), we would express a hope that the Committee will give its attention to a proposition formerly brought forward by Mr. Ingram, and the justice and convenience of which must strike all who will give a moment's thought to the point. His proposal was that the dividend warrant should be for all practical purposes a bank-note, and that, at all events, it should be made a legal tender to the tax-gatherer. The series of savings which would be gained by this arrangement, so completely in conformity with the spirit of the Bank constitution, will be evident to a man of business; and if we do not trace it here it is only because we wish to exclude from this article all detail which will not have value for the mass of readers. Mr. Ingram's proposition, however, will probably be submitted, in due course, to the House, and we shall then take another opportunity of showing the advantages it offers. In the mean time we would urge upon all who are, or who hope to be, interested in the National Debt, to give consideration to the question what it costs to fetch a dividend.

SKATING IN HYDE PARK.

JACK FROST is rather a popular visitor with Londoners. You may know when he has come to town by the way in which men and women in the streets hurry along, as though they expected to overtake him in one direction or another. They are sure he is thereabout, for he has blown in their faces, and turned their noses red or blue by his breath. He has shaken them by their hands, and trodden upon their toes, and they feel his civility and incivility at the tips of their extremities. But they are good friends for all that; for the pursuit of the invisible visitor has stretched the muscles and set the blood flowing briskly through the veins, which will diminish the sale of nauseous pills some thousands of boxes, and send people to their homes with such appetites that the plainest fare will be received with cheers, and any little error in cookery be overlooked or forgiven. Jack Frost stands very high in favour with the boys of London, and to attend him they generally "full dress," in monstrous worsted comforters and close-eared caps. They call aloud his praises to each other—"Here's a jolly Frost, Bob Brown!" and, "O, aint this hammy?" They find his footsteps on the pavement, and cut out slides upon them, to the peril of feeble and careless pedestrians. They hold great feasts round baked-potato and kidney pudding cans; and of late years pour down their own throats libations of a curious mixture, enticingly named "Hot Spiced Elder-wine." What can it be? Let us hope that they are no worse cheated than the buyers of fine old crusted port at two and a penny a bottle. Jack Frost is not on good terms with the cabmen. He plays them sad tricks. Coming unexpectedly, when they are not "roughed," and running away again as soon as they are so. He tries the tempers and the coachmanship of those honest fellows, who scarcely find consolation in their tribulation by charging treble fares and drinking many pints of purl and dog's-nose. Of course without saying (to reply), "If one warms you for a week, what would a pound do?" Peppermint lozenges are in great request; and ginger-rock and "thin drops are "hot i' the mouth" too. Roasted chestnuts crackling over glowing charcoal are irresistible to boys with cold hands and a penny. And yonder battered merchant, henceforth immortalised by Mr. Leech's pencil, will, thanks to Jack Frost, perhaps have a supper of tripe from the guins of the morning.

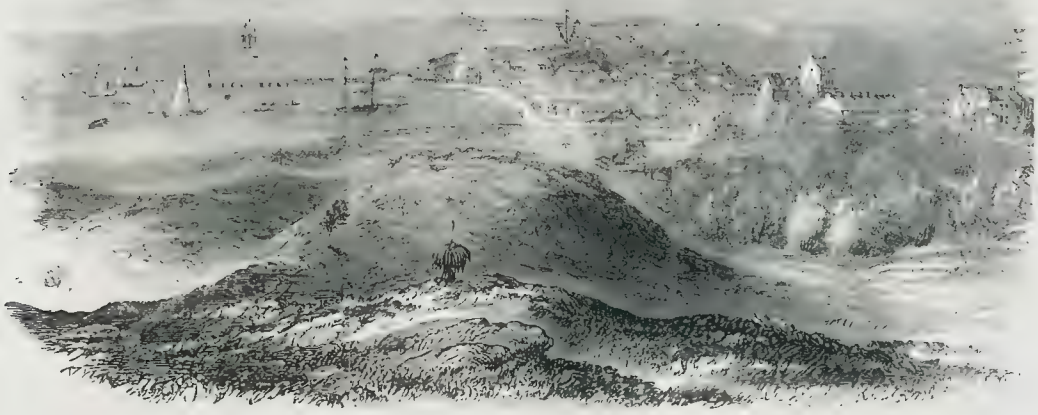
A happy New Year is this Son of Winter! for see how the rogue has kissed those pretty lips and dainty cheeks until they are red as summer roses. What would not those guardsmen give for the same privilege, even though they should kiss through a wedding-ring!

Hark! a dull, continuous cracking of the ice! a crumbling of its surface, and then more flawsand bubbling up of water. Jack Frost is away again! Those who are wise will follow his example and quit the dissolving floor, unless they wish to give trouble to the Humane Society and obtain a plunge-bath, a warm ditto, and a glass of brandy-and-water gratis.

M. L.

SKATING IN HYDE-PARK.—DRAWN BY JOHN LEECH.—(SEE PRECEDING PAGE.)

SECONDARY PUNISHMENTS AND TICKETS OF LEAVE.



FREMANTLE, IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA ROTTNEST ISLAND, THE PROPOSED NEW CONVICT ESTABLISHMENT, IN THE DISTANCE.

By reference to the report of the important measure introduced to the House of Commons on Monday night, by Sir George Grey, it will be seen that Western Australia is the locality for the Government experiment of the deportation of convicts sentenced to penal servitude. The colonists, we are assured, really desire the services of convicts of the mother country, as we gather from the following statement, numerously signed by gentlemen connected with the colony of Western Australia, which has been read and presented by a deputation to Mr. Labouchere:—

TO THE RIGHT HON. HENRY LABOUCHERE, HER MAJESTY'S SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES, &c.

SIR,—We, the undersigned, having an interest in and knowledge of the resources of Western Australia, feel it a duty we owe both to that colony whose real capabilities do not appear to be understood) and this country to put before the Government a few plain facts to prove that it is peculiarly adapted for a penal settlement:—

1. Because the expense of planting a convict establishment (which is always very great) has been already incurred, substantial prisons and depôts have been built, and the necessary offices prepared to receive a large number of convicts.

2. The free settlers (unlike those of other parts of Australia) are willing to continue to receive convicts, to employ them, and to pay them great wages; they merely require some modification of the present system. The convicts can be beneficially employed in the advancement of the colony, such as making roads, bridges, and tramways into the timber forests and to the copper and lead mines.

3. Convict labour has been the means of producing the necessaries of life, which formerly were very scarce and dear, in abundant supply, and on reasonable terms. The convict establishment has also created a market for food, which is amply supplied by the settlers, and at cheap rates. Flour, as an instance, was formerly from £35 to £40 per ton, now (in October last) a contract was taken at £20 per ton, delivered at the dépôt, and the contractor is prepared next year to supply it at £16 per ton.

4. Western Australia also possesses a fine climate, and is unconnected with other parts of Australia (at present) except by sea, and is as much an island as if surrounded by it. Convicts can only escape by sea, and the natives would very soon bring them back if they attempted the bush; indeed, the convicts well know it.

5. Rottnest Island, about fourteen miles from Fremantle, is well adapted for the refractory convicts; and there is ample room for a large number, and employment for years to come in erecting forts and other necessary public works, raising salt, cultivating the land, gardens, &c.

6. That a large establishment may now be carried on at a very reasonable rate, as the heavy outlay in the colony has been increased principally for buildings, plant, &c.

We have the honour to remain, &c.,
(Here follow the signatures of the deputation.)

The accompanying View of Fremantle, already a convict settlement, shows the Island of Rottnest in the distance, opposite the Lighthouse and Signal Station, nearly in the centre of the picture. The convict establishment is situated further to the right of the town than is included in the View. From among a variety of evidence of the approbation of the colonists we select the following from one of the old settlers who had opposed the importation of convict labour:—

We trust that Government do not intend to discontinue the introduction of convicts seeing the great amount of benefit that has resulted to the colony from its having been made a penal settlement under the highly improved system at present in operation, and how little trouble and annoyance the ticket of leave population gives under the existing regulations, for not only are by far the majority of the ticket holders reformed and better men as now treated, but we receive, free of charge to the colony, an important number of free labourers both now to an equal amount. Good and certain markets are found for everything the settlers are able to produce or rear, and property of every description has acquired a value which it could not previously pretend to.

Lectures on various subjects have been delivered by the more enlightened portion of the convicts to their humbler companions in misfortune; while a manuscript weekly publication, called the Family Herald, conducted by the convicts, is stated to be got up creditably, and to strengthen the hope that there are many among them who, under the able management now exercised, may be restored to society, and do it good service.

We need scarcely add that the above circumstances invest Western Australia with immediate interest; and we are happy to add that the Sketch-book of a recent explorer (Captain Harrington) will enable us to present to our readers a few scenes of native and emigrant life from its least-known province. Of emigrants to Western Australia it used to be said, "They are gone to the Swan;" and the nominal locality of a picturesque but unimportant river is still commonly enough applied to an immense western and south-western territory, whereof these Views have been directly sketched.

KING GEORGE'S SOUND.

The accurate maps of the earliest explorers of the western coast of Australia were of the most inaccurate character, as attested in the details of the discoveries of Endracht's, Edel's, and Leweirin's Lands, between the years 1616 and 1622. It was examined by Dampier and Vlaming, and afterwards by Flinders, Baudin, Péron, and Freycinet; but by all without any cheering or promising discovery. They stated it to consist almost everywhere of a ridge of low steep rocks, bordering on a sandy shore, accessible to boats only in a few points. There are occasional openings, or rather rifts, in these rocks, through which torrents sometimes pour, but without any enlivening or fertilising influence. But Captain Flinders, whose general accuracy can be relied on, did not in this case observe the sandy inlet by which the Murray River, since discovered by Captain Sturt, finds its way to the sea, although this river surpasses the Rhine in the length of its course.

On this dreary shore, extending for 800 miles, there was, however, found by the early explorers an important opening to a land of promise. Such was the Swan River, to which a little naval expedition, under Captain Stirling, took refuge in 1826, and whose fertile stream was explored for fifty miles; and the report made of the country on its banks was so favourable, that a Western Settlement, which had always been a desideratum, by reason of its much shorter distance from England, was formed there in the year 1829, under the government of Captain Stirling; and was, by a temporary Act of Parliament, erected into an independent colony, by the name of Western Australia, and regular grants of land were made to capitalists who took with them free labourers. But the fertility of the soil had evidently been exaggerated. After three years' experience, Lieutenant-Governor Stirling stated the only products of this country of any value to be its timber, which was inexhaustible, and of excellent quality; and its grasses, affording feed of superior quality for sheep, horses, and cattle He adds

"There is a good species of tobacco and perennial flax, similar to the kind usually cultivated in Europe; but these are as yet only valuable as indicative of the capabilities of the soil.

"For some time back the weather have been kept at King George's Sound, and at Perth, the capital of Swan River: in the latter district the climate may be said to be exceptionable only in the months of January, February, and March, when the heat and drought are as disagreeable as they can be without affecting the health. The district of King George's Sound, being exposed to southerly winds in summer, and frequently visited by showers, is the most equable, perhaps, in the world, and the most temperate. The heat on the west coast is certainly intense; and the musquitos, which abound there in the summer, are serious evils in their way, and have caused some dislike to this part of the country as a place of residence. But, notwithstanding these and other local and trivial objections, the climate, the ports, the position, and extent of the country are such as to fit it to be the seat of a wealthy and populous possession of the Crown; and I feel justified in saying, in this stage of its occupation, that it will not fail to become such from any natural disqualification of the soil."

The subject of the View is situated not far from the south-western extremity of the Australian continent. It consists of an outer sound and two inner basins or harbours, which are perfectly landlocked, and afford every security for ships. The basin, called Princess Royal Harbour, and situated on the west side of the sound, can be entered by vessels of considerable size, which ride at anchor close to the shore, in perfect security. The other basin, called Oyster Harbour, is not so secure. As there is no harbour within a great distance of it, either on the eastern or western coast of Australia, which offers such advantages as King George's Sound, colonists were sent there from Sydney as early as 1826; and this settlement has been of great advantage to the colony of Swan River, settled at a later date. It is very conveniently situated for the purposes of refitting and refitting vessels bound to New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land, and is frequently resorted to by such vessels. The natives resemble those in the neighbourhood of Sydney, and are friendly to settlers.

The country, though rocky, is very picturesque. The hills are strewed with a profusion of beautiful shrubs, flourishing about immense blocks of granite: Banksiæ, one of which is called by the colonists wild honeysuckle, one of extraordinary beauty, grows trees are abundant, and the forests consist of gum-tree (Eucalyptus) and gum-trees (Eucalyptus), the timber of which is, however, usually decayed at the heart. No grass fit for pasture grows on the plains, which are overrun with a coarse herbage. Here occurs a singular exception to the almost universal law in the vegetable kingdom, that truly parasitical genera are incapable of growing in the earth; on all the coasts of Australia the Loranthus is found growing sparingly, like mistletoe, upon the branches of Eucalyptus, Casuarina, Acacia, and Melaleuca, but in King George's Sound a terrestrial species occurs, forming a small tree fifteen feet high.

"King George's Sound was discovered in 1791; and is an extensive bay, on the south-western coast of Western Australia, and eastward of Cape Leeuwin (Lioness); the principal town is Albany. In 1826 it was taken possession of by the Sydney Government: it was intended to form a penal settlement there: indeed, a detachment of troops and some convicts were in possession at the place when the charter for Western Australia was granted; the settlement was consequently abandoned by the Government of New South Wales, and the troops and convicts were withdrawn."

Mr. Melville, from whose able work, "Australasia and Prison Discipline," we quote the above, describes the aborigines of this part of the continent as a very harmless race, and, generally speaking, willing to be employed by the settlers. To the credit of the white population, it should be mentioned that they have always acted kindly towards these black people, and the latter, in return, usually maintain friendly terms with the Europeans. "These natives are not fitted to work as labourers: the children of nature are not educated to other toil than that necessary to obtain food, the limits of their happiness are other wise circumscribed than labour, whereas it is considered, sport by the natives. Little danger is there of any disturbance with the blacks; and, should one is it likely that the territory will be invaded by any hostile foreign power. Under these circumstances, the Home Government considers five officers and 125 privates of the 21st (Royal North British) Regiment quite sufficient protection for all Western Australia."

(To be continued.)

The Late Princess Lieven.—The body of the Princess Lieven has been embalmed and sent to Russia. A funeral service was performed over the corpse on the 4th inst., at the Lutheran Chapel, in the Rue Chaublat. The deceased Princess did not belong to the orthodox Greek Church. She has left behind her a valuable country of seclusion to M. Guizot. This, considering his advanced age (sixty-eight), is a very modest legacy; and it is reported that the family of the Princess propose to pay the original capital sum named, so that M. Guizot's family may be benefited. It is most confidently said in some quarters that M. Guizot was privately married to the Princess. At all events, his daughters as well as himself have gone into deep mourning for her. She was not extremely rich, her whole income never having been more than £3000 a year; but out of this, although she kept a liberal house, she managed to put by something annually.

The Russian Railways.—The Nord has a long communication from St. Petersburg of the 24th ult., which contains the following particulars respecting the lines of railway that are carried out by Messrs. Salt, Brassey, Peto, and Betts. It also details the arrangements which have been made for the completion of the Moscow line, particularly signed, but will be so, probably, during the present month. It adds that the seat of the company will be at St. Petersburg, under the direction of a committee consisting of a president, seven directors, and seventeen members. This committee is already formed. M. Lebrun, attaché of the Home Minister, is named president, and MM. Stieglitz and Thomas Baring, vice. The members are selected from the leading manufacturing and commercial houses of the capital. The latter throws no light upon the tracing or direction of the four lines on the eve of being officially recorded, and is silent on financial details. It states, however, that these four lines are regarded as insufficient for the necessities of the country, and that divers branches or connecting lines are spoken of as under consideration; all, of course, to be set up and opened to traffic by the aid of foreign capital.

Children in Workhouses.—A Parliamentary return, just printed, shows that on the 25th March, 1856, there were in the workhouses of all Unions in England and Wales 31,586 children, viz., 15,429 boys and 16,157 girls. Of these 19,497 were girls who were old enough for service. In all, 12,759 were illegitimate, 12,862 were orphans, 2738 children of able-bodied parents in the workhouse, and only 769 of the children of the same class of parents out of the workhouse. In the workhouses of Middlesex were 3421 boys and 2934 girls; in those of Lancashire 2764 boys and 2549 girls. The counties of Kent and Surrey have the next largest numbers.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Argus; L. L.; J. P. P.; and others.—Our Problem No. 627 is exactly copied from the [illegible], but, as the Black King is in check, to begin with, we suspect [illegible]. We await the arrival of the next Number of the French magazine to rectify the position.

F. H., Dunmow.—It is the custom of the leading players—unless an arrangement to the contrary has been made by the parties beforehand—for each player to retain the same coloured men he began with throughout a sitting.

J. D. M. P. 1. The blank Chess diagrams published by Messrs. Ashbee and Dangerfield, of Bedford-street, Covent-garden, are the best and cheapest we have met with. 2. They can be sent by post, like any other printed matter, 4 on. for a penny.

R. H. W., Brighton. A very smart little problem.

E. A. K.—Simplicity itself! Admitting of the easiest possible solution in two moves.

R. G.—The Automaton Chess-Player, mentioned in our last as having been destroyed in the conflagration at Philadelphia, 1854, was the same figure that created so great a sensation in London and the Continental cities many years ago.

A Subscriber.—There is good reason to hope that the Birmingham Chess Meeting will be delayed a short time in order that it may be held the same week with the expected gathering at Manchester during the Art-Treasures Exhibition.

Spectator.—Arrangements are in progress for a renewal of the Consultation Games at the St. George's Club, or in some other equally eligible arena. Their temporary cessation has, no doubt, been prejudicial not only to the interests of the club but to Chess in this country generally.

Berean.—The difficulty you and others complain of in distinguishing the King's and Queen's Bishop's Knight is completely obviated by the Staunton men, in which the King's pieces are designated by a small crown on the top.

T. M.—In playing games by correspondence, you will find one of James' "In Statu Quo" boards and men of inestimable service. Indeed, for conducting games of this description without [illegible] we know [illegible] can this ingenious novelty.

A. M. H.—The amended version shall be examined.

Joyeux.—Take a six months course of Tomlinson's useful little book, "Amusements in Chess," and you will be astonished to find how little you knew of the game before. When thoroughly grounded in all that manual can teach you it will then be time to tackle the more difficult treatises you mention.

R. T. F.—We propose resuming the Chess Enigmas very shortly, as I are [illegible] a collection for publication.

Solutions of Problem No. 676 by Omega, Peru, Simple Simon, Argus, Belle-Chess, J. D., W. H., Gregory, A. Clark, Will o' the Wisp, A German, Alpha, Little Dorrit, The Original Northern Girl, Carr, Pawn, Ernest, A Gendun of Nicnias, Puto, Wilfred, Henrician, Tortoise, Rustic, F. R. Crampton, Box and Cox, A School Boy, Antony, Mungo, F.R.S., Big Ben Lovell, Diggory, H. P. W., F. G. W., M. Austin, Buxton, R. P. G. S. S., A Highlander, G. Mason, Old Salt. One of the third, Barnacle, G. P. Q., A Casual Player, A Boarding-school Miss, D. D., Mallock, Peter, Chemicus, Fox-prove, are correct. All others are wrong.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM 676.

| WHITE. | BLACK. | WHITE. | BLACK. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. Q to K Kt sq | P to K B 4th (best) | 3. Q to K R 8th (ch) | Kt interposes |
| 2. Q to Q R 8th | Kt takes Q B P | 4. Q takes Kt—Mate. | |

PROBLEM No. 678.

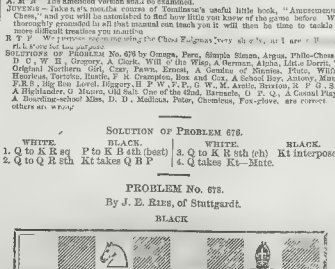
By J. E. Ries, of Stuttgardt.

BLACK



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

REMARKABLE LUNAR PHENOMENON SEEN AT THE BEESTON OBSERVATORY, FEBRUARY 4th, 1857.

The Lunar phenomenon seen here yesterday was so splendid a spectacle that it seems desirable to place a sketch of the appearance on record. It was visible from 6h. 30m. p.m., until nearly 11 p.m.; and consisted of a circle A E C B G (having the moon for its centre), whose horizontal diameter was 44 deg., and whose vertical diameter was 45½ deg.; width, ⅔ deg. A second circle (equal in size to the first-mentioned one), R D N E M (having the apex of the circle A E C B G for its centre), which cut the first circle at E and B, just passed through the moon. A portion of a third circle, A M G L F K (having the base of the circle A E C B G for its centre), was visible from K to L, and a portion of another circle, I P H N (having the moon for its centre), was visible from I to H. The three first-mentioned circles were of the same size, whilst the diameter of the fourth was 90 deg. These circles were colourless, and oscillated as much as 6 deg. 40 min. The phenomenon was formed in nitrous haze, in other respects the sky was clear. Temperature, 24 deg.; wet bulb, 23 deg. 3 min.; wind N., and barometer (corrected) 30.120 inches. By eleven o'clock the clouds descended to a lower level, and the sky became overcast.

At the Highfield House Observatory the circles A G B C E and B D N E M were visible; and the apex of A G B C E (near C) was prismatic. The phenomenon being very brilliant attracted much attention.

E. J. Lowe.

Observatory, Beeston, near Nottingham, 1857, February 5th.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Right Hon. William Monsell to be President of the General Board of Health.

The Emperor of the French has ordered twenty five magnificent opera-glasses (some of them to be ornamented with 2000f. worth of diamonds), which he intends to offer as a present to the Grand Duke Constantine when he arrives in Paris.

The Queen of Spain's visit to Andalusia is definitively given up, out of a desire, as stated, to spare the expenditure of the public money.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Charles Henry Darling, Esq., Governor of Newfoundland, to be Governor of Jamaica.

The report current some time back has been revived that the Emperor of Russia will pay a visit to the Emperor of the French this spring.

The Grand Duke Michael of Russia has left Nice for Genoa. His Imperial Highness embarked at Villa France in a Russian vessel.

The Earl of Mansfield had a battue over his grounds at Scone last week. There were seven guns on the field, and about 750 head of game were killed, consisting chiefly of hares, pheasants, and woodcocks.

The Grand Duke Constantine arrived at Dresden on the 3rd of February, in the evening. His Imperial Highness was present, incognito, the same night at the representation in the Theatre Royal.

The majority of the papers and letters left by the Princess de Lieven are said to have been claimed by the Russian Embassy at Paris.

Sir Alexander Bannerman has been appointed Governor of Newfoundland.

Owing to the illness of Count Hatzfeldt, it is believed that Colonel Canitz will be dispatched from Frankfort to Paris on a private mission, in relation to the Neufchatel affair.

The English Consul General at Venice is expected at Milan under, it is said, special instructions from his Government.

The Emperor Napoleon has sent to the Emperor Alexander II. a magnificent copy of the "Imitation de Jesus Christ," printed at the Imperial printing office in Paris. It was sent to Count de Kisseleff by the Minister of Justice. The Imperial Library of St. Petersburg purchased a copy of this work in 1855 at a cost of 6000f.

The Grand Dukes Michael and Nicholas have sent a superb church lamp to the temple of the Archangel Michael at Mistegnel, in commemoration of the time they had passed in prayer in that church. The lamp was accompanied with a complimentary letter to the Vice Admiral Boutakoff, one of the surviving defenders of Sebastopol.

M. Musurus, the Turkish Ambassador to England, having received the firman of the sultan granting the concession for the Euphrates Valley Railway, Major General Chesney and Mr. Andrew had an interview on Tuesday with his Excellency, with reference thereto.

Intelligence has been received at Alexandria of the death of King Theodore, who not long since proclaimed himself independent in the districts in the south of Egypt.

An Imperial decree in the Moniteur opens an extraordinary credit of 100,000f. for the expense of collecting and publishing the correspondence of the Emperor Napoleon I.

The Marquis Ferdinando Incontri, who married Miss D'Arcy Irvine, sister of the Viscountess Dungannon, a few years ago, died at Florence on the 24th ult.

The Faedrelandet states that the King of Denmark had been confined to his room by a severe cold, but that he is beginning to mend.

The Presse and Estafette both contradict the statement of the Revue Britannique that Ledru-Rollin had left London for the United States. The great democratic tribune continues to inhabit the lodging where he has long lived in London.

General Count Osten-Sacken, who commanded the troops at Sebastopol towards the end of the siege, has, with General Sumarokoff, just been appointed a member of the Committee of the Invalides. This is a similar position to Veterans who have grown infirm in the service.

The Liverpool Town Council has resolved to invite Mr. W. Brown, M.P., to lay the foundation stone of the new free library in the Exeter Parliamentary recess.

The annual balletten from Harewood House have within the last two days been of a more charming character, and sanguine hopes are now entertained that the noble Earl will recover from the severe accident that befell him on the 24th ult.

Prince Paul Esterhazy has left Vienna for Pesth, to take part in the deliberations of several members of the Hungarian nobility on the ceremonies for the reception of the Emperor and Empress of Austria.

It is stated in a letter from St. Petersburg, of the 31st ult., that the Emperor on the previous day paid a visit to the Countess de Morny, the new French Ambassadress, at the hotel of the French Embassy.

Mr. W. H. Schneider has withdrawn his claims to the representation of Hull, and Mr. James Clay is now the only candidate.

The Prince de la Moskowa, father of the Countess de Persigny, accompanied by the Baron de Turckheim, arrived at the residence of the French Embassy on Monday, from Paris.

Great sensation is created in Austrian diplomatic circles by the statement that Aide-de-Camp General de Grunne, who exercised great and irresponsible influence over the Emperor of Austria, has been placed in retirement.

The execution of the statue for which £1000 was left by Turner's will has been given by the trustees to Mr. MacDowall, R.A. It is to be erected in St. Paul's. The competitors were all Royal Academicians.

The Porte, considering the degrees of banishment issued by the Hospodar as illegal, permits all exiles from Moldavia and Wallachia to return to their country.

A Commission, to be composed of the resident Ministers of the three protecting Powers Russia, France, and England, has been appointed to inquire into the state of the Greek finances.

A Royal decree from King Ferdinand convokes the District Councils of Naples on pro hac not meeting Sat[illegible] for the 15th April, and their sittings are not to last [illegible] days. The Provincial Councils are to assemble on the 5th May, and sit till the 25th.

M. Flandrin, a member of the Institute, has been selected to replace M. Paul Delaroche as Professor of Painting at the Ecole des Beaux Arts.

It is stated that the East India Company will shortly invite tenders for the conveyance of upwards of 2000 troops from England to Madras.

The Department of Agriculture at St. Petersburg has published a notice that the Ministry of the Domains of the Russian Empire intends to organise exhibitions of agricultural productions and domestic animals during the ensuing summer in different parts of the empire.

The accounts from Spain as regards the food question are again becoming very alarming, and fresh emeutes are expected in the large towns.

A slight shock of earthquake was experienced on the night of the 31st ult. at Venice, Padua, and other towns of the Venetian territory. The motion was undulatory, from N.E. to S.W., and lasted about five seconds. No accidents causing any damage.

The subscription in aid of the fund in course of collection for the relief of the sufferers by the loss of the Violet now exceeds £3000.

On the 12th of March a great Free-trade meeting is advertised to take place at Clarkrop, which is hoped to be the heart of the iron industry of Belgium, and on the 26th a similar meeting to be held at Namur.

Mr. Van Winkle, an American, has invented a machine which will make from fifty to sixty bolt nuts per minute, of any size, shape, or weight.

Terrible ravages have been caused in the neighbourhood of Lisbon by the larvæ of the Bombyx Monacha. Between Lisbon and Pombal whole forests have been destroyed by the insect, and the proprietors have cut down all the trees attacked.

The Madrid journals of the 4th mention that a secret society of Communists exists at Madrid, and that its distinctive signs are a domino and a pomard.

The Progressists party in Spain are actively organising their measures in reference to the approaching election of Deputies to the Cortes.

The Danish Council for the whole kingdom will be convoked for the beginning of March, for which purpose the present Session of the Danish Chambers and of the Schleswig Diet will be shortened by a week.

The cold was recently so intense in the south of France that the navigation was interrupted in the Canal du Midi, which was frozen over. Not fewer than 500 men were engaged in that city in filling the various ice-houses

THE LONDON and BIRMINGHAM IRON and HARDWARE COMPANY (Limited) Offices and Warehouses, 253, Blackfriars-road, London
Capital £50,000, in 10,000 shares of £50 each
Deposit £2 per share
PAYABLE AS UNDER TODAY
John P Murrough Esq M.P. New Inn, Strand
Thomas Henry Esq 50, Saunder-street, and Ellingham House, Bursh, Surrey
James Mahon Esq, Hatton-garden and Tividale, near Dudley
Henry Whatley Wood, Esq., 11, Leadenhall-street
AUDITOR
To be chosen at first General Meeting of the Shareholders
BANKERS
London Joint-Stock Bank, Princes-street, Mansion-house
SOLICITORS
Mr Edwin Guest.
To a Company, as a commencement, have purchased an old-established Business, with one of the largest stocks in London, situated at the corner of Holland-street, 253, Blackfriars-road, and 39, Johnstreet, the late proprietor of which, Mr Frederick F. Shaw, has engaged to continue in the active management of the concern, and to make his remuneration nominal, till after the Shareholders have received eight per cent dividend. From a most reasonable estimate it is considered that fifteen per cent will be the lowest dividend ever paid to the Shareholders.
Applications for the remaining shares may be made to the Secretary, at the Offices, 253, Blackfriars-road.

NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK
SHARES A lot of thirteen old Shares (£35 paid) is offered to the highest bidder. £79 a share is already offered.—A. Y., Post-office, Bury

WEST HAM DISTILLERY COMPANY
Limited. Notice is hereby given that the warrant of the above Distillery having been withdrawn, the Company will be soon prepared to receive orders for plain Spirits, to be supplied in Puncheons. Duplicate will be sent round to the trade.
Distillery, West Ham. 31st January, 1857. THOMAS WEBB, Manager.

ROYAL SURREY GARDENS.—First Annual Ball this season. GRAND BACHELOR'S SPANISH and MASKED BALL will take place in the Large Pavilion, on MONDAY, the 16th of FEBRUARY. Tickets—Stalls, 5s.; Half Stalls, 2s. 6d.; at the principal music shops, and at the Waterloo Entrance to the Gardens.

GENEALOGICAL and HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN.
16, Castle-street St James's-square
This Society was founded in 1848 for the purpose of bringing Gentlemen and Gentlewomen, to promote the Study of Genealogy and Historical Research, and for the Institution and Compilation of Family History, Lineage, and Biography, and to Authenticate and Illustrate the same.
By order of Council,
RICROFT REID, Secretary

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send to the HERALDIC OFFICE
Name and County. No Fee for Search. Sketch, 3s 6d., or Stamps
Large and neatly Established office in London, and during a series of years by Furnished, Sketched, Emblazoned, &c., Arms of most of the Nobility and Gentry in H. SALT'S Heraldic Portfolio, Lincoln's-inn-GRANTS ARMS Furnished, Copied, &c

STUDIO and LIBRARY, open 10 to 4 daily.
MONUMENTAL BRASSES.
Ecclesiastic Seals, Diplomas, Book Plates Painted and Quartered.
H SALT, Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

GENTLEMEN having SKETCHES, give them to persons who do not engrave them by the Laws of Heraldry therefore the Heraldic Office undertakes to Engrave Arms, Crests, Seals, &c.—H. SALT, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

HERALDIC SIGNET CREST RING, Solid Fine Gold, Bloodstone, Onyx, or Cornelian, with Crest Engraved £1 15s. or Post-office Order. Sketch and Book of Arms free.
H SALT, Late of Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send Name and County to the Revd Heraldic Office No charge for search. Sketch, 3s. Mr CULLETON, Genealogist, 2, Long-acre (one door from Messrs Martin's Bank)

FAMILY PEDIGREES TRACED from old Records, Rolls, and Manuscripts at the British Museum, &c.
Arms Painted and Quartered, Crests Engraved on Seals or Rings, 7s. Arms painted and Emblazoned for Painting on Carriages, 21s. Seals and Dies Engraved, Steel Plates Engraved for Book Plates, 5s. Arms found and Sketched, 2s. 6d. Heraldic Publications and Manuscripts Purchased.
T. MORING, Middlesex Heraldic Office, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

ARMS, CRESTS, &c.—Gold Medal for Engraving.—Correct search and description, 2s. 6d.; in colours, 5s. Monumental brasses, seals, dies, and diplomas mates in Mediæval and modern styles. Arms painted on carriages, &c. Pedigrees traced.
T. MORING, Middlesex Heraldic Office, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

ARMS, CRESTS, &c.—Gold Medal for Engraving.—Correct search and description, 2s. 6d.; in colours, 5s.; arms, crest, and motto on seal, engraved on steel, 5s. Pedigrees traced, Manuscripts deciphered, Boolplates designed and engraved, Diplomas emblazoned, Seals and Dies engraved, Monumental Brasses designed and executed, Arms painted on carriages, &c. Gold Medal for Engraving.
T. MOLING, Engraver and Heraldic Artist, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

SOLID GOLD 18 carat, Hall-marked, Oval, Bead or Bloodstone RING, engraved with CREST, Two Guineas; or Shield-shaped, 48 Shillings; Seals, Dusk Seals, Pencil cases, &c.
T. MORING, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

A GUINEA GOLD WEDDING RING and Improved Key Hall-mark, best Gold, Plain Polished, or Engraved, 17s. Pearl-stone ring, 10s. 6d. Pearl-stone ring, 10s. 6d. Pearl-stone ring, 10s. 6d

NEW BOOKS, &c.

BURNS AND BLACKETT'S NEW WORKS.

Now ready, in 2 vols., with fine Portraits, 21s.,

ELIZABETH DE VALOIS, QUEEN of SPAIN, and the COURT of PHILIP II. By Miss FREER, Author of "The Life of Margaret de D'Angoulême," &c.

EASTERN HOSPITALS and ENGLISH NURSES. By a LADY VOLUNTEER. Third and Cheaper Edition, Revised. 1 vol. with Illustrations, 10s.

PEN and PENCIL PICTURES. By THOMAS HOOD. 1 vol., with numerous Illustrations, 10s 6d.

A PILGRIMAGE INTO DAUPHINE. By the Rev C. M. MUSGRAVE, A.M., Oxon. 2 vols., Illustrations, 21s

REVELATIONS of PRISON LIFE; with an Inquiry into Prison Discipline and Secondary Punishments. By A. L. CHESTERTON. Third and Cheaper Edition, 10s 6d

THE NEW NOVELS.

The DAYS of MY LIFE: an Autobiography. By the Author of "Count Mostyn." 3 vols.

WILD FLOWER. By the Author of "The House of Elmore." 3 vols.

The GENERAL'S DAUGHTER. By Captain KNIGHT.

HENRY CLARENDON. By ALICE COMYN. 2 v.

BURNS and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Now ready, in 1 vol., with 1500 Engravings of Arms,

SIR BERNARD BURKE'S PEERAGE and BARONETAGE for 1857

New Edition, corrected throughout to the present time, from the personal communications of the nobility, &c.

"The best genealogical and heraldic dictionary of the Peerage and Baronetage."—Globe

HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers (successors to Henry Colburn).

Now ready, Part I., price 5s.,

ORR'S CIRCLE of the SCIENCES, just completed, in Nine Volumes, contains separate Treatises on Physiology, Mineralogy, Botany, Zoology, Mathematical Science, Geology, Astronomy, Mineralogy, Chemistry, and Mechanical Philosophy. By Professors Owen, Quekett, Young, Thomson, and Tyndall, Drs Latham, Scoffern, and Smith, the Rev Walter Mitchie, M.A., and Messrs Jardine, C.E., John Imray, M.A., Hugh Breen (errorwich Observatory, W. S. Dallas, F.L.S., and other writers on scientific subjects. 3s 6d per volume, cloth

London: HOULSTON and WRIGHT; and W. S. ORR and Co., Amen-corner. Prospectuses on application.

Just out, New Edition, 3s 6d., with Map, Plans of Battles, an Portrait, compiled entirely from Original Sources, and forming a concise History of Europe for the last Fifty Years.

HISTOIRE de NAPOLEON PREMIER. Redigée par F. DE PORQUET. With Translations at end of each page of the most difficult Words an I Phrases

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co

Just out, with Map and Portrait, the Sixth Edition, price 3s 6d.

HISTOIRE de FRANCE; with the most difficult Words and Idioms translated at end of each page Written purposely for Youth of both sexes. Par FLEWICK DE FORQUET.

FRENCH POETRY for YOUNG PEOPLE 3s 6d

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co

Eleventh Edition, 12mo, 3s. cloth.

CONVERSATIONS FAMILIERES; or, Conversational Lessons for the use of Young Ladies. In French and English. By F. GRANDINEAU, late French Master to her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, Author of "Grammaire Regrais" and "Le Petit Precepteur."

London, SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., Stationers'-hall-court.

Published this day, price 8s 6d.

A STATISTICAL ACCOUNT of the MEDICAL CHARITIES of the METROPOLIS. Published under the direction of a Committee of the Statistical Society; and forming Part I. of a Work on the Beneficent Institutions of the Metropolis London: JOHN W PARKER and SON, 445 West Strand

Now ready, imperial 8vo, cloth, 18s., 127 Lessons, 155 Pages of Text, 48 Plates, and 97 Woodcuts

LESSONS on ART. By J. D. HARDING. By means of which all may teach themselves Drawing and acquire a practical knowledge of Painting.

Now ready, by the same Author,

The GUIDE and COMPANION to LESSONS on ART. Imperial 8vo, cloth, 12s 6d., 178 Pages of Text, 15 Tinted Plates, and 87 Woodcuts

LESSONS on TREES. 2nd Edition, imperial 4to, cloth, 18s., 63 Lessons descriptive, and Illustrated on 30 Lithographic Plates

ELEMENTARY ART; or, the Use of the Chalk and Lead Pencil Advanced and Illustrated. 4th Edition, imperial 8vo, cloth, 25s., 97 Pages Text, 24 Plates (some Tinted), and 41 Wood Engravings.

DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street Lincoln's-inn-fields

Now ready, post 8vo, price 7s. 6d.

THE LITTLE WORLD of LONDON; or, Pictures in Little of London Life By CHARLES MANBY SMITH, Author of "The Working Man's Way in the World," &c. &c.

ARTHUR HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

"I TOO;" and OTHER POEMS. By HERLZEBUB. Cheap Edition. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 3s 6d Free by post on receipt of the amount in postage stamps

London: KENDALL and SON, 407, Oxford-street; and all Booksellers

Cr. 8vo, cloth, price 5s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 10d.; with Map, 6d. extra,

LONDON AS IT IS TO-DAY; WHERE TO GO AND WHAT TO SEE; with Two Hundred Engravings. London: H G CLARKE and Co., 252 Strand

Profusely Illustrated by ANELAY, price 3s 6d., cloth gilt,

THE MOTHER'S MISTAKE.

By MRS ELLIS

London: HOULSTON and WRIGHT, Paternoster-row

DARK DEEDS.

"Dark Deeds" deals with tragic memorials of terrible occurrences, and is of the most absorbing interest from title to finis

London: G. VICKERS; and all Booksellers

Just out, with Steel Engraving by Heath, containing 416 beautifully-illustrated pages, crown 8vo, cloth gilt, price 3s. 6d.,

THE FAMILY FRIEND.

WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Just ready, full of fun, is each, fancy covers,

COMIC COCKER. 75 Illustrations by Alfred Crowquill. COMIC GRAMMAR. With 50 Illustrations by Leech. London: WARD and LOCK; and all Booksellers.

87th Edition, price 2s., entered at Stationers' Hall, of EVERY MAN HIS OWN BREWER; containing practical instructions by which any man can brew his own beer, a pale ale in quality to that usually supplied at the gallery, Strout at 8d.; and a variety of Ales at a proportionate expense. No brewing utensils required. By a MASTER BREWER. Sold by MESSRS CLARKSON, MEAY years practical brewer, No. 85, Chancery-lane, Holborn.

A TREATISE on ACACIA CHARCOAL (prepared by Electricity), and the Antiseptic Laws. Great results from simple means in Cancer, Lupus, Scrofula, and Consumption; Diseases of the Throat, Chest, Stomach, Bowels, Diarrhœa, Indigestion, and many minor complaints. Post-free.—W. WASHINGTON EVANS, 12, Bernard-street, Russell-square, London.

Just published, price One Shilling,

THE COMPRESSED AIR BATH in the TREATMENT of CONSUMPTION, Asthma, and Pulpitis by the Rev. A. SIMPSON, A.M., Actual Physician to the Ben Rhydding

"In conclusion, I can, with full confidence, declare that I regard the Compressed Air Bath, with the associated treatment which has been now carried on, as the only real and efficacious means which we possess for coping with consumption, severe shocks, bronchitis, and asthma."—Dr Macleod

Edinburgh: SUTHERLAND and KNOX; London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co.; and free by post from Mr HOPTON, Ilkley Otley, Yorkshire

BRICK-MAKING.—A Pamphlets containing Two Papers to which the Society of Arts awarded their Silver Medal forwarded on receipt of 14 postage-stamps. HUMPHREY CHAMBERLAIN, Sparkbrook, Birmingham.

A GUINEA PRAYER-BOOK for 6s. 6d.—The PICTORIAL PRAYER-BOOK, large type, with 700 beautiful Engravings, in antique binding, for 6s 6d.; or post, price 7s 6d. A few copies in beautiful morocco binding, with Clasps, price 12s. 6d.; post-free. Only to be had at JOHN FIELD'S Great Bible Warehouse, 65, Newgate-street.

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—Subscribers and purchasers can have their VOLUMES BOUND in the appropriate Covers, with Gilt Edges, at 2s per Volume, by sending them, carriage-paid, with Post office Order, payable to BRIGHTON, SON, and HODGE, 13, Shoe lane, London. The only Binders authorised by the Proprietors

REEVES'S DRAWING PENCILS, In every degree of shade 113, Chancellor, London, E.C.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

KOENIG'S JOURNAL for CORNET-à-PISTONS and PIANOFORTE, contains all the most popular Songs, Airs from Operas, and Dance Music. The FEBRUARY Number includes Jullien's Excelsior Waltz, and Minnie Polka, "Floating on the Wind," by Glover; and "Thou Mountain hast a Tuneful Voice," by S. W. Waley The 1st Part of Koenig's Tutor for Cornet-à-Pistons is now ready, price 5s Jullien and Co.'s Portfolio for Cornet Solo (No 1) contains sixteen popular Airs, price 1s

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S CADEAU for 1857, price 5s., postage-free, containing the French Quadrille, the My Mary Ann Polka, and the Billet-Doux Waltz. Illustrated by Brandard. The whole inclosed in a beautiful cover embossed in gold and colours.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

JULLIEN'S BILLET-DOUX WALTZ, Beautifully Illustrated by Brandard Price 6s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S MY MARY ANN POLKA. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S MINNIE POLKA, Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

JULLIEN'S FLIRTATION POLKA, performed with the greatest success at Her Majesty's Theatre, beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S FRENCH QUADRILLE, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s.; postage-free.

214, Regent street, W.

JULLIEN'S CONSTANCE WALTZ, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard Price 4s., postage-free

214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S EXCELSIOR WALTZ, performed by Herr Koenig at M. Jullien's Concerts with the greatest success and nightly encored. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

G. A. OSBORNE'S NEW PIANOFORTE WORKS:—

1 Ah che la Morte and the Miserere.
2 Fantasia on favourite airs, in Il Trovatore
No. son odiro., and Di provenia il mar
4 Lehaina and Farigo oara
5 Robert to qui l' amo
6 A favourite Russian air, as a Duet
Price of each 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

NEW DANCE MUSIC.

THE WOODLAND-WHISPERS WALTZ
THE TITANIA WALTZ
THE DREAM of MELODY WALTZ
THE EDINBURGH POLKA
THE BARNEY WILLIAMS QUADRILLE

Containing all the favourite Songs sung by this very popular Actress. Price of each, 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

The most lively and sparkling polka of the season "

THE RETURN POLKA. By HARRY HARDY. Dedicated to Major-General Windham. 2s 6d. Also the Star of Warwick Waltz. By Edmund Thirsppe, by Brandard. 4s.

London: JULLIEN and Co.; and Chappell

SABBATH STRAINS: a Collection of Favourite Sacred Melodies, easily arranged for Pianofortes. By FRANZ NAVA Price of each, as Solo or Duet, 1s., free by post.

No. 1 I know that my Redeemer liveth
2. Will, selections daily
3 Agnus Dei, from Mozart's 1st Mass
4 Before Jehovah's awful throne
5 How holy, holy, Lord God Almighty
6 Gloria in Excelsis
7 Hear my prayer
8 But thou didst not learn
9 Qui sedentis curves
10 Vital spark of heavenly flame
11 My song shall be of mercy
12 Gloria, from Mozart's 12th Mass
13 O Lord, our Governor
14 Lord, remember David
15 The marvellous works
16 Dona nobis pacem
17 Kyrie eleison from Mozart's 12th Mass
18 Varieh before the holy Lord
19 O, had I Jubal's lyre
20 Credo in unum Deo
21 Sound the loud timbre
22 In heavenly lays I rejoice
23 He was despised
24 Cujus animam

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

JULLIEN and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY. Three Guineas' worth of Music Gratis to all Subscribers

Prospectuses sent free on application to Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street W

COMFORT YE MY PEOPLE, from Handel's "Messiah," gratis and postage-free, as arranged by JOHN BISHOP, for voice and piano. GERRARD CRAMER and Co. Also, gratis and postage-free upon receipt of 24 stamps, 2s each in 8 Pieces on Hire at 12s per month, well worn

SOUND THE LOUD TIMBREL. Transcribed for the Pianoforte. By G F WEST. (Second Edition.) 3s 6d. Also, by the same Author, Rossini's Prayer in "Moses in Egypt," and Meyerbeer's Benedictus, 2s 6d; the Verger Hymn, Quinn Anthem (God Save the Queen, 8s each, Nocturne, 3s; and the Lady's Daily Exercise for the Piano, 1s

ST. VALENTINE'S MORNING (just ready). New Song, by the Composer of the "Postman's Knock," words by DORRINGTON, Esq. (of the Theatre Royal, Haymarket) Elegantly Illustrated 2s 6d

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. W

NOVELLO'S CENTENARY EDITION of Jephtha, 3s., or 4s.; Israel in Egypt, 3s., or 4s.; Creation, 3s., or 3s.; Judas Maccabæus, 3s., or 4s.; Israel in Egypt, 3s., or 4s.; Samson, 3s., or 4s. The 3s. and 4s. editions are bound in scarlet cloth, Destiger To Deum and Jubilate in F, 1s. 6d.; Arnold's Te Deum, 1s.; Beethoven's Mount of Olives, 2s.; Acis, 1s. 6d. Each work complete, wi h separate Libretto, in Vocal Score, with Piano or Organ Accompaniment, arranged by VINCENT NOVELLO; octavo size. Please ask for Novello's Centenary Edition, printed on stout paper. Also, complete editions of Mozart's Twelfth Mass, 3s.; Haydn's Third Mass, 2s., Mozart's Requiem, 2s. Those three Masses have 2s 6d. each in Vocal Score, from the "Musical Times"; Beethoven's Mass in C, 2s. The Masses have Latin and English words

London. NOVELLO, 69, Dean-street, Soho; and 35, Poultry.

NEW SONG, WINTER EVERGREENS. By STEPHEN GLOVER. Price 2s. 6d., postage-free. This song, published in the same elegant manner as "Summer Roses" and "Autumn Fruits," will be appreciated for its tuneful and animated character. Well adapted for the festivities of the present season

London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

NEW SONG.—The LANGUAGE of the EYE, as sung with the most distinguished success by Miss Poole, commencing "Ye sweet to hear a gentle voice." Composed by G. HODGSON. Price 2s., postage-free. London.—This is the only edition sung by Miss Poole

DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street

NEW SONG.—THINE FOR EVER. By the Author of "Will you love me then as now?" "Dearest, then, I'll love you more." &c. Price 2s., postage-free This beautiful ballad possess all the charms, both with regard to words and music, that secured for its predecessors that immense popularity which they deservedly obtained.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

THE ENGLISH LASSIE QUADRILLES, by Charles Coote, Sebastopol (splendidly illustrated in colours), Snow Flakes, and Sparkling Spray, charming incidental Waltzes, and Hobbs Adair, celebrated fantasias; and the most brilliant variations on Beethoven's Minuet, for the pianoforte, by Thomas Chantrey, are published only by ADDISON and Co., London.

GATHER ME AND TRY. Sung by Miss P. Horton, in the New Entertainment performed by Mr and Mrs Reed (Vale Mad P. Horton), at the Gallery of Illustration, Regent-street.—Published by CRAMER, BEALE, and Co

NOBODY PASSES THAT WAY; the Prettiest Ballad of the day. Composed by ISABELLA WARNE, and sung by Miss Rebecca Isaacs. Price 2s. post-free. London. Published by G. WARNE, 68, Holborn hill, E C

PARTING; New Song by Mrs. CART-WRIGHT (composer of "Break, break, break" "The Moon-lit Path" "A Pilgrim's Rest" &c.) Price 2s.—C LONSDALE, Musical Circulating Library (terms 20s. and upwards), per annum, 2s. Old Bond street, London

NEW MUSIC, &c.

D'ALBERT'S ALBUM for 1857, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD, elegantly bound in Watered silk, containing entirely new Polkas, Waltzes, Quadrilles, Schottisches, &c., price 31s., post-free.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S BOBBING AROUND.—Quadrille, in which is introduced the most popular airs of the day. Price 3s. solo, 4s. duets, post-free.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S QUEEN'S WALTZ, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S ST. PETERSBURG, New Quadrille on favourite airs, illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s., post-free.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CZARINA SCHOTTISCHE. Illustrated. Price 3s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S SOLDIERS' POLKA. With a Portrait of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, by Brandard, in Colours. Price 3s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S EMPEROR'S GALOP, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s., Solo or Duet, Post-free. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CORONATION POLKA. Beautifully Illustrated by Brandard Price 3s. Solo or Duet Post-free CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SWITZERLAND. By ALBERT LINDAHL Morceau de Salon pour Piano Price 3s 6d post-free

Switzerland is a favourite resort, and it has not unlike the old navy Cottage Pianoforte. Three Strings and the latest tuned Grand Pianoforte. It is strengthened by every possible means to endure the greatest amount of wear, and is tuned perfectly in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description, the tone is round full, and rich, and the power equal to that of a Sixfoot Grand. The case is of the most elegant construction, in rosewood, the touch elastic, and the repetition very rapid. For these and other features it has received the most flattering testimonials from the profession and Co. especially invite the attention of the public to the portable, and unrivalled in its Foreign Model, feeling assured that no Piano-forte, in all respects combining the same merits, has hitherto been made in England at the same prices. Every instrument will be warranted, and (if desired) exchanged within twelve months of the purchase.—66, New Bond street, London.

JULLIEN and CO.'s CONCERTINAS, by the most celebrated Makers as under by Signor Lafont, &c., &c

No 1. The Concertina, 20 keys, .. .. .. £ s d
48 silver reeds, highly ornamented .. 12 12 0
No. 2. The Lever Concertina, Concertina, 48 silver keys .. .. 10 10 0
No. 3. The Amateur Concertina, 48 brass reeds .. .. .. 8 8 0
No. 4. The Everyday Concertina, 38 brass reeds .. .. .. 6 6 0

Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street

HARMONIUMS.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. are agents for ALEXANDRE'S NEW PATENT MODEL Pet, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. have a great variety by all Makers, New and Secondhand for SALE or HIRE at 201, Regent-street.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOT, 54, Cornhill, for the Sale or Hire of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, made for the celebrated Maker, NICOLE (Freres), of Geneva. Large airs, four airs, 14 in long, £4; six airs, 18 in. long, £5 5s; eight airs, 20 in long, £6 6s; ten airs, 24 in. long, £8 8s; twelve airs, 27 in long, £10 10s; purchases from the country exported to any part of the world. A variety of New Musical snuff-boxes, playing two tunes, 14s. 6d. and 18s.; three tunes, 30s.; and four tunes, 40s. each. Lists of tunes, &c., may be had, and sent post-free.

MUSICAL BOX REPOSITORY, 32, Ludgate-street (near St. Paul's).—WALES and MCCULLOCH are the only Agents for Nicole Freres's Celebrated MUSICAL BOXES, playing brilliantly the Overtures to Zampa, Fra Diavolo, Masaniello, Lucia di Lammermoor, Gazza Ladra, Norma, Don Juan, &c.; from £4; Six Airs, £6 6s.; Eight, £8, Twelve Airs, £12 12s.; Eighteen Airs, £16 16s.; Twenty-four Airs, £21; Three, Six, Four Tunes, 10s. Catalogues of Tunes, &c., gratis, and post-free, on application.

GEORGE LUFF and SON'S PIANO FORTES and improved Patent HARMONIUMS for HIRE, with arrangements for purchase. Pianofortes for extreme climates. Drawings and Price-lists free.—123, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury

PIANOFORTES EXTRAORDINARY.—At MOORE and MOORE'S, 104, Bishopsgate-street, Within. These are first-class Pianofortes, more excellence, possessing the recent improvements, recently applied, which effect a grand, a pure, and beautiful quality of tone that stands unrivalled. Price, from 21 Guineas. First-class Piano for hire, with easy terms of purchase.

COLLARD and COLLARD'S SEMI-COTTAGE PIANOFORTES.—To be SOLD, at low prices, for cash or for HIRE, with the option of purchase, eight fine-toned instruments, with 6½ octaves and repetition actions, in handsome rosewood cases, by the first-class makers, Collard and Collard, 26, Grosvenor-place, Hyde-park-corner, and 16, Cornhill, E.C.

PIANOFORTE.—A beautiful Walnut COTTAGE PIANO of full and sweet tone, 56 octaves, and every modern improvement, very little used, and in perfect condition, the property of a Lady giving up housekeeping, to be SOLD for Fifty Guineas—cost Seventy. Only published a few months back.—To be seen at LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'S, Upholsterers, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge (seven doors west of Sloane-street).

CABINET FURNITURE, CARPETS, and BEDDING.—An Illustrated Book of Estimates and Furniture Catalogue, containing 100 Designs and Prices of Fashionable and Superior Upholstery, Furniture, &c., gratis on application. Persons furnishing, study economy combined with elegance and durability, should apply for this.—LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'s Cabinet Manufactory, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge (7 doors west of Sloane-street)

TO FAMILIES FURNISHING.—A Great Bargain.—For IMMEDIATE DISPOSAL, a Beautiful Suite of Superior Aubusson Tapestry WALNUT DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, equal to new, consisting of a handsome 7ft. 6in. couch, two lounging chairs, two handsome ottomans, and marble top; beautiful table, to take carved pillar and claw feet; an occasional table, six small chairs a spring stuffed settee, and two easy-chairs, all covered in rich silks and tapestry, and in the most fashionable mummy-glass. Is richly-gilt frame. The whole for 42 guineas—half the original cost. To be seen at LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'S Upholsterers, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge (seven doors west of Sloane-street)

MAGNUS'S SLATE BILLIARD TABLES, the only ones that (having cannelled slate frames and solid slate legs) are suitable for every climate. Their Majesty has one in the drawing-room at Osborne, the Duke of Wellington has one at Strathfieldsaye, and they are patronised by noblemen in general, as well as by the most scientific players

See Reports by Judges at the Great Exhibition, 1851 :—"Of all the objects manufactured by the exhibitors the Billiard Table is perhaps the most important, as being decidedly superior to all as construction of any other kind." To this satisfactory the Jury have had no hesitation in awarding the Prize Medal, in acknowledgment of his admirable and solid construction and appliances."

Although these tables are immeasurably superior to all others, Mr. Magnus is now able to offer them at prices less than tables with mahogany frames.—Pimlico Slate Works, 39 and 40, Upper Belgrave-place, Pimlico, S. W.

MAGNUS'S ENAMELLED SLATE CHIMNEY-PIECES, Table Tops, Cabinet Stoves, Billiard and Ingestible Tables, Cisterns, Baths, Tabinard Tops, Altar Tablets, Mural Tablets, Pilasters Columns, Wall Linings, Plinths, Vases, Busts, Friezes, and other varieties of ornamental slate. Also the Prize Medal of the Great Exhibition of 1851, and two First Class Medals at the Paris Exhibition of 1855. Much cheaper, handsomer, and more durable than Marble. N.B. Chimney and Plate Slabs Work of all Descriptions Pimlico Slate Works, 39 and 40, Upper Belgrave place, Pimlico, S. W.

MAGNUS'S CABINET-FORMED STOVE, with coal fire, double flue and hot-air chambers. Decidedly the most elegant, economic, and comfortable stove that has been introduced to the public. The cooking-room it forms an exquisite piece of furniture, takes the place of a chiffonier or console-table. It is composed of fine-stone and enamelled slate, instead of iron. Can be had movable on castors, and is suitable to every apartment, and to all styles of mansions, churches, &c

Pimlico Slate Works, 39 and 40 Upper Belgrave-place, Pimlico, S.W.

THE ALEXANDRE HARMONIUM

AT SIX GUINEAS.

ALEXANDRE and SON have made the Harmonium at the lowest price possible, to bring the instrument within the means of all classes. It is in an Oak Case, with Four Octaves, is alike calculated for Private Houses and for Chapels, and is

INDISPENSABLE TO THE SCHOOL-ROOM.

The Six-Guinea Harmonium will be taken in exchange for any of the more expensive descriptions, without loss or diminution.

Alexandre and Son obtained the Sole Medal of Honour at the Great Exhibition at Paris, 1855. Their Harmoniums have been pronounced the best by Rossini, Auber, Adam, Thalberg, Liszt, &c., and by the Professors of the Conservatoire de Paris.

These are brought to the greatest perfection, and are equally adapted to the

CHURCH OR DRAWING-ROOM,

AS AN

ACCOMPANIMENT TO THE VOICE OR PIANOFORTE.

Messrs. Chappell have just received a number of Alexandre's celebrated which combine the excellence of both instruments. The two can be used by the performer, by the same performance, or each instrument is perfect in itself. Price from 40 to 150 guineas.

HARMONIUM PIANOFORTES,

An Immense Stock of

PIANOFORTES BY THE BEST MAKERS,

from Twenty Guineas upwards, which can be thoroughly recommended and warranted.

Messrs. Chappell and Co. have just opened a number of enabling the purchase to select a Pianoforte or Harmonium from the new and rare Instruments, and to try the merits of the various makers side by side.

BOOKS FOR INSTRUMENTS,

Full descriptive Lists of Harmoniums and of Pianofortes will be sent on application to

CHAPPELL AND CO.,

50, NEW BOND-STREET, AND 13, GEORGE-STREET, HANOVER-SQUARE.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price Fifty Guineas. This Instrument has made the old navy Cottage Pianoforte. Three Strings and the latest tuned Grand Pianoforte. It is strengthened by every possible means to endure the greatest amount of wear, and is tuned perfectly in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description, the tone is round full, and rich, and the power equal to that of a Six-foot Grand. The case is of the most elegant construction, in rosewood, the touch elastic, and the repetition very rapid. For these and other features it has received the most flattering testimonials from the profession and Co. especially invite the attention of the public to the portable, and unrivalled in its Foreign Model, feeling assured that no Pianoforte, in all respects combining the same merits, has hitherto been made in England at the same prices. Every instrument will be warranted, and (if desired) exchanged within twelve months of the purchase.—66, New Bond street, London.

JULLIEN and CO.'s CONCERTINAS, by the most celebrated Makers as under by Signor Lafont, &c., &c

| | £ | s | d |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 1. The Concertina, 20 keys, | | | |
| 48 silver reeds, highly ornamented | 12 | 12 | 0 |
| No. 2. The Lever Concertina, Concertina, 48 silver keys | 10 | 10 | 0 |
| No. 3. The Amateur Concertina, 48 brass reeds | 8 | 8 | 0 |
| No. 4. The Everyday Concertina, 38 brass reeds | 6 | 6 | 0 |

Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street

HARMONIUMS.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. are agents for ALEXANDRE'S NEW PATENT MODEL Pet, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. have a great variety by all Makers, New and Secondhand for SALE or HIRE at 201, Regent-street.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOT, 54, Cornhill, for the Sale or Hire of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, made for the celebrated Maker, NICOLE (Freres), of Geneva. Large airs, four airs, 14 in long, £4; six airs, 18 in. long, £5 5s; eight airs, 20 in long, £6 6s; ten airs, 24 in. long, £8 8s; twelve airs, 27 in long, £10 10s; purchases from the country exported to any part of the world. A variety of New Musical snuff-boxes, playing two tunes, 14s. 6d. and 18s.; three tunes, 30s.; and four tunes, 40s. each. Lists of tunes, &c., may be had, and sent post-free.

MUSICAL BOX REPOSITORY, 32, Ludgate-street (near St. Paul's).—WALES and MCCULLOCH are the only Agents for Nicole Freres's Celebrated MUSICAL BOXES, playing brilliantly the Overtures to Zampa, Fra Diavolo, Masaniello, Lucia di Lammermoor, Gazza Ladra, Norma, Don Juan, &c.; from £4; Six Airs, £6 6s.; Eight, £8, Twelve Airs, £12 12s.; Eighteen Airs, £16 16s.; Twenty-four Airs, £21; Three, Six, Four Tunes, 10s. Catalogues of Tunes, &c., gratis, and post-free, on application.

GEORGE LUFF and SON'S PIANOFORTES and improved Patent HARMONIUMS for HIRE, with arrangements for purchase. Pianofortes for extreme climates. Drawings and Price-lists free.—123, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury

PIANOFORTES EXTRAORDINARY.—At MOORE and MOORE'S, 104, Bishopsgate-street, Within. These are first-class Pianofortes, more excellence, possessing the recent improvements, recently applied, which effect a grand, a pure, and beautiful quality of tone that stands unrivalled. Price, from 21 Guineas. First-class Piano for hire, with easy terms of purchase.

COLLARD and COLLARD'S SEMI-COTTAGE PIANOFORTES.—To be SOLD, at low prices, for cash or for HIRE, with the option of purchase, eight fine-toned instruments, with 6½ octaves and repetition actions, in handsome rosewood cases, by the first-class makers, Collard and Collard, 26, Grosvenor-place, Hyde-park-corner, and 16, Cornhill, E.C.

PIANOFORTE.—A beautiful Walnut COTTAGE PIANO of full and sweet tone, 56 octaves, and every modern improvement, very little used, and in perfect condition, the property of a Lady giving up housekeeping, to be SOLD for Fifty Guineas—cost Seventy. Only published a few months back.—To be seen at LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'S, Upholsterers, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge (seven doors west of Sloane-street).

CABINET FURNITURE, CARPETS, and BEDDING.—An Illustrated Book of Estimates and Furniture Catalogue, containing 100 Designs and Prices of Fashionable and Superior Upholstery, Furniture, &c., gratis on application. Persons furnishing, study economy combined with elegance and durability, should apply for this.—LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'S Cabinet Manufactory, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge (7 doors west of Sloane-street).

TO FAMILIES FURNISHING.—A Great Bargain.—For IMMEDIATE DISPOSAL, a Beautiful Suite of Superior Aubusson Tapestry WALNUT DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, equal to new, consisting of a handsome 7ft. 6in. couch, two lounging chairs, two handsome ottomans, and marble top; beautiful table, to take carved pillar and claw feet; an occasional table, six small chairs a spring stuffed settee, and two easy-chairs, all covered in rich silks and tapestry, and in the most fashionable mummy-glass. In richly-gilt frame. The whole for 42 guineas—half the original cost. To be seen at LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'S Upholsterers, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge (seven doors west of Sloane-street).

MAGNUS'S SLATE BILLIARD TABLES, the only ones that (having cannelled slate frames and solid slate legs) are suitable for every climate. Their Majesty has one in the drawing-room at Osborne, the Duke of Wellington has one at Strathfieldsaye, and they are patronised by noblemen in general, as well as by the most scientific players

See Reports by Judges at the Great Exhibition, 1851 :—"Of all the objects manufactured by the exhibitors the Billiard Table is perhaps the most important, as being decidedly superior to all as construction of any other kind." To this satisfactory the Jury have had no hesitation in awarding the Prize Medal, in acknowledgment of his admirable and solid construction and appliances."

Although these tables are immeasurably superior to all others, Mr. Magnus is now able to offer them at prices less than tables with mahogany frames.—Pimlico Slate Works, 39 and 40, Upper Belgrave-place, Pimlico, S. W.

MAGNUS'S ENAMELLED SLATE CHIMNEY-PIECES, Table Tops, Cabinet Stoves, Billiard and Ingestible Tables, Cisterns, Baths, Tabinard Tops, Altar Tablets, Mural Tablets, Pilasters Columns, Wall Linings, Plinths, Vases, Busts, Friezes, and other varieties of ornamental slate. Also the Prize Medal of the Great Exhibition of 1851, and two First Class Medals at the Paris Exhibition of 1855. Much cheaper, handsomer, and more durable than Marble. N.B. Chimney and Plate Slabs Work of all Descriptions Pimlico Slate Works, 39 and 40, Upper Belgrave-place, Pimlico, S. W.

MAGNUS'S CABINET-FORMED STOVE, with coal fire, double flue and hot-air chambers. Decidedly the most elegant, economic, and comfortable stove that has been introduced to the public. The cooking-room it forms an exquisite piece of furniture, takes the place of a chiffonier or console-table. It is composed of fine-stone and enamelled slate, instead of iron. Can be had movable on castors, and is suitable to every apartment, and to all styles of mansions, churches, &c

Pimlico Slate Works, 39 and 40 Upper Belgrave-place, Pimlico, S.W.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLER, 193, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, FEB. 14, 1857

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 846.—VOL. XXX.] SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1857. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE.

THE BUDGET.

If the Budget be looked upon as a mere party triumph, there are few persons who will not admit that the triumph is a great one. Never within living memory was a Parliamentary Opposition more bravely met, or more completely foiled. Mr. Disraeli, Mr. Gladstone, and their friends stood upon the ramparts of what they considered to be an impregnable fortress, and waved aloft two banners—one bearing the magic word "Retrenchment!" in the possibility of which they did not believe; and the other bearing the equally potent syllables, "Down with the War Ninepence!" But the Chancellor of the Exchequer, like a very Paladin in his heroism, stormed the fortress, took it by a coup de main, and seizing the twin banners from the hands of his opponents adopted them as the insignia of his own party and the emblems of his victory. The retrenchment—deemed to be impossible—he proved to be not only possible, but easy; and showed, to the discomfiture of the too confident Opposition, that the "war ninepence" might come down, without bringing down Lord Palmerston along with it.

Considered on its own merits, and without reference to the strategy of the Parliamentary arena, the public will accept the Budget with a cordial approval, nearly approaching to unanimity. As a timely concession to the general wish of the people—as a wise adaptation of means to an end—and as a statesmanlike mode of dealing with the national resources, present and prospective—it demands and will receive the support of Parliament; and will, doubtless, be accepted as a settlement of the Property and Income Tax until the time fixed by itself for the reconsideration of that question. Fortunately for the country, it is not often that a Government has it in its power to make such a relinquishment of taxation as between nine and ten millions sterling, and such a sweeping reduction in its expenditure as thirteen millions; for European wars and their burdens do not afflict every generation. Though in some of its details the Budget just proposed may not satisfy all the necessities of party strife—though it may by its omissions, as well as its commissions, not be exactly suited to all the interests of trade and manufacture—it has one great merit which will make amends for all minor deficiencies. The magnitude of the relief which it will afford to industry will be sufficient to overbear all opposition that may be raised against it by those who see the part, and not the whole, and who would rather that all the world should go unshod than that they should be condemned to wear a shoe somewhat tighter than is consistent with their perfect ease and comfort.

When a budget, good, bad, or indifferent, is proposed, there are always many powerful interests which clamour for the remission of taxes, and which think themselves aggrieved if the relief be not afforded. Taxation, whether direct or indirect, is so great an evil that wherever it falls it is unwelcome. But, as money must be had, the Englishman, as is his wont, resigns himself to necessity, with as good a grace as his pocket, his temper, or his digestion will allow. He grumbles, but he pays. Thus he will grumble, as of old, in his own person or in that of his representatives, at the duty on Fire Insurances which Sir Cornewall Lewis has not proposed to repeal; but he will pay it. He will grumble at the non-reduction of the Tea and Sugar Duties, but he will remember the liabilities created by the war, and he will consume tea and sugar as before, and pay the prices demanded. He will perhaps vent a growl at the Excise-duty upon paper, but he will buy as many books as usual, subscribe to as many newspapers, and use as much paper in packing his wares as ever he did; nay, more, if trade increases. The State will derive its usual million from the paper-mills, and no one will be appreciably the worse. If any one remain malcontent he will have the satisfaction of knowing that the Budget is not like Magna Charta, or the Bill of Rights—a thing, that once agreed upon, is to be considered as settled in perpetuity—but that in the following year he may agitate as much as he will against ny impost that may happen to press with undue severity upon him; and that a good, sound, wholesome agitation is in this country invariably crowned with success. If not this year, the next; if not the next, the year after. The triumphant and speedy success which attended the agitation for the repeal of the "war ninepence" will show him what force or what persuasion to bring to bear upon the members of the present or a future Parliament; and Fire Insurance-duties, the Paper-duties, and even the sevenpenny Income-tax itself, impregnable as they seem, will yield at the right moment if John Bull will but lay formal siege to them, and determine to win.

The great, if not the only, questions to be decided this year are whether the reduction of the expenditure upon the Army and Navy and the general expenses of the State have gone far enough. If this be decided in the affirmative the Government cannot well be called upon to make any greater sacrifice of revenue. If, on the contrary, it be decided that retrenchment can be carried to a greater extent without impairing efficiency, injuring the public credit, or forestalling unduly the resources of future years it may become a question whether the continued payment of a sevenpenny rate upon Property and Income is not unnecessary, and whether it would not be better to reduce it to the fivepence at which it would have stood according to the terms of Mr. Gladstone's Budget of 1853, if no war had broken out in the interval to disarrange all previous calculations, and entail very onerous burdens upon all classes and interests in the commonwealth. It remains for Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Disraeli, and their friends, to show both the practicability and the desirability of such reduction and such relief. The public, if they succeed, will be grateful to them, without inquiring too critically into their motives. But of such a result we confess we see no chance. The Budget of Sir G. C. Lewis has come upon the country with a pleasant surprise. If no one considers it perfect, almost everybody deems it sufficient; and even those who may have reason to be dissatisfied with it will be content, for the sake of the immediate abolition of the war tax, to postpone till another year the consideration of the peace taxes which they may feel to be either unwise or oppressive. Besides, there is not a member on either side of the House of Commons who would not look upon a general election this year as a nuisance and an evil, and as a consummation most earnestly to be deprecated. So the Budget will be accepted; and Lord Palmerston's Government, if it do not thereby secure a new lease of power, will have to be assailed upon some more vulnerable side than its finance. We do not assert that there is such a side;—but if there be, it is the duty of the Opposition to discover it and make the most of it.

CHINESE MANDARIN AND SOLDIERS.—(SEE PAGE 170.)

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday.

PARIS has caught cold. It spends the mornings, consequently, in its dressing-gown and slippers, swallows much nasty tisane, and pities itself immoderately. It is quite unable to go out, or to support a breath of air, is altogether incapacitated from any useful or active employment, and s'ennuie à périr from the suffering and the confinement. The evening, however, brings quite a new state of things, and we become admiring witnesses of the noble and self-sacrificing devotion of which the Parisienne especially (the women are great on these occasions, to the utmost limits of feminine disinterestedness) is capable towards friendship and society—le monde—that sovereign which, Jove-like, is at once divinity, tyrant, and roué. The Parisienne has promised Madame A——, with whom she was brought up au couvent, to appear in her box at the Opera. She has sworn to Madame B——, who is the friend of her childhood, to be present at her ball. She is engaged to the reception at the Tuileries, and the Empress would persuade the Emperor to turn her husband out of his place if she did not appear. And, besides all this, le monde expects her to do homage; le monde is waiting impatiently to see her new gown with the thirty-six breadths, fifty flounces, and eighty yards of lace and ribbon. Le monde does not care about colds: it ignores influenzas, it demands that the Parisienne shall show herself in the place it has assigned her. Filled, therefore, with a sense of her duties and responsibilities, the Parisienne exchanges her dressing-gown for the above-mentioned new robe, which is très decolletée; she has no notion, the Parisienne, of doing things by halves; cobweb stockings and gossamer shoes take the place of wadded slippers, and bravely forth she goes into the frost, into the snow, into the fog, into the dreary night, to immolate herself on the altar of friendship and le monde. She danced the other night at the bal intime of the Empress till morning, among some five hundred other guests, many of them victims like herself. The Empress wore on this occasion a white tulle dress, ornamented with green foliage, and clasps of diamonds, and a green wreath, with a lace veil attached to the back hair, and falling to the waist, according to a fashion becoming highly popular. The dress of the Maréchale Serrano, gown and veil of white tulle, with gold stars. That of the beautiful Comtesse Castiglione, white, with crimson velvet knots and leaves; and some others, were particularly admired. The Parisienne, ever true to her duty, also appeared at the ball of the Prince Jerome Napoleon, at that of the Maréchal Magnan, at the bal costumé of the Countess Walewska (where the Russians wouldn't hear of a Polish quadrille, and the Poles set their faces against a Russian one), at the small ball of the Hôtel de Ville, and at all the Ministerial, Ambassadorial, and other official fêtes, to say nothing of such private ones as are here and there being given in the Faubourg St. Honoré and the Chaussée d'Antin. She has even gone so far in her devotion to the good cause as to make one or two furtive and masked appearances at the bal de l'Opéra, where her presence was unknown, and her absence would have remained equally concealed. This is doing things conscientiously!

It is said that the papers which were represented as having been confided by the Princess de Lieven to M. Guizot are still in the possession of her family, who do not seem disposed to resign them, alleging that, whatever may have been the private agreement entered into between him and the Princess on this subject, she has left no precise or positive directions which would give him a virtual right to claim them. The report that the Russian Embassy interfered in the matter is contradicted. Among the legacies left by Madame de Lieven is an annual one of 8000 francs to M. Guizot, with the express condition that it is to be employed in the purchase and keeping of a carriage; the poverty of the late Minister of Louis Philippe denying him this almost necessity even during the worst weather—a circumstance which used to be a subject of great regret to the Princess, who, as much as possible, kept her own at his service.

The Prince Imperial has again been ill, but not seriously, and is now convalescent. An alarm was last week created by a report that an attempt had been made on the life of the Empress. The story, however, soon resolved itself into the simple fact that she had been suddenly accosted, with some vehemence of words and gesture, by a man who, on his being arrested, proved to be insane, as she was passing through the public portion of the Tuileries gardens to reach the private inclosure.

Great preparations are being made at Toulon for the reception of the Grand Duke Constantine, who is expected there the second fortnight in April. A maritime fête is to be given; and it is ordered that the new vessels now in progress, the Fontenoy and the Foudre, shall be advanced as much as possible, so as to be launched in the presence of the Imperial visitor.

The Emperor has presented the great bell of Sebastopol to Notre Dame, but, the fastenings by which it is hung having been purposely broken off by the Russians, it is now undergoing the repairs required for its suspension. A part of the metal of the cannons taken at Sebastopol is to be devoted to the creation of a colossal statue of the Virgin, on a rock named the Mont-Corneille, overlooking Puy. The figure is to be sixteen feet in height.

THE WAR IN PERSIA.

The accounts from the Persian Gulf to the 25th of December announce that the steam-frigates Chusan, Singapore, and Pottinger, belonging to the East India Company, had quitted the Bay of Bushire to anchor in the port of Karrak. The Admiral had commissioned the commanders of the Euphrate and the Tigris to make a survey of the island and port of Karrak. Two transports from Bombay had brought the materials necessary for the construction of docks and storehouses. The port of Karrak is described as one of the finest in the world. 800 merchant vessels may be safely anchored there. The British Admiral dispatched on the 21st December the Coulanar and Elphinstone to the Island of Ormuz, situated at the entrance of the Persian Gulf. A vast maritime position is about to be established there, and a dépôt of coal. It is said that he likewise intends to place himself in communication with Bussorah by means of a service of steam-boats on the Euphrates.

The Indépendance Belge states that the bases of the arrangement in progress between Feroukh Khan and the English Government are the mutual restitution of Bushire and Herat, and the establishment of a free port at Karrak.

It is also said that France has given up her claims on the Island of Karrak, as her contribution to the settlement.

Letters received from Persia on Tuesday state that Feslah Khan, who commands the advanced guard of the Persian army in Farsistan, had sent forward on the 25th of December a strong reconnoitring party of cavalry as far as fifty miles in advance of Shiraz. This demonstration, though so far from the British camp, had given rise to a report of an approaching attack on the English lines by the entire Persian army; but this is impossible, for the Persians, who have been joined by the Turcomans, have none but irregular cavalry in the province of Fars, with which it would be impossible to make an impression on the well-fortified position of the English army at Bushire.

AUSTRIAN REFORMS IN ITALY.

A few months ago it was announced that the Archduke Ferdinand Max would take the oaths as Governor-General of the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom on or about the 12th inst.; but it now appears that his Imperial Highness has expressed his disinclination to accept so important an office without previously ascertaining the exact extent of the powers with which the Emperor proposes to invest him. The Archduke is aware that the rigid system of centralisation which has been introduced by the Minister of the Interior is one of the principal causes of the discontent of the Italian subjects of his Imperial brother. At present the inhabitants of the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom are in an excellent humour, because they can apply directly to their Sovereign for the redress of their grievances; but it is feared that they would relapse into their former sullen disaffection if they were again made so entirely dependent on the Central Government. The youthful Archduke is said to have expressed his conviction that he would be able to discharge the important duties of Governor-General of the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom to the satisfaction either of his Majesty or of his subjects, unless some important changes were made in the system of government. During the last few years the Minister of the Interior has been intent on centralisation, in order to render more complete the unity of the empire, but many experienced statesmen are of opinion that he has overshot the mark, and will, sooner or later, be obliged to leave very many matters of minor importance to the management of the provincial authorities. Persons who are generally well informed on such matters affirm that the representations of the Archduke have been received favourably, and that he is likely to receive from the Emperor much more extensive powers than were held by the Archduke Reignier, who was Viceroy up to 1848. The following are said to be the principal features of the proposed plan of administration:—His Imperial Highness the Archduke Ferdinand Max to be the alter ego of his Majesty, and as such to receive his instructions direct from him. One of the Aulic Councillors of the Home Department, who is to have the management of matters connected with the organisation of the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom, to be attached to the Governor-General. Judicial matters to be under the more immediate direction of the Supreme Court of Justice for Lombardy and Venice, which, as a matter of course, is responsible to the Minister of Justice for its actions. The Governor-General will have to do all in his power to maintain the unity of the empire, but he will be at liberty to take into consideration any wishes of the people that are not antagonistic to it. His Imperial Highness may, should he deem it advisable, give employment to persons who, though disloyal during the revolution, have since behaved well.

The advocates of violent measures assert that the Emperor has seriously compromised his dignity by his "excessive condescension;" but persons who have had an opportunity of seeing how the Emperor treats his Italian subjects state that he displays extreme tact—as much as he is friendly with all and familiar with no one. Shoals of petitions, which have been presented to the Emperor during his sojourn in Italy, have been forwarded to Vienna for examination, and almost all of them bear the signature of the Emperor, which in Austria is equivalent to an order to the Minister to whose department the matter treated of belongs to grant (if possible) the request of the petitioner.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS IN ASIA.

The ratifications of the treaty signed between Russia and Persia on the 5th of January last were exchanged at Teheran on the 18th of the same month. This treaty secures to Russia a tract of land on the frontiers of Turkey. This tract is situate between Bayazid and Nakhchavan. This new possession will give Russia a complete command of the strategic road from Trebizond on the Black Sea to the Persian frontier by Erzeroum. The importance of the new territory may be estimated by the persevering efforts which Russia has made to obtain possession of it ever since her war with Persia, which was brought to a close in 1828. It comprises a great part of the Persian province of Azerbaidschan, and will be useful to Russia, by consolidating her dominions in the vicinity of the Caspian Sea, as well as giving her the command of one of the principal avenues of Asiatic commerce. It is asserted that orders were immediately sent from St. Petersburg to construct a line of fortresses on the territory lately ceded.

A letter from the Black Sea of February 3 states that Lieutenant-General Sokoloff, of the Russian army in Asia, had left for Erzeroum on a military mission confided to him by Prince Baratansky, the Commander-in-Chief. The object of this mission is said to be to settle the boundary of the fortresses which Russia is about to build in the territory ceded to her by Persia.

THE INDIAN MAILS.

The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Pera arrived at Southampton on Thursday, with the heavy portion of the Indian mail. She left Alexandria on the 7th of January, Malta on the 11th, Gibraltar 15. She brings no specie. On the 16th she passed the Ralph Thompson, waterlogged and abandoned. The Pera has made the shortest voyage on record.

WEST INDIA MAILS.

The Magdalena steamer arrived at Southampton on Thursday with the West India mails. She left St. Thomas's on the 1st Feb., and has on board 880,104 dollars, and diamonds to the value of £10. The sugar plantations at Jamaica were improving.

On the 20th December a slight earthquake was experienced at Mexico. A fearful storm occurred the same day at Vera Cruz: seven vessels were lost, and eighty persons perished. The Costa-Ricans had taken possession of Virginia Bay and all the river steamers. California was quiet. A strong earthquake was felt at Lima on the 27th of December.

AMERICAN COPYRIGHTS.—Letters from Washington report that the international copyright treaty has been published, and that a movement is on foot by American authors to obtain the passage of a bill by Congress that will secure to authors in England similar rights for their productions. It is expected in the United States, provided that the works thus copyrighted shall be published in those states within four weeks of their appearance in England. American authors are also endeavouring to obtain a similar law on the part of England. The proposal has, of course, met the approval of English authors, but not that of publishers who will most certainly oppose it.

THE PEERS OF THE REALM.—A roll of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in the fifth Session of the sixteenth Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland has been printed. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales heads the list, and Lord Talbot de Malahide ends it. The total number of Peers amounts to 459. According to the usage of Parliament, when the House names a Select Committee, the Lords selected are named in the order of their rank; but when a whole House is called within the House, or for the purpose of proceeding to Westminster Hall, the call begins with the junior Baron. The Archbishop of Canterbury ranks immediately after the Duke of Cambridge, and then follow the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of York, the Archbishop of Dublin, the President of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal, and the Earl Marshal of England. The Bishops rank between the Viscounts and the Barons.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.—Postmasters are now prohibited from aiding any attempt to conceal from those to whom letters are addressed the knowledge of the place where they originate—which knowledge is, under ordinary circumstances, obtainable from the postmark. Accordingly a number of valentines which had been sent this year to country postmasters at a distance from the place where they were written, with a request that they might be posted at those remote offices, have been sent to the dead-letter office, and thence to the parties for whom they were destined, accompanied with a statement showing where the valentines were written, and the means that had been taken to elude detection.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

ONE of her Majesty's Cabinet Ministers, who is usually a grave man, created a laugh by using the words, "In the present state of the Session," on the 9th of February; the point of the jocoseness of the observation being that that phrase is ordinarily current in Parliament only from about the 15th of July. Nevertheless, any members of the House of Commons who may have arrived in town in the last few days must have been greatly struck by the apt resemblance which the aspect of the House bears to its condition in the last days of summer. There is a prevailing listlessness and languor which is usually associated with the dog-days; and the curt manner in which the sittings on almost every evening lately have been cut short evidences a very singular state of things. Yet there have not been wanting subjects which in other years would have roused the somewhat dormant sympathies of members. To say nothing of the renewal of the celebrated intellectual duel between the two leaders of the House on the "Secret Treaty" question, and their dispute about "instigation" and "advice," and "signed" or "not signed;" the jocose apology of the peccant "civil" Lord of the Admiralty, which was no apology at all, but an admirable mimicry of the Palmerstonian manner of getting out of a difficulty—a copy of his master, made with an exactitude of style and demeanour which was palpable to every one; and the solemn expulsion of a member of the first deliberative assembly in the world for offences against honour and morality; the Budget has been brought forward on the thirteenth day of the Session—a circumstance which has not occurred since Sir Robert Peel (the other Sir Robert, be it remembered) introduced his great financial policy! And yet the House of Commons adjourns at early hours. The Government declares that, "in the present state of the Session," they cannot promise to introduce any more measures; and private members withdraw their motions; or, like Captain Scobell on the Administration of the Navy, bring them on shortly and feebly, and suffer them to be disposed of with but a shred of discussion, probably because they cannot help themselves.

The solution of this unusual state of things is, perhaps, to be found in two facts. Firstly, the present Parliament is getting old, for a Parliament. In August next it will have attained the mature age of five years, and certainly the symptoms of enervation it exhibits might furnish excellent arguments for the advocates of triennial elections. Again, the course taken by the Government in their adroit attempts to check-mate the game of their opponents;—that triangular "tactique" which is opposed to them from the front Opposition Bench, the second bench below the gangway on the Ministerial side, and the fourth seat behind the Treasury Bench, and which receives its inspirations from Mr. Disraeli, Mr. Gladstone, and Lord John Russell respectively—has been so far successful as to have rendered it necessary for time to be gained for a reorganisation of purpose and of plan. The lull which has consequently taken place does not, however, seem ungrateful to members generally. They wander about the House in admired disorder—anybody sitting anywhere—and the rigid discipline of party which is generally observed, so far as regards the appropriation of seats, is for the while disregarded. It is particularly to be noticed that Lord Stanley does not habitually, if at all, assume a place on the first seat of the Opposition. He is much more frequently in the gallery; and, when in the body of the House, he often sits on the second bench, below the gangway, exactly opposite that invariably occupied by Sir James Graham on the Ministerial side. All sorts of intruders get alongside of Mr. Disraeli, who preserves his persistent attendance in the House, but who is not so regularly supported as was his wont by Mr. Walpole.

Sometimes Mr. Gladstone creeps on to the lowest seat on the Treasury Bench, and seems as if he were trying its capabilities by anticipation; or perhaps he is desirous of once more getting near Mr. James Wilson, his ancient coadjutor, who appeared in his place in Parliament the night before a paragraph appeared in all the papers announcing that he was still in the country suffering from the effects of an accident, but that he would return to his duties in a few days. In short, nothing more unsatisfactory or unsettled than the state of the House of Commons can well be imagined; and it is really time that some show of getting to business should be made. Take the occasion of the Financial Statement. When the Chancellor of the Exchequer rose there was but a thin house, and, though the numbers increased, yet there was sometimes tedium, sometimes impatience, expressed; and as soon as the simple fact of the reduction of the Income-tax was announced there was a rush of members to the door, and, what is worse, they did not come back for the remainder of the night; and yet the exposition of Sir Cornewall Lewis was far above the average of those who have held his office. To be sure it had not the prepared elaboration of Mr. Disraeli's or the nervous vigour of Mr. Gladstone's grand financial orations; but it was clear, well delivered, and for him, animated. Tried by the test of a financial speech of Sir Charles Wood, Sir Francis Baring, Mr. Spring Rice, Lord Althorp, or even of Mr. Goulburn, "it struck fiery off indeed;" and the complaint that it was unnecessarily long was only justified by a remembrance of the strict brevity of his previous speeches in introducing Budgets. One thing is certain, that his critics and rivals expressed a very remarkable readiness to take time to prepare their onslaughts upon his financial scheme.

The formality of expelling a member from the House of Commons is in its very nature a grave, not to say a solemn, proceeding, and one which in these days has the merit (if such a word be applicable under the circumstances) of novelty. Nevertheless, the House was by no means superabundantly tenanted on the evening of the degradation of James Sadleir from the honour of representing a constituency; and, if an observer had been compelled to state his candid opinion as to the mood in which the House took the matter, one could have said that they viewed it, on the whole, rather from a lively and jocose point of view and this notwithstanding the constitutional gravity, amounting to melancholy, and almost to the lachrymose, which distinguishes the oratorical efforts of the Attorney-General for Ireland. There was actually some laughing when Mr. Roebuck was indignantly stigmatising the offender on whom justice was at length being done by the simple titles of "thief" and "swindler." Then take the reception which was given to the introduction of a measure for education, which has been somewhat pompously announced, as having solved the difficult problem of a system of national education, and of which the cohesion of Sir John Pakington and Mr. Cobden as its political godfathers is the outward emblem. The House was very full for two or three hours, when the subject of discussion was the Judgments and Execution Bill (to be sure, all the Irish members had mustered to oppose it); but when Sir John Pakington rose there were not fifty members present; even Mr. Cobden, with Lord John Russell in prospect, failed to bring a hundred together. Why, last year Mr. Henley got a better audience to hear him speak a violent antagonistic speech in the very ear of his ex-colleague, and whilom fast friend and coadjutor, Sir John Pakington—a spectacle not less peculiar than the seconding of a motion of that right honourable gentleman by the facile princeps of the Anti-Corn-law League. Who can say whether next week may not produce events which will rouse Parliament from the chronic apathy into which it seems to have fallen by its sudden immersion into the depths of a dissolution? It is quite certain that Mr. Hayter looks very careworn and fatigued and anxious, and that is a symptom not without significance.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

THE LAW OF LIBEL.—Lord CAMPBELL presented a petition calling the attention of the House to the case of Davison and Duncan, and the law of libel as it now stood. The noble Lord expressed his opinion that the law ought to be altered, though, as the Judges had sat on the case, they could make but little to declare the law, it was impossible for them to come to any other decision than that given in the case in point.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

A new writ was ordered for Colchester, in the room of Lord John Manners.

EXPULSION OF JAMES SADLEIR.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL for IRELAND, in moving the expulsion of Mr James Sadleir, who had fled from justice, adduced precedents in support of that course. He adverted also to the circumstances connected with Mr Sadleir's abscondment, and mentioned that he had received a note from Mr. James Scully, asserting that he had just seen him in Paris, and advising his arrest. The treaty, however, did not authorise that step.

Mr. G. BUTT seconded the motion.

Sir F. THESIGER supported the motion, but thought there was no necessity for the delay which had taken place. Mr. Roebuck adduced last Session sufficient reasons why Mr. Sadleir should at once have been expelled. No additional information had been supplied upon this occasion.

Mr. ROEBUCK, in allusion to his motion of last Session, which was resisted by the Government, remarked that he was so much accustomed to be told—"We know that you are right, but you are always too soon" that he was not in the least surprised at what had taken place.

The SOLICITOR-GENERAL (Sir Stuart Wortley) defended the course taken last Session in resolving to allow the most ample time to the accused person to come forward and meet the charges against him

After some further discussion the motion was agreed to.

THE BUDGET.

On the question that the House resolve itself into a Committee of Supply,

A conversation arose as to the inconvenience of the order of business put down by the Government on the paper—preventing, in fact, the House from passing an opinion upon the Budget as a whole, by interposing the Navy Estimates.

With the view of obviating the difficulty, Lord PALMERSTON mentioned that the Navy Estimates would not be proposed that evening.

The Speaker having left the chair

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER after explaining the provisions of his Budget, moved that a sum of £2,000,000 be granted to the Chancellor of the exchequer.

After a short discussion the motion was agreed to.

It was arranged that on Friday the Income-tax resolutions should be taken, and that Mr. Disraeli would move his amendment

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

CANTON.—The Earl of CARNARVON said it had been stated in certain journals that Admiral Seymour, at the time at which the last mail had left China, had thrown hot shot into the town of Canton; and that being considered a very extreme proceeding in civilised warfare he was anxious to ascertain from her Majesty's Ministers if that information was true?

Earl GRANVILLE said he was happy to be able to inform the noble Lord that there existed no foundation whatever for the statement.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

THE INCOME-TAX.—Mr MUNTZ postponed, until next Friday, his motion on the subject of the Income-tax

THE AFFAIRS OF NAPLES.

Mr. GLADSTONE asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether the Neapolitan papers presented to Parliament comprised all the despatches from Lord Clarendon to the British mission at Naples between the 10th May when her Majesty's Government recommended the Government that it would be desirable to grant a general amnesty, and October 10, when the British mission was instructed to leave Naples? Also at what period and on what conditions her Majesty's Government was to resume diplomatic relations with the kingdom of the Two Sicilies?

Lord PALMERSTON said: In answer to the first question of the hon. gentleman I have to state that the papers presented to the House do not contain all the despatches, but they contain all the despatches that bear upon the matters that the papers are meant to elucidate. There are many other despatches which contain instructions with reference to contingencies that may arise, and therefore have no bearing upon the case but relate to what are now unimportant points. With regard to the second question, perhaps I may without offence be allowed to answer it by putting another question, namely, whether the hon. gentleman has full powers from the King of Naples in this matter? (Hear, hear," and laughter.) If his answer should be in the affirmative, I would suggest that his question had better be put to my noble friend, Lord Clarendon, in Downing-street, than to me in the House of Commons. I believe that on reflection, the hon gentleman will feel or at least the House will feel (A laugh.) that it would be quite improper upon my part to attempt to answer such a question here (Hear, hear,

OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.—In answer to questions from Lord Goderich and Sir J. Pakington, the PREMIER denied the truth of the report that Canton had been bombarded, and promised some additional papers on the subject of the recent proceedings in China.

IRISH FISHERIES. Leave was given to Mr M'MAHON to bring in a bill for assimilating the law as to the sea coast fisheries of Ireland with that of England.

NAVAL ADMINISTRATION.

Captain SCOBELL moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the Naval Administration, especially with regard to the lists of officers, the patronage, promotions, the retirements, and the efficiency of the service in all its grades. The gallant member supported his motion by a recitation of numerous instances of injustice and favouritism in the promotion of officers to the higher ranks of naval service, and insisted that the evils of the present system had attained a magnitude which required a searching investigation, with the view to the inauguration of a sounder principle

Sir C. WOOD questioned the correctness of the inferences drawn by Captain Scobell. The performances of the navy during the late war sufficiently attested the ability of the officers and the general efficiency of the system. He repudiated the charge of favouritism altogether, declaring that promotions in the navy were accorded solely upon considerations of desert, unbiassed by any surreptitious bias, whether derived from a Parliamentary, a family, or a political origin.

Mr LINDSAY believed that the state of the naval administration demanded inquiry. One great cause of deficiency in that service, in his opinion, was the fact that the head of the Admiralty, unlike the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, held his office upon temporary conditions, having to resign his functions upon every change of administration

Admiral WALCOTT also supported the motion

After a brief reply from Captain SCOBELL, the House divided. For the resolution, 76; against, 97: majority, 21.

BRIBERY AT ELECTIONS ACTS. Viscount PALMERSTON said that doubts had been expressed in the course of last year with regard to the operation of the Bribery Acts. He thought, therefore, that the best step to adopt would be to appoint a Committee, with a view to discover whether any parts of the existing law could be altered or suggested for improvement. It would therefore move for a Select Committee to inquire into the operation of the Act 17 and 18 Vict c. 102, intituled "An Act to Consolidate and Amend the Laws relating to Bribery, Treating, and undue Influence at Elections of Members of Parliament."—Mr. WILLIAMS was glad that the noble Lord was about to refer the question to a Select Committee. He was convinced that the measures referred to had been ineffective than any other plan that could be devised short of the Ballot, for the prevention of bribery and corruption. Mr. H. BERKELEY trusted the noble Lord would take care that the Committee was so constituted as to secure a full and fair inquiry into the Act, which was generally spoken of as a pompous profession, but intended to be inoperative (Hear, hear.—The motion was then agreed to.

Mr BOUVERIE obtained leave to bring in a Bill providing for the Relief of the Poor in extra-parochial places.

The Royal Marine Forces Bill was read a third time and passed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

JUDGMENTS EXECUTION BILL. The motion for going into Committee on the Judgments Execution Bill was opposed by Mr. HUGHES, who moved as an amendment that the committal of the bill should be deferred for six months. After a prolonged and miscellaneous discussion, the House divided on this amendment. Ayes, 80; noes, 147. The House then went into Committee on the bill; but before any clauses were passed the Chairman was ordered to report progress, and further proceedings were suspended for a week, in order to give time for the consideration of certain amendments.

The Chief Commissioner of Police Bill was passed through Committee

The Public Health Supplemental Bill was read a second time

A new writ was ordered to issue for Liverpool in the room of Mr James Sadleir, who had been expelled the House.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.

Sir J. PAKINGTON moved for leave to bring in a bill for the promotion of elementary education in cities and corporate towns, and said he had taken care that in no case should his bill contravene the decision of the House last Session upon the resolutions of Lord John Russell. His present bill was permissive and not compulsory, and was local instead of being general in its operation, although it was his opinion that a bill both compulsory and universal in its operation would be far more satisfactory in its results. But his respect for the House induced him to shape his measure to meet the views to which the House had already given expression, but he hoped, nevertheless, that though permissive it might become pretty general in its operation, for it appeared that the Police for Counties Bill, though a permissive one, was yet adopted by more than half the counties of England. His bill was founded on those three principles—religious freedom and toleration, local contribution, and local management and control over the funds. He also added that there was no intention to interfere in any way with the management and conduct of existing schools He off-red the bill to the House as his contribution to a great cause, and felt that the discussion of it could be productive of nothing but good, even if it should not pass into law

Mr CORDEN seconded the motion

Mr. COWPER believed no one could oppose the introduction of such a bill, and the House would have time to consider its provisions prior to the second reading

Mr E. BALL thought that education without religious teaching was hurtful rather than beneficial, and he therefore regretted the introduction of this bill.

Lord R. CECIL objected to the bill, as being too hasty, and thought the existing system should be allowed a longer trial

Mr. CORDEN said the bill could scarcely be called hasty, inasmuch as the subject had, to his knowledge, been three times seven years under consideration. He thought the measure now under review was the one best calculated of any he had ever heard of to get rid of the religious difficulty pertaining to this question of education

Mr. HENLEY objected to the bill as ignoring religion altogether under the guise of religious freedom.

Lord J. RUSSELL was glad the subject of education had been again brought before the House; and perhaps the night hon. Baronet had acted prudently, under the circumstances, in making his bill permissive instead of compulsory; though, for his own part, he thought education should be both national and compulsory.

After some observations from Mr HADFIELD and Mr. W. EWART,

Sir J. PAKINGTON shortly replied; after which Leave was given to bring in the bill.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

THE PRIVILEGE OF REPORTING. Lord CAMPBELL gave notice that on Thursday next he should move for a Select Committee, to consider whether the privilege now enjoyed in reporting the proceedings of Courts of Justice might be safely extended to reports of the proceedings of the two Houses of Parliament, and other assemblies and public meetings; and, if so, under what circumstances and restrictions.

THE CHINESE WAR.

The Earl of DERBY gave notice of his intention to move the following resolutions on Tuesday

"Resolved—That this House has heard with deep regret the interruption of amicable relations between her Majesty's subjects and the Chinese authorities at Canton, arising out of the measures adopted by her Majesty's Chief Superintendent of Trade to obtain reparation for an alleged infraction of the Supplementary Treaty of 8th October, 1843

That in the opinion of this House the occurrence of differences upon this subject rendered the time peculiarly unfavourable for pressing upon the Chinese authorities a claim for the admittance of British subjects into Canton, which had been left in abeyance since 1849, and for subjecting the same by force of arms.

That in the opinion of this House operations of actual hostility ought not to have been undertaken without the express instructions previously received of her Majesty's Government, and that neither of the subjects adverted to in the foregoing resolutions afforded sufficient justification for such operations."

The remainder of the evening was occupied by a discussion upon India, which was originated by the Marquis of CLANRICARDE, who moved a resolution condemnatory of the present system of governing that empire through the medium of the East India Company.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

NEW MEMBERS.—Mr Monsell took the oaths and his seat upon his re-election for Limerick; and Mr. Bagwell for Clonmel in the room of Mr John O'Connell

Sir R. PEEL AND ADMIRAL NAPIER.—Sir C. NAPIER gave notice that on going into Committee on the Navy Estimates, he should call attention to the speech recently delivered by Sir R. Peel.

CORPORATION OF LONDON. Sir G. GREY, in reply to Mr. Hankey, said he should introduce a bill for the reform of the Corporation of London if the earliest possible opportunity.

WAYS AND MEANS.—Mr LOWE in reply to Mr. Hankemore, said he did not intend, during the present Session, to introduce any bill for the collection of Agricultural Statistics.—Mr. BLAKE moved for papers not relating to the Sound dues, but they contain all the despatches that bear upon the matters that the papers are meant to elucidate. There are many other despatches which contain instructions with reference to contingencies that may arise, and therefore have no bearing upon the case but relate to what are now unimportant points. With regard to the second question, perhaps I may without offence be allowed to answer it by putting another question, namely, whether the hon. gentleman has full powers from the King of Naples in this matter? (Hear, hear," and laughter.) If his answer should be in the affirmative, I would suggest that his question had better be put to my noble friend, Lord Clarendon, in Downing-street, than to me in the House of Commons. I believe that on reflection, the hon gentleman will feel or at least the House will feel (A laugh.) that it would be quite improper upon my part to attempt to answer such a question here (Hear, hear,

OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.—In answer to questions from Lord Goderich and Sir J. Pakington, the PREMIER denied the truth of the report that Canton had been bombarded, and promised some additional papers on the subject of the recent proceedings in China.

IRISH FISHERIES. Leave was given to Mr M'MAHON to bring in a bill for assimilating the law as to the sea coast fisheries of Ireland with that of England.

NAVAL ADMINISTRATION.

Captain SCOBELL moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the Naval Administration, especially with regard to the lists of officers, the patronage, promotions, the retirements, and the efficiency of the service in all its grades. The gallant member supported his motion by a recitation of numerous instances of injustice and favouritism in the promotion of officers to the higher ranks of naval service, and insisted that the evils of the present system had attained a magnitude which required a searching investigation, with the view to the inauguration of a sounder principle

Sir C. WOOD questioned the correctness of the inferences drawn by Captain Scobell. The performances of the navy during the late war sufficiently attested the ability of the officers and the general efficiency of the system. He repudiated the charge of favouritism altogether, declaring that promotions in the navy were accorded solely upon considerations of desert, unbiassed by any surreptitious bias, whether derived from a Parliamentary, a family, or a political origin.

Mr LINDSAY believed that the state of the naval administration demanded inquiry. One great cause of deficiency in that service, in his opinion, was the fact that the head of the Admiralty, unlike the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, held his office upon temporary conditions, having to resign his functions upon every change of administration

Admiral WALCOTT also supported the motion

After a brief reply from Captain SCOBELL, the House divided. For the resolution, 76; against, 97: majority, 21.

BRIBERY AT ELECTIONS ACTS. Viscount PALMERSTON said that doubts had been expressed in the course of last year with regard to the operation of the Bribery Acts. He thought, therefore, that the best step to adopt would be to appoint a Committee, with a view to discover whether any parts of the existing law could be altered or suggested for improvement. It would therefore move for a Select Committee to inquire into the operation of the Act 17 and 18 Vict c. 102, intituled "An Act to Consolidate and Amend the Laws relating to Bribery, Treating, and undue Influence at Elections of Members of Parliament."—Mr. WILLIAMS was glad that the noble Lord was about to refer the question to a Select Committee. He was convinced that the measures referred to had been more eff

"THE ROVER'S BRIDE" ABANDONED AT SEA.—BOAT OF THE ROYAL MAIL STEAMER "ATRATO" BOARDING.

THE "ATRATO" AND THE "ROVER'S BRIDE."

The fine mail steamer Atrato, on her last voyage from St. Thomas to Southampton, fell in with the abandoned vessel, the Rover's Bride, as thus detailed in the steamer's log:—

Jan. 24, 1857. Lat. 39° 39′ N.; Lon. 41° 52′ W.; distant 1707 miles from the Lizard. 12.15 p.m. Observed a vessel on port bow dismasted, bore down upon her, lowered mail-boat in charge of chief officer and boarded her. She proved to be the ship Rover's Bride, of St. John's, N.B. Official No., 22976. Waterlogged and abandoned, and decks swept by the sea. No papers or other particulars found on board.

The Rover's Bride appeared to be about 1000 to 1200 tons, and to be almost a new ship, the rigging was also new; her sails were all in ribbons, jibs and staysails hanging from bowsprit and jibboom; foretopmast gone, and mizentopmast and mainmast gone at the head. The broken spars were all hanging over the ship's side, port-anchor and cathead gone, boats all gone; captain's cabin bulkheads all washed away. In the mizentop there was a bed or nest made up, and sundry other things there, showing that some of the crew must have lived there after being washed out below. From the appearance of the spars and sails, it is supposed a squall carried all away at once.

S. Moore, Purser, Atrato.

The accompanying Illustration is from a sketch by H. B. Johnson, second officer of the Atrato.

CASTELLO DELL' UOVO.

It is a fine autumnal evening, and we will linger on the balcony of the Villa di Roma, one of the most prettily-situated hotels in Naples. The bright blue sea is beneath us, and just opposite, forming as it were, one of the boundaries of a vast lake, is a spur of the Appenines, which, leaving the main branch capriciously enough, runs out into the sea, as if to make an attack on Capri. Like some spoilt child of Nature, there is no site on which the imagination so much dotes as on that line of mountains. There once lay Herculaneum, Pompeii, Stabia, Surrentinum—the property of romance rather than of history; and there still they are, with other names, whilst Vesuvius is at this moment vomiting out his fires. The purple shades of evening are clothing the mountains in their regal garb; Capri is becoming dim in the distance; and we fix our eye at length on the main subject of our Sketch Castello dell' Uovo. It is situated on a small rocky island, once called Megari, and derives its name from its shape. It was built by William I. in 1154. King Frederic, on 16th April, 1218, held a general Parliament there, and in 1221 completed and much strengthened the building. In the fifteenth century King James fled to this castle from the persecutions of his wife, the Queen Johanna. Without, however, giving in detail all the facts of its history, it is sufficient to say that it has always been deemed an important point by the Sovereigns of this country. Weak for external resistance, it is strong for the maintenance of the order of the city, and to such an object it seems now to be appropriated. Standing at the apex of an angle it commands both Santa Lucia and Chiatamone, and its outer walls are prepared with holes for musketry. Castello dell' Uovo is one of the main props of the throne of King Ferdinand, and perhaps no other part of the city gives a better idea of the security of the King or of the contentment and affection of the people!

MOLO, MOLOFALCONE AND CASTELLO DELL' UOVO, N. NAPLES.

THE DESERT ROUTE.

CARAVANSERAI, NEAR EL ARISH.—(SEE PAGE 116.)

(Continued from page 143.)

HEBRON.

ALMOST as welcome as Hebron was in days of old to the flying Israelite, who sought refuge within its sanctuary from the fierce wrath of such as sought retribution for the accidental slaying of some near blood relation, is Hebron nowadays welcome to the weary, sunburnt, and desert-dried English traveller. His red face brightens up under his dusty calico-covered beaver as the distant tall minarets proclaim the near approach to shelter and repose; and the verdant aspect of the surrounding country—hills, valleys, and dales—speak volumes to the mind's eye of rich store of wines and fruits in preserve whereon to feast till the days of durance vile in quarantine shall be past; whilst the surrounding scenery in no way lacks those beauties of bounteous nature which promise amply to afford occupation and amusement for the mind. As we approach the town with its numerous domes and minarets the guardians of the quarantine are very loquacious, and point out what spot exactly indicates the last resting-place of the patriarchs and their wives, telling you, by way of parenthesis, that Abraham was a Moslem, and many other alike startling ideas, much to the indignation of an old Jew from Cairo, who does not, however, dare to give utterance to his feelings, as it was once a common practice amongst the Turks to grill any Jew that differed publicly on a point of faith, and the descendant of Isaac is not quite sure but that they may still carry on the same practices in private. There are two remarkable features on approaching Hebron: one is the vast quantity of prickly-pear bushes that grow in the neighbourhood, yielding abundant supply of very delicious fruit; the other is the endless number of elderly Jews and Jewesses who are congregated in every turning of every lane, reclining under every available shrub or bush that holds forth promise of affording the slightest shelter. These ancients are gathered here from all the kingdoms of the earth; and as they have come to die, and are far advanced on the shady side of life, they are bent upon enjoying what remains of it as much out of doors as possible; and surely there is nothing that can better turn the heart towards the mercy and wisdom of the Creator than to study nature and the works of His creation in uninterrupted mid-day silence. The cry to mid-day prayers resounds from the lofty minarets as the travellers draw nigh. There are a parcel of blind beggars collected at the main entrance; and a powerful-looking goatherd, with his long-barrelled duck-gun supported on his shoulders, is trudging home to his mid-day repast, driving a few meagre goats before him, on whose abundant supply of milk, however, both himself and family are mainly dependent for support; sometimes a stray hare or a partridge falls a victim to his rusty old gun; and these he barters away for a few charges of powder and shot or a miserable pittance of money. Hebron boasts of a fine bracing climate in the winter, though its summers are often oppressive, and at times accompanied with fevers of a malignant form.

HEBRON.

GATEWAY IN THE WALLS, BEYROUT.

In all hot countries the favourite resort of the natives during the heat of the day are the dark arched gateways which almost invariably are constructed through walls of the city. Here there is, at all hours, a gentle eddy of air whose value is beyond price to the panting, languid inhabitant; and here parties of travellers and villagers congregate to sleep, or chat, or smoke the sultry portions of the day away. Perhaps few places can boast of a greater number of long, dark, arched, black-vaulted gateways than Beyrout, the rising capital of Syria. Some of these are so long and so obscure that even at midday those uninitiated in their curves and windings find great difficulty in groping their way about, and are not unfrequently brought up by stumbling over some prostrate form, deep wrapt in slumber, despite the legions of fleas that love to dwell in all such dark and damp unhealthy nooks. In the picture before us the artist has well delineated one of the numerous gateways pierced through the walls of the old town of Beyrout, through which we catch a glimpse of the white sands outside, the prickly-pear hedges beyond the sands, and, further back than these, one of the new mosques, and some few of the other new edifices that are being rapidly constructed in this part of Beyrout. Under the gateway, seated on that inseparable companion of his journeyings—his carpet—is a Turkish gentleman smoking his pipe of repose, and inhaling with gusto the cool zephyr that creeps ever and anon over his parched features. Near him is seated some young acquaintance, possibly a hummumgee, or bathman, belonging to one of the neighbouring vapour-baths. He has brought in a leaden girglet, or jar, containing cold water, from which they alternately wet their parched lips and then resume the pipe, passing it from mouth to mouth after well wiping the fine amber mouthpiece. The horse of the Turkish gentleman stands quietly dozing a little distance off, and ruminating over its evening provision of corn. Its trappings are numerous and unseemly; a couple of small travelling bags swung over the wooden saddle contain the rider's market purchases of that day—vegetables, and fruit, and bread—for most probably the Turk lives at some village many an hour's ride from Beyrout; after these come the bags containing the horse's own provender, and from which he has ever and anon a small portion given him; over the whole is flung a large loose bearskin, or a couple of sheepskins stitched together, and, in addition to all this, when the rider makes a start again, the carpet is carefully folded and placed in the seat of the saddle, so as to make the seat less hard for the horseman. The bridle has been removed from the head and is swinging over the horse's head, while a piece of cord with leather strappings at each end is passed round the fore and hind fetlocks of the animal, who is thus secured from indulging in any such caprice as trotting home to his stable without a rider. The four o'clock (evening) summons from yon minaret warns the Turk that time is stealing on; and, first going through all the necessary forms attendant on his orisons, he prays, then tightens the girths of his saddle, mounts, and so rides away homewards.

CHRISTIAN OF NAZARETH.

GATEWAY IN THE WALLS OF BEYROUT.

(To be continued.)

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Feb. 22.—Shrove Sunday. Sir Joshua Reynolds died, 1792.
MONDAY, 23.—Duke of Kent died, 1820.
TUESDAY, 24.—Shrove Tuesday.
WEDNESDAY, 25.—Ash Wednesday. Sir C. Wren died, 1723.
THURSDAY, 26.—Napoleon embarked from Elba, 1815.
FRIDAY, 27. Dr. Arbuthnot died, 1735.
SATURDAY, 28. Montaigne born, 1533.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 28, 1857.

| Sunday. | | Monday. | | Tuesday. | | Wednesday | | Thursday. | | Friday. | | Saturday. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| M | A | M | A | M | A | M | A | M | A | M | A | M | A |
| h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m | h m |
| 0 25 | 0 55 | 1 20 | 1 46 | 2 2 | 2 30 | 2 44 | 3 3 | 3 25 | 3 43 | 4 0 | 4 20 | 4 40 | 5 0 |

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Monday, February 23, and Every Evening during the week. Wednesday (positively) last night but one, the Pantomime of the FAIRIES in the WOODS; or, Harlequin and the Cruel Uncle.

ROYAL PRINCESS' THEATRE.—Last Week of the PANTOMIME.—MONDAY, 100th time (for the Benefit of Mr Shalles). Open Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, with the Pantomime. Wednesday (being Ash Wednesday) there will be no Performance. Tuesday, February 24th, being a Juvenile Night, the Performances will commence with the Pantomime

THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Second Week of Mr. and Mrs BANNEY WILLIAMS, the celebrated Irish Boy and Yankee Gal—MONDAY, and during the Week, "Ireland As It Is," in "A Night at Notting-hill;" "In and Out of Place," to conclude with "Barney the Baron"

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—MONDAY FEB 23, and all the week (Ash Wednesday excepted), MORNING and EVENING Equestrian Illustrations, invented by Mr W Cooke, and with all the original Master Boy Boy, Mr James Holloway. After which the ACTS of EMULATION in the ARENA To conclude with the Equestrian Comic Pantomime of PAUL PRY on HORSEBACK Commences at Seven o'Clock.

GREAT NATIONAL STANDARD THEATRE, Shoreditch.—Engagement for SIX NIGHTS of the original General TOM THUMB, who will appear on Monday and Tuesday, 23rd and 24th; Thursday, 26th, and Friday and Saturday 27th and 28th With a NEW DRAMA of great interest; and the Opening of the Grand PANTOMIME Prices as usual

MISS P. HORTON.—Mr. and Mrs. GERMAN REED'S POPULAR ILLUSTRATIONS at the GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION, 14, Regent-street, with entirely new part—Our Wards, Governesses, and Guardians—Introducing NEW PERFORMANCE every Saturday at Three. Admission 3s. and 1s. Stalls 3s. May be secured at the Gallery; and at Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street.

MR. and Mrs. HENRI DRAYTON will give their New Musical Entertainment, entitled ILLUSTRATED PROVERBS, at the REGENT'S GALLERY, Quadrant, every Evening during the Season, at Eight. Commencing on Easter Monday. A Morning Performance every Saturday, at Three o'clock. Stalls only at Cadby's, 42, New Bond-street.

THE SISTERS SOPHIA and ANNIE, in their Original Entertainment, entitled SKETCHES from NATURE, will appear on MONDAY, FEB 23, and every Evening during the Week, at the CONCERT HALL, Lord Nelson-street, LIVERPOOL.

MR. W. S. WOODIN'S OLIO of ODDITIES, with New Costumes and various parodies, Vocal and Characteristic, EVERY EVENING (saturday excepted), at Eight. A Morning Performance every Saturday, at Three. Private Boxes and Stalls may be secured without extra charge, at the Box-office.—Polygraphic Hall, King William-street, Charing-cross. The Hall has been entirely redecorated

CANTERBURY HALL, Westminster-road.—The above Magnificent HALL is Open Every Evening for Musical Entertainments, supported by Artists of Celebrity.—Commence at 7 o'clock precisely.—Suppers, &c., until Twelve.

GOMPERTZ'S PANORAMA of the LATE WAR will be exhibited at OSWESTRY next week; after which it will visit Wellington, Stafford, Nottingham, Stamford, and Grantham

MR. ALBERT SMITH'S MONT BLANC.—The Public is respectfully informed that the EGYPTIAN HALL is CLOSED for the present

THE ORIGINAL GENERAL TOM THUMB, who appeared Three Times before her Majesty in 1844, performs Three Times daily at the PRINCE of WALES BAZAAR, 209, Regent-street—from 12h to 2h, 3h to 5h, and 7h to 9 o'clock. New Songs, Dances, Costumes, Imitations, &c.—Admission, 1s., regardless of age. Stalls 2s.; Children half-price

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, Exeter-hall.—Conductor, Mr. COSTA. FRIDAY next, 27th FEBRUARY, 1857, COSTA'S ELI. Vocalists Madame Rudersdorff, Miss Lockey, Mr. Charles Smith, Mr Weiss and Herr Pischek. Pianoforte Herr Ignaz Brüll. Organ Mr. Benedict, with Orchestra of 700 Performers
Tickets, 5s., and 10s 6d., and the Society's Oratorios, Nos 8 in Exeter-hall, where also may be obtained the Music of the Oratorio, Handbook 1s. cloth, 2s 6d

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY.—GREAT HANDEL FESTIVAL.—In reply to the numerous letters daily received from various parts of the country, the Committee have much pleasure in stating that a limited number of Tickets will be reserved and acknowledged, further particulars than those already published can not be furnished.
The dates of the Rehearsals in London, and the order of the Performances, with the full programme for the Orchestra and other preliminary arrangements, including those concerning the Chorus, participant of the several country districts, will shortly be definitively settled. Full information will then be forwarded to all who have applied, as regards the extent of and the terms and conditions upon which Orchestra assistance can be accepted, from each locality
6 Exeter hall, February 11th, 1857

MR. BRINLEY RICHARDS' GRAND EVENING CONCERT at EXETER HALL, on MONDAY MARCH 2, 1857.—Last Appearance but One previous to London before Easter; and first appearance this season of M. Piccolomini, the Parisian Minstrel, the Orchestral Union, and Madame Anna Thillon, assisted by the following Artistes.—Mdme Rudersdorff, Mdme Weiss, Miss Winning, and Miss Allen Irving Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. W. Ball, Mr. Lawler, Mr. Frank Bodda, Mr. Swift, and Mr. Brinley Richards (Grand Pianoforte Recitals in the Wellington Gallery). Tickets may be had of Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street; Keith, Prowse, and Co., 48, Cheapside; and of Mr Brinley Richards, 6, Torrington street, Russell-square

MUSICAL UNION, WILLIS'S ROOMS.—SOIREES.—TUESDAY, MARCH 3. Chamber Music, Instrumental and Vocal. Haydn, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Spohr, Onslow, Alkan, and Wilhelm. Artistes: Sainton, Goffrie, H. Blagrove, Piatti, and Herr Derffe. Pianists, from Vienna, Mr. Lidel, and a Select Cast. For other particulars inquire at Cramer and Co.'s, Chappell and Co.'s, and Olivier, by letter addressed to the Director. Reserved seats, 10s. 6d. Admission, 5s. Programmes 1d.

MR. CHARLES SALAMAN'S SECOND LECTURE on MUSIC and the DANCE during the MIDDLE AGES to the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY, on TUESDAY Evening next, at the MARYLEBONE INSTITUTION. Eight o'clock Reserved seats, 3s.; Area, 1s.—At the Institution, 17, Edward-street, Portman-square.

MUSIC and SINGING.—A Young Lady who has been taught by eminent Professors, both in Paris and London, will GIVE LESSONS on moderate terms, at the pupils' own residence.—Address to Z. Y., at Mr. Nicks's, 12, Davies-street, Berkeley-square.

MR. W. R. BRAINE, Composer of "Nearer to Thee," &c., continues to give PIANOFORTE and SINGING LESSONS.—Address, Cramer, Beale, and Co., 201, Regent-street; or 7, Pembroke-square, Kensington, W.

TAXES ON KNOWLEDGE (Association for Promoting the Repeal of).—The SIXTH ANNUAL PUBLIC MEETING will take place at ST. MARTIN'S HALL on WEDNESDAY, February 25. The Chair will be taken by Sir Joseph Paxton, M.P. The Meeting will be addressed by Dr Epps, T. Milner Gibson, M.P., Herbert Ingram, M.P., Sergeant Parry, Henry Rawlinson, and Dr. John Watts. Doors open at Seven. Chair taken at Eight.—Tickets for the Platform may be had of J. A. Novello, 69 Dean-street, Soho, and of Mr. Pontifex (Booksellers'-row), at St Martin's-hall, and at the Office of the Association, 10, Ampton-place, Gray's-inn-road.

KENNINGTON AGRICULTURAL and CHEMICAL COLLEGE, Lower Kennington-lane, near London.
Principal, J. C. NESBIT, F.G.S., F.C.S., &c
Youths intending to become Farmers, Land Stewards, Chemical and Manure Manufacturers, or Managers of Mining Property, will find the courses of instruction in the colleges such as to fully qualify them for their respective pursuits. The terms for senior and junior Students may be known on application to the Principal
ANALYTICAL AND ASSAY DEPARTMENT.
Analyses and Assays of every description are promptly and accurately executed in the Laboratories of the College.

THE ROYAL ASSOCIATION for PROMOTION of the FINE ARTS IN SCOTLAND, FOUNDED IN 1833 INCORPORATED BY ROYAL CHARTER, 1847.

PLAN FOR THE CURRENT YEAR 1857.
First.—Each Subscriber will have a chance of obtaining a Valuable Work of Art at the Annual General Distribution in July, 1857.
Second.—Each Subscriber will receive a beautifully Illustrated Edition of the Poem
THE QUEEN'S RETURN,
BY THE NATIONAL POET, ROBERT BURNS,
Embellished by Line Engravings after Six Original Compositions executed expressly for the Association
BY JOHN FAED, R.S.A.
SUBJECTS

No. 1 (Frontispiece).
THE HORRORS OF WAR.
"Many a sweet babe fatherless,
And many a widow mourning.
Engraver, HENRY LEMON.

No. 2.
THE HERO AND HEROINE
(Before his Enlistment and Departure for the War)
"'Tis trysting thorn,
Where Nancy aft I courted"
Engraver, LUMB STOCKS, R.A.

No. 3.
HIS RETURN FROM THE WAR.
"At length I heard the bonny glen Where early life I sported."
Engraver, JAMES STEPHENSON.

No. 4.
HIS RECOGNITION OF HER.
"Who stood I but my ain dear maid,
Down by her mother's dwelling:
And turned me round to hide the flood
That in my een was swelling."
Engraver, JAMES STEPHENSON.

No. 5.
THE MEETING
"See wistful o'she gazes on me,
As, fearful, yet wishing to know,
Gin she's a stranger or no'tis,
Longin baun shall ha'e't."
Engraver, LUMB STOCKS, R.A.

No. 6 (Finale)
HER RECOGNITION OF HIM.
"His gaiest she reckoned like a rose,
Syne pale as ony lily:
She sunk within my arms and cried,—
"Art spoken my ain dear Willie?"
Engraver, HENRY LEMON.

The Engravings will be the same size, and the Work will be brought out in a similar manner to that of "Tom o' Shanter."
Third.—Each Subscriber who, between the years 1854 and 1856 inclusive, has paid up the amount of Five Subscriptions of One Guinea each, will receive, in addition to the Engravings, Engravings, or Illustrated Works which will be annually issued as usual, an Impression of a magnificent Plate, upwards of 23½ by 23 inches in size, the subject being engraved by W. H. EDLESTON, after the first Grant Picture acquired by the Association for the National Gallery.—
CHRIST TEACHING HUMILITY.
BY ROBERT SCOTT LAUDER, R.S.A.
Those desirous of becoming Members for the current year are requested to furnish their names without delay to the Clerk in the Exhibition Rooms of the Royal Scottish Academy, to the Collectors employed by the Association, to the various Honorary Secretaries in their respective localities, or to the Secretary, Mr. J. A. Bell, No. 69, York-place, Edinburgh, February, 1857.

PICTURE FRAMING.—J. MACHIN, of MANCHESTER, LONDON NEWS, 14 in. by 10 in., with a highly-polished frame, gold slip, and sheet glass, at the low price of 8s. each, in quantities of not less than half a dozen. Larger sizes in proportion. Every description of Picture-frame made to order; all frames securely packed for conveyance to any part of the world. Post-office orders to be made payable to John Machin, 43, Angel-street, Strand.—Manufactory, Manchester

OCEAN and CONTINENTAL PARCELS DELIVERY COMPANY, 4, Agar-street, Strand, London; and 60, South Castle-street, Liverpool. Packages forwarded to all parts of the World

CAMDEN HOUSE SCHOOL, BRIGHTON. Principal, Mr. WILLIAM GLIDING.—As there were no Vacancies, and constant applications were received, Mr. GLIDING has, at a considerable outlay, enlarged the premises. The next quarter commences Wednesday, March 25.

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN in the country is willing to ADOPT one or more CHILDREN, on receiving an equivalent. Address, J. C. Clarkson, 21, George-square, Edinburgh.

HANWELL COLLEGE SCHOOL.—PARENTS and GUARDIANS desirous of selecting a SCHOOL near London, in a remarkably healthy situation, combining the advantages of a private establishment with religious instruction, moral and physical training, and domestic care, on fair and liberal terms, may obtain a prospectus on application to the Rev. J. Rowsell, D.D., Principal, Hanwell College, Middlesex. The Term divides on the 1st of March

TO PARENTS and GUARDIANS.—An Experimental CHEMIST and SCIENTIFIC and OPTICAL INSTRUMENT MANUFACTURER at the West End, can meet with a YOUTH for a respectable home and good education, as an ARTICLED PUPIL. The advantages offered being unusual, a liberal premium will be required.—Address, X. Y. Z., Post-office, Regent-street, W.

GENEALOGICAL and HISTORICAL SOCIETY of GREAT BRITAIN, 18, Chandos-street, St. James's-square.
This Society was founded in 1853, by several Noblemen and Gentlemen, to Promote the Study of Genealogy and Historical Research, and for the Elucidation and Compilation of Family History, Lineage, and Biography, and to Authenticate and Illustrate the same
By order of Council,
HYCROFT REEVE, Secretary.

ARMS, CRESTS, &c.—Gold Medal for Engraving.—CHEST OF DRAWERS, 21 in. wide, 21 in. deep, 12 in. high, 4 drawers, 42s. Arms, crest, and motto, 24s.; book-plate, 25s. Price-list by post.—T. MORING, Engraver and Heraldic Artist to the Queen, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

SOLID GOLD 18 carat, Hall-marked, Oval, Scarf or Bloodstone RING, engraved with CREST, Two Guineas, or Shield-shaped, 45 Shillings: Seals Desk Seals, Pencil-cases, &c.—T. MORING, 44, High Holborn, W.C.

ARMS, CRESTS, &c.—No Charge for Search. Correct Sketch and description, 2s. 6d.; in colour, 5s. Monumental brasses, seals, dies, and diplomas Arms in Mediæval and modern styles. Lozenges and crest-die, one guinea.—T. MORING, Middlesex Heraldic Office, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send to the HERALDIC OFFICE Name and County. No Fee for Search. Sketch, 5s. 6d., or Stamps. H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn

LINCOLN'S INN HERALDIC OFFICE, First and only Established office in London, and during a series of years have Furnished, Sketched, cost-free, Arms of most of the Nobility and Gentry.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn. GRANTS of ARMS Furnished, Copied, &c

STUDIO and LIBRARY, Open from Ten to Four Daily, MONUMENTAL BRASSES, Ecclesiastic Seals, Hatchments, &c. Arms Painted and Quartered.
H. SALT, Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

GENTLEMEN having SKETCHES, give them to persons who do not engrave them by the Laws of Heraldry; therefore the Heraldic Office now executes them. Book-plate Arms, 12s.; Crest on Seals, 5s. 6d.
H. SALT, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

HERALDIC SIGNET CREST RING.—Solid fine Gold, Bloodstone, Onyx, or Cornelian, with Crest Engraved, £1 1s.; or Post-office Order Presentation Seals, &c.—H. SALT, Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn

HERALDIC ENGRAVING.—Book Plate, with Arms, 7s. 6d. Crest on Seal or Ring, 5s. 6d.; on Die, 8s. Arms quartered and painted. Lower floor with Crest Die, 15s. Carriage-free for stamps. Documentary and Official Seals. Mr. CULLETON, Royal Heraldic Office, 2, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane). Six heraldic engravers permanently employed.

ROYAL HERALDIC OFFICE and GENEALOGICAL INSTITUTION for GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND 2, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane). Lineage, Pedigrees Traced from Authentic Manuscripts, Monastic Records, Domesday Books, &c. Mr. CULLETON's works at the British Museum, fee, 5s. Family Arms Found free of charge. Sketch 2s.; in Colours, 3s. 6d. or stamps. Armorial Bearings registered at the College of Arms (the only legal office in London). The Heraldic Studio and Library open from 11 to 4. Mr CULLETON, Genealogist.

GREAT EXHIBITION of PLANTS, 64, New Bond-street, London, and 17, Princes-street, Manchester, from the establishment of J. MARTIN. PILS, et GIE. from Paris, exhibit a large and rich collection of the most interesting Plants of Africa, from the mountains Spine du Monde and de la Lune: a great variety of the finest and newest Roses, Fruit-bearing Trees, with a specimen of natural fruit of a prodigious size, especially Pears, weighing five and six pounds, Amary lis, Ladies, and Bulbs of the rarest flowers. 25 Varieties of Tuberous Rooted Asparagus from Oran, in root; and, in short, the newest and most remarkable Vegetables of every kind

SEEDS.—BUTLER and McCULLOCH'S Descriptive CATALOGUE of VEGETABLE and FLOWER SEEDS, with valuable Treatises on their Culture, intended to assist Amateurs in selecting their Seeds and cultivating their own Gardens To be had on application, or free by post, fourth-row, or Strand side opposite Southampton street), Covent-garden Market, London

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS for early sowing, post-free, at the annexed prices.—100 fine Hardy Annuals, 5s.; 50 ditto, 3s.; 36 ditto, 2s. 6d.; 12 ditto, 1s. 2d Catalogues with sample packet, 2s.—From WILLIAM KNIGHT, Florist, 67, High-street, Battle, Sussex

PALMERSTON SAUCE.—This extraordinary piquant and delicious condiment is acknowledged by epicures to possess a peculiar zest, entirely unknown in any other preparation now in use for Fish, Flesh, Fowl, &c., &c. Sole proprietor, W. O. CAMERON, 9, Cannonville-street, City. Sold retail throughout Europe by all respectable oilmen, grocers, &c.

THE CONTINENTAL WINE COMPANY, Birchin-lane, Cornhill, continue to supply their ALTO DOURO PORTS at 42s. per dozen. Pale or Gold Sherry, at 30s. and 36s. Country orders must contain a remittance

GEOLOGY and MINERALOGY.—Elementary Collections, to facilitate the study of this interesting Science, can be had from Two Guineas to One Hundred; also single specimens, of J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, London.

ETRUSCAN VASES, MISCELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, and CURIOSITIES.—A Catalogue of, with prices affixed, may be had gratis.—Apply (inclosing two stamps for postage) to W. S. LINCOLN and SON, Caxton House, 128, Blackfriars-road, London.

MICROSCOPES.—J. AMADIO'S BOTANICAL MICROSCOPES, packed in mahogany case, with three Powers, Condenser, Pincers, and two Slides, will show the Animalcule in water Price 10s. 6d. Address JOSEPH AMADIO, 7, Throgmorton-street. A large assortment of Achromatic Microscopes.

STEREOSCOPES and STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES at SPENCER, BROWNING, and CO.'s.—Hand Stereoscopes, 6d. each; Views, from 4s. 6d. per dozen. Great Novelty. Swiss and other Views mounted as Transparencies, and exhibiting the effects of Sunrise, Moonlight, &c.; price 1s. 6d. each, only at Spencer, Browning, and Co.'s, 111, Minories, E. The trade supplied.

THE PEN SUPERSEDED.—MARKING LINEN.—The most easy, permanent, and best method of marking all kinds of linen, silk, or books, is with the PATENT ELECTRO-SILVER PLATES. Any person can use them. Initial plate, 1s.; name plate, 2s.; set of moveable numbers, 2s.; street, 2s.; with directions, sent post-free for stamps. Movable alphabets, and stamps with shifting dates.—T. CULLETON, Patentee, Heraldic Engraver to the Queen, 2, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane), W. C.—No travellers employed.

Next week we shall Illustrate the New Great Western Docks, at Plymouth; the Opening of the Barnsley Railway; the site of the Buried City of Brahmunabad; and the Persian Expedition, from sketches by an officer engaged.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1857.

It is an old complaint that Royal Speeches in England are vapid and unmeaning. It is, however, a sufficient answer to the objection, that they are intended to be so. But no one can allege these faults against the Speech which the Emperor of the French has just addressed to the Corps Legislatif. While a Queen's Speech in this country takes care to avoid the language of controversy, steers clear of philosophy, is guiltless of eloquence, and never ventures upon anything so daring and so unusual as a flight of poetic diction,—that of the French Emperor is as controversial, philosophic, eloquent, and poetical, as an oration at the tribune of the late Chamber of Deputies, and not only details facts, but argues principles.

Its statements of fact will be gratifying to Englishmen as well as to Frenchmen. The more France prospers the more will Great Britain rejoice; and the more stable the form of government, and the satisfaction of the French people, the more enduring will be the alliance between the two nations. The allusions of the Emperor to foreign affairs are slight, but emphatic. His Majesty records the final signature of peace with Russia; expresses hopes of the favourable solution of the dispute between the King of Prussia and Switzerland—which, if the King of Prussia be of sane mind, he will hasten to realise; announces the approaching evacuation of the Grecian territories by the British and French forces; and declares that the intervention in Naples was dictated in the interests of humanity and civilisation; and then, taking the peace of Europe as a thing settled, passes to the consideration of the domestic politics of his Empire.

In this part of his Speech his Majesty makes some strange declarations. We cannot tell what effect they will have in France, but in this country we are confident that they will excite surprise. Not that any one will blame or harshly criticise their spirit; for the Speech is characterised by benevolence and good feeling. But many will question the soundness of the doctrine and the correctness of the philosophy which are enunciated with such authority, and we may add with such novelty. "Civilisation," says the Emperor "has for its objects the moral improvement and material welfare of the greatest number of people." Jeremy Bentham said long ago that this ought to be the object of civilisation; but between that which ought to be and that which is in the matter of government there is a wide difference. Civilisation is yet far from having attained so high an elevation of purpose; and in France, as well as in Great Britain, the rule of civilisation, so far from being the happiness of the community, is each man for himself, and God for us all;—or, in other words, the principle of individualisation, kept within bounds by the strong arm of the law, of custom, and of religion, lest it should degenerate into anarchy.

But the most remarkable passage of the Speech is that in which the Emperor declares that "Credit is an inexhaustible source of wealth," and that it is the duty of the Government to make the most of it. M. Mirès, the Messrs. Pereire, the Count de Morny, and M. Fould may be of this opinion and act upon the principle to their own enrichment, but it is strange to see such a doctrine maintained by the chief of a State. As if dubious of the truth of the dictum, immediately after he had given it utterance, the Emperor went on to say that as speculation, when carried to excess, ruined many an individual, it became necessary, "without staying its progress, to come to the aid of those who could not follow its accelerated march; to stimulate the energies of one class, to moderate those of another; and to aliment the activity of that breathless, restless, and clamorous society which, in France, expects everything from the Government; but which it is a duty to confine within the bounds of practicability and the calculations of reason." But who taught the French people this fatal habit of relying upon the Government for everything, if it were not the Emperor himself? And why, instead of combating this unhappy propensity, does not the Emperor endeavour to make the people rely upon themselves? Why does he not imitate the example of the English Government, which leaves speculation free, and takes no other note of it than to punish the fraudulent? When the State, in the person of one man, attempts so herculean a task as the stimulation or the moderation of enterprise, the direction of speculation, and the alimentation of a "breathless, restless, and clamorous society," it attempts too much for safety. Such a Government is a Government for fair weather only; and in the day of perplexity, distress, and storm, will be held responsible for the non-fulfilment of the impossible duties which it blindly undertook to perform; will be judged by its own words, and condemned out of its own mouth for disasters which it was powerless either to prevent or to modify. The State disease of France is too much government. It is a determination of blood to the head, and threatens apoplexy. To attempt to secure the greatest happiness of the greatest number by means like these—to move men as if they were pawns upon a chess-board—to take no account of the reason and of the passions of humanity, and their free action upon the destinies of each individual—to regulate the State as if it were a steam-engine, and the Emperor the engineer, is to undertake a task beyond the power of the greatest hero, the greatest philosopher, and the greatest sage, that ever did or ever will exist. Yet the Emperor seems to have no misgivings; and the world will admire his courage, if it doubt his wisdom. In the same lofty spirit of self-reliance he speaks of the inundations which last year afflicted such large districts of his Empire; and, having announced that he has every encouragement to hope that science will be so far enabled to control nature as to prevent the recurrence of such calamities, declares "that it is with him a point of honour that in France the rivers shall be made to return—like Revolutions—to their channels, no more to leave them." It strikes us that a boast like this is somewhat presumptuous. The strongest dykes and dams of great rivers may give way in extraordinary floods; and Revolution may burst out suddenly where no one expected it. Who among the Sovereigns of Europe seemed so strong as Louis Philippe? Yet, where is his dynasty? We most cordially hope that the throne and dynasty of Napoleon III. may long endure; and we ground our hope upon the belief that the Emperor is very much wiser than the Speech which he has made, and that in proportion as his power becomes more firmly fixed he will relax the severity of his present system, and allow some little scope and room for the intelligence of his people.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

THE Board of Trade tables for 1856 were delayed till Thursday, when they were published in order to make up the landing accounts and include all cargoes properly appertaining to the year. They are now tolerably complete, and give us details of the Customs and Excise duties for the year, as well as the usual statements of the imports and exports. As the most significant and concise expression of the national prosperity, we will mention first the value of the British manufactures and produce exported in 1856, £115,890,857, against £95,688,085 in 1855, an increase in 1856 of £20,202,772. So the total shipping entered inwards and outwards engaged in the foreign trade was, in 1856, 17,904,216 tons; in 1855, 15,367,132 tons. In like manner the tonnage of the coasting trade was 26,074,527 in 1856, and 25,274,477 in 1855. The imports supply no such general test of the total increase in the year; but wheat, flour, and corn of all kinds, with all the materials of manufacture (such as cotton, flax, silk, wool, &c.), were in excess in 1856; though such was the activity of our industry that at the end of the year the stocks of these articles were small and the prices rising. Of some articles of consumption, as coffee, the supply has been less; of others, as sugar, it has been greater, though the consumption—showing the effect of high prices and high duties—has been less. On the whole, however, there was generally an increase in the imports, though not equal to the large increase on the exports.

The total net receipts of Customs duties in the year was £23,745,586; in 1855, £22,335,063. Of the former sum, £488,724 was levied by the 1s. duty on grain and meal; £124,458 on butter; and £49,492 on cheese: making a sum of £662,813 levied on the general food of the people—which has the additional disadvantage of raising the price to the consumer, at least equal to the duty, of all that is grown or made at home. On coffee, £586,764; on sugar of all kinds, £5,648,632; on tea, £5,538,241; and on tobacco, £5,209,824 were levied, so that the ordinary enjoyments of the bulk of the people contribute the largest proportion to the Customs duties. The amount of the Excise duties is not given, but only the quantities of the articles excised. Malt pays a duty of 2s. a bushel and 5 per cent; and the quantity of malt brought to charge was 36,970,427 bushels in 1856; in 1855, 33,882,006 bushels. Paper pays a duty of 1½d. per lb., and 5 per cent, and the quantity of paper brought to charge was, in 1856, 172,917,596 lb.; in 1855, 155,657,843 lb. These specimens will suffice to show how great was our trade, and how great and increasing was the industry of the people, in 1856.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE PERSIAN WAR.—THE NEGOTIATIONS AT PARIS.

The Teheran Gazette of the 8th January publishes a proclamation of the Shah, announcing the capture of Bushire, and stating his intention of taking the most energetic measures to repel the invasion of the English. It at the same time time expresses the hope of an amicable settlement.

The Paris Correspondent of the Times, in yesterday's second edition, says

The Orientals, as many know to their cost, are never very expeditious in their diplomacy, and I doubt much whether Feroukh Khan is an exception. The basis of the pending negotiations may be modified by the last news from Teheran; but, notwithstanding the delay, it is hoped that an arrangement is still within the limits of probability. Notwithstanding the Persian Envoy just expressed, I give you the following paragraph from the Constitutionnel evening paper:—"Several journals have announced that the Anglo-Persian difference is in a fair course of arrangement. We believe we may announce, according to our private information, that the principal difficulties are at present arranged, and that an understanding has been come to on both sides on the conditions on which peace is to be re-established. We expect in a few days to know the terms of the definitive arrangement, to the conclusion of which the stay of Ferouk Khan at Paris has not been foreign."

THE UNITED STATES.

The United States mail steam-ship Arago arrived in Cowes Roads yesterday (Friday) morning, on her way from New York to Havre, bringing advices to the 7th inst., three days later than those received at Liverpool by the Persia.

The proceedings in the Legislature were dull and uninteresting. The Atlantic Submarine Telegraph Bill being fire in the House, but there appeared no doubt of its passing ultimately.

The National Theatre at Washington was destroyed by fire in the afternoon of the 6th, and only the bare walls remained. News from various ports state that the ice is disappearing and the rivers gradually rising. Official accounts from the Philippine Islands state that 15,000 houses were destroyed by a hurricane. Considerable damage was also done at Manilla.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 5.—The New Orleans papers of Thursday and Friday last are received. The only news they contain is a confirmation of accounts of the invasion of Tampico by Garcia, and the possible seizure at the house of the British Consul of 240,000 dollars belonging to foreign merchants.

DESTRUCTION OF A LACE FACTORY AT NOTTINGHAM.—On Thursday the lace factory of Mr. George Berry, in Bent's-lane, Nottingham, was destroyed by fire. There were thirty-one lace machines, all of which are destroyed or rendered useless. They were of the newest make with all the modern improvements, principally used in the manufacture of plain nets. The damage is estimated at between £20,000 and £30,000.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

COLLEGE OF DENTISTS OF ENGLAND.—The College of Dentists of England held their "inaugural meeting," at Hanover-square Rooms, on Saturday evening, when six hundred gentlemen, including many of the leading members of the medical profession, assembled to partake of tea and coffee, and listen to a lecture on the importance of the dental art and the necessity of associating all the dentists of England. The president, Mr. Robinson, having delivered an oration, and promised a series of lectures, the company then surveyed the dental phenomena on the tables. Several "charming" specimens of carnes and a beautiful series of diagrams with microscopic preparations excited a good deal of attention. Altogether this must be considered as a most successful inauguration of the Dental College.

ROYAL BRITISH BANK.—The application to the Court of Chancery for leave to appeal to the House of Lords against the adjudication of bankruptcy in this ill-fated corporation has not been successful. Mr. Marten, the original petitioner, instructed Messrs. Harrison and Lewis to take the necessary steps to get the appeal heard this Session; the point raised being the validity of the act of bankruptcy. On Wednesday last the Judges decided to refuse the application on the ground that it had not been made in time. Thursday was appointed, by adjournment, for the last examination of those directors who represented the bank under the bankruptcy. Very few persons were present, as it was well known that, as no account had been filed, the proceedings would be pro formâ, and that a further adjournment must take place. Mr. Linklater applied for an adjournment, and expressed a hope that, after the decision of the Lords Justices on Wednesday, refusing to grant an appeal against their judgment confirming the adjudication in bankruptcy, further litigation would end; and he expressed his belief that, before next meeting in fact, in a few days—a reasonable and satisfactory compromise would be effected between the shareholders and other parties interested, so as to prevent any further harassing proceedings. Mr. Lawrance expressed the same hope and belief; and it was agreed that the meeting should be adjourned till the 30th April next, before which time the accounts would be filed. A discussion arose with respect to a debt which had been assigned since the bankruptcy, but as all the parties were not before the Court, the case was adjourned. Mr. Linklater said, as the assignees were the parties interested in the matter, it was only a question who were entitled to the dividend

LONDON AND MIDDLESEX ARCHÆOLOGICAL SOCIETY.—A general meeting of this society was held on Wednesday evening, in the Sufficient Gallery; the Very Rev. the Dean of Westminster in the chair. Mr. Edward Griffiths read a paper on "Middlesex at the time of the Domesday Survey," in which he pointed out the modes of tenure, and enumerated the principal holders of land which figure in that venerable record. The Rev. Thomas Hugo, F.S.A., followed with the first of a series of papers entitled "Walks in the City," alluding to the demolitions and alterations now in progress throughout the City, which made it peculiarly desirable that a record should exist of these objects of archæological or artistic interest which were thus daily disappearing. In the ward of Bishopsgate every ancient house worthy of notice was reported on and delineated. Many of them were attributable to Inigo Jones and Sir Christopher Wren; and numerous fronts, doorways, staircases, ceilings, and chimneypieces remained in all their beauty, and were invaluable as the best of all models for the houses of our own day. The third and last paper was the second of a series on the "Monumental Brasses of London and Middlesex," by the Rev. C. Boutell.

JUVENILE VAGRANCY.—On Monday evening a general meeting of the joint members of the Law Amendment Society and the National Reformatory Union was held at No. 3, Waterloo-place, to consider the bill recently brought before Parliament for the suppression of juvenile vagrancy. Lord Brougham presided; and among others present were the Bishop of London, Sir Stafford Northcote, M.P., Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P., the Lord Mayor, the Hon. Mr. Liddell, M.P., the Rev. Sidney Turner; and a deputation was also present from the Birmingham Educational Association. The Bishop of London moved "That in the opinion of this meeting it is desirable that a measure for the suppression of juvenile vagrancy, which is a fertile source of crime, should be enacted." The Lord Mayor seconded the motion. He suggested that if the Government would allow some of the old men-of-war ships to be used as reformatory schools they would be admirably adapted to carrying out the object in view. The resolution was carried unanimously. Considerable discussion took place on the details of the measure and the suggestion contained in the report of the committee, in which the Chairman, Lord R. Cecil, Sir S. Northcote, the Rev. S. Turner, Mr. Elliott, Mr. D. Power, Mr. A. Hill, Mr. Anderton, and others took part. Some modifications in the details of the bill (which appeared to meet the general support of the meeting) were then made by Sir S. Northcote, and the proceedings were brought to a close.

HIS Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury preached a sermon on Sunday last, at the Church of St. Augustine and St. Faith, on behalf of the City of London Hospital for Diseases of the Chest, Victoria-park, which resulted in adding the sum of £27 8s. 7d. to the funds of this excellent charity.

ROYAL LONDON OPHTHALMIC HOSPITAL.—The annual general meeting of the governors of this charity was held at the hospital on Monday last; Mr. Labouchere in the chair. The report showed that the recent enlargement and improvement of the hospital, which have been effected at a cost of nearly £2500, had been met by special and other recent subscriptions; and that the number of admissions during the past year was 10,685, being an increase of 568 patients during the year LIFE-BOATS FOR THE COAST.—The National Life-boat Institution, for the preservation of life from shipwreck, has decided to place life-boats on every point on the coast where it can be shown—first, that one is wanted, in consequence of the frequency of wrecks in the locality; secondly, that an efficient crew can be found to man the boat; thirdly, that some local contributions will be raised, to assist to pay for the creation of the boat-house, and the future maintenance of the establishment. The cost of a life-boat establishment, including the transporting carriage, and boat-house, is between £200 and £400. The first and most important step has been secured by this institution, viz.—a safe and powerful lifeboat. The next step now is to build a sufficient number of such boats, place them where required, and provide for their supervision and maintenance. In the accomplishment of a work of such benevolence and national importance the Royal National Life-boat Institution need have no misgiving as to funds being forthcoming.

MR. SERJEANT CHANNELL was sworn in one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the room of the late Sir J. Alderson, on Saturday last, at the Privy Council Office, before the Lord Chancellor.

DISSOLUTION OF THE STEPNEY UNION.—On Wednesday last Mr. Southwell, the vestry clerk of the hamlet of Mile-end Old Town, containing 65,000 inhabitants, received an official letter from the Central Poor-law Board giving orders for the separation of the hamlet from the Stepney Union. The separation is to take effect on Lady-day next, and a board of guardians, to consist of eighteen persons, are to be elected on the 14th of March.

MEETING OF UNEMPLOYED WORKMEN IN SMITHFIELD.—On Tuesday afternoon several thousand persons assembled in the north-east corner of Smithfield, for the purpose of hearing an address from Mr Ernest Jones. Mr. Jones spoke upwards of an hour upon the question of the Government, the aristocracy, and our system of legislation generally, dwelling at the same time on the excellence of the people's charter and the advantages of home colonisation. At half-past two the vast meeting quietly dispersed.

THE DOUBLE MURDER AT WALWORTH.—On Wednesday morning Thomas Fuller Bacon, and Martha Bacon, his wife, were once more brought from Horsemonger-lane Gaol to Lambeth Police Court. When the examination was about to commence, Mr. Atter received from the Waterloo station the following telegraphic communication, forwarded from Stamford, "Arsenic is found by Dr. Taylor." On reading the document Mr. Atter left his seat, approached the dock, and had some private communication with his client, and related to him the fact of the message. The telegraphic message was handed to the chief clerk, who placed it before the magistrate. Mr. Elliott, after reading it, addressing Inspector Young, asked if he had any more evidence to offer against the prisoners, and Mr. Young replied that he had not. Mr. Elliott then asked the professional gentlemen engaged in the case if they had anything to offer to the Court, and both answered in the negative. Mr. Elliott then said that he had come to the determination of sending both the prisoners for trial. A question would arise respecting the state of mind of the female prisoner, and it would be the province of the jury to pronounce an opinion upon it. The prisoners were then committed for trial. The adjourned inquest at Stamford on the body of the prisoner's mother was brought to a close on Wednesday, when the jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against Bacon. It appears that the wretched man had been tempted to commit the crime by a desire to obtain possession of some property which his mother possessed. Some circumstances have come to the knowledge of the police at Stamford which have induced the authorities there to order the exhumation of the body of Nathaniel Bacon, the father. It is stated that Mr. Bacon, sen., was possessed of house property in Stamford to the extent of about £160 per annum, a portion of which would immediately revert to his son, Thomas Fuller Bacon, and the remainder to his wife for life. Nathaniel Bacon, the father, died with his son on the 13th of October, 1854—was taken ill, seized with cramps, spasms, and vomiting; died on the 17th; and was interred in Great Casterton Churchyard

THE WAR WITH CHINA.—A meeting was held at the British Institution, City-road, on Monday night, to consider the war with China, and to protest against a standing army. Resolutions to the effect that the bombardment of Canton and the expedition to Persia were iniquitous and unnecessary were carried, and a petition to the House of Commons embodying the resolution, was agreed to.

LAW REFORM.—Baron Martin has been added to the Royal Commission for Inquiry into the Statute and Common Law Courts and the Courts of ASSIZE, in the room of Baron Alderson, deceased. The Commissioners meet every Saturday, under the presidency of Chief Justice Lord Campbell, to hear evidence, and to decide upon the subject of their labours. Although they have come to no decision respecting the number of judges in the Common Law Courts, it is understood that the present judicial staff cannot be safely reduced. The business of the Assizes is much more likely to be increased than diminished. In fact, we are likely to have a general gaol delivery three times a year. This view is fortified by the appointment of a new Baron of the Exchequer, after it had been found that the court was full of business, and that it was not expedient to send a commissioner on circuit, instead of a judge, if it could be avoided in time. Mr. Serjeant Channell has, therefore, been appointed the new Judge, instead of being sent on circuit as a commissioner only. The law commission have examined several of the Judges, and are about to examine the authorities and representatives of Leeds, Manchester, Birmingham, &c., who are anxious to have the assizes held in those places.

THE WESTMINSTER BELLS.—The largest of the four quarter bells for the Westminster clock was cast last week at Norton, near Stockton, the birthplace of the great bell. It is pronounced to be of the attended note, B, a fifth above the great bell, and an octave below the bell which was lately cast of similar metal by Messrs. Warner from the same pattern, but of half the size and one-eighth of the weight, for the east-iron clock, with the Westminster clock escapement, made by Mr. Dent, of the Strand, for the Queen at Balmoral. The diameter of this bell is six feet exactly, and its weight will be a little under four tons; it will therefore rank next to the great clock bells of Lincoln, St. Paul's, and Exeter, and above those of Canterbury and Gloucester, and considerably above the tenor bells of the largest peals in England -Exeter, St. Mary-le-Bow, and York Minster.

ORGAN PERFORMANCE.—On Monday evening last, at Messrs. Bishop and Starr's factory, Lisson-grove, Mr J. T. Cooper performed on an organ which those celebrated builders have just completed for the exhibition at Hobart Town, Van Diemen's Land. The organ is an excellent specimen, and was admirably exhibited by the player. The selection of pieces performed was from the great masters, Handel, Mozart, Bach, &c., and received hearty applause from a numerous audience.

ROYAL FREE HOSPITAL, GRAY'S-INN-ROAD.—The number of patients relieved at this hospital during the week ending on the 14th inst. was 2361, of which 630 were new cases.

EDUCATION.—Mr. N. F. Zaba had on Wednesday the honour of an audience of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, in order to explain the arrangement of his historical chart, which not only facilitates the study of universal history, but also strengthens the memory. His Royal Highness took a great interest in examining the details of the subject, and expressed his conviction of its practical utility.

DESTRUCTION BY FIRE OF THE CHERRY-TREE TAVERN.—On Tuesday morning, shortly before two o'clock, a fire broke out on the premises of Mr. H. A. Goff, the Old Cherry-Tree Tavern, Kingsland. The inmates, upon jumping out of bed, ran to the stairs, but huge bodies of flame rolled upwards, indicating that all egress by that means was cut off. They therefore ran to the first-floor window. The police-officer told them to remain a few minutes, as the Royal Society's fire-escape was just at hand; but so intense was the heat, and so strong the smoke, that they were nearly suffocated. Mr. H. A. Goff got on the lead, and jumped from the first-floor window. At that moment the fire-escape arrived, with J. Barton, conductor, who immediately ascended the ladder and descended with Miss Goff; he again ascended, and rescued Miss Emma Goff and the servant girl; and afterwards succeeded in saving a soldier and his wife. But for the perseverance of Barton several persons must have been suffocated or burnt to death. The fire was not subdued until the premises were burnt down and the adjoining houses considerably damaged.

WEST KENT ELECTION.—On Thursday Mr. Martin was elected for West Kent by a considerable majority over his opponent, Sir W. Liddell.

COOMBE RAGGED SCHOOLS, DUBLIN.—The new ragged schools for the Coombe district were opened on the 11th inst., in the presence of a large assemblage of ladies and gentlemen, subscribers to, and friends of, the institution, in the removed Dublin Female Orphan Society Hall, Cork-row. The new home contains four school rooms, each calculated to accommodate 150 children; and school business was commenced on the 9th inst., when 100 infants, 80 girls, and 130 boys attended. At the formal opening on the 11th about 300 children, most of them clothed in garments "indescribably ragged," were regaled with a wholesome meal. The Rev. Mr MacCarthy gave out a great many hymns; and between the parts of the feasts the Rev. A. Dallas briefly addressed the assemblage, alluding to the advantages of the institution, the wonderful progress they had made, and the hopes which they entertained. He announced that that morning an anonymous person had sent him £50 in aid of the funds. The children were, before breaking up, questioned on various subjects, but principally upon their acquaintance with Scripture, by the Rev. Mr. MacCarthy, and the answering was highly creditable to the school.

BRITISH INSTITUTION.

[SECOND AND CONCLUDING NOTICE.]

HAVING reviewed the works of more novel interest in our former notice, we now call attention to a few remaining paintings which possess equal merit in degree though perhaps not in kind.

Mr. Dickse must have been in the humour of Sterne when he conceived the subject of his picture entitled "A Little Scarecrow" (515). It is as oddly misleading and mystifying in title, as it is delightfully simple and unaffected in treatment. Such a charming little gem of rusticity might have been set in an idyl of Theocritus, a description by Thomson, or a stanza by Wordsworth. Lest our readers are somewhat incredulous, however, we will at once inform them that the "Scarecrow" is not a figure with a crownless hat and its coat buttoned at the back undergoing the Hindoo torture of holding the arms constantly at right angles with the body—and this, too, after having apparently undergone the amputation of both legs; nor is it another of these unfortunates with a red coat which our landscape-painters sometimes introduce to force their greens; nor is it any little object so ill favoured as to be figuratively a "scarecrow." It is simply a chubby little—but our Engraving on the next page will afford the best explanation.

Mr. Jackson, judging from his two contributions, is a great lover of Nature in all her moods. In the first we have the tender ineffable slumber of the infant; in the second the wrath and madness of a giant. "Ruins of Dunstanborough Castle—A Calm Evening" (162) is indescribably quiet and gentle. You forget in its gracious influence that it is a mere representation of material facts. As you trace the snowy fringes of those slowly-undulating waves scarcely breaking along the beach you almost listen for their lisping hush, and fancy each dying cadence Nature's evening lullaby. The night-mist rising on the sea behind the cliff, where the sun's influence has been longest absent, is also nicely observed. In startling contrast to this picture is "Bamborough Castle" (330). Here, though the extreme paroxysm is past, the fury of the elements is still terrific, and the wreck on the shore is not the only one of many victims, for the grand sweeping of the swell tells, in its accumulated volume, of long-continued violence. Note, also, what wind and motion there are in the rack of the sky—how the under surfaces of the clouds are torn and rent, and how ghastly is the lurid light beyond!

Mr. T. Danby possesses the happy art of catching stray rays of light and floating waifs of cloud. But, in this he may be rivalled by the photographer. No camera, however, could entrap the delicate sunny tints which he has magically wooed from their ethereal home. In this the artist is the greater enchanter, that with a wave and a stroke of his pencil-wand he can command and enslave not merely the sunbeam but the rainbow. Look, for example at "The Evening Drink in a Mountain Lake" (65). How cunningly the artist has caught the sunset glow reflected from the cloud overhead, and the dusky gold refraction from the water at our feet;—not forgetting to notice also the back of the ripple, where the golden light playfully glances through the translucent medium, and, by borrowing its colour, and blending with the reflected azure of the opposite portion of the sky, is changed into liquid emerald. "Summer Evening" (364) is not quite so happy. The monotonous character of the light and shade and colour, contributes certainly to convey the impression of the peaceful stillness of the hour; but we contend that, without the notes of the nightingale, the scene is rather heavy and uninteresting. Mr. Danby's confrères will, however, appreciate the effect of variety given to the foreground foliage; for where the light is so subdued, the degrees of light and shade and colour—or, as some critics would have it, the chromatic scale and the compass of chiaroscuro—are of course greatly limited.

"A Tranquil Stream in Autumn, North Wales" (173), by Mr. Branwhite, is extremely rich in its hues and successful in its effects; though, in all this general splendour, the artist has somewhat forgotten to pay attention to the accuracy and finish of his detail. The glowing evening rays, breaking over the tops of the trees, streaming through a cleft in the overhanging rock, and pouring their delicate roseate tints full on the opposite hills, are, nevertheless, admirably-studied effects.

Mr. Herng, in "The Townhall and Marketplace at Orta, Piedmont (188), has done justice to the picturesqueness of the buildings, and rendered the rippling expanse of the lovely Lago with rare felicity. "The Guidecca, Venice" (302), is not so pure and bright in colour as usual; but some of this is due, no doubt, to the proximity of Miss Mutrie's flaming cactus.

"A Cattle-Shed" (193), by Mr. Sidney Cooper, A.R.A., is a delightfully-unpretending little picture of animal life. Its gradations of negative colour are very nicely managed.

Mr. H. Boddington, in "A Summer Morning on the Thames" (289), takes us out through the "field dew consecrate" to join in the orisons nature seems to pay in the "silence of early light" to her great Creator. The primrose-light of the stainless morning sky is very beautiful. There is some good painting of foliage in the other picture by this artist (No. 247)—as, for example, in the foreground birch.

"A Contemplative Youth" (281), by Mr. Lucas, is well drawn and honestly painted. We do not, however, exactly admire the enamel surface of the face. The hands are extremely well modelled, and, which is more uncommon, they seem part of the individual, and carry out the sentiment in their character. They are what D'Arpentigny calls the psychical type of hand.

"Morning after a Storm off the Corbiere Rocks, Jersey" (343), by Mr. Wilson, is very striking in effect. The sea still rages unrelentingly against the jagged and splintered rocks and lashes itself into foam, like revenge unsatisfied. The burnt sienna of the rocks tells powerfully against the "silver fury" of the sea.

"Caerhûn Low Water" (547), by Mr. Oakes, is one of the most original landscapes in the rooms. All the lefthand portion, including the glassy surface of the flowing water and the beautiful cloud composition, is very admirable, and somewhat reminiscent of Constable.

Mr. G. C. Stanfield (son of Mr. Stanfield, R.A.) makes much progress. He paints with great decision and firmness (rare qualities with English artists), and with a fine feeling for light and atmosphere. A pleasing freshness which we noticed in his less-recent works he is also recovering; witness the little picture, "Kirkstall Abbey, Yorkshire" (270). What truth of light and distinctness there is, too, in No. 202! We greatly admire, likewise, the vigorous and honest painting in "Cochem, on the Moselle" (62); but it has a certain foreign tone which Mr. Stanfield has, perhaps, unconsciously borrowed from Continental art. Too cold a brown (Cologne earth?) pervades the shadows, rendering the tone slightly unpleasant.

There are two amusing pictures by Mr. H. O'Neil having reference to the recent schism in art, styled "Pre-Raphaelitism." They are called "The Two Extremes"—one representing "The Pre-Raphaelite" (486) and the other "The Post-Raphaelite" (483). As the interest arises from professional allusions, many of our readers may thank us if we point out that, in the first picture a conceited-looking young artist is represented painting with infinite labour, as may be seen from the minute specks of colour on his palette, in the style which he imagines was that anterior to the time of Raphael. He has two red-haired models posed, the one appealing to the other. These he is painting from in the most formal, hard manner possible, and giving them the sourest of expressions; and we read in "black letter" on the frame that the subject is to be "Love and Duty." The artist sits on his stool as if doing penance, with his long hair combed down with ascetical straightness. He wears a mediæval mantle, and the back of his studio is covered with a monster fresco. The companion picture is the other "extreme." Here we have the "Post-Raphaelite," or an artist working with the free abandonment of manner which, except when restrained by a theory, follows that mastery of the technical parts of the art which the more modern masters have helped succeeding artists to acquire. Mr. Palette is here dashing away at the portrait of a charming dark-haired girl, and as he sways himself backward and inclines his head on one side, you cannot help sympathising with the evident gusto with which he is giving that bold, yet light-handed, stroke of his brush.

When we announce the subject of a picture as "The Last Scene in the 'Merry Wives of Windsor'" (446), and when we give Mr. G. Cruikshank's name as that of the artist, we may safely leave the rest to the reader's imagination; for that the fun and humour of the scene are cleverly realised by a congenial spirit is quite unnecessary to mention.

We have rarely seen a picture displaying a higher degree of Dutch imitation or more intensity of tone—although obtained by carrying Sir Joshua Reynolds's precept, of painting all the shadows of one colour, too far—than we remarked in "A Letter Requiring an Answer" (539), by Mr. W. C. Thomas. There is, however, a very unfortunate mistake in this somewhat romantic title, or in the choice of the very unromantic face.

We presume from his name that Mr. Calderon is quite at home in the subject of his picture named "Spanish Ballads" (476). There is some unmistakably good drawing and painting in it. The difficult foreshortening of the hands playing the guitar is perfectly mastered.

Two pictures by Mr. Moore, though utterly dissimilar in subject, have each equal merit. The first is "A Monk of Old," (62) with a rubicund nose, and that part of his person very protuberant where he has no doubt put many such a carafe of wine as that before him, which he has partly quaffed. The holy father is now asleep, and very humorous his reverence looks. Mr. Moore's second work is a charming little landscape (No. 115.)

"View in the Environs of Albano" (482), by Mr. Duval, is remarkable for the truth with which the sombre tone and dusk effect of the Campagna is given.

We regret that our limits will not permit us to describe the exquisite little study by Mr. Frost, A.R.A.; or the excellent works of the following artists—viz., Messrs. Helmsley, G. Smith, Joy, Provis, Deane, Underhill, Niemann, Horlor, Cole, Cobbett, Collinson, and Holland.

"THE LITTLE SCARECROW."—PAINTED BY T. DICKSEE.—FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

THE LATE SNOWSTORM IN MASSACHUSETTS.

(From an Artistic Correspondent.)

New Bedford, Jan. 21, 1857.

Not for twenty-five years has this part of the country been visited (and the telegraph our only communication from a distance—sends us similar accounts) by so heavy a snowstorm: a fall of snow, accompanied by a violent wind, drifting the snow so as to cut off all railway communication, and entirely to impede the business of the city, all the shops being closed and the only business doing being what is called "breaking-out" and "making tracks."

The New Bedford Evening Standard informs us that the superintendent of streets has employed a large force, and communication will soon be reopened between different portions of the city. That well-known individual, the "oldest inhabitant," confidentially informs us that the late storm "beats all."

THE RECENT DEEP SNOW IN MASSACHUSETTS: STREET IN NEW BEDFORD.

BASSADORE, THE BRITISH STATION AND DEPOT, IN THE PERSIAN GULF.—FROM A SKETCH BY AN OFFICER OF THE INDIAN NAVY.

THE PERSIAN EXPEDITION.

THE latest despatches from the seat of war come down to the end of December, at which period the troops were intrenched in an encampment about a mile and a half from the fort of Bushire, in the neighbourhood of the wells, two regiments only being quartered in the town. Nothing of importance had occurred; but a force of 12,000 to 15,000 Persians were said to be in the neighbourhood, and contemplating an attack upon our camp. The health of the troops was satisfactory, the men who were at first affected by the brackish water having completely recovered upon the discovery of a sweeter supply. The cold was said to be very severe at night, the thermometer falling as low as 40 deg.; while in the day the heat was moderate, the range never exceeding 83 deg. The troops appear to have been suffering considerable hardship from the camp being two miles distant from the shore, and all supplies having to be brought that distance by the men, through a loose sandy soil like that of Sinde. Provisions were very dear, but an improvement was beginning to manifest itself by an increase in the number of native dealers.

The following letter, dated Bushire, Dec. 20, gives a few details relating to the expedition:—

Since my last nothing in the shape of warfare has taken place. The troops are encamped about a mile and a half from the port of Bushire. A bazaar has been established at the foot of the Three-gun Battery. The prices are exorbitant. Mutton, two annas per lb., bread, small loaves of about six inches long, four broad, and say two inches high (very badly baked) are sold at six the rupee; milk at five annas per bottle. Fruit is plentiful, such as oranges, limons, &c., but dear; there are some pears to be found, but the sum asked is rather crisp. There is, however, an evident decline in the value of some articles, such as flour, sold at four annas the cutchaseer, can now be procured at sixteen and eighteen seers the rupee, and there is every probability of the prices still declining to a reasonable standard, as dealers in edibles are coming in daily. But carriage is not to be had for love or money; so that each corps has to supply half its strength every day for fatigue duty, and the landing of provisions and camp equipage is found a very slow and wearisome task. In the first place, the ships' boats, when loaded, and their loads are mere trifles in comparison to the requirements of the force, are towed by the smaller steamers, Assyrus, Sucke, Lady Falkland, Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, to within a couple of hundred yards of the beach; they are then towed in by the dingies and jolly-boats to about twenty or thirty yards from the water-mark, and the soldiers have then to go up to their armpits in the sea to unload them. From the shore to the camp is a distance, as regards the First Brigade, of nearly two miles, and the consequence is that the men come home with a single load a day wearied and fagged to death. General Stalker has issued a well-merited eulogium on the endurance of the troops from the landing to the surrender, of which I furnish you a copy. The hardships which they still endure scarcely fall short, even now, of that for which his admiration has been excited. One advantage of great moment favours them: the sun in the hottest part of the day does not exceed 80 degrees Fah.

Sales by auction of the prize property have been going on for the last four or five days. The horses and accoutrements of the Persian cavalry have fetched very high prices indeed, and some Persian carpets have sold for prices higher than would be asked for them even in England.

And now the great question at issue is our future destination. By the majority Shiraz is thought to be the direction the army will take, so soon as the reinforcements, for which transports have already left, come up to occupy this place; if so, we must first provide ourselves with mules or other cattle for the transport of tents and provisions, and then the sooner the reinforcements arrive the better, for the force is now in first-rate condition.

BUSHIRE, Dec. 24, 1856.

The trenches on the land face of the camp, which were commenced about the latter end of last week, are nearly complete, working parties of fourteen men per company being sent daily to perform tasks appointed by the engineer officers, and for which they are to receive the usual Government allowance. The men feel a pleasure in working during these cold mornings, and, as the line chosen is not interrupted by hard soil or stone, the job has progressed as favourably as the most sanguine engineer could wish.

An attack on our outlying pickets was reported this morning, and strange rumours of a Persian night attack are gaining ground. We have no fear of surprise as our chain of sentries is formed on well-selected ground, and better men could scarcely have been sent on an expedition.

Our fleet of transports is decreasing daily by the return to Bombay of the merchantmen.

"GENERAL ORDER BY MAJOR-GENERAL STALKER.

"Major-General Stalker requests officers commanding brigades and regiments to be good enough to explain to those under their command the extreme satisfaction he has in recording his sense of the cheerful manner in which the troops composing the force have undergone the many privations they have been subjected to, since their landing at Ras Halilla to the present time. These privations have been of no ordinary description, for with an insufficiency of food they have had to contend, without shelter of any kind, against the inclemency of the weather. All these have been borne with an alacrity and gallantry worthy of the highest praise. In the action of Bushire the troops showed that determined gallantry for which British troops have ever been renowned. The Major-General, in conclusion, tenders his best thanks to the officers and men of all ranks By order, (Signed) "R. R. Younghusband,

KEERTA, IN THE BOLAN PASS.

"Lieut.-Col., Asst. Adjt.-Gen. P. E. Force.

"Bushire, 17th Dec., 1856."

Upon the preceding page we have engraved from a sketch, by an officer of the Indian Navy, a general View of Bussadore, the British depôt in the Persian Gulf. An illustration of the Town and Port, with a few descriptive details, appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for Jan. 10. In the present view, commencing on the left-hand, are the burial-ground, storehouse, native village, billiard-room, and remains of racket-court, the hospital, landing-place, and the residences of the Commodore and the Surgeon.

The vignette upon the preceding page is engraved from a sketch by Captain Malcolm Green, H.E.I.C.S. It shows the small village of Keerta, one of the few halting-places in the celebrated Bolan Pass, on the high-road to Afghanistan and Persia, from India, a locality of considerable interest in our present position with Persia. The Bolan is not so much a "pass" over a lofty range as a continuous succession of ravines and gorges, its length being between fifty-four and fifty-five miles; the highest point on the right of the view is the Camel's Hump Mountain. The pass is very important in a military point of view: it will be recollected that in 1839, the Bengal column of the Army of the Indus spent six days in marching through the pass, entering it on the 16th and leaving it on the 21st of March.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE EARL OF ELLESMERE.

The Right Hon. Francis Egerton, K.G., Earl of Ellesmere, in the county of Salop, Viscount Brackley, of Brackley, in the county of Northampton, Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of Lancashire, Deputy Lieutenant of Sutherlandshire, Rector of King's College, Aberdeen, Vice-President of the Literary Fund Society, a Trustee of the National Gallery, and D.C.L., was the second son of George Granville, first Duke of Sutherland, and Elizabeth Gordon, Marquis of Stafford, and Louisa, his second wife, daughter and eventually coheir of Scrope, first Earl of Bridgewater. The Earl of Ellesmere was born the 1st Jan. 1800. He matriculated at Christ Church, Oxford, as Lord Francis Leveson Gower, sat in the House of Commons for Bletchingly, for the county of Sutherland, and afterwards for South Lancashire. He was made a Lord of the Treasury in 1827, Chief Secretary for Ireland in 1828, and Secretary at War in 1830. In politics he was a Conservative. The Earl, when Lord Francis Leveson Gower, earned considerable reputation as a writer for many years. His translation of Goethe's "Faust" has been deservedly popular. He also gracefully rendered into English verse Victor Hugo's drama of "Hernani," and Alexandre Dumas' tragedy of "Henri III. et son Cour." His Lordship's version of the latter play, which was entitled "Catherine of Cleves," was performed with marked success at Covent-garden Theatre. Charles Kemble and his daughter, Miss Fanny Kemble, acting in it. His Lordship has been the author of various other literary productions. On inheriting, in 1833, the vast property of Francis Egerton, last Duke of Bridgewater, he dropped the surname of Leveson Gower, and assumed the surname and arms of Egerton only. He was himself raised to the Peerage as Earl of Ellesmere and Viscount Brackley, in 1846; which were the names of the titles borne by the famous ancestor, Lord Chancellor Egerton, temp. James I. He had married, the 18th June, 1822, Harriet Catherine, eldest daughter of Charles Greville, Esq., by the Lady Charlotte Cavendish, his wife, Duchess of Portland, sister to the late Duke of Portland, and has had issue five sons and two daughters, all of whom survive him, except his youngest son, Granville, who, when sixteen years of age, was killed at sea, in 1850. The elder of Lord Ellesmere's daughters, Lady Alice Harriet Frederica, is the wife of the Hon. George Byng. The Earl of Ellesmere died on the 18th inst., at Bridgewater House, that magnificent London mansion which he had himself caused to be re-erected. The Earl's demise is the subject of deep and general regret. He possessed great taste and benevolence; he munificently patronised literature, and showed himself ever a liberal friend to science and literature. He was beloved and esteemed both in public and private, and in bore, indeed, the credit of being a British nobleman of true worth and virtue. The Earl has succeeded in his honours by his eldest son, George Granville Francis, now the second Earl of Ellesmere, who was born in 1823; and married, in 1846, Lady Mary Louisa Campbell, youngest daughter of John, present Earl of Cawdor, and has issue two sons. A portrait of the deceased Earl appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, vol. viii., p. 60.

THE DEAN OF CANTERBURY.

The Very Rev. William Rowe Lyall, D.D., Dean of Canterbury, who died on the 16th inst., has, during a long career in the Church, been remarkable for his ability, benevolence, and piety. He held, successively, several livings in different parts of the country, and more especially in Suffolk. He was for more than twenty years Archdeacon of Colchester; he was the first Archdeacon of Maidstone, being so appointed in 1841. He held during a brief period a Canon's stall in Canterbury cathedral. He was private chaplain to Dr. Howley, when Bishop of London: he became Dean of Canterbury in 1845.

Wills and Bequests.—The will of Sir Hugh Richard Hoare, Bart., late of Stourhead, Wilts, has been proved in London: the acting executors are Frederick William Tyrwhitt Drake and John Palmer, Esqrs.: power being reserved to Thomas D. Tyrwhitt Drake, Esq., the nephew. The personalty was sworn under £160,000. The will is a short one, dated 26th April, 1854, and a codicil 11th May, 1855. The will refers to a long list of legacies on detached pieces of paper, headed by a bequest of £10,000 to Lord Augustus Charles Lennox Fitzroy, the other bequests extending in the whole to a sum of £80,000. Also charitable bequests amounting to £10,000 amongst them is £2000 to the Westminster Hospital; to the Church, the Middlesex, and St. George's Hospitals £1000 each; and to other institutions smaller bequests. To each clerk in the banking-house of Hoares, Fleet-street, at the time of his retirement, £100; and to those who have entered since, £50 each. The residue, real and personal, equally between the executors and his niece, Mary Frances Tyrwhitt Drake, and Jane Lubbett. William Mason, Esq. who died recently resided at Hackett's Hotel, but late of Duke-street, Manchester-square, and died possessed of £60,000, has left liberal legacies and annuities to the servants of the late Rowland Jones, Esq., of Bromhill, Carnarvonshire, £60,000. An administration has just been granted to Mrs. Reed, of Stamford-street, the owner of the dilapidated houses at the corner of Stamford-street and Blackfriars-road, and likewise those at the corner of Snow-hill and Skinner-street. The effects sworn to were those of her late mother, and were under £1000.

Divorce and Testamentary Jurisdiction.—The Lord Chancellor's bills on wills and divorce have been printed. The testamentary jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts is proposed to be abolished, and the "Court of Probate," established to exercise the jurisdiction instead, to have the same powers throughout England as the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. One of the Vice-Chancellors will be made judge of the new court, and any other of the equity judges may supply his place in case of absence. An appeal will lie to the Court of Appeal in Chancery, and thence or immediately, without an appealing to the House of Lords, from all orders or decrees of the Court of Probate. In the Court of Probate the rules of practice in common law courts are to be observed, and issues may be directed to common law courts. The second measure, the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Bill, abolishes the existing jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts, and establishes a "Court of Marriage and Divorce," so called. The judges of this court will include the Lord Chancellor, the chief judges of the three common law courts, and the Dean of the Arches, three to be a quorum. The Dean of the Arches (who must always be present, will be called the "Judge Ordinary" of the court, and have full authority to hear and determine all matters, except petitions for dissolving a marriage. The new court is required to act on the "principle" of the old ecclesiastical courts. A wife who thinks herself has deserted her for the space of two years may obtain a divorce a mensa et thoro, and in such cases alimony will be awarded to the husband. Husbands and wives who cannot agree upon either of the two

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

THE Parliamentary proceedings of the week have been less interesting and less bellicose than had been expected from the demonstrations elicited by Sir G. C. Lewis's Budget on the previous Friday. But ample amends are now in progress, and the two champions of Opposition, its Tancred and its Rinaldo (the latter having condoned all injuries and returned to the Crusading camp), will leave nothing to be desired by their friends, except one thing—a majority. Mr. James Sadleir has been unanimously expelled from the House of Commons—the unanimity unluckily depriving members of British Bank notoriety of an opportunity of expressing the virtuous indignation they must feel against fraudulent transactions. Lord Campbell has referred to his new dictum, which renders journalists answerable for the truth, not of their reports, but of the statements which they report, and his Lordship reasserts his law. Lord Brougham has departed for Cannes until after Easter, but has left for the consideration of the Peers some resolutions in favour of the title of married women to their own property and earnings. A Select Committee, much derided by Mr. H. Berkeley, has been obtained by the Government on the subject of Election Bribery; and Sir John Pakington has introduced an educational measure of "permissive" character. Beyond these points the interest of the week mainly attaches to the preparations for the battle of the Budget.

Official contradiction has been given to the statement that the English Admiral had been throwing red-hot shell into Canton, a few shells, sent to disperse marauders, having been magnified into a tremendous bombardment. The report is that the Emperor of China is very desirous of making peace, by yielding all that is demanded by England. The worst news in connection with the whole affair is of a typographical character, and is to the effect that Dr. Williams's printing establishment (including large founts of Chinese type, and copies of the books which have been printed during the twenty-four years the press has been at work) has been completely destroyed. An Englishman of the name of Cowper had been seized and carried off by some Chinese of Whampoa, and Admiral Seymour had apprised the inhabitants that, unless the captive were immediately restored, he would lay Whampoa in ashes. The result of this energetic intimation has yet to be learned. Commissioner Yeh, who is a most cruel and bloodthirsty savage, used to keep a number of mendicants imprisoned, ready to meet any demand upon him for the punishment of an offender. It was far less trouble to cut off the head of one of these unfortunate creatures, and to produce it as that of the guilty person, than to hunt up the latter; and Yeh obtained also considerable credit for the rapidity of his justice. This is the personage for whom the peacemongers give battle.

No recent death has produced a more genuine expression of regret than that of the amiable and accomplished Earl of Ellesmere, who expired in Bridgewater House on Wednesday. His biography belongs to another department of our columns, and we would only place on record here the sentiment which has been everywhere heard in connection with his decease—namely, that both art and literature have to lament an enlightened votary, and their professors a kind-hearted friend. Among other acts of liberality let it not be forgotten that Lord Ellesmere's noble picture gallery was opened to all to whom the entrée could be of value upon simple application for a card, and no one was ever turned from the Bridgewater House collection upon the allegation that, as rain had fallen, it was possible that the applicant's feet might convey a soil to the carpets on the gallery floor—a mode in which access to other certain fine pictures has been known to be checked, even though the intending visitors had been duly furnished with admission cards. Lord Ellesmere's death does not make any change in the representation, the present Earl having some time ago retired from the House of Commons.

Mr. Henley and Lord Robert Cecil oppose the education of the people, except by the clergy, and no doubt do so conscientiously. But we should think that either gentleman would admit that any education which enlightened the women of the humbler class upon the common facts of astronomy might advantageously supersede their present ignorance. We read in a Sunderland paper that a star-conjurer has been reaping a plentiful harvest among the women at Monkwearmouth, especially the tradesmen's wives. To one of these the witch told a tale almost poetic in its language, though eminently practical in its tendency. She stated that the planets were moving in her victim's favour, but their motion was slow, and that some "valuables" were wanting to increase their speed. A watch and sovereign were handed over by the lady; but the witch, seeing what kind of an idiot she had to deal with, increased her demand enormously, and, not at once succeeding, let down her back hair, fell on the ground, and uttered an incantation, and then declared that a dark and gloomy spirit floated in the great abyss and got in the way of the planets. In old times, she said, it took twelve prophets to lay this demon; but she could do it single-handed if——the condition being more valuables. The lady (of whom a fortunate husband is the happy companion for life) gave more money, a silk purse, and other things, and the magicianess went away to lay the dark spirit. Probably she finds it a long job, as she has never returned. Surely even Mr. Henley might patronise a secular school that should teach young women that a watch and drapery offered to Jupiter would not send that luminary faster round the Sun.

An execution, with singular circumstances, is recorded at the Cape. One Charles Leo Cox was found guilty of poisoning his wife and two children. He all along asserted his innocence, and, during the five months he was kept in prison, the chaplain, who at first believed him guilty, came round to a reverse conviction. The language and letters of Cox, without being in the slightest degree fanatical, express the feelings of a man who dies in perfect reliance upon the Christian atonement; and his final declaration was that of his belief that his wife had committed the deed. He expressed on the scaffold, and in eloquent terms, the natural indignation of a man who dies under false testimony, and he named two persons who he said were responsible for the murder about to be committed. Urging his countrymen to sift the matter, after he should be gone, but expressing his forgiveness of all mankind, he added, most touchingly, "I trust faithfully in God's mercy, and when my soul departs, which it will do in a very few minutes, may God's angels be in waiting to guard it, and to bring it safely to its glorious destination, where my prayer will be again to be in the midst of that little family whom loved so well, and whom I never injured." With a calm farewell to the people he then delivered himself to the executioner. The reader, forced to accept one of two conclusions, either that a man has died lying and blaspheming, or that the law has committed a terrible murder, hesitates at the choice. The colonists are said to hold the latter belief. Be it as it may, never was more loftily pronounced the "Morituros vos saluto."

The boot and shoe makers of Wishaw, near Glasgow, and surrounding districts have struck work, on account of the employers proposing to reduce the wages to nearly what they were in September last.

MUSIC.

THE SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY performed Costa's "Eli" on Friday evening (last week), for the first time this season. The principal solo parts were sung by Madame Rudersdorff, Miss Dolby, Signor Belletti, and Mr. Thomas. The whole performance was admirable, and was received with demonstrations of enthusiasm in which the Exeter-hall audiences rarely indulge. This new oratorio is truly a chef d'œuvre: such repetition serves to develop its beauties more and more; and it has deservedly gained a place among the greatest works of its class

THE SATURDAY CONCERTS at the CRYSTAL PALACE go on successfully. At the concert of Saturday last, among other classical orchestral pieces, Mendelssohn's Symphony in A major (the Italian Symphony) was given entire. Two new English songs—"The Siren's Song," composed by Mr. Frank Mori; and "Why should I be sad?" composed by Mr. Alfred Mellon—were sung by Miss Louisa Vinning, and received with great and well-merited applause.

IMMENSE preparations are making for the great HANDEL FESTIVAL at the Crystal Palace in May next. A host of choristers and instrumental performers from all parts of the United Kingdom are already engaged; and the construction of the great organ, and other preparations, are in a state of forwardness. Our musical readers are aware that the whole arrangements for this great celebration are in the hands of the Sacred Harmonic Society.

MISS CATHERINE HAYES and the vocal and instrumental party who accompanied her have brought their long and brilliant tour to a close. After leaving Ireland they proceeded to Scotland, where they performed at Edinburgh, Perth, and other principal towns; and their concluding concert was given at Newcastle-upon-Tyne on Monday last. In every part of the three kingdoms which they have visited their success has been uninterrupted. Miss Hayes has been constantly received with enthusiasm, and has derived most efficient support from her eminent coadjutors, Mr. Osborne and Signor F. Lablache—the former by his brilliant pianoforte solos and exquisite accompaniment of the vocal music; the latter by the admirable manner in which he joined Miss Hayes in the Italian duets, and by the animation, humour, and dramatic effect of his buffo singing. Mr. Millard (why does he persist in calling himself Millard?) and Mdlle. Corelli (the one a tenor and the other a contralto) gave, by their performances, an agreeable variety to the concerts.

MR. LUMLEY is at present in Italy catering for Her Majesty's Theatre. He has concluded an arrangement with Signor Marietta Spezia, a prima donna of high reputation, who is now performing with éclat at the Scala at Milan. Our active impresario has also secured Signor Giuglini, a young tenor, of whom the Italian critics speak in enthusiastic language. Mr. Gye, we are informed, has re-engaged Madame Ristori for a part of the approaching season.

HERR JOACHIM, the celebrated violinist, whose nonappearance in England has disappointed the public for several years, has intimated his intention of visiting us early this season. His equally-celebrated rival, Ernst, who is now residing at Brighton for the sake of his health, will likewise be one of the stars of the season.

A STRONG operatic company, under the management of Mr. Beale, which is now making a tour through the principal towns in the United Kingdom, commenced a series of performances on Saturday last at the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh. The company includes Madame Grisi, Madame Gassier, M. Gassier, Signor Volpini, and other distinguished performers. They began with "Lucia di Lammermoor"—Madame Gassier being the Lucia, Signor Volpini the Edgardo, and M. Gassier the Enrico. The theatre was crowded with fashionable company. The local papers speak loudly in praise of M. and Madame Gassier, but express some dissatisfaction with the ensemble of the performance, and, in particular, describe the orchestra as being deficient in power—a fault which, in a place like Edinburgh, might easily be remedied.

MDLLE. VICTOIRE BALFE, daughter of the celebrated composer, will make her début in London as a prima donna during the ensuing season.

MR. TENNANT, the young English or rather Irish tenor, who has lately been singing with great success at Edinburgh and Glasgow, in conjunction with Mdme. Grisi, has signed an engagement to accompany Miss Catherine Hayes on an operatic tour during the months of March and April.

THE THEATRES, &c.

HAYMARKET.—A version exceedingly literal of Madame Emile Girardin's drama of "Une Femme qui Déteste son Mari" was produced, on Monday, under the title of "The Wicked Wife." Its moral is in favour of the order of things as at present existing in France. The perils of the Reign of Terror are the objects which the dramatist aims at depicting; and these are concentrated into a single anecdote which presents as it were the essence of all in a single form. The interest grows out of an expedient resorted to by Madame de Langrais (Miss Reynolds), who, to save her husband, whom she has concealed, pretends to hate him, and to seek a divorce in favour of Citizen Rosaire (Mr. Rogers), an agent of Robespierre. Her patriotism assumes so violent a form that her republican servant, Paul (Mr. Compton), cannot help admiring the sublimity of the woman who prefers "the nation to nature." Her child, too, is driven from her presence, and she prohibits its return. A double-backed cupboard is the place of the husband's concealment, and, in the pauses of the action, he comes forth to interchange endearments with his wife, whose affection is so carefully concealed from the world under an odious mask. M. de Langrais is played by Mr. Howe, whose performance of the part is touching and natural. Miss Reynolds elaborated the difficult situations which she has to realise with the greatest skill. The sympathy of the audience is strongly excited for the distresses of the faithful pair. Their deliverance on the fall of Robespierre produces a grateful reaction, and the descent of the curtain is followed with shouts of applause.

LYCEUM.—The dramatic event of the week is the production of Mr. Westland Marston's new five-act drama, entitled "A Life's Ransom," which took place on Monday. The house was crowded on the occasion, and the result was satisfactory, the new piece being received throughout, and at the fall of the curtain, with unanimous plaudits. As a literary composition the play is full of poetic beauties, and these were abundantly appreciated by the audience. The finer speeches were responded to with fervour, and the general dialogue commanded intense attention. The latter abounds with sentiment and pathos. But we imagine that it has a history that the dramatist would have the pieces narrated and its morals in this way are indeed considerable. Lord Recesdale (Mr. C. Dillon) is a sufferer from regal ingratitude. The two Charleses and King James have alike drawn means from his estate, and the last has refused his claim for compensation. He is, therefore, just in the mood of mind to join with the partisans of the Prince of Orange, and ultimately does so. But his steps are dogged by Bancroft, the magistrate (Mr. Stuart), who trades in political movements, and seeks the ruin both of Recesdale and his sister's lover, Arthur Ringwood (Mr. McLise). Lord Recesdale's pride objects to the match, young Ringwood's ancestry being unequal to his own; and on this pride Bancroft works his temptation; and thus, in an unguarded moment, extracts from his victim the confession of treason, in which Arthur Ringwood is implicated. The subsequent distress of the play grows out of Recesdale's remorse, and his endeavours to repair the evil which he has unwillingly caused; but he is counteracted by Bancroft, who secures his arrest, and would have succeeded in involving all parties in his villanous contrivances, but for the sudden landing of the Prince of Orange, when all his plots revert in their consequences on himself, and he is deprived of his ill-used authority. The heroine, Felicia (Mrs. Dillon) is a beautifully-drawn character—faithful to her lover, in spite of all circumstances, and in opposition to her brother's insane haughtiness, which is the motive-spring of all the difficulties by which the family is imperilled. Both parts were powerfully acted, though their representatives were evidently suffering from severe indisposition, and an apology was properly made for the circumstance. The last scene, painted by Mr. Fenton, of the landing of William of Orange, forms a splendid tableau by way of close to the action, and is likely of itself to conduce, in a material degree, to the popularity of the drama. But it is on its poetical excellence that it must rest for commendation, and on this its real triumph is dependent. In the treatment of his subject, and the structure of his poem, Mr. Marston has evinced equal delicacy and judgment. There is an almost classical simplicity in the manner in which he has given form to a variety of narrative details, which depended for their harmonious effect on their assumed coherence. The increase of the interest was gradual. It grew from act to act, and in the third acquired an energy which accumulated to the end. The catastrophe was in particular judiciously led up to. The dialogue, though poetical, is not verbose, the speeches are, indeed, in general, brief, and rarely long. The following simile in the humbling of Recesdale's pride when in the fifth act, he is compelled to crawl like a worm at the feet of his enemy. In that one situation we have the moral and the climax of the action.

ADELPHI.—Mr. Barney Williams' return to this theatre will be welcomed by a large circle of admirers, and their admiration will be more than justified by his success in his last new character, Barney the Baron.

SADLER'S WELLS.—On Wednesday another revival was produced—Shakespeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," one of the earliest of the poet's plays, and bearing evident marks of the "prentice hand." The Spanish pastoral romance of "Felismena" served for the basis of the drama; but Shakspeare darkened the shadows of the story and softened the character of the hero. All this is not in his mature style, or according to his later method of working; the result is feebleness and want of interest. Nevertheless, the play has much elegance and a vein of poetic sentiment; and, as the work of a young poet, is not without merit, though the characters are rather sketches than portraits. That of Launce, however, is a glorious exception, and he and his dog share the same immortality. In the female parts, also, the author was happy, and Sylvia and Julia are types of the loving and the lovely in maidenhood. Let these be accepted as reasons good, wherefore the play should be occasionally revived, to which may be added the sweetness of the verse, and a light aerial spirit of fantasy that presides over the entire action and dialogue, which ought to render the performance a pleasing recreation to the more reflective class of spectators, such as are the habitués of the Islington establishment. The play is, besides, deliciously acted and well mounted, the scenery and accessories being all that could be wished. The whole is a pleasing illustration of the taste with which this theatre is conducted by Mr. Phelps, whose mind is seen in the scenic arrangements of this play, though he be not an actor in it.

THE WEATHER.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE CAMBRIDGE OBSERVATORY, FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEB. 16, 1857.

| Day. | Barometer at 32° reduced and corrected for Capillarity and Index Error. | Thermometer (Fahr.) Dry Bulb at 9 A.M. | Wet Bulb at 9 A.M. | Dew Point at 9 A.M. | Wet Bulb at 3 P.M. | Dew Point at 3 P.M. | Direction of Wind | Amount of Cloud (0 to 10) | Rain in Inches |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Feb. 12 | 29·265 | 45·7 | 42·4 | 39·6 | 37·6 | 34·6 | 45·4 | 40·6 | W. NW. | 0 | 0·000 |
| ,, 13 | 29·310 | 42·5 | 23·3 | 30·7 | 35·1 | 34·1 | 42·1 | 40·2 | SW. | 10 | 0·000 |
| ,, 14 | 29·306 | 42·1 | 41·7 | 41·1 | 41·0 | 36·0 | 41·4 | 38·8 | S SW | 5 | 0·004 |
| ,, 15 | 30·401 | 41·7 | 36·5 | 35·7 | 34·8 | 31·6 | 41·6 | 39·9 | NE. | 10 | 0·000 |
| ,, 16 | 30·154 | 51·6 | 48·5 | 42·2 | 48·5 | 48·5 | 51·4 | 45·7 | S | 0 | 0·000 |
| ,, 17 | 29·642 | 51·8 | 49·4 | 47·0 | 48·8 | 48·8 | 49·8 | 48·4 | S | 1 | 0·028 |
| ,, 18 | 30·450 | 50·8 | 44·2 | 41·1 | 43·5 | 43·5 | 49·5 | 48·1 | SSW | 8 | 0·040 |
| Means | 0·191 | 46·6 | 39·4 | 39·9 | 39·7 | 37·0 | 46·1 | 43·1 | | | 0·026 |

The range of temperature during the week was 25·5°.

Hoar frost covered the ground on the mornings of the 12th and 13th, and likewise on the nights of the 14th and 15th. The air was misty on the mornings of the 14th and 15th, and on the evening of the 14th. A sudden darkness and fog came over at 3 p.m. of the 17th, and a heavy shower occurred shortly afterwards.

The weather was very fine, and the sky generally unclouded, on the 12th, 16th, and 17th, and on the afternoons of the 14th and 18th.

A faint appearance of the zodiacal light was noticed on the evenings of the 12th and 16th.

J. BREEN.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION

Lat. 51° 28′ 0″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above sea 14 feet.

| Day. | DAILY MEANS OF | | | | | | | THE WEATHER | | WIND | | RAIN in 24 Hours ending Noon. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Barom. at 32° and Correct. | Temp. of Air | Temp. of Evaporation | Relative Humidity | Amount of Cloud | Maximum Temperature in the Day | Minimum Temperature in the Night | General Appearance | Duration of Sunshine in Hours | Direction | Movement in 24 Hours | |
| | Inches | ° | ° | Deg. | | ° | ° | | | | Miles | Inches |
| Feb. 11 | 29·953 | 45·5 | 40·4 | 77 | 7 | 49·8 | 40·1 | SW. W | 4·1 | SW. W | 141 | 0·00 |
| ,, 12 | 30·057 | 46·0 | 39·1 | 74 | 0 | 53·4 | 44·3 | W. WSW. | 5·07 | WSW. | 207 | 0·05 |
| ,, 13 | 29·757 | 47·0 | 42·7 | 81 | 7 | 50·0 | 44·6 | SW. | 0·0 | SW. | 182 | 0·67 |
| ,, 14 | 30·276 | 46·1 | 42·7 | 87 | 7 | 48·9 | 44·3 | SW. NE. | 0·0 | SW. | 72 | 0·00 |
| ,, 15 | 30·141 | 47·4 | 43·1 | 86 | 6 | 49·0 | 44·8 | E. | 0·1 | E. | 171 | 0·00 |
| ,, 16 | 30·109 | 49·7 | 45·2 | 84 | 4 | 52·2 | 47·2 | ENE. SSW. | 4·5 | ENE. | 185 | 0·00 |
| ,, 17 | 29·811 | 45·6 | 41·3 | 86 | 7 | 52·7 | 42·5 | S. | 0·0 | S. | 193 | 0·00 |

The daily means are obtained from observations made at 6h and 10h a.m., and 2h, 6h, and 10h p.m. on each day, except Sunday, when the first observation is omitted. The corrections for diurnal variation are taken from the tables of Mr. Glaisher. The "Dew-point" and "Relative Humidity" are calculated from observations of the dry and wet bulb thermometers, by Dr. Apjohn's formula and Dalton's tables of the tension of vapour. The movement of the wind is given by a self-recording Robinson's Anemometer, the amount stated for each day being that registered from midnight to midnight.

DECREASE OF PAUPERISM IN ENGLAND AND WALES.—It appears from a return issued the other day to Parliament that the total number of persons of all classes, including children in receipt of relief on the last of January last, in 621 unions and parishes in England and Wales, was 819,459; being a decrease of 31,325 on the numbers at the date of January 1, 1856. 125,250 adult able-bodied persons, male and female, exclusive of vagrants, were in receipt of relief on the last of last month; being a decrease of 13,004 on the numbers at the corresponding date in 1856. 50,369 of the persons relieved last month were widows.

THE DEARTH OF COTTON.—Mr. Henry Ashworth, the extensive cotton-spinner, of Turton, near Bolton, and vice-president of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, is now in the United States, whither he has gone for the purpose of here seeking his stores of information as to the branch of trade in which he is engaged, and its raw material. Leeds Mercury.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

THE RIGHT HON. JAMES ARCHIBALD STUART WORTLEY, M.P. FOR BUTE COUNTY.

THIS gentleman, who has recently accepted office under Government as her Majesty's Solicitor General, is the third son of the first Lord Wharncliffe, by the daughter of the first Earl of Erne. Mr. Wortley was born in St. James's-square, in 1805; was educated at Christchurch, Oxford, where he graduated B.A. in 1826, and M.A. in 1829. In the latter year he was called to the Bar of the Inner Temple, and went the Northern Circuit, became a Queen's Counsel in 1841, and was Judge-Advocate-General from January till July, 1846. Mr. Wortley was appointed Solicitor-General to the late Queen Dowager in 1846, and continued to hold that office until her Majesty's death in December, 1849. In September, 1850, Mr. Wortley was appointed Recorder of the city of London, and so continued until his recent appointment to Solicitor-General. During the six years of Mr. Wortley's Recordership he was much respected for his impartial administration in his court; and, upon his resigning that office, a resolution was unanimously passed by the Court of Aldermen in testimony of their high sense of Mr. Wortley's judicial services.

Mr. Wortley is in politics a moderate Conservative. He sat in Parliament for Halifax from 1841 till 1852, but was defeated for that borough in the latter year and in 1853. He has sat for Buteshire since 1854. His re-election, rendered necessary by his acceptance of office, took place at Rothesay on Thursday (last week), when he was returned without opposition.

Mr Stuart Wortley then addressed the electors, alluding to the late war, and maintaining that the disasters which had come upon the British army were attributable, not to the leaders, but to the peculiarity of the circumstances. He took credit to himself for being the first to point out Lord Palmerston as the man to whom the destinies of the nation should be committed at such a crisis; and that nobleman had since fully established his claim to the gratitude and confidence of the country. With regard to the Maynooth Grant, he had originally voted in favour of it, in the hope that it would tend to promote good feeling in Ireland; but his expectations had been disappointed, and he would support a motion for the withdrawal of the grant. At the same time he was afraid that the means of defeating any private member by Government were so complete that there was little likelihood of such a measure being carried unless Government took it up. He had voted for the Lord Advocate's Education Bills, and would again vote for any Education Bill which did not separate religious from secular instruction.

THE CHATEAU STE. URSULE, CANNES.

In the debate which took place in the House of Commons last Monday evening, on the Irish Attorney-General's motion for the expulsion of Mr. James Sadleir, Mr. Roebuck reminded the House that the law advisers of the Government recommended delay in July last, when he (Mr. Roebuck) brought forward a similar motion. The Solicitor-General, in reply, said that, having in July last counselled caution and delay, he was now prepared to defend the advice which he had then humbly tendered. When his hon. and learned friend brought forward the motion, Sadleir had had no opportunity of giving himself up—he had been ordered on the Monday to appear in his place on the following Thursday, and because he did not so appear the hon. and learned gentleman then called upon the House to expel him. The House then decided against his hon. and learned friend, and it was not for him to vindicate the decision of the House. The "previous question" was moved in July, and the hon. and learned gentleman did not then venture to go to a division upon his motion. Sadleir had been afforded two opportunities of meeting the charge against him. He had not done so. The Session had opened and Sadleir had not vindicated his character; and, therefore, nothing remained for the House but to come to such a decision as befitted their dignity and the honour of their body.

THE NEW SOLICITOR-GENERAL, THE RIGHT HON. MR. STUART WORTLEY, M.P. FOR BUTE.

CANNES.

In the Illustrated London News for October 25, 1856, we glanced at this picturesque "English colony," as the locality is termed from its having lately become the winter abode of several distinguished residents. We have now to record a recent architectural addition to this favoured locality, in a handsome Gothic castle, which has passed, by purchase, into the possession of Lord Londesborough.

The Château Ste. Ursule, as shown in the accompanying View, stands in a position at once commanding and picturesque. The site, no doubt, was chosen with this object, and the selection has been a happy one, for it is surrounded by some of the most beautiful and varied scenery in Europe.

On the north-east, far below the elevation upon which the Château is built, a silvery stream works for itself a path through a wild and romantic ravine. At one part it is crossed by an old bridge, rendered interesting not only by its antiquity, but also by the fact that it was crossed by Hannibal when he led his army into Gaul. Indeed, there are many remarkable and romantic associations connected with Cannes which serve to heighten the beauty of the locality. Upon the rising ground, eastward of the Castle, may be seen the ruins of a Moorish tower and the Roman Catholic Church. Immediately behind, to the eastward, and upon the lower ground, is the town of Cannes. On the south-east, washed by the waters of the blue Mediterranean, is the Island of St. Marguerite, upon which stands prominently the old State prison in which for so many years lingered the "Man in the Iron Mask." On this island were also confined the Arabs captured with Abd-el-Kader. At a short distance to the south is the romantic island of St. Honorat, upon which are the ruins of an old convent. To the south, and between the Château Ste. Ursule and the sea, stands the new Protestant Church, a View of which appeared in the Illustrated London News for Jan. 10. In the distance, about twelve miles to the south-west, are the picturesque mountains of the Estrelle, the foot of the Alps, stretching, with their magnificent undulating outline and tinted with soft and varied hues, far away into the Mediterranean, forming, between them and Cannes, a fine and lovely bay, studded to the very verge of the water with the "umbrella pine" and other trees. In this direction, but at a short distance, and on a well-chosen site, stands the handsome Château St. George, the residence of Thomas Robinson Woolfield, Esq., still farther, and on its right, is seen the pretty Château la Bouche, the abode of the Rev. Mr. Simms; and looking from the Castle directly west, upon a lower elevation, is the Château Eleonore Louise, the abode of Lord Brougham, with other villas seen in the distance.

The Château Ste. Ursule, the Château la Bouche, and the Protestant Church, were erected from the designs and under the superintendence of Mr. Thomas Smith, of Hertford, and Hart-street, Bloomsbury.

The climate of Cannes is soft and salubrious, and the scenery around it is of the most charming character. It is situated twenty-one miles from Nice, nine miles from Grasse, one hundred and twenty miles from the port of Marseilles, and fourteen miles from the Var, which separates France from Sardinia. This river is crossed by a long wooden bridge, which is not unfrequently washed away by the overwhelming torrents, which bring with them enormous masses of stone and other matter, ultimately received by the sea. On each side of this bridge are the French and Sardinian Custom-houses. Cannes and its neighbourhood supply to the extensive distilleries of Grasse great quantities of orange and lemon blossoms, the flower of the scented acacia, the heliotrope, hyacinth, and other sweet-scented herbs; it is computed that they produce from £10,000 to £20,000 worth annually.

The aloe, the cactus, the palm, the castor-oil shrub, the orange and lemon, and the sweet-scented acacia flourish in the open air. The cork-tree, the arbutus, the evergreen oak, the umbrella pine, and the olive grow on the banks of the sea-shore. A vast variety of fish are caught here, amongst which are the red mullet, the St. Pierre, sardines, and anchovies, which are most delicious when taken out of the sea and cooked immediately.

On the road to Nice, a mile and a half from Cannes, is the celebrated spot where Napoleon I., in 1815, landed from Elba.

THE ROYAL ASYLUM OF ST. ANN'S SOCIETY.

By the report of the meeting of this splendid charity held last week it appears that its continued success and high position have only been maintained by the most arduous exertions of its supporters. The committee urge the necessity of co-operation on the part of their friends, and appeal specially to the clergy to aid the charity by their valuable services in their pulpits, and among their congregations. The health of the children was reported to be good, and every means had been adopted to improve their intellectual culture—a reading-room, library, and museum having been established. The bazaar which was held last summer at Streatham produced £309; but the fund is still deficient £9000, and the reduction of this debt is a matter of great moment. The officers were all re-elected with acclamation, special allusion being made to the eminent services of Mr. Leaks, the secretary, by several speakers.

The half-yearly election then took place, when, out of a list of 114 candidates, the committee were enabled only to admit 15. One of these, we are happy to add, is a son of the late Joseph Haydn, the compiler of the "Dictionary of Dates."

At the present moment it may further the claims of the excellent institution of St. Ann upon the public sympathy to take a glance at its history, showing how it has risen from a ward charity-school (almost the earliest founded in the city of London) to an asylum with such demands upon it as to require the large sum yearly of £5000 for its maintenance.

The St Ann's Society was originally founded by the aid of the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, in 1709, when several benevolent persons in the Ward of Aldersgate Within, in the city of London, established a society for clothing and educating children of necessitous parents (of every nation) who had been once in prosperity; and in the same year they instituted a day-schoolin St. Ann's-lane, Aldersgate, for 30 boys and 30 girls. In the year 1800 the governors determined to open a country asylum for the entire maintenance and education of 20 additional boys and girls, and Brixton-hill was chosen for the site of the new school. The present building was erected in 1829: it is a handsome edifice of three stories, surmounted by a cornice and parapet, and fronted centrally by an Ionic portico and pediment, ornamented with the Royal arms.

St. Ann's Society is under the especial patronage of the Queen and the Royal family; the Archbishop of Canterbury is president; there are three ladies presiding; and many noblemen, bishops, and gentlemen are vice-presidents. The children are wholly supported and educated in the Asylum; the former being instructed in the rudiments of useful learning, and qualified for trade or the counting-house; and the latter fitted for domestic servitude. All are educated in the religious principles of the establishment; and capacious galleries have been purchased in perpetuity for their accommodation in Streatham new Church, which is situated at a short distance from the Asylum.

With such claims upon public benevolence, we hope that so efficient and ably-managed an institution as the St. Ann's Society will not be allowed to narrow the field of its successful exertions in doing good.

ST. ANN'S ROYAL ASYLUM, BRIXTON.

"GUY FAWKES' CELLAR," AT WESTMINSTER.

FEW who visit the stately New Houses of Parliament notice the care which has been taken to incorporate such fragments as were available into the modern building. The ancient and stately Hall has, as we think, been much improved by the flight of steps and the beautiful stained-glass window at the south end. The old Chapel, with its decorated roof of fifteenth-century architecture, has been carefully restored; other portions of the structure partially destroyed by the last fire have also been preserved; it was, however, found impossible to save the arched chambers which had for so long a period been associated with the far-famed conspirator.

"GUY FAWKES' CELLAR," AT WESTMINSTER.

Guy Fawkes' Cellar was situated in what is now an open space between the exterior of the south end of Westminster Hall and the Victoria Tower; and, on levelling the foundation, the crowns of the arches were found, as was the case with the crypt of Gerard's Hall, to be above the level of the pavement; and it was, in consequence, found necessary to remove it. Since the time of the Gunpowder Plot it has been customary, a few days before the opening of each Parliament, to make an examination (under the superintendence of "Black Rod") of the various undercrofts below the Houses of Lords and Commons, in order to search for Guys and gunpowder.

The particulars in connection with the London residence, &c., of Guy Fawkes seem not to be very clearly known. A house, said to have been his, formerly stood in Lambeth, not far from Vauxhall. It was, a few years ago, demolished.

In the illustrated Pennant, in the Print-room, British Museum, there is a curious portrait of Guy, in broad-flapped hat. The countenance is so hirsute that it would not make a bad model for some of the masks made for use on the 5th day of November. As a departed relic of a well remembered event, we have thought it worth while to give an Engraving of the Cellar, from a sketch made at the time of its removal.

THE DEVONPORT BOROUGH PRISON.

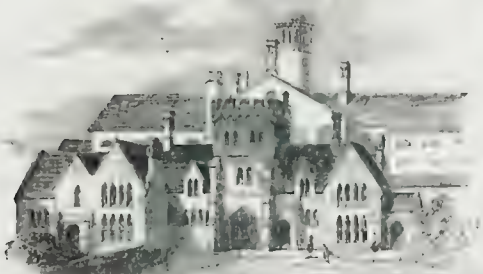
THE subject of Prison Discipline is now occupying so large a share of public attention that an illustration of the system adopted in the new Prison at Devonport, cannot fail to be interesting to all who have studied this momentous subject.

This prison is calculated to receive seventy prisoners, and was erected about six years since, from the designs and under the superintendence of Mr J. P. St. Aubyn, architect. It is situated at the extremity of the borough of Devonport, near the South Devon Railway, on a site of rather more than three acres. The style of architecture adopted is that of the fourteenth century. The officers' houses are placed together in the south front, and designed in the domestic character of that period; while the entrance to the prison is in the centre of this range of buildings, under a tower capped with bold machicolated battlements. The prison buildings within the walls are quite plain. The materials used are Bath stone for the dressings of the doors and windows, with the hammer-dressed limestone of the neighbourhood for the walls. The works are completed at the total cost of £15,139 2s. 7d.; being at the rate of £187 13s per cell.



THE DEVONPORT BOROUGH PRISON

The prison is provided with a chapel, necessary offices, and warming apparatus; and was planned to afford accommodation for 120 additional prisoners in case it should become necessary to take advantage of the capabilities of the plan for such extension. The discipline maintained in the prison is the separate system for the promotion of which that portion of the building occupied by prisoners, as well as the laundry, hard-labour pumps, and airing ground, have been laid out. The round tower seen in the back of the design is a shaft for ventilating the building. The view, by Mr. R. J. Hallam, is taken from the south, and shows the entrance to the prison with the adjoining officers' residences. The builders were Messrs. Hoskyn and Co. of Devonport.

THE IRISH COW-DOCTOR.

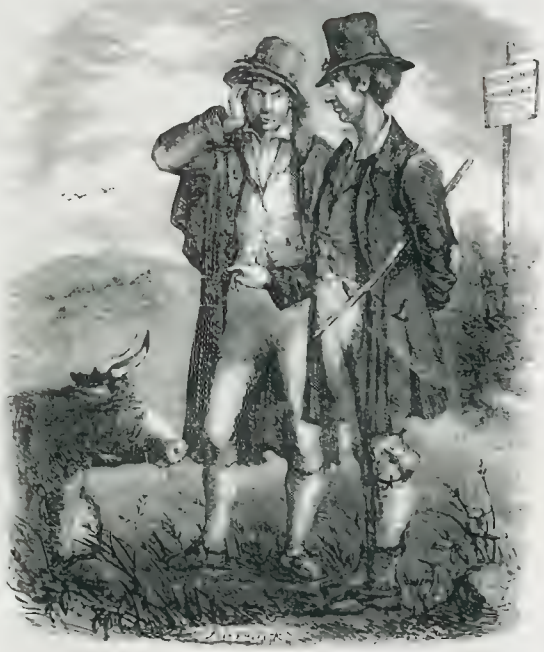
To give a general idea of the cow-doctor, he is invariably an old bachelor, had once upon a time been the sportsen (a gay fellow) of some village, and attended all the dances and hurling matches for miles round the country. No meeting of any kind was complete without his presence. How it was that he escaped the matrimonial yoke is difficult to determine; whether it was that his admiration of the fair sex was so great that he was loth to offend all, by a "single selection of one," or that he feared by such selection he might regret his choice, if afterwards he became acquainted with one of more superior attractions. Meantime, in giving the important question too much consideration, he neglects his small "holding," has become reduced in circumstances, and as he lives on through years of misfortune a change gradually comes o'er the spirit of his dream,' for, as "experience teacheth," the experiments he had formerly practised on his own cattle have converted him from an eccentric into a scientific, and if not a sad, at least a wise man. He is now recognised by the farmers of his district as the [illegible] or, from the skill [illegible] in curing their [illegible] cattle, when ill [illegible] viously adopted proved unavailing. The home of the cow-doctor is not the most delectable. Unlike the generality of mankind, he much more prefers the hearths of his neighbours to his own fireside, which is seldom graced by his presence, unless when he cannot possibly avoid it. As he is in great demand through the country, he always contrives to make his visits visitations, and the entertainment he receives from the owner of his patient is all he expects directly to gain for his professional services. There are few professions in life to which there are not some perquisites attached, and in being bestowed are generally considered and taken as compliments; but that system is quite the reverse with the cow-doctor; for, not being encumbered with a medicine-chest, he is often obliged to visit the nearest apothecary's shop, having been previously supplied with money to purchase the necessary drugs, which he compounds with great secrecy; and, knowing that a professional is always supplied at a very low figure, he considers the balance his own property the farmer meantime paying him a high compliment, and bearing his services in grateful remembrance.



SKETCHES OF IRISH CHARACTER.—"THE IRISH COW DOCTOR."—DRAWN BY E. FITZPATRICK.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

REMAINS OF CHILDREY HOUSE, BERKS.

At a short distance from the Wallingford and Wantage road, and three miles distant from the latter town, lies the village of Childrey, where the remains of an eminent manor-house, belonging to the manor of Hampnes, existed until within about five years from this date. The district abounds with memorials of remote antiquity; for here are found monuments belonging successively to the ancient Britons, and to the Romans, Saxons, and Danes. Wantage, the birthplace of Alfred the Great, and at the Domesday survey a portion of the Royal demesne, is of itself sufficient to tempt all but the most utilitarian [illegible] from off the Great Western Railway at the Steventon and Faringdon stations. Childrey has in its Church some remains of Saxon architecture, and contains various monuments. In the south transept was a chantry founded by W. Fettiplace, one of the owners of the manor just mentioned, who built the manor-house in the sixteenth century, a portion of which, in our time, denoted it to have been an edifice of considerable extent and architectural pretension.

In the Civil Wars Childrey was one of the many resting-places of Charles I. In the spring of 1644 the Parliament became masters of Berkshire, except Wallingford. The Royalists were quartered for a month at Newbury, and then marched to Reading. Leaving that town, which they dismantled of its fortifications, they remained at Wantage and in the neighbourhood for several days. The infantry quitted Abingdon without resistance at the approach of Essex, who placed in it Colonel Browne. On the 10th of April Charles, with his own troop, took up his quarters for one night at Childrey. The King and his suite occupied the manor-house, and the bed in which he slept is still in existence. The King's sojourn here is thus recorded in the manuscript diary of one of the Royal attendants:—

The King marched oute of Oxford, April 10th, 1644, being Tuesday. That night he lay at Childerley, an ancient house, now the Lady Fetyplas lives in it. Coun Berks. Divers antient matches of that family in the Hall Windows, and in the Chappell. His troope quartered at Wantage, 2 miles nearer Oxford, and 12 miles from Reading.

HALL OF CHILDREY DOWN MANOR-HOUSE, BERKS.

After Childrey had ceased to be a manorial residence it was much neglected; it then became a farmhouse, and was next let in tenements to poor families, so that, upon the very spot where a King once lay his perturbed head, one of the humblest subjects of his successor may have slept in peace.

The accompanying Illustration shows the remains of Childrey House in its last stage of occupation engraved from a sketch taken almost immediately before its demolition. The portion which was dining-parlour, or banqueting-room, and retiring-rooms, were added to the great hall or principal feature of the mansion. The Fetiplaces, the owners of Childrey, also possessed, in Henry the Eighth's reign, the manor of Ockhelt, or Ockwells, a few miles distant, the mansion of which, though built in the reign of Henry VI., a century earlier than Childrey House, has survived that edifice. A picturesque portion of Ockwells remains to this day, and is used as a farmhouse; although the heraldic glass in its windows denotes its once noble occupation.

THE COURT.

The first intimation of the arrangements of the Court for the approaching season was made public on Thursday in an announcement that his Royal Highness Prince Albert will, on behalf of her Majesty, hold Levees on Thursday, the 26th inst., and on Thursday, the 12th March. It is also understood that his Royal Highness will hold another Levee before Easter.

The Queen has appeared in public several times since her arrival at Buckingham Palace, and we rejoice to add, is looking remarkably well. On the day following the arrival of the Court in London her Majesty, accompanied by the Princess Royal and attended by the Hon. Flora Macdonald and Major-General the Hon. C. Grey, visited her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, at Gloucester House. In the evening her Majesty and the Prince, accompanied by the Princess Royal, honoured the Haymarket Theatre with their presence.

On Monday her Majesty the Queen, with his Royal Highness the Prince, went to the New Palace of Westminster, accompanied by the Princess Royal and the Princess Alice. Sir Benjamin Hall, Chief Commissioner of Public Works and Buildings, received the Queen and conducted her to the Prince's Chamber, where Gibson's group in marble of her Majesty sitting upon her throne, holding her sceptre and a laurel crown, with the figures of Justice and Clemency on the right and left of the Sovereign, has been erected since the Royal party inspected the tassel relievi in the same chamber, and were conducted to the Robing-room to view Mr. Dyce's frescoes; to St. Stephen's Hall to inspect the statues; to the House of Commons; and to the Upper Waiting Hall to view the frescoes. Her Majesty left the Palace by the Peers' new entrance at eleven o'clock.

The marriage of the Countess Helene Kielmansegge, daughter of his Excellency the Hanoverian Minister, with Lieut.-Colonel Lord Arthur Hay, brother of the Duchess of Wellington, took place on Tuesday at St. George's Church, Hanover-square.

The marriage of Colonel Biddulph, Master of the Queen's Household, with the Hon. Mary Frederica Seymour, daughter of the late Mr. Frederick and Lady Mary Seymour, and late one of her Majesty's Maids of Honour, was celebrated on Monday, in the presence of the Queen, the Prince, the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, the Princess Alice, and the immediate relatives of the parties. The ceremony was performed in the private chapel of the Palace, by the Hon. and Rev. Reginald Sackville West, Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The number of workmen employed in Chatham Dockyard having been ordered to be reduced, sixteen men received their discharge from that establishment on Saturday last, and fifteen more will be discharged at the end of this week. In consequence of the order which has been issued by the Admiralty for reducing the pay of the labourers employed in the dockyard to 18s. a week, a public meeting has been held at Chatham, presided over by the High Constable, when it was unanimously resolved to memorialise the Lords of the Admiralty to rescind that order.

The Ordnance screw-steamer Balaklava arrived at Woolwich on Saturday, with a cargo of returned stores from Queenstown. A number of pensioners who were taken into the employment of the shipwright department of Woolwich Dockyard on rigging duty during the pressure of the late war are ordered to be discharged, and to be provided with the means of returning to their respective homes.

On Monday morning the Duke of Cambridge, accompanied by a numerous staff, arrived at the Royal Artillery Barracks, Woolwich, at ten o'clock, and was received by the Commandant, Major-General Sir W. F. Williams, Sir Hugh De Ros, Colonels Pulliser, Hardinge, Bingham, &c. The whole of the troops in garrison—consisting of the Royal Horse Artillery, the Foot Artillery, and the field batteries—were drawn up on the parade-ground in close column, for inspection. His Royal Highness rode past the ranks, minutely inspecting each man, and afterwards, and subsequently visited the Royal Arsenal. After remaining in the establishment about an hour, his Royal Highness left for London.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The racing season opened under almost a summer sky at Lincoln on Wednesday, and Mr. Thomas Parr's Apathy, ridden by Nat, won the opening race. Greenwich Fair, by Woolwich, then scored the first two-year-old race of the season, to Mr. St. John's credit; Selrifton, the metropolitan favourite, from Mr. T. Parr's stable, being only fourth. Greenwich Fair was, however, quite as good a favourite at starting, and "the talents" showed no little knack in picking out both him and Apathy for their money. The speculative wag then stood a farce. Tuesday and Wednesday are devoted to Nottingham Spring Meeting; and on Thursday we have Derby Spring, with steeplechases and hurdle-races to eke it out. On Wednesday there will be some steeplechases in Berwickshire, but Ireland has none on the list. We seldom found Tattersall's ground so full as it was on Monday, to see the young trotting horses from Aberystwith Farm, Essex, and Mr. Collyer's hounds sold. One of the former brought 140 guineas; but, although the hunters changed hands, the reserve bids for the hounds were too high, and only a few couple lot, or two at the most were parted with, but at good prices. Mango, the winner of the St. Leger in 1837, will come to the hammer there on Monday; and a Goodwood Cup winner—Grimston is announced to be exchanged for a pure Clydesdale entire colt; and Bourton, the whilom king of steeplechasers, is also for sale, at only 80 guineas!

The hunting men are all alive again. On Friday Lord Stamford's hounds found at Cossington Gorse; ran a ring round the Roman Catholic College; and lost him at Ratcliffe, after a very fast thirty minutes, the first twenty minutes of which was in sight. A second fox was found at the Cossington Woods, who took them by Ragdale up the valley to Shoby Scoles, by Lord Aylesford's covert, straight for Grimstone, on to Wartnaby Stone Pits, by Little Belvoir, into the Vale to Old Dalby Village, to Old Dalby Wood, and so to Sholy, where he was lost. Time one hour and twenty minutes, and the pace tremendous for the first half hour and the latter part of the run. They had also a good hunting run on Monday, the sad part of which was that one of the best hunters at Melton broke his leg, and had to be destroyed.

A very large field met the Duke's at Piper Hole on Wednesday, and three foxes were found at Swinhill; but the hounds could do nothing all day, as the weather was far too hot and the scent absolutely nil. The Cottesmore had a fair day's sport on Saturday, and a regular clipper on Tuesday—from Prior's Coppice, forty five minutes, ending with a kill, over an entire grass country. Lord Cardigan had the best of it all the way, going as well as ever he did in the days of his black horse The Dandy, and the master (Sir John Trollope) was close up. They had then a second good hunting run of fifty minutes, from Barrow Gorse, but had to whip off when they neared Lord Harborough's best preserve.

The coursing fixtures for next week are Middleston and Hundred House (Worcestershire) on Monday; Leyburn (Wensleydale) on Tuesday; Spelthorne Club on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday; Bettisfield (Flint) on Wednesday; Waterloo on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday; Knipe Scar on Thursday; and "Newcastle, Northumberland, and Durham" on Thursday and Friday. Mr. Borron has had his old luck at Ardrossan and Lytham; and the "concussion" of the Bs and the Rs on the plains of Altcar is looked forward to with no little interest by the fanciers of the Blue Light and the Bedlamite blood. The struggle at Altcar this year will be the most interesting ever known, as there are sixty-four dogs entered instead of thirty-two as in former years, and every entry has been long since taken up.

LINCOLN SPRING MEETING.—WEDNESDAY

Trial Stakes Apathy, 1. Pauli Monti, 2.
All-Aged Selling Stakes—Magistrate, 1. Sichæus, 2.
Two-year-old Stakes Greenwich Fair, 1. Cocktail's dam c. 2
Grand Steeplechase Handicap—Tschernaya, 1. Janus, 2

THURSDAY

Lincoln Handicap Huntingdon, 1. Tom Thumb, 2
Hurdle Race.—Nicholas, 1. Weathercock, 2

FRIDAY

LIVERPOOL STEEPLECHASE.—8 to 1 agst Mimosa (t)
NORTHAMPTONSHIRE STAKES.—9 to 1 agst Skerndaler (c), 8 to 1 agst Adamas
DERBY.—1000 to 35 agst Revil (t)

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.

ALTHOUGH only a moderate business has been transacted in the Consol Market this week, prices generally have been well supported; indeed, in some instances, they have shown a tendency to advance. The Unfunded Debt, however, has declined a trifle, and the quotations have slightly given way.

Over £600 000 in silver will be sent to India by the next packet, yet the market for that metal has ruled heavy. Bar has sold at 5½d. per ounce, and dollars are quoted at 4s. 11⅛d. to 4s. 11½d. The exchanges from India and China show no material change, and they are, consequently, sufficiently high to induce any shipments of bullion from this country. A few parcels of gold have been withdrawn from the Bank of England for transmission to the Continent, yet the next return from the Bank of England will, it is expected, show an increase in the stock. During last year the total amount withdrawn from the Bank was £7,539,806, and the amount purchased rather exceeded £7,000,000.

The declaration on the part of the Emperor of the French that no new loan will be required this year has given much satisfaction; but it must be understood that a decree has appeared authorising the issue of Treasury Notes to the extent of 14,000,000*l*.

Most of the Continental exchanges come more favourable, yet they give no prospect of a return of gold to this country.

The last returns of the private and Russian railway schemes have come to hand, but they add nothing to those previously received.

On Monday English Stocks were steady, and very little change took place in the quotations. Bank Stock realised 218. The Three per Cents Reduced were 93⅝ ⅞; Consols, for Money, 93⅝ ⅞; Ditto, for Account, 93⅝ ¾. The New Three per Cents marked 94⅛, and 94 to 93⅝; Long Annuities (1860), 9⅛; India Bonds, 2s. dis.; and Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 4s. prem. India Stock was 220 to 221.

On Tuesday the market was rather dull, and prices were a shade easier. The Three per Cents Reduced were 93⅝ ⅞ to 93⅝ ⅞; for Account, 93⅝ ¾ to 93⅝, and 93⅝ to 94. The New Three per Cents marked 93⅝ ⅞; the Reduced, 94 to 94⅛; and the Thirty Years' Annuities, 18 5-16ths. Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 4s. prem.; Ditto, Bonds, 98⅛. No change took place in the Bank rate of discount.

The Foreign House has been devoid of animation. Prices, however, have ruled very firm. We have had transactions in Brazilian Five per Cents at 103⅛; Brazilian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, New, Five per Cents, 101; Greek Bonds, 64; Mexican, 19¾; Ditto, New, 19¾; Peruvian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 77; Russian Five per Cents, 107; Ditto, 1822, 97⅛; Ditto, Small, 97⅜; Ditto, Five per Cents, 110; Spanish Five per Cents, 20¾; Spanish Three per Cents, 45¼; Spanish New Deferred, 22½; Ditto, Passive, 5¼; Ditto, Coupons, 19¾; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 64 per cent; Turkish Six per Cents, 98⅝; Turkish Four per Cents, 85; French Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 94 francs 75 centimes; Ditto, Five per Cents, 69 francs 50 centimes; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 64; Dutch Four per Cents, 99⅜; Buenos Ayres Six per Cents, 86; Portuguese Three per Cents, 45; Ditto, 1856, 45; Venezuela One-and-a-Half per Cents Deferred, 14; Belgian Four-and-a-Half per Cents

Joint-Stock Bank Shares have been very firm, as follows:—Bank of London, 60; British North American, 70¾; Commercial of London, 19⅝; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 18; Australasia, 40; Bank of Australia, 19; London and County, 29¼ ex div.; London Joint-Stock, 23¾; London and Westminster, 47; National Provincial of England, 20; Ditto, New, 15-16 Oriental, 21; Provincial of Australia, 6¼; Union of London, 26⅛; Unity Mutual, 40⅛; Western of London, 11.

There has been a steady market for most Miscellaneous Securities at full quotations:—Australian Agricultural, 21; Australian Royal, 11; Waterworks, 5⅜; Canada Company's Bonds, 110; Ditto, Crown Reserves, 10⅝; Crystal Palace, 9⅜; Ditto, Preference, 9⅜; Ditto, Debentures, 97; General Omnibus Company, 17; Grand Canary, 13¾; Peel River Land and Mineral, 2¾ ex div.; Royal Mail Steam, 65; South Australian Land, 36; Van Diemen's Land, 14⅜; London Docks, 100; East and West India, 115⅜; St. Katharine's Docks, 102; Peninsular and Oriental Steam, New, 13¾; Ditto, Debentures, 99; New South Wales Government Debentures, 99.

Most Railway Shares have been firm in price, but the business doing generally has not been large. The following are the official closing prices on Thursday:—

ORDINARY SHARES AND STOCKS.—Caledonian, 69¾; Dundee, Perth, and Aberdeen Junction, 10¾; East Anglian, 1¾; Eastern Counties, 10½; Eastern Union, A Stock, —; Ditto, B Stock, 30.; Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, 78; Great Northern, 93; Ditto, A Stock, 78; Ditto, B Stock, 124; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 123¾; Great Western, 68¾; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 99¾; London and Blackwall, 6¾; London and Brighton, 103½; London and North-Western, 101¾; London and South-Western, 100¾ ex div.; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 36¾; Midland, 83⅜; North British, 43; North Eastern, Berwick, 88; Ditto, Extension, 20½; Ditto, Leeds, 19; Ditto, York, 63¾; North Staffordshire, —; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, —; Scottish Central, —; Scottish Midland Junction, —; Shrewsbury and Chester, —; Shrewsbury and Hereford, —; Shrewsbury and Shropshire Union, 50; South-Eastern, 76; South Wales, 85¾; West End of London and Crystal Palace, —; West Midland, —; West Yorkshire, —; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 45; York, Lincoln, and Boston, —; and Bletchley, 45; Buckinghamshire, 97½; Midland Great Western (Ireland), —.

PREFERENCE SHARES.—Caledonian, —; Chester and Holyhead, 85; Eastern Counties, 6¾ ex div.; Great Northern Five per Cents, 118; Ditto, redeemable at 10 per cent, 111; Ditto, Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 105; Midland Consolidated, 106; North Eastern Berwick, 95; North Staffordshire, 21¼; South Australian, 5; Ditto, Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 94; Waterford and Kilkenny, —.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.—Bombay, Baroda, and Central India, 103; Buffalo and Lake Huron, 12½; Ceylon, 8 Shares, 9¾; East Indian, 11½; Grand Trunk of Canada, —; Ditto, Six per Cent Debentures, 81½; Great Indian Peninsula, New, 4¾; Great Western of Canada, 25½; Ditto, New, 11¾; Madras, 9.

FOREIGN.—Great Luxembourg, 6¾; Lombardo-Venetian, 12¾; Namur and Liége, 6⅝; Northern of France, 36⅜; Paris and Lyons, 56⅜.

Mining Shares have been very firm, on Thursday St. John del Rey were 19¾; Cobre Copper, 56; Copiapo, 19¾; Fortune, 1¾; and Pontgibaud Silver Lead, 6¾

Friday Evening

The Consol Market is steady to-day, yet scarcely any change has taken place in the quotations. The Three per Cents for Transfer are 93⅝ ⅞; for the Account, 93⅝ ¾. The disposition to have near Consols is not so strong. The New Three per Cents, 94⅛ ⅜. In Foreign Bonds and Railway Shares about an average business is doing. The directors of the Bank of England have not, to-day, reduced the loans upon stock to six per cent.

THE MARKETS.

CORN-EXCHANGE (Friday).—There has been a slight increase in the arrivals of English wheat up to our market-constwise, but the receipts from up-y land-carriage are limited and in very middling condition. The first fair samples command Monday's quotations, with a moderate demander; but inferior kinds are heavy, and mostly offered on easier terms. Out 600 quarters of foreign wheat on hand, per the favour of arrivals, are held for full prices. Most kinds moved of slowly; nevertheless, the quotations were well supported. We were rather scantily supplied with barley, in which a steady business was doing, at full prices. The malt trade ruled dull, at previous currencies. In the value of oats, beans, [illegible] peas, [illegible] favoured with Monday.

Arrivals this Week—English wheat, 6,000; barley, 1,000; oats, 900. Foreign wheat, 660; barley, 1,000; oats, —; flour, —.

Imperial Weekly Averages—Wheat, 56s. 5d.; barley, 30s. to 32s.; oats, 20s. to 22s.; rye, 34s.; beans, 36s. to 38s.; peas, 36s. to 38s.

English Grain sold last Week—Wheat, 6,000 qrs.; barley, 1,000; oats, 900; flour, 600 sacks.

Duties—Duties to be paid on the importation of articles from the United States, under the Reciprocity Treaty, on and after the 1st of March next, are as follows:—Wheat, 1s. per quarter; barley, 1s.; oats, 6d.; rye, 1s.; beans, 1s.; peas, 1s.; Indian corn, 1s.; wheat flour, 1s. per cwt.; barley meal, 1s.; oatmeal, 6d.; rye meal, 1s.; bean meal, 1s.; pea meal, 1s.; Indian corn meal, 1s.; rice, 1s.; potatoes, 1s.; hops, 10s.; hay, 10s.; straw, 10s.; cattle, 10s. per head; sheep, 2s. per head; swine, 2s. per head; meat, salted or unsalted, 20s. per cwt.; butter, 20s. per cwt.; cheese, 20s. per cwt.; poultry, 20s. per cwt.; eggs, 20s. per cwt.; fish, 20s. per cwt.; tallow, 1s. per cwt.; timber, planed or sawed, 1s. per cubic foot; timber, round or hewed, 1s. per cubic foot; staves, 1s. per cubic foot; firewood, 1s. per cord; coals, 1s. per ton; slate, 20s. per ton; bricks, 20s. per thousand; plaster of Paris, 20s. per ton; gypsum, 20s. per ton; seeds, 10 per cent ad valorem; cotton wool, 10 per cent ad valorem; unenumerated articles, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Seeds—All agricultural seeds are very dull to-day, at very full prices. Linseed is again dearer, and rather commands [illegible]

Linseed English, crushing, 71s. to 74s.; Mediterranean, 70s. to 73s.; hempseed, 42s. to 44s.; coriander, [illegible]; rapeseed, 42s. per quarter. Brown mustard seed, 8s. to 12s.; ditto, white, 6s. to 7s. per bushel. Carraway seed, 36s. to 38s. per cwt. English rapeseed, 36s. to 38s. per quarter. Linseed cakes, English, £11 0s. to £11 10s.; ditto, foreign, £11 0s. to £11 10s.; rape cakes, £5 5s. to £5 10s. per ton. Canary, 68s. to 70s. per quarter.

Flour—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 8½d. to 9d.; of household ditto, 6d. per 4lb. loaf.

Imperial Weekly Averages—Wheat, 56s. 5d.; barley, 40s. 11d.; oats, 23s. 6d.; rye, 44s. 6d.; beans, 38s.; peas, 38s. 8d.

English Grain sold last Week—Wheat, 100,932; barley, 71,957; oats, 17,653; rye, 24; beans, 657; quarters.

Corn—On the 1st to the Government proposal to retain a portion of the war duties, business in our market has been almost wholly suspended. In prices, however, no change has taken place. Good and mixed sorts may be quoted at the full rates.

Sugar—All good and fine raw sugars have sold steadily, at very full prices, but inferior sorts have ruled heavy and in some instances 4s. per hundredweight lower. Refined sugars have been in good request, and have sold steadily, at very full prices, but inferior sorts have ruled heavy and in some instances 4s. per hundredweight lower. Refined Manchies have sold at 50s. to 57s. 6d.; Bengal, —; Madras, 41s. to 43s. 6d. per cwt. Refined sugars have been in good request, at from 6d. to 6½d. per cwt.

Coffee—Our market continues firm at full rates, but the week's advance in prices has not been fully established. The sales are considered to be 3,000 cwt. per cwt. heavier. Good ordinary native Ceylon, 44s. to 45s.; middling ditto, 46s. to 47s.; fine ditto, 48s. to 49s.; good ordinary Mocha, 50s. to 52s.; fine ditto, 53s. to 54s.; good ordinary Java, 48s. to 49s.; fine ditto, 50s. to 51s.; good ordinary Costa Rica, 46s. to 47s.; fine ditto, 48s. to 49s.; good ordinary Jamaica, 46s. to 47s.; fine ditto, 48s. to 49s. per cwt.

Cocoa—The red Trinidad has sold as high as 75s. per cwt.

Rice—Our market is steady, and late rates are well supported, although it is scarcely busy. Common Madras, 10s. 3d.; and White Bengal, 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d. per cwt.

Provisions—Foreign butter is in good request, at late rates. Irish is dearer in price. The value of English and Irish qualities very little change on last week. The Irish market is quiet, at late rates. Hams and bacon are lower to-day.

Tallow—Our market is less active, yet P.Y.C. on the spot has been held at 65s. down to 64s. 6d. per cwt. Town tallow is in moderate supply.

Oils—Linseed oil on the spot has sold at £29 10s. to £29 per ton. Rape is quiet, at £31 10s. to £31 15s. Palm, £47 10s. Cocoanut, £41 to £43. Spanish, £34. In turpentine very little is doing, and prices are rather drooping. Sales, 42 3s. to 42 5s. per cwt.

Spirits—There is a limited business doing in rum, at the late decline. Proof Isewards, 1s. 2d. per gallon. Brandy is held far more money, and the transactions to a very limited extent. Geneva, spirits are less active.

Hay and Straw—Since Monday, £3 10s. to £4 0s.; clover ditto, £3 10s. to £5 5s.; and straw, £1 4s. to £1 8s. per load.

Hops—Since Monday the business done has been small, with prices unchanged. Although it is unusually heavy. Common Maidens

NEW BOOKS, &c.

CURIOSITIES of LONDON: exhibiting the most Rare and Remarkable Objects of Interest in the Metropolis. With nearly 30 years' Personal Recollections. By JOHN TIMBS. F.S.A. 800 pp., with Portrait, 18s.—D. Bogue, 8, Fleet-street.

This day, 8vo., price 21s., the Second Volume of SIR FRANCIS PALGRAVE'S HISTORY of NORMANDY and of ENGLAND. The First Volume, 21s. London: J. W. PARKER and SON, West Strand.

Sixth Edition, with numerous Illustrations, price 1s.

A FAMILIAR HISTORY of BIRDS. By E. STANLEY, D.D. Bishop of Norwich. London: JOHN W. PARKER and SON, West Strand.

Published this day, price 2s. 6d.,

A STATISTICAL ACCOUNT of the MEDICAL CHARITIES of the METROPOLIS. Published under the direction of a Committee of the Statistical Society; and forming Part 1 of a Work on the Beneficent Institutions of the Metropolis. London: JOHN W. PARKER and SON, 445, West Strand.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "SPONGE'S TOUR."

On the 28th of February will be published, price 1s., No. 1 of

ASK MAMMA; or, The Richest Commoner in England. By the Author of "Sponge's Tour," "Handley Cross," "Hawbuck Grange," &c. To be completed in Thirteen Monthly Parts with Illustrations on Steel and Wood by John Leech. ROBERT BENTLEY and EVANS, 11, Bouverie-street.

Fcap. 8vo., cloth, 4s.

ANALYTICAL ETHNOLOGY: Illustrated, from the Most Tribes in Great Britain and Ireland examined, as of the Political, Physical, and Metaphysical Characters on the Celt and the Saxon respectively. By THOMAS HODGKIN, M.D. London: H. BAILLIÈRE, 219, Regent-street.

THE STANDARD EDITION

Now ready, in one handsome vol., cloth boards, price 8s. 6d.,

A MEMOIR of ELIZABETH FRY: By her Daughter, Mrs. FRANCIS CRESSWELL

Abridged from the Larger Memoir, with alterations and additions. "I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." MATTHEW xxv., 36.

London: PARIS, STEPHENSON, and CO., Paternoster-row

On the 2nd of March will be published, in 6d bds., 2s. cloth,

THE BRIDE of LAMMERMOOR. By Sir WALTER SCOTT.

Forming Vol. VIII. of the Railway Edition of the Waverley Novels, now in course of publication.

A. and C. BLACK, Edinburgh; Houlston and Wright, London. Sold by all Booksellers, and at the Railway Stalls.

Now ready, imperial 8vo. cloth, 12s., 137 Lessons, 155 Pages of Text, 48 Plates, and 103 Woodcuts,

LESSONS on ART. By J. D. HARDING. By means of which all may teach themselves Drawing and acquire a practical knowledge of Art.

Now ready, by the same Author.

THE GUIDE and COMPANION to LESSONS on ART. Imperial 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d., 176 Pages of Text, 12 Tinted Plates, and 97 Woodcuts.

LESSONS on TREES. 2nd Edition, imperial 4to. cloth, 15s., 63 Lessons descriptive, and illustrated on 30 Lithographic Plates.

ELEMENTARY ART; or, the Use of the Chalk and Lead Pencil Advocated and Explained. 4th Edition, imperial 4to. cloth, 20s., 37 Pages Text, 24 Plates (some Tinted), and 43 Wood Engravings.

DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 8, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

USEFUL BOOKS, INDISPENSABLE TO ALL Each Bound, and in 8vo. cloth, by post,

INDISPENSABLE.—LIVE and LEARN. A Guide for all who wish to speak and write correctly. "Live and Learn" is a most excellent book. We lose upon it as really indispensable. We advise our readers to purchase it."—Literary Gazette. "Live and Learn" is a most excellent book, and a necessary at any price."—Athenæum. 2s. 6d.

THE NEWSPAPER and GENERAL READER'S POCKET COMPANION: being a familiar explanation of nearly 6000 classical and foreign words, phrases, and proverbial sentences of constant occurrence in the various journals, periodicals, and the general literature of the day. "Live and Learn."—Literary Gazette. "Live and Learn."—Spectator. 2s. 6d.

MISTAKES of DAILY OCCURRENCE in Speaking, Writing, and Pronunciation Corrected. Old and young, educated and uneducated, may consult this small work with advantage. Selling by thousands. Price 6d.; by post, 7.

HINTS FOR LETTER-WRITING. Price 1s., cloth, free by post.

THE RIGHT WAY of LEARNING FRENCH without the Drudgery of Committing Rules to Memory. Price 1s. 6d.

THE HIGH WORD on the HIGH PLACE. No lady correspondent, no public speaker, no teacher of youth, no man of business, should delay procuring this unexceptionable help to fluent writing and speaking. Price 6d.; by post, 7d.

HAW, Contemporation-row and Paternoster-row

Price 2s. 6d. each

DE PORQUET'S LE PROFESSEUR, or Turner's English into French at Sight, Parisian Grammar, Compendium of Anglicisms, and Phrase Book.

Price 2s. 6d. each

DE PORQUET'S FIRST FRENCH READ-ING-BOOK for Children with Easy Notes; Parisian Spelling, Pronunciation, Grammar, Phrases, Dialogues, &c. Foreign Words Naturalized in English, Words and Phrases Familiar to Frenchmen, Idioms in the Two Languages, Conjugations, &c.

DE PORQUET'S FIRST FRENCH READER. Price 2s. 6d. each.

ROUTLEDGE'S SHAKESPEARE, I. restored by JOHN CRANE, M.A. I. Illustrated by JOHN GILBERT, and EDWARD STANTON. IV. now ready, price 1s. each.

"Shakespeare has neglected an extraordinary number of his plays. Here is a publication which will put that neglect right."—Times. "Nobody is so prejudiced against Shakespeare that he will not welcome the Illustrations on Steel and Wood that are now being published. Mr. Gilbert has never done and will never do better than in the present publication."—Athenæum. "Mr. Crane's Shakespeare has received an extraordinary success. Four numbers have appeared, and all that can be said of them is that they are worthy of the author. Mr. Gilbert's illustrations are full of humour, and will stand his name down to posterity as the most successful illustrator of Shakespeare's character."—Art-Union.

London: G. ROUTLEDGE and CO., Farringdon-street.

On Feb. 28th, No. I. price 1s., with Illustrations,

THE BRITISH EXPEDITION to the CRIMEA. By WILLIAM RUSSELL (Special Correspondent of the "Times"). A revised and condensed Edition of the "Times" War, with numerous emendations and additions. Illustrated with Plates and Woodcuts. To be completed in Twelve Shilling Numbers.

NOTICE BY THE AUTHOR: "My services duties has been, and is, to tell the truth, as far as I know it, respecting all I have witnessed. There have been many emendations and versions sent to me of incidents in the war. Some various facts have been told for over—which I shall avail myself in the revision of the work which I have undertaken to complete in twelve shilling numbers. In my opinion, the best account of the war is that which is the most correct."

London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

In 6d., Post-free, neither, or 42 postage-stamps, Second Edition.

CORPULENCY and its NEW SELF-REDUCING CURE. A Pamphlet, by A. W. MOORE, M.R.C.S. Brief and intelligible. Sold and sent by Mr. WILLIAM BOWLES, Chemist, 1, Cornhill, London.

CHEAP BOOKS.—Secondhand Copies of Macaulay's History of England, Vols. 2 and 4, and many other books in stock for Book Societies, Literary Institutions, School Prizes, Libraries, &c., will be found in BULL'S LIBRARY, CATALOGUE GRATIS.—BULL'S MEDICAL PRESENTS. Sent post free on application.—Bull's Library, 19, Hanover-street, Cavendish-sq., London.

REEVES' WATER COLOURS, in Cakes, and Moist Water Colours, in Tubes and Pans. 113, Chancellor, London, E.C.

MORRELL'S CARMINE WRITING FLUID.—A brilliant Red Ink, being self-corrective, is specially adapted for steel pens.—Sold by all Booksellers and Stationers.

JESSEY'S MARKING-INK—the Blackest and Best ever made—has now withstood the test of twenty years' experience in every climate of the globe.—Sold, wholesale and retail, by J. JESSEY (late Winsworth), 97, High-street, Marylebone.

BIJOU NEEDLE-CASE, containing 100 of DEANE'S Drilled-eyed NEEDLES, post-free, for 1s. Any lady ordering twelve packages of DEANE, DRAY, and CO., may have this neat and valuable appendage to her work-table forwarded free by return of post. Deane, Dray, and Co., Opening to the Monument, London-bridge. Established A.D. 1700

INFANTS' NEW FEEDING BOTTLES.—From the "Lancet":—"We have seldom seen anything so beautiful as the Feeding-Bottles introduced by Mr. ELAM." 196, Oxford-street. Whether for weaning, rearing by hand, or occasional feeding, they are quite unrivalled. 7s. 6d. each.

A MINERAL TOOTH, the best that can be made, for 5s.; a complete set, 25s. filing, 2s. 6d.; at Mr. R. FOSBERY'S, Surgeon-Mechanical Dentist, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury. Established 30 years. Daily from Ten to Six

NEW MUSIC, &c.

ARGYLL GALOP. By HENRI LAURENT. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 3s. BOOSEY and SONS, 28, Holles-street

MARGUERITE POLKA. By HENRI LAURENT. Second Edition. Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s. BOOSEY and SONS Musical Library, 28, Holles-street

ONE HUNDRED MELODIES for the CONCERTINA, arranged by GEORGE CASE. Price 3s. Just published by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

NEW CORNET TUTOR.—Second Edition, price 5s., containing Fifty-five Progressive Lessons, The UNIVERSAL CORNOPEAN TUTOR. Edited by STANDEN JONES, including above 100 Exs. chosen by Caussinus Forrester, Cornaud, &c. The best work for this instrument that has ever appeared. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street

MISS DOLBY'S NEW SONG, "The Green Trees whispered low and mild." The poetry by DOUGLAS JERROLD. BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street

MISS LOUISA VINNING'S NEW SONGS, sung at the Crystal Palace with immense success. 1. "The Swan of the Bay." 2. "Alfred David." Price 3s. each. The Music sung by Frank Mori. Price 3s. 6d. each

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street

SIMS REEVES'S NEW SONG, "Come into the Garden, Maud." The poetry by ALFRED TENNYSON, the music by M. W. BALFE. Price 3s.

Green Trees whispered low and mild." The poetry by DOUGLAS JERROLD. BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street

MADAME OURY'S "Annie Laurie," brilliant Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S "La Mia Letizia," brilliant Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 4s. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

GREEN'S LITTLE SONGS for LITTLE SINGERS.—Now edition superbly illustrated in Colours 12 Songs, 2s. each. Complete in one vol., cloth, price 6s. BOOSEY and SONS, 28, Holles-street.

SERENADE QUADRILLE. By BALFE With superb Portrait of Miss Hayes. Price 3s. BOOSEY and SONS, 28, Holles-street.

BOOSEY and SONS' MUSICAL LIBRARY. —100,000 works are in circulation, including above 2000 Operas in every shape. Subscription 1½ Guinea per annum. Full particulars gratis and post free. BOOSEY and SON, 28, Holles-street

CASE'S FOUR-GUINEA CONCERTINA, with Forty-eight Keys, in mahogany frame and mahogany case. The sweetest musical instrument manufactured. Just published, 100 Melodies for Concertina. Arranged by George Case. Price 3s. And the Tutor of the Concertina Book for the Concertina, 2s. 6d. Sent Post Free. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street, London.

FARMER'S EVENING STAR WALTZES, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Solo, 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s. 6d. WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Postage-free

FARMER'S FIRST-LOVE WALTZES. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Solo, 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s. 6d.; Orchestral parts 5s. Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Postage-free.

FARMER'S IMPRESS QUADRILLES. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Solo, 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s. 6d.; Orchestral parts 5s. Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Postage-free.

THE PRIMROSE WALTZES, by W. H. MONTGOMERY. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Solo, 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s. 6d.; Orchestral parts 5s. Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Postage-free.

FARMER'S PIANOFORTE TUTOR.—"It is undoubtedly the most useful and best instruction book for its purpose we have seen."—Musical World. Price 4s. Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

FARMER'S MAID of the VALLEY WALTZES. Illustrated by Brandard. Solo, 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s. 6d.; Orchestral parts 5s. Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Post-free.

FARMER'S IMPERIAL PRINCE QUADRILLES. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Solo, 3s.; Duets, 4s. Septet parts, 3s. 6d.; Orchestral parts 5s. Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Post-free

FARMER'S ANNIE SCHOTTISCHE. Illustrated. Solo, 2s.; Septet parts, 2s. 6d.; Orchestral parts, 5s. Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

G. MACFARREN'S LITTLE CLARINA'S LESSON-BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, in Two Parts. Price 4s. 6d. each part. Complete in one vol., 8s. post-free. JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123 Cheapside.

MISS P. HORTON.—The NEW SONGS in Mr. and Mrs. Reed's (late Miss P. Horton) amusing Entertainment, "Gather me and try": "Love makes the Home Sweet." Are published by CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. 201, Regent-street.

MOZART'S DON GIOVANNI and FIDELIO, newly arranged for the piano, as Solos and Duets, with all the Airs for Flute, Violin, and Violoncello, by W. H. CALLCOTT. Price 4s. each. CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' NEW WALTZ, SPIRITS of the RHINE. R. MILLS and SONS, 40, New Bond-street.

NEW SONG. SPRING BLOSSOMS. Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER. Price 2s. 6d. Also, by the same Composer, the following Songs, some elegant form of "Summer Days," "Autumn Fruits," and "Winter Evergreens," completes the charming assortment. Price 2s. 6d. each. Also, by the same Composer, "Spring Blossoms" will, if asked, take the lead, as it is most decidedly the favourite.

London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—The LANGUAGE of the EYE, as sung with the most distinguished success by Miss Poole, encored nightly at the Princess's Theatre. Composed by C. HODGSON. Price 2s.; postage-free. Caution.—This is the only edition sung by Miss Poole.

DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford street.

NEW SONG.—THINE FOR EVER. By the Author of "Will you love me then as now?" "Dearest, then, I'll love you now." &c. Price 2s., postage-free. This beautiful ballad possesses all the charms, both with regard to words and music, that secured for its predecessor that immense popularity which they deservedly enjoyed. DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

COME INTO the GARDEN, MAUD; and THINE for EVER. Poetry by TENNYSON. Music by W. H. MONTGOMERY. Each by post for 18 stamps. 1st Month Caroline Rose, and While I my Banjo Play. Words by Mrs. Stowe. Music by W. H. Montgomery. 6d. each, by post for 7 stamps. Also, Charles Mackay's fine song, John Brown.—"I wish Holmes I can spend." 6d.; post-free, 7 stamps. Published, with Beautiful Accompaniments, in the MUSICAL BOUQUET, at the Office, 192, High Holborn.

MY MARY ANNE and BOBBING AROUND QUADRILLES. By W. H. MONTGOMERY. 6d. each; both by post for 18 stamps. My Mary Anne and Bobbing Around Polka. 6d. each; or both by post for 7 stamps. MUSICAL BOUQUET Office, 192, High Holborn.

WESTROP'S 100 LITTLE SONGS for LITTLE SINGERS, price 1s.; by post, 13 stamps. Music for 1 words, as solos or duets, with piano accompaniments. Also Westrop's 100 Psalms and Hymns, for three voices, and Westrop's 100 Sacred Solos, Carmina Sacra, price 1s. each, in elegant wrapper; by post, 13 stamps. Either of the three books, bound in cloth, 1s. 6d.; by post, 20 stamps.—MUSICAL BOUQUET Office, 192, High Holborn.

HAIL the MIGHTY WARRIORS BRAVE! New Song, written and composed by Mrs. MACKENZIE WILSON. 2s. 6d.

"This song abounds with excellent points. The melody is rich and flowing, and affords a full expression of the heroic tone meant with deep patriotism in the words. We heartily recommend it."

DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

CHEAPEST MUSICAL REPOSITORY in ENGLAND. All NEW MUSIC HALF-PRICE; Solfeé Music at One Fourth and a Third. Country Orders executed. Catalogues, one stamp.—D'ALCORN, 18, Rathbone-place, Oxford-street.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

LIBRARY of DANCE MUSIC.—A Collection of the most popular Dance Music, by ALLEN, KOENIG, &c., &c., easily set, fitted, or arranged for Pianoforte. Price of each, as Solo or Duet, 1s. postage-free

1 Orfordian Polka
2 Olga Waltz
3 Bohemian Polka
4 Original Marches
5 Reward Landler
6 Post-horn Galop
7 Burd of Paradise Waltz
8 Yellow Polka
9 Fleur de Marie Waltz
10 Gerster Polka
11 Pas des Fleurs
12 Fairy-bell Galop
13 Valse d'Amour.
14 Imperial Polka
15 Napoleon Quadrille
16 Rosa del Prado Waltz
17 Jetty Treffz Polka
18 Storm March Galop
19 Mazourka Quadrille
20 Rose du Bal Waltz
21 Rina Polka
22 Mazourka Waltz
23 Polka
24 Polka
25 Jullien's Last Quadrille, set complete, 2s. W

D'EGVILLE'S NEW LANCERS for SIX PAIRS. Just published for Pianoforte, by Louis D'Egville, with a full description of the figures for sixteen persons. Price 3s., postage-free.—JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

REFLECTIONS on CHURCH MUSIC, for the Use of Choirs in General. By CARL ENGEL. Price 2s. 6d. "Although this volume is published at the low price of half-a-crown its contents are of great value. Clergymen of every denomination should direct the attention of their choirs to this publication."—Musical Standard. "Every Churchman should purchase it."—Musical Times. "Should be in the hands of every choir-master."—Musical World. "Will be found most useful."—Morning Post. "Deserves the most careful and the most comfortable Winter Cloak. The price is within the reach of every one."—Morning Herald. "Should be in the hands of every choir-master."—Musical Standard

RELICS FROM THE BURIED CITY OF BRAHMUNABAD, IN SIND.

POTTERY, FRAGMENTS OF MILLS, ETC.

We have been favoured by Lieut.-Colonel Sykes, F.R.S., with the following very interesting communication illustrative of the accompanying Engravings of the original objects.

(To the Editor of the Illustrated London News.)

With characteristic liberality and good taste you purpose to furnish engravings in your Journal of objects recently dug out of the buried city of Brahmunabad, in Sind, a quasi-Eastern Pompeii. The questions will necessarily be asked "when" and "how" was the city buried? and "where" is its particular locality? I will endeavour to answer these questions in the few words which your space only can allow.

In regard to the "when," the evidence of Kufic coins would seem to indicate that the city was destroyed not very long after the Arab occupation of Sind, probably in the eighth century A.D.; and the traces of Buddhist, and the absence of Brahminical, remains, rather support than militate against this date.

The "how" is answered by an earthquake. The destruction was apparently sudden and complete; for some skeletons of the inhabitants are found prostrate in doorways, as if caught in flight; some are crouched for refuge in corners of rooms; and in one instance the corner of a brick, as if from a fallen wall, has penetrated a skull. The walls are levelled, and in their fall appear to have crushed by their weight even stone tables and benches. Such of the houses as have been excavated, not only contain the usual domestic furniture, but the materials of the several trades in process of being worked up: cut and rough cornelian stones and progressive test impressions of a seal-engraver; iron ore in several crucibles arrested in the process of manipulation for its conversion into cakes of the celebrated wootz steel. These and other facts, combined with the circumstance of the city being upon the bank of an ancient bed of the mighty Indus, which could only have been turned into new channels by throes of nature, leave little doubt of the agency which caused the destruction of the city. Nor is it unreasonable to believe that this earthquake not only destroyed Brahmunabad, and some other cities and towns in Sind, the remains of which are observable, but simultaneously it may have buried the city of Ballibhipura in Kattywar which was flourishing when the Chinese traveller, Huan Tsang, visited it in the seventh century, but which disappeared from history after that period, and is now eighteen feet under the surface. Equally also may the same earthquake have occasioned the destruction, by the influx of the sea, of the celebrated Hindoo Temple of Dwarka in Goojerat, mention of which is made in the Vishnu Puran of the ninth century and which is associated with the popular demigod Krishna, who lost his life near to Dwarka, and who, probably, was no mythical personage. The upheaving of the land possibly displaced the sea from the area now constituting the Runn, between Kattywar and Kutch, the Indus taking its new course by bursting through its previous barrier of a hilly range at Sukkur and Bukkur. Such speculations, if well founded, would admit of interpretations of Arrian's text of Alexander's Descent of the Indus, which are otherwise puzzling.

With respect to the "whereabouts" of Brahmunabad (which, by-the-by, can scarcely have been its ancient name unless in the sense in which Arrian considered Brahmins—οἱ δὴ σοφισταὶ τοῖ ἰνδοῖς εἰσιν—

CHESSMEN, PORTION OF CHESS-BOARD, DICE, ETC.

RELICS FROM THE BURIED CITY OF BRAHMUNABAD, IN SIND.

—"qui quidem Sophistæ sive sapientes apud Indos habentur." If your readers will take up a map of Sind and draw a line a little east from Hyderabad, at a distance of about thirty-five miles it would pass through the site of the ruined city, the walls of which are traceable for 3 miles 7 furlongs 180 yards by perambulator, the area within the walls being a mass of hillocks mounds, and fallen walls.

With these introductory observations I consider a description of the articles figured in the drawings is all that can be given for your space does not admit of critical comment. The public are indebted to the disinterested and liberal zeal of Mr. A. F. Bellasis, of the Bombay Civil Service, Collector of the Hyderabad division of Sind, for these curious relics of bygone times. Mr. Bellasis made the excavations at his own expense, and was good enough to present to me the relics which your drawings will illustrate, and which relics are to be seen at the India House.

Figures 1 are vessels in pottery.

Figs. 2 are glazed pottery or earthenware, or china. The forms of some of these vessels are graceful and classical, and will bear comparison with specimens of Etruscan and Greek art.

Figs. 3 are movable covers of water-vessels.

Mr. Bellasis, in speaking of the Pottery, says -

I found large quantities in great varieties, and much of it of a very superior description to any I see now-a-days in Sind. A good deal of the pottery was glazed in colours of great brilliancy, and some of the vessels are of a kind of earthenware or china. Pieces of glass and crystal were also found, both in the excavations and on the surface of the ruins, in quantities, and the glass of all kinds of colours. Fragments of cups, bottles, and platters were very numerous. Some of the glass was beautifully stained of a deep blue colour, and other portions were worked in raised and ribbed patterns displaying a high standard of art in their manufacture. Stones for grinding grain, others for grinding curry-stuff, and some for mixing paints, several stones for sharpening knives and tools; several large pieces of korundum, or emery, also used by cutlers to sharpen swords and instruments; quantities of cornelians and cornelian chips, and agates, and other pretty stones, both beautifully turned, of ivory, agate, and marble; coins, chiefly of copper, some few of silver; beads and ornaments of cornelian and glass in every variety.

I may mention, in addition to the above, one peculiarity of the Brahmunabad pottery, that many of the flat vessels, plates, &c., are of clay, and are veneered, as it were, one-eighth of an inch thick with porcelain or china an art, or practice, of which we have not any specimens from other countries than Sind.

Figs 4 are two stone short-legged tables, of which many were found, but all crushed by the fall of the walls. One of these tables Mr. Bellasis describes as of red sandstone, similar to that now found at Porebunder in Kutch. The slab or table is square, with a large circular space in the centre, the corner pieces being ornamented with peacocks and snakes. This circular space is slightly depressed, and on one of the sides of the slab is a bull's head, with the mouth open for the escape of liquids poured upon the slab. In this specimen the four corner feet are panelled, and carved with bas-relief figures, two on each foot. Two feet are wanting, but on the two found, the figures are, a lion on one panel, and on the other a warrior armed with sword and shield. On the other foot are two female figures—one playing the surindah, a kind of guitar still in use. The other female appears to be admiring herself in a looking-glass, which she holds in one hand, while with the other she is dressing her hair. These feet are connected with each other by a cornice of open tracery of great beauty, running along the sides of the slab—the whole forming a beautiful specimen of carving.

Fig. 5 is a grinding-stone with a roller, for pulverising curry ingredients, grinding paints, &c.

Figs. 6 are fragments of a two-stone mill for grinding corn, and which is still in general use for that purpose throughout India. Similar mills were found at Pompeii.

Fig. 7 is one of several crucibles containing lumps of iron ores: these were placed in furnaces, and the iron smelted into plano-convex cakes resembling the cakes of the celebrated wootz steel.

Figs. 8 are balls of agate and cornelian; which, together with rough and cut cornelians, are evidently from the house of a lapidary.

POTTERY, IRONWORK, GLASS, ETC.

Fig. 9 is a bull made of pottery. Many of these were found: also horses and camels, &c., used as toys for children.

Figs. 10 are some chessmen, belonging to different-sized sets; and Figs. 11, long ivory dice. These are thus described by Mr. Bellasis:—"In this same house we were further repaid by finding nearly a complete set of ivory chessmen—one set white, the other black. The kings and queens are about three inches high, and the pawns about one; the other pieces of different intermediate heights. All have been made for use on a board with holes, for each piece has a peg in it, similar to chessmen used nowadays on board ship, to prevent the pieces being easily knocked down, and the game disturbed. The ivory of these is in a very decayed state, and very brittle; every particle of animal matter seemed completely exhausted, and the ivory reduced to a substance not unlike lime or chalk. Dice were also found; some square cubes of ivory, numbered exactly as dice used at the present day, others, the long dice still used by the natives to play the game Punchweshee"

Figs. 12 may have been portions of the chessboard, inlaid in tortoise-shell and ebony.

Fig. 13 is a piece of carved wood, which has become charcoal from having been burnt under the pressure of the fallen walls. The carving is in good taste, representing foliage, and there are traces of a human figure and a kind of griffin.

Fig. 14 is a bronze ornament, the exact counterpart of the object which surmounts the standard in Buddhist sculptures and paintings in the Cave Temples, and is a Buddhist emblem, meaning Buddha, Dharma, Sunga—i.e., "First Cause," "Religion," and "Congregation" or Church; but it has also the form of the Hindoo Trisul or Siva's trident.

Figs. 15 are also bronze ornaments; one the handle of a dagger or other small weapon, and the other is a very graceful ornament for some object which is not apparent.

Figs. 16 are crucibles, for purifying gold and silver, and must have been placed in muffles.

Fig. 17 is an oil lamp of pottery.

Figs. 18 are finger-rings—one of metal, the other of glass.

Figs. 19, are a variety of cornelian and agate beads, armlets, and ornaments, strung together.

Figs. 20 are some curious cornelian ornaments, figured with various patterns in white lines on a perfectly smooth surface; and, after having withstood the damp of ages, were, when dug up, quite fresh, and the device indelible, being neither intaglio nor cameo. These indicate the knowledge of a curious and important art.

Fig. 21 is a small glass utterdan, or bottle for otto of roses—testifying to a knowledge of the art of blowing and cutting glass existing in the eighth century.

Figs. 22 are fragments of the necks of glass bottles.

Figs. 23 are the moulds for ear-rings and other female ornaments. They are of a soft stone, upon which the device was cut, and then the liquid gold was poured into the incisions.

The coins found by Mr. Bellasis, at Brahmunabad, were put into the hands of Mr. Edward Thomas, of the Bengal Civil Service, a distinguished numismatist, and he gives the following description of three which were the most legible. One peculiar feature of these coins is the singular minuteness of a large portion of them, for, with our present knowledge of prices, their exchangeable value is scarcely appreciable:—

"No. 1 is a coin of Mansúr bin Jamhúr, the last Governor of Sind, on the part of the Umaiyide Khalifs of Baghdád, circa 750, A.D. On the obverse are the remains of the Kalimah. 'There is no God but God,' &c. On the reverse field are the words 'Mohammed is the Apostle of God.' On the margin is the following imperfect legend:—'In the name of God (this copper coin) was struck at al-Mansúrah, under the orders of Mansúr.'

"No. 2 is the reverse of a second and nearly similar coin

"No. 3 is the obverse of a coin of a Governor entitled Mohammed, whose name may be seen in the second line of the legend. The word below, in the third line, I suppose to be the designation of his tribe; but as yet I have been unable to identify it. The reverse impression on this coin is altogether illegible; but, from parallel specimens of Abdulrehman's coinage, it may be assumed to have borne the quatrefoil symbol peculiar to the locality, with the Governor's name repeated, in association with the ordinary 'Mahommed is the Apostle of God.'"

SINDIAN COINS.

W. H. SYKES.

THE SNOWSTORM IN THE UNITED STATES.

The American newspapers received by the last mail contain full reports of the inconveniences arising out of the snow blockade to which the country had been subjected from Sunday, the 25th ult. to the following Saturday. The New York Courier and Enquirer of January 31, in speaking of the extent of country over which the snowstorm had passed, says:—"The territory of snow banks, formed by the storm of Sunday and Monday, from all we can learn, extends over a tract about 700 miles long, from north-east to south-west, and 200 to 300 in breadth. From the Canada line to the southernmost part of Maryland the snow is of an almost uniform depth—a very rare occurrence. The Western limit of the storm in this State was in the neighbourhood of Utica, while in Pennsylvania and Maryland it extends farther westward."

The papers are full of stories regarding the sufferings of railway travellers and others exposed to the weather. The train on the New Jersey Railroad, which left New York for Philadelphia on Sunday evening at six o'clock, proceeded with some little detention until it reached a plain, or "prairie," as one of the passengers called it, between Trenton and Bordentown—about two miles on the other side of the latter place. Here the engine stopped for want of steam, and efforts were made to get up a full head. The snow lay tolerably level on the track, and there was only one drift, and that not very heavy, some distance in advance. The efforts to get up steam proved ineffectual, and the engine soon froze up, leaving the train two miles from any house and exposed to the force of a blast of unparalleled fury for about twelve hours—from half-past ten o'clock on Sunday night until about the same time on Monday morning. There were about sixty passengers on the cars, including a number of ladies, and the discomfort of their situation can be easily imagined. The snow drove in fine particles before a blinding gale, and penetrated through every crevice of the cars. Two or three gentlemen lost their hats in trying to get from one car to another. No one would venture back to Bordentown, and no provisions could be procured. All the fences along the road were placed under contribution to furnish fire-wood, and very fortunately a good supply of that indispensable article was secured, although the cold was so intense that, except in the immediate vicinity of the stoves in the cars, it was impossible to sit still with any degree of comfort. To add to the delights of the situation the train stood just on the edge of the canal, which was the only visible object, except snow, in the flat landscape. The train reached Philadelphia on Monday afternoon, at six o'clock p.m. after a journey of twenty-four hours.

A circumstance occurred at Philadelphia on Monday night, says the Courier and Enquirer, which was but a single instance out of the many annoying incidents growing out of the late violent snowstorm, and of the consequent blockade by snowdrifts, for forty-eight hours. It seems that a wedding had been arranged to come off between a lady of Philadelphia, and a gentleman from the interior of the State. The marriage was to take place late on Monday afternoon, and cards were out for a reception in the evening. Extensive preparations were made for the event, and a large company was invited. The storm created some misgivings in the minds of the bride and her friends, as the groom was to come to the city by one of the trains during Monday. There were no means of telegraphing to the happy man to ascertain whether he had left home, or whether he was snowed up there, or on the road hither. It was too late to call back the invitations, and at all events there was much uncertainty as to the necessity for a postponement. In the mean time night was coming on, and things were becoming gloriously uncertain; the bride and her maids were attired for the event, the clergyman had even arrived, and all was ready, except that the groom had not yet made his appearance, nor was there much prospect of his doing so. In course of time the guests began to arrive, and as they could not be turned away again the best face possible was put upon matters, and the good things provided were demolished just as though the wedding had taken place. The groom has not yet been heard from.

The blockade was peculiarly embarrassing to business men. One gentleman from Rahway, with a note due at New York Bank, attempted to walk to that city, but only succeeded in reaching Elizabeth. Another Rahway man in a similar position succeeded in reaching New York with a sleigh.

The office of the Albany Evening Journal on Monday morning presented an Arctic scene. The intense cold (21 deg. below zero) had frozen the water in the steam-pipes. The presses could not budge with the stiffened ink. The heating-tubes were cold as a stone. The windows, completely covered by frost and snow, excluded the light, and the compositors, with hats and overcoats on, were slowly sticking the icy type by gaslight. No mails from anywhere, congealed ink, frosty pens and scissors, rendering the work of making up the paper one of some difficulty.

OPENING OF THE FRENCH LEGISLATURE.

THE Session for 1857 was opened on Monday last in the Palace of the Tuileries by the Emperor. The ceremony, which was the same nearly in all respects as on the last occasion, took place in the Hall of the Marshals. The throne was placed on a platform before the embrasure of the window looking on the garden. On the right of the Emperor were his uncle Prince Jerome Napoleon, and Prince Louis Lucien, who came to Paris to be present on Sunday for the opening, and on his left Prince Napoleon and Prince Murat. On either side, after the Princes of the family having rank at the Court, were the Grand Almoner, the Grand Chamberlain, the Cardinals, the Ministers, the Marshals of France, and Admirals. To the right of the throne were the members of the Diplomatic Corps; in front, the President, Vice-Presidents, Grand Referendaries, Masters of Requests, Aides-de-Camp, Prefects, and the Legislative Corps and the Deputies. To the left of the Sovereign were the Senators, the Court of Cassation, and the Council of State, the representatives of the clergy of the various creeds, the Prefect of the Seine, and Police the General commanding the National Guard, and his staff, the General and officers of the Imperial Guard, those of the Army of Paris, the First Military Division, and a number of the superior officers of the army. The high gallery that runs round the hall was reserved for the ladies and the Princesses of the Imperial fam.. and the Grand Master and Mistress and Ladies of the Palace had the Empress and the Princess Mathilde as also the Ladies specially invited. Her Majesty's place was in the centre, and opposite the Emperor's throne. It is hardly necessary to say that all present were in full dress; the usual forms of precedence and etiquette were observed on entering and on leaving the hall. The Emperor, whose arrival was announced by a salute of 101 guns, appeared at 2 o'clock. The whole assemblage rose to receive him. He at once took his place on the throne, and the Grand Master of the Ceremonies called out—"Gentlemen, be seated."

The Emperor then stood up, and read in an audible voice the discourse, as follows:—

Gentlemen Senators, Gentlemen Deputies.—Last year my opening speech concluded with an invocation to Divine Providence. I prayed it to guide our efforts in the path most conformable to the interests of humanity and civilisation.

Last prayer seems to have been heard.

Peace has been signed, and the difficulties of detail which obstructed the execution of the Treaty of Paris have been fortunately surmounted.

Its dispute between the King of Prussia and the Helvetic Confederation has lost all warlike character, and has enabled as soon to hope for a favourable solution.

The understanding re-established between the three protecting Powers of Greece henceforth renders unnecessary the prolongation of the sojourn of English and French troops in the Piræus.

If I can not like misunderstand ng has arisen on the subject of the affairs of Naples, it must still be attributed to that desire which equally animates the Government of Queen Victoria and my own to act everywhere in favour of humanity and of civilisation.

Now that the best understanding prevails between all the great Powers, we ought to endeavour seriously to organise and adopt the strength and the repose of the nation at home. We ought to struggle against the evils which a prosperous season does not entirely exempt from.

Our mission, though its object is the moral improvement and the material welfare of the people, advances almost imperceptibly, like an army. Its victories are not gained without long efforts and without time. Those rapid means which facilitate communications and open new roads to commerce shift interests, and throw backward those countries which are still without them; those most useful machines which multiply manual labour at first throw men out of work, and for a time leave many hands unoccupied; those mines which send throughout the world an unexpected influx hitherto unknown—that increase of public fortune which multiplies consumption tenfold tends to cause a fluctuation, and to increase the value of everything; that imperishable source of wealth called "credit," creates wonders, and the abuse of these speculation involves the ruin of many private individuals. Hence the necessity, without stopping progress, of assisting those who cannot keep up with its accelerated movement.

Some must be stimulated, others kept in check. We must feed the activity of the panting, anxious, exacting society which in France expects everything from the Government, to which, however, it must oppose the minds of the people and the calculation of common sense.

I am glad to add to first duties our duty. The country is prosperous, it must be admitted, for despite the wars which hamper the rule of progress has not stopped. The produce of the indirect taxes, both as a consequence of the public prosperity, exceed in 1856 by more than 30 millions the sum of the preceding year. Since the restoration of the Empire revenues have increased of themselves to the amount of 210,000,000f., deducting the new taxes. Nevertheless, there is much suffering among a portion of the people, and as long as the influence does not grant us a good harvest the millions given by private charity and by the Government will be but feeble palliatives.

Let us redouble our efforts to remedy the evils which are beyond human foresight.

Various departments have been afflicted this year by the scourge of inundations.

Everything leads me to hope that science will succeed in subduing nature. I make it a point of honour that in France rivers, like revolutions, must return to their beds, or find new ones when they leave them. A cause of anxiety no less serious agitates the public mind. When a crisis takes place there is no sort of false rumour or false doctrine which ignorance or malevolence does not propagate. They even succeed, every 10, in alarming public industry, as if the Government could desire anything else than the development and prosperity. It is therefore the duty of good citizens to spread everywhere the wise opinions which enlighten and especially to encourage those doubtful hearts which, at the first breath, lose courage and let capital escape from fear of imaginary dangers, and thus create real ones by their own discouragement and their cowardice.

Considering the many demands of the moment, I have resolved to reduce the expenditure without interrupting the great works, without compromising what has been begun, and to diminish certain taxes while maintaining others for the interests of the State.

The budget of 1857 will be presented to you before all anticipated expenses and facts established. The produce of the taxes will suffice to pay for the ordinary expenses.

The public services in all its branches will be provided for without our having to depend upon the future.

The budget of War and of the Navy has been reduced to fair limits, so as to keep up the cadres, to respect the promotions so gloriously earned, and to maintain military instruction on the footing of the country.

Down to the year 1860 the army contingent has been fixed at 100,000 men. Hostilities having ceased, I have hoped that it would be at once reduced to 90,000 men; but I have deferred this reduction of 10,000 men, which will have great importance—about two-thirds of these conscripts will only remain two years in the ranks at least from 1858, a new rule which will furnish to the country, in case of urgent necessity, 40,000 men more than it would have done in 1856. The reduction in the effective strength will allow an improvement in the pay of the lower grades and of the rank and file, a step which the decrease of provisions renders indispensable. For the same reason the Budget allows 5,000,000f. to commence an increase in the pay of subalterns and to keep in hands who in the midst of hard privations have given proofs of long devotion. I have also had in view not neglecting in the distribution for retirements the claims of those old soldiers of which I have so often spoken to you. Despite the increase of outfit I shall propose to you to grant to the soldier on leaving the service a sum sufficient for the first months. The addition of a number of second class companies and conformably to the wish expressed at various times in the Legislative Body, I shall take into consideration the composition of a tax on mobile property.

An idea, long abandoned and all but forgotten, returns to my mind under the form of a requirement to-day. Unhappily, the cholera, as is known in those parts for fifty years, has arrested the progress of colonisation. A plan is under consideration for the transfer of those establishments to a more favourable climate. Algeria, which hardly a few years since was making such progress, is in great part ruined by the ravages of the cholera. Its future prosperity depends upon the development of its resources. You will, according to circumstances, the measures best suited for the development of the colony.

I call your attention to a fill the object of which is to fertilise the lands of the south. The progress of agriculture ought to be one of the objects of our constant care, for upon its improvement or its neglect depends the prosperity or the decline of empires.

Another project of law, due to the suggestion of the Marshal Minister of War, will be presented to you. It is a complete military penal code, which will, in one body of laws, harmonise the various penal institutions, the scattered and sometimes contradictory laws passed since 1790. You will I am sure be happy to attach your name to a work of this importance.

Gentlemen Deputies, As the Session is the last of your Legislature, allow me to express to you my thanks for the attached and active support which you have given to my Government. You have proved to me by your constant devotion to all the interests which have presented themselves to you in the country, your good will to support me during the war. You shared my sorrow during the sad days of the Italian fatality, you sustained my joy when Heaven granted to a glorious prince and to a beloved country the pledge of an unbroken line to introduce into France a new element of stability in the popular wishes and interests. It was a difficult task to frame and for which real patriotism was required to maintain the union between the two legislative bodies to prevent the tribune and the existing confidence which brought about the fall or the rise of Ministries by a free yet calm and serious discussion, was a signal service rendered to the country, and even to liberty—for liberty has not more formidable enemies than the outbursts of passion and the violence of language. Strong in the support of the great bodies of the State, and in the devotion of the army, strange especially in the support of that people which knows that every detail of my life is devoted to it and to the interests I have to confirm a future full of hope.

France, without infringing on the rights of any one, has resumed in the world the rank which was her due, and may with safety give herself up to everything great which the genius or peace can produce.

May God never cease to protect her, and soon may it be said of our epoch what a statesman—an illustrious and national historian has written of the Convention—"Its dissolution reigned everywhere, and while over the most moral souls the heart and passions of art feel happy in the public welfare

On concluding this discourse the Grand Master of the Ceremonies, by order of the Emperor, called on the Minister of State to inform the deputies what subjects were to be the first Session to come forward with the budget. Their names were called; they advanced to the throne, received the formal "yes" from the Minister, and each, holding forth his right hand, took the oath of "Fidelity to the Emperor, obedience to the Constitution and fidelity to the laws." The Minister of State then declared the Session opened for 1857 and invited the senators and members of the Legislative Body to assemble on the morrow in their respective places in order to commence their labours. Immediately after the Emperor first, and then the Empress, retired with their respective cortège in the same order as they had entered. The sitting then closed, the assembly separated, and a second salute of 101 guns announced to the people of Paris that the ceremony of opening the Chambers was over. The weather was beautiful and the usual crowds were attracted to the spot to view the proceedings.

TRANSPORTATION.*

By the provisions of the 16 and 17 Vict., c. 99, the ancient terms of transportation were commuted into shorter terms of penal servitude in England and also penitentiary powers were entrusted to the Judges. Under the new law a scale of penal servitude was established. The minimum was fixed at four years; the higher periods ranged from four to six, from six to eight, and from eight to ten years, or for life. As far as commutation is concerned, the new law embraces the whole of the periods for which sentences of transportation used to be awarded. When the colonies, with the exception of Western Australia, refused any longer to receive convicts, there were in the prisons at home about 6370 of these unhappy persons under sentence of seven and ten years' transportation, and some for even longer periods. At the same juncture sentences of seven and ten years' transportation were abolished by Act of Parliament so that it became imperative to adopt some other system by which those criminals should be punished. Formerly, or from about twenty years since, it had been the practice to commute all sentences of seven years' transportation into imprisonment in the hulks for half the period, provided the conduct of the prisoner recommended him to merciful consideration. This was a datum, in some degree, by which the periods of penal servitude might be regulated; it was also a rule made known to every convict on the first day he entered a prison that if he was exemplary in behaviour, a seven years' man might be released with a ticket of leave in two years, and a ten years' man in about three years. Giving due weight to these old regulations, Lord Palmerston, in 1852, being then Home Secretary, determined to relax in some measure the rule for making the convicts serve half the period; and in conformity with that determination the Act of 1853 received the sanction of the Legislature. As Western Australia, the only colony now accessible, could not receive the 6370 convicts under sentence of transportation, no alternative remained but to commute that sentence into imprisonment, and after incarceration for half the period of transportation they would have been entitled to pardon according to the ancient precedents; but, as Colonel Jebb, from whose evidence this narrative is composed, states: "In order to provide some additional security to the public, powers were taken for granting licenses in the nature of a revocable pardon, and such licenses are the tickets of leave, of which so much has been heard. Certain restrictions were thus enforced, and a degree of control maintained during the whole period for which they had been transported, the operation of which may have restrained many from the commission of crime."

Gibraltar and Bermuda are penal settlements, under strict military discipline, the convicts labouring on Government works. But the old penal colonies of Australia were established on other principles There, the object was to cultivate the land and increase the breed of sheep and, in course of time to found a new empire That policy has succeeded. As the descendants of the first free settlers and the unsocial children of the early convicts are multiplied, acquired wealth, and became refined in their manners, they naturally resulted at the continued influx of the riches of England on their shores, justly apprehensive of a moral taint on society, while the working classes objected to the competition of the convicts in their labour market They therefore prevailed on the Government to discontinue the system, and even Western Australia only consented to recognise it on condition that the convicts should be selected from the least depraved classes—a condition which has not been honourably observed on all occasions. Our Government are anxious to disperse some new locality on the immense continent of New Holland, and Albert River, at the head of the Gulf of Carpentaria, is now deemed an eligible district, it being uninhabited, except by some aborigines, and occasionally visited by nomadic tribes Before this experiment is tried, it may be well to make a few remarks as to the best means of carrying it out, taking as our guide the experience of the early colonies formed into penal settlements.

The fundamental principle of such an establishment requires that a class of free settlers, possessed of some capital and skill, should be able to live secure by the side of the penal convicts. Government is bound to assist both at the commencement. The free settler must be attracted by the certainty and early prospect of acquiring, if not wealth, a comfortable subsistence, and the strongest inducement to his voluntary emigration into a new country is the ownership of land By the existing regulations of the Australian colonies, £1 per acre is charged for the freehold of the soil; and the purchaser must take a block on those terms, portions of which may not be worth 1s. per acre. That rule was enforced to prevent persons buying large tracts at a low rate and leaving them waste; and, though wisdom dictated this precaution, it has been found to operate badly in practice; and all the witnesses agree that the danger apprehended is imaginary In the early settlement of New South Wales a much more liberal, and therefore a much wiser, system was adopted. Government gave the settler his land as a free gift, with food for himself, his family, and assigned servants for eight or nine months, with seed wheat for his first crop, and the loan of cattle from the Crown herds. Then a slight change appears to have been introduced—the settler receiving an acre of land for every 1s. 6d. value he imported, estimated in live or dead stock. The best convicts were assigned to capitalist settlers, while the worst were sent to public works. The old convicts were noted for diligence in turning their hands to anything they were soon completely reformed, and many of them became estimable characters.

In Western Australia the relation of the convicts to the settlers is thus described by the witnesses The convict lives in the house of the settler as an indoor servant. His provisions are found and housroom, with knives and forks, chairs and tables, and every accommodation he requires The ticket-of-leave-man has in addition, as wages, one pound per month. This offer he is compelled to take; so that a scale of wages is fixed by law. Each man is assigned a particular district, which he is not permitted to leave without a pass from the Superintendent of Convicts; and in that district he is at liberty to seek work, and do the best he can for himself. He is obliged to report himself twice a year. He is not allowed to carry fire-arms, independently of these restrictions he is, to all intents and purposes, a free man, except being liable to summary jurisdiction The convict has to pay for his own passage out in proportion to the length of his sentence: a seven years' man has to pay £7 10s.; a ten years' man, £10; and a fifteen years' man, £15. This scale is on the face of it unjust; but Earl Grey, who enacted it thought that the convicts should not have more money in hand than was absolutely necessary during the time of their being on ticket of leave, and they remain in that state till they have paid their passage-money. That debt acquitted, they receive their pardon. Captain Henderson, who gives these details, is asked (951) "What is the expense of sending out a wife and children to the convict?" And he answers, "The charge made against the convict is £7 10s for each adult, and half that for each child." In answer to question 962, referring to the passage of a fifteen years' man, which it requires three years to pay, he says, "It goes towards the expense of his wife and family coming out; it has been allowed to count for his wife and family. They are not obliged to pay for themselves and their wife and family too. The question 963 is thus worded: "Then he has, virtually, nothing more to pay than his own passage, whether his wife and family come out or not?" The Captain answers, "Precisely, but it has his own passage-money will not cover the whole expense he pays the balance." There is a confusion in this evidence which we cannot reconcile. It should, however, be observed that the employer of the convict, who pays him £1 a month, deducts 8s. 4d. a month, and is responsible for it to the convict establishment to cover the passage-money. Of the conduct of these unhappy men it is gratifying to submit to our readers the following testimonial from Mr. Kennedy, the present Governor of Western Australia:—

> There are now 3000 convicts scattered throughout this colony, and such is the peaceful quality prevailing as compared by the full exercise of the moral obligations of civilisation, that a stranger travelling through the colony would never feel himself in the neighbourhood of other than by the mere circumstance of meeting parties peaceably engaged in repairing the roads, executing public works of utility; and I affirm that life and property are felt to be equally as secure as in any portion of the British Empire.

Colonel Jebb, Chairman of the present Board of Management, gave in a return to the House of Commons up to the 11th March of the present year, which it appears that the number of convicts who have, since the passage of the 16 and 17 Vict., c. 99, received orders of license, amounts to 5152; and of these only 447 have been convicted of subsequent offences, or only about eight per cent, showing that the fears excited in many quarters from an ignorance of facts are unwarranted.

Under the new law the number of sentences for transportation has been during the last two years 315 and 325 respectively, and Western Australia could absorb from 600 to 800 annually, but it unfortunately happens that this diminished number is composed of the most desperate characters. Of course this mother country wishes to get rid of its worst criminals, and to make punishment formidable and deterrent; while the colony wishes to receive the best, and make them happy and attached to the soil. The Judges have given it as their opinion that transportation is a deterrent punishment, but Colonel Jebb has arrived at an opposite conclusion, and says that "any number of volunteers might be got at this moment from among the penal servitude men who would gladly go to any colony, if twelve or eighteen months' imprisonment were remitted," and he considers that long periods of imprisonment and penal servitude have greater terrors than transportation.

The Lords' Committee considers that, among existing colonies, Western Australia offers the only field for the continuance of the system of transportation, and, in the event of a new convict settlement being formed, they recommend the head of the Gulf of Carpentaria. They object to the rule which makes the convict pay his passage to Australia, and, in certain cases, the expense of taking out his family, as the ultimate cost falls on the colonist, who has to pay increased wages, as the convict thus recovers the charge from his employer. The Committee think it desirable to revise the provisions of the Act 16 and 17 Vict, c. 99, by which the terms of transportation, as previously existing, were commuted for shorter terms of penal servitude in England. "It may be questioned," they observe, "whether the infringements of the penal sentences, on conduction of their being passed at home, is founded on just principles; and it is certain that this change has placed a new and unnecessary difficulty in the way of well-regulated transportation."

---

MADEIRA COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.—On Wednesday, January 7, the distribution of prizes took place, in presence of his Excellency the Governor, the Very Rev. the Archdeacon of Madeira, and the Rev. R. De Medonen, her Majesty's Inspector of Schools, James Selby, Esq., Judith Vice-Consul; Robert Raymond, Esq., her Majesty's Vice Consul, C. Blandy, Esq., J. Phelps, Esq., the Rev. Wm. Hall Dorsey, head master, and a large parent, and the Dean then delivered an excellent address. He also read a commendatory letter from Mr Donkin, Savilian Professor of Astronomy at Oxford who had sent a prize to the school last year, but the Dean presented the prizes to the successful candidates. The list for the year, including the daily presentation contains the following names: John C. Ross, for all Medal second Mathematical Book, second first Drawing, first Arithmetic, first Geography, third Wollaston's. W. C. Hinton, first Engineering, first Latin, second French, second Drawing, second History, first Wollaston Cobopeta's Prize. Oliver York, first History, first Drawing, Archibald Park, second Latin, third Greek. A. C. Ross, first Elocution, first Medal Arithmetic, second Alison's History, Joseph Ross, fourth Latin, third Arithmetic, second Alison's History, Joseph Pestana, third Latin, third History, second French. H. J. Lidstone, second Algebra, third Wollaston's. John Blandy, third Latin, second Arithmetic, Swimming, R. Pennell, Pocock, second Greek; Gregory W. Cook, first Writing; Oliveira Davies, second Geography; Thomas Dixon, second English. John Dorsey, third English and third Drawing. The following prizes were announced for next year: The annual gold medal, Sir A. Alison's for History, the Wollaston prize for merits, and one for a classical subject by the Dean. The proceedings then terminated.

CRIME IN ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES.—The New York Times comments on the fact that English newspapers contain a great deal more criminal intelligence than American papers. The New York Times says: "If we were to judge by the number of communications and editorials which we find in the English papers about crime, the English must be a most profligate people, and elections, we should be led to the inference that Great Britain was a nation of criminals. Whenever a murder or other great offence is committed in any part of England, Scotland, or Ireland, the London newspapers contain a full account of the matter. But if a murder be committed in Virginia, Mississippi, Arkansas, &c., it is ten to one that the people of the other States will never hear a word about it. The superficial reader of London and American newspapers is apt to suffer from their contents that crime is far more prevalent in England than in America; but the conclusion is by no means sure. By decision of the country into States is the fruitful source of many of the evils of which the people of the different States know very little about the local affairs of the other States, especially of those at a distance. It follows that if we were to judge from the silence of American newspapers in any particular State about crime committed throughout the Union we should be led to the erroneous inference that criminals not very scarce indeed in the model Republic.—New York European.

THE DANUBIAN PRINCIPALITIES.—AUSTRIAN COMMENT ON THE FRENCH NOTE.—The following is from the official Gazette of Milan: "The note of the French official organ, in defending the union of the Principalities thwarts the views of Austria, and of Great Britain who had declared themselves in favour of a separate administration of these provinces. A board of discord thrown into the Lagoon of the 26th of April, 1856, which was concluded for the common welfare of the empire and unfortunately of the Ottoman empire. Austria and England are not responsible for the disorders which have burned roads from the Pruth to the Danube, and which have ruined crops. It is hoped that the question put forward by the Moniteur cannot be solved in a contrary sense. We should like to know what the statesmen of Turkey admit the opportunousness of what the French official organ calls for."

THE RUSSIAN RAILWAY SCHEME.—According to the St. Petersburg mail on the publication of the ukase for the Russian railway scheme, it appears with the particulars already given, the only new feature being a line to the Prussian frontier at Konigsberg. The capital to be equal to forty-five millions sterling in £20 shares, the whole to be expended in ten years. The amount of the first issue is fixed at twelve millions.

---

* "Report from the Select Committee of the House of Lords appointed to inquire into the provisions and operations of the Act 16 and 17 Vict. c. 99, intituled, "An Act to substitute, in certain cases, other punishment in lieu of transportation. With the minutes of evidence."

Memorabilia,

LITERARY, ANTIQUARIAN, SCIENTIFIC, AND ARTISTIC.

"A little chink may let in much light."—OLD PROVERB.

UNPUBLISHED LETTER OF JAMES HOGG TO ALLAN CUNNINGHAM.

The following interesting and most characteristic letter from James Hogg (the Ettrick Shepherd) to his brother bard, Allan Cunningham, have carefully transcribed from the original document; and, to the best of my opinion, it has never been published. If you consider it worthy of mention it is much at your service

WILLIAM JOHN FITZPATRICK.

Kilmacud Manor, Stillorgan, Dublin.

Altrive Lake, Nov. 4, 1832.

My Dear Brother Allan,—Although I have nothing in the world to send you from Yarrow, yet I cannot let our mutual friend John M. Crane leave the house without bearing my respects and kindest wishes to you, and missi'wing you a wee for not coming to see me when in Scotland and letting me see your only daughter who I hope has left her father and mother's native country quite restored to health.

Although the Maid of Elvar appears by the date of your letter to have been sent from London in May, yet so malicious is honest Ebony grown, that it is only between two or three weeks since I received it; but it is quite a gem you may take an old Shepherd's word for it, though it never will be popular in this learned, reforming, canting age. I warned you, and that even before Elder whom you were trying to get into the scrape, that you were throwing pearls before swine, and going to disappoint both your bookseller, said yourself, and you said. "I believe it is very true, but what can a body do but try?" The Shaksspearean* stanza is one, but what can a body do but try?" The Shaksspearean* stanza is true, but what can a body do but try?" The Shaksspearean* stanza is true, but what can a body do but try?" The Shaksspearean* stanza is true

THE WAR WITH CHINA.

INTERIOR OF THE ANUNGHOY BOGUE FORTS, SKETCHED AFTER THEIR DEMOLITION BY THE "NANKIN" AND THE "CALCUTTA."

THE WAR IN CHINA

(From a Correspondent.)

My last letter left me just as the forts at the mouth of the Canton River were being taken. These forts, generally known as the Bocca Tigris, or Bogues, were destroyed in detail, with scarcely any loss on our side—one man or boy killed and three wounded. On the side of the Chinese there was considerable loss, the Mandarins having taken the precaution to remove all the boats from the Wang Tong Island forts, so that when our boats' crews landed the Chinamen had to swim for it. Many of the drowning wretches were picked up by our boats.

Perhaps you remember my mentioning the capture of the Barrier Forts. These are built on the main branch of the Canton River, about six miles below the city. After their first capture, having disabled the guns by spiking or beating the trunnions off, we gave up possession, not caring to have the trouble of occupation. The Chinese, construing our desertion of the place into a defeat or acknowledged weakness, immediately reoccupied their stronghold, and the very night of the mail going down from Canton to Hong-Kong commenced offensive operations by firing into the steamer. Fortunately the shot took effect in the side of the ship without destroying life. This insult, or rather attack, on a defenceless steamer would have been punished by us had not the Chinese by their infatuation brought a fresh enemy into the field, who took the work out of our hands. It appears that the Captain of the American corvette Portsmouth, on his way to Canton in his gig, whilst passing these forts was fired upon without provocation, and had a narrow escape of his life. The next day a man belonging to the Americans was killed whilst sounding off the same place. These repeated insults could not be borne; the two corvettes, Portsmouth and Levant, accordingly proceeded to attack the forts; and, after several days' heavy work, with the loss of five or six men, effectually destroyed the whole of the batteries in that part of the river. The Governor-General of the Two Kwang would offer no apology to the American authorities. "He had warned them," he said, "some days before to leave the neighbourhood, and clear out their ships from the river; their delay, and that only, was the cause of their disaster."

Meanwhile the English Admiral at Canton had been employed in effectually destroying the forts at the head of the Blenheim Passage. These forts are commonly termed Shaming Forts, and after being once captured had been reoccupied by the Chinese. The guns had been bored afresh, and the trunnions braced on by hoops of iron passing over and underneath the gun, so that much annoyance had been given to our ships moored in the neighbourhood. The forts were taken a second time, however, and on this occasion completely dismantled and left a heap of ruins.

Various proclamations and counter notices have been issued by the Chinese and English authorities. The former insist upon the concessions of Sir G. Bonham in 1849 as final and conclusive: he waived the right of entering the city for the time being. But Viceroy Yeh will have it the privilege was relinquished finally and absolutely—a version entirely opposed by our present Governor, Sir J. Bowring. So that it amounts to this: In 1842 a treaty was signed by both empires, by which it was agreed admission into the towns at five ports should be allowed to foreigners after certain preliminaries had been faithfully attended to. This permission was given in each case except at Canton. To enforce the treaty rights Sir John Davis, in 1847, assumed a threatening attitude, destroyed the forts on the river, and menaced the city. By the interference of Keying, the then Governor-General, further advances were delayed for two years. At the expiration of this time Sir G. Bonham again insisted on the fulfilment of the treaty; but, in consequence of the peaceable spirit prevalent at home, and the actual unimportance of the privilege, provided trade was carried on with no interruption, the subject was again dropped.

But now comes the time for the revision of our treaty. In 1854 Sir J. Bowring had proceeded to the Pei-ho to seek an interview with the head authorities as a preparatory step before renewing and reconstructing our articles of peace. He was, however, politely dismissed and bowed out without effecting anything. Since that period nothing has been done, our officials have been treated with marked disrespect, our communications altogether neglected, and the insolence of the populace and officers has become insupportable. This infraction of the treaty, therefore, has given us an excellent opportunity for reasserting our old and undoubted privileges; and nobly has the Admiral exerted himself to bring about so necessary an end. After the destruction of the Shaming Forts nothing occurred till the recapture of the French Folly, a strong fort about a mile below the Factories, which was accomplished with the loss of one man, shot through by a rocket arrow.

INTERIOR OF THE ANUNGHOY BOGUE FORTS, SKETCHED AFTER THEIR DEMOLITION BY THE "NANKIN" AND THE "CALCUTTA."

THE WAR WITH CHINA.

MR. CONSUL PARKES BIDDING ADIEU TO THE OLD CO-HONG MANDARINS.

So that now we are in possession of all the forts, and have shown the Chinese that at any moment we could lay the city itself in ruins. Still the obstinacy of the Chinese will not allow them to yield, and until we receive orders from home things will probably remain as they are. Are we to have another Chinese war? If so, let us at any rate this time see we carry out our undoubted rights effectually and completely, to avoid future difficulties; let us teach these impracticable people a lesson they will not fail to respect and to remember.

Meantime, enjoying the delightful miasma of this wretched river, and the chance of losing my head any day for the 100 dollars offered for it, I am, yours faithfully, E.

December 14, 1856.

(From another Correspondent.)

It is quite amusing to see how readily our ships of war pitch upon fleets of pirates. They may be rebels, but our authorities say that, as they are caught pilfering or plundering sometimes, we can only rank them as pirates. If any one looked into China streets or any of the houses in the neighbourhood of our guards would they not say robbery had been committed? Every house has been broken into and ransacked by our soldiers, sailors, or marines. Even the foreign residences have not passed scathless. The men are not contented with searching for liquor, but even the desks and drawers are forced open. Are our men not as much pirates as the Chinese that we take upon ourselves to destroy, merely from the negligence of our officials in making themselves thoroughly conversant with what takes place in the country?

But, with all this, we have a fine set of men here, both among the naval and military as well as in the diplomatic department. Few men could surpass Mr. Consul Parkes in intelligence and activity and a thorough knowledge of the Chinese character. Every one has full confidence in the Admiral; and his coadjutors, Captains Hall, Cochrane, Bate, &c., are the right men in the right place. However, as I am not writing an Admiralty despatch, all the deserving ones will no doubt get full mention in the proper quarter. If the Chinese would only show more determination there would be more among our officers who would distinguish themselves; but at present the defensive is the order of the day. The only aggressive acts of the Chinese arise from the ferocious proclamation of Yeh, offering rewards for our heads. The people seem to take little notice of this; but the soldiers, when they find an opportunity, are only too ready to seek the reward. One poor marine, who landed from the Macao fort at a village near, was waylaid and beheaded. He had frequently been there before buying vegetables, &c.; the soldiers at last saw their chance, and killed him, taking away nothing but his head. The Admiral lost no time in burning the place to the ground, a striking lesson that will not soon be forgotten. Some of the villagers assisted the soldiers. I went down with the party that burned the village. Yesterday a negro sailor was very nearly decapitated. He was quietly among a lot of Chinese posting a placard regarding the departure of a steamer. A few soldiers stole quietly up, and one began to cut the sailor's head off, but he escaped, seriously wounded. Within four hours after the attempted assassination the two large Government custom-houses near where the affair occurred, and which were likely to be the harbouring-places for the soldiers, were level, roofless ruins. About a hundred prisoners were taken. Most of them were released, but half a dozen who were recognised by the negro are detained. The man that cut at him got his tail cut off, and had three dozen this morning. The others were let off. The jack-tars under Captains Hall and Cochrane, and some of the Royal Artillery under Captain Rottan, made short work of the official residences. They are getting quite expert at the art of destruction. A melancholy accident happened the other day when some houses were being pulled down, "for the safety of our position." Poor Cowper, of the Engineers, was crushed under the ruins of one that fell unexpectedly. The accident was fatal to him. He is a great loss, both as an officer and a fine, gay-hearted companion.

INTERIOR OF THE DUTCH FOLLY FORT.

Every day the aspect of affairs grows more serious, and many begin to think that the Admiral will have to hold his position until reinforcements arrive—the capture of the city being necessary to bring about a satisfactory conclusion. It would certainly simplify matters greatly; for if we had all in our possession there would be no negotiations that would likely be troublesome, as to the indemnification to people for losses sustained. No doubt our position in future would be far more satisfactory if we gained the simple concession justly demanded, by force of arms, than by either diplomacy on our part or admission on that of the Chinese. There is no apparent hope for the Tartar Government maintaining itself on its present tottering throne. The great Chinese empire must be broken up. Seven years of partially successful revolution; innumerable petty revolts, extending in some provinces almost to anarchy; famine upon famine, trade ruined, pestilence in some places, locusts as a plague in others;—all these, together with an impoverished treasury, vagabond, half-paid troops, and incapable officers, must work a speedy downfall, irrespective of foreign invasion. The English hold the Canton river, one of the greatest highways of commerce in the empire. The Americans continue unsuccessfully to negotiate for peace after they rushed rashly into war. The French have a large force destined to play no small part in the current history of China: that force may soon be here. Yet, with all these difficulties hanging over the future destiny of the empire, Yeh obstinately adheres to his own positive hatred of foreigners, stops all the means of trading with them, makes it a punishable offence, and tries, by bespattering the walls with repeated inflammatory placards, to drive the people into fury against us. He may have written to the Emperor in a different strain, declaring his inability to resist; but such a course is improbable. It is more likely that he sends flaming accounts of grand victories, and can now boast of having resisted a siege from the English forces for two months, and defeated the Americans at the same time!

The Sketches sent, vià Southampton, are a view of the inside of the Dutch Folly and the leave-taking of the Consul. The Folly is in beautiful order, everything in its proper place; great credit is due to the two lieutenants in command. The blue-jackets have adorned it with some frescoes of their own designing. One represents a T. P. Cooke-looking sailor pointing to the city, with the legend attached, "This way to the breach;" and another direction points out "The way to honour and glory." A Chinese prisoner inside, who was taken at the Bogue, and retained to be cured by the doctor, his leg having had to be amputated, has made great friends with his kind but rather rough nurses in the Folly.

The other Sketch is of the leave-taking of the Consul, and a deputation of the old security merchants, Howqua Mowqua, Kingqua, &c. Since the sketch was made, the Chinese seem to have discovered the inutility of bringing the matter to a close by negotiations, and that the Admiral is determined to be as obstinate in his firmness as the Chinese Commissioner is firm in his obstinacy.

LITERATURE.

ADULTERATIONS DETECTED; or, PLAIN INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE DISCOVERY OF FRAUDS IN FOOD AND MEDICINE. By ARTHUR HILL HASSALL, M.D. Longmans

It is quite unnecessary, on the present occasion, to speak of the importance of the subject of Adulteration of Food. This has been already fully recognised in the labour bestowed upon the widespread evil by a Select Committee appointed by the House of Commons, which, under the able presidency of Mr. Scholefield, zealously prosecuted its inquiries for two Sessions of Parliament; the result of which has been to confirm, in every instance, the laborious researches of Dr. Hassall, who has made this peculiar branch of the usefully scientific peculiarly his own. Dr. Hassall tells us, in the preface to the excellent work now before us, that, in publishing the present treatise, and thus supplying a public want, he is realising a suggestion for the suppression of adulteration which he made in his evidence before the Select Committee, "namely, that a cheap treatise on Adulteration should be published, which should be illustrated with woodcuts showing the microscopical appearances and structure of the different articles, both genuine and adulterated, and containing plain directions for the discovery of adulterations.

The chief purpose of the present work, then, is to furnish plain instructions, microscopical and chemical, embodying the results of extended practice and experience, for the discovery of adulterations in food and medicine

To accomplish this object effectually, our author has described in a concise yet clear manner the adulterations to which each particular article is subjected. The treatise is therefore not limited to a mere description of the methods by which adulteration may be discovered, but it contains much information in relation to adulteration in general.

The best method of putting a stop to adulteration is, has Dr. Hassall very properly stated, to destroy the security attending the practice of it. The first step necessary for the accomplishment of this object is to supply the means requisite for the discovery of adulteration

The happy application of the microscope to the subject of adulteration, so meritoriously originated by Dr. Hassall, has furnished the means of detecting a host of adulterations, the discovery of which had before, for the most part, been considered to be impossible; but still practical explanations and details are required to enable others to employ the instrument with advantage for that purpose; and the same remark applies to chemistry. Such necessary details and explanations will be found in the pages of this work; and, through its instrumentality, the many hundreds of microscopists and chemists scattered over all parts of the country, must be induced to apply themselves to the discovery of adulterations in articles of food and medicine. Should this anticipation be realised, as we do not doubt it will, a heavy blow and great discouragement will be inflicted upon all adulterators: for the security in which their proceedings were formerly conducted will be for ever destroyed.

One especial merit apparent on the most cursory inspection of Dr. Hassall's book, is the care which he has bestowed on the illustrations. The volume contains no less than 225 beautifully-executed woodcuts, drawn from the objects as they appeared under the microscope. This of itself imparts the greatest value for the purposes of comparison, and must prove of the utmost service to the student in his researches. The book is well got up, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of every one interested in the most important question of adulteration of food and medicine.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW RELATING TO BANKERS AND BANKING. By JAMES GRANT, Esq., Barrister at Law. Butterworths.

It is an old and wise remark that the laws of commerce ought to be as simple as commerce itself, but the doctrine thus wisely taught is constantly violated in practice. The chambers of the lawyer are an indispensable appendage to the counting-house of the merchant; and yet, after the exercise of the most vigilant care, suits arising out of matters of trade are brought before the Courts in every term. Attorneys are embarrassed in counselling their clients, barristers fight each other with conflicting authorities, and judges arrive at opposite conclusions. The latest efforts at legislation have proved as unsatisfactory as those of olden times; and we have witnessed in the case of the Royal British Bank the difficulty of interpreting certain clauses in the 7th and 8th Victoria—the first statute enabling joint-stock companies to be made bankrupt—with the spirit of the Winding-Up Act. In the case of the Hemel Hempstead Bank it is doubtful whether the fact of Mr. Smith, the surviving partner, having carried on the business of the bank after the death of the late Mr. W. F. Whittingstall, who was a partner in the bank till his decease, constitutes a continuation of the partnership, and this doubt raises a conflict between the assignees and the trustees of the deceased. The recently-decided case of Kingsford v. Merry, having set aside the validity of all mercantile usage in the case of Dock Warrants, is another illustration of the glorious certain uncertainty of the law

These facts alone show how greatly it is to be desired that a compendious treatise on the "Law of Bankers and Banking" should be placed in the hands of the profession—we say the profession, for we are no advocates of "every man his own lawyer," or of "every man his own physician." Mr. Grant's book is judiciously classified in sections, contains a table of all the cases cited, and a copious index—arrangements indispensable to a work of reference. Labours of this kind are eminently useful, as they bring within a small compass what is scattered over huge volumes, and, for a single subject, have all the merits of codification. The general reader will be the better able to appreciate such condensing processes when he is reminded that our statutes are spread over forty bulky volumes, of which some five-and-thirty contain obsolete or wholly worthless print, while the entire collection is made up of more than one million enactments. Out of this incongruous mass existing recognised law must be extracted, and we, therefore, cease to wonder that even veteran practitioners are occasionally at fault. Those who undertake the task of simplifying and classifying any department are entitled to every encouragement, for their Herculean labour demands on their part high mental courage to commence their perilous undertaking, and indomitable perseverance to bring it to completion. Mr. Grant has bestowed great pains on his book, as proved by the marginal references, and we deem it worthy of every acceptance.

THE BURGLARY AND FIRE ALARUM

MODEL OF A BURGLARY AND FIRE ALARUM

AMONGST the various ingenious applications of the power of electricity which have marked the progress of science in our days, that in the Burglary and Fire Alarum, recently patented, deserves especial notice, and is likely to be extremely useful. Under this invention, by means of a concealed battery, and wires in various parts of a house, instant notice is given by the alarum-bell of any attempt to open a door or window externally, or even of the passage of an intruder's footsteps up the stairs or over the floor, and of any tampering with any lock or safe to which it may be applied. The alarum may be fixed inside the house, as in a bedroom, or outside on the roof—in which case, being of sufficient power, it will alarm a whole neighbourhood. The system being once laid down in a house is brought into operation, or turned off, at the option of the master of the premises, by simply turning the hand of the register kept for the purpose, and which could be affixed in the wall. This new contrivance will be equally a protection against fire, as the exhibition of any amount of heat beyond a certain point will immediately set the alarum off, and the hand upon the dial will at once indicate whether the danger is from "fire" or "burglary." Applied to ships' holds the machine will be of the utmost service as an indicator of excessive heat tending to spontaneous combustion. This ingenious machine, which is about being brought out under a company, is shown in operation by means of models (as shown in our engraving) and also on the premises themselves, 25, Poultry, where we the other day witnessed its operation, and were much gratified with the result. The best of the invention is that, besides its simplicity and the utter impossibility of tampering with it, it is very inexpensive. It may be laid down for £20, and kept in operation, by contract, for a few shillings a year. We understand that Messrs. Rothschild have already adopted it at their premises in the City.

ALARUM INDICATOR.

ALARUM REGULATOR. ELECTRIC BATTERY.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The marriage of the Grand Duke Michael of Russia with the Princess Cecile of Baden, is to take place at St. Petersburg in March.

An additional bond is about to connect Count de Morny with Russia. He is on the eve of purchasing, in the name of his wife, a seigniorial estate belonging to the Sevitsky family, situated about twelve miles from St. Petersburg. In addition to 2500 peasants, it possesses large hothouses and extensive orangeries.

The French Emperor and Empress on Sunday received several foreigners of distinction, who were presented to their Majesties by the English and Spanish Ambassadors, the Belgian, Prussian, American, and Dutch Ministers, and the Russian Charge d'Affaires.

The Princess of Prussia left Berlin by railway in the morning of the 12th inst. for Weimar. Near the station of Hesel the train ran off the rails; but, though several waggons were greatly damaged, neither the Princess nor any other person in the train was injured.

Lord Brougham left town on Tuesday last for his seat near Cannes, in the south of France, where he proposes to remain until after the Easter recess His Lordship is in excellent health, and is only anxious to avoid the cold winds of this and the following month

The last advices from St. Petersburg mention that it will be the commencement or middle of April before the Emperor Alexander sets out on his journey to Nice, and either on his way thither or on his return thence the Emperor will pay a visit to the Emperor Louis Napoleon.

The Prefect of the Seine has received from Queen Victoria, as a souvenir of the cordial reception given to her Majesty and Prince Albert by the city of Paris, marble busts of herself and of the Prince, executed by M. Marochetti. They have been placed in the Salon Victoria at the Hôtel de Ville.

There is just now a deadly feud between the Lord Chamberlain, as Director of the Viennese Court theatres, on the one side, and the danseuses of the opera and the public on the other. An order has been issued by Count Rzaszkurnski, the functionary in question, that the ladies in question shall in future wear "inexpressibles," and they protest that they cannot dance in them.

The Marquis of Londonderry has promised to preside at the anniversary festival of the Benevolent Society of St. Patrick, at the Freemasons' Tavern, on the 17th of March next.

Count Kisseleff, who had left Nice on his way back to Paris and had got as far as Marseilles, has been summoned back to Nice, where he is to occupy the post near the Empress-Mother which has become vacant by the departure of Baron Von Meyendorff for St. Petersburg.

A Paris correspondent of the Indépendance alleges that the Grand Duke Constantine declines to go to London so long as Sir Robert Peel remains a Lord of the Admiralty

The Spanish Ministers have resolved on recommending to the Queen an amnesty for all the Carlists concerned in the insurrection of 1854.

Mr. Sergeant O'Brien has been appointed to the First Commissionership of the Incumbered Estates Court, in place of Baron Richards. This appointment will create a vacancy in the representation of the city of Limerick, and in the office of Second Serjeant in Ireland.

The King of Bavaria arrived at Florence on the 11th instant, coming from Bologna, and the Archduke Maximilian d'Este arrived the same day at Verona, coming from Venice.

The Grand Duchess Olga is expected at Nice on the 25th inst., and the Grand Duke Constantine on the 27th.

The Journal de Constantinople announces that Sir Henry Bulwer is about to proceed to Syria.

The Duke of Modena is dangerously ill. His Highness has no children, and his next heir is the Emperor of Austria. In case of death, therefore, the Duchy of Modena would become an Austrian province

Mr. Monsell, President of the Board of Health, was re-elected for Limerick on Tuesday last, without opposition.

The Duchess of Parma conferred several decorations of the Order of St. Louis and of the Constantinian Order of St George on the chief officers of the Austrian battalion.

The Austrian General who had the command of the troops in Bologna is dead. The immediate cause of his death was his eating a hundred oysters at the largest size at a sitting.

A lodging has been taken in Piccadilly for Ferouk Khan, the Persian Ambassador

M. Rossoni, Archbishop of Acerenza and Matera, has exhibited signs of insanity since the attempt upon his life by a priest.

Mr. Henry James Ross has been appointed Chief Justice of St. Christopher and Nevis.

The Porte has addressed a memorandum to the representatives of the foreign Powers relative to the suppression of the circulation of Austrian copper coins, and the substitution of native ones in their stead

At a dinner, on Saturday last, at the London Tavern, given by gentlemen connected with the colony of Western Australia, Captain Fitzgerald, the late Governor, was presented with a testimonial

Madame Ida Pfeiffer has arrived at Cape Town, on her way to the Mauritius and Madagascar

The Abbé Chatel, founder of the French Evangelical Church, died at Paris, last week, in the sixty-second year of his age. In the last years of his life he was reduced to the necessity of earning a subsistence by giving lessons to young children.

The Elberfeld Gazette confirms the intelligence already given, that General Gortschakoff had tendered his resignation, the reason assigned by him being the state of his health. It is added that the General intends to visit Germany as soon as it shall have been accepted.

Mr. Hugh Henwood Alexander Bain and Mr. Charles Alexander have been appointed Members of the Legislative Council of Grenada.

The New Prussian Gazette announces positively that the Conference on the Neufchâtel affair will be held in Paris, and that Count Hatzfeldt is to represent Prussia.

Last Saturday afternoon the Hunterian oration was delivered at the Royal College of Surgeons, in the presence of a large number of fellows, by Mr. F. Wormald, Bedford-row.

The Fothergillian gold medal of the Medical Society of London has been awarded to Mr. Edwin Canton, for an "Essay on the Injuries and Diseases of the Spine."

The negotiations of Hanover with the Holy See for the re-establishment of the Bishopric of Osnaburg have terminated successfully.

M. Planché has accepted the invitation of the Committee of the Exhibition of Art-Treasures to superintend the arrangement of armour and arms.

Duprez, the finest operatic tenor vocalist that the modern stage has seen, and who retired a few years ago from loss of voice, has made his re-appearance as a baritone, and with his daughter and Madame Viardot, has been singing at a grand concert in Paris

In the Surrey Gardens Hall, on Sunday last, Mr. Spurgeon was obliged from indisposition to terminate his discourse abruptly Marshal Randon, the Governor of Algeria, is on his way to Paris upon business "relative to his command." This is an elastic expression which may or may not mean that he is to hand over his command to another Marshal.

The Lords of the Treasury have appointed the Hon. Edmund Phipps to be Chief Commissioner, and Sir Fredrick Rogers, Bart., to be Assistant Commissioner, for the sale of encumbered estates in the West Indies

The Imperial Lieutenant of the Venetian provinces has issued a notice announcing that the contingent for the army to be this year furnished by those provinces is fixed at 6982 men, the total number required for the whole empire being 103,115.

The sixth annual public meeting of the Association for promoting the Repeal of Taxes on Knowledge will take place at St. Martin's Hall on Wednesday next, the 25th inst., at noon, M.P., in the chair The meeting will be addressed by Messrs. T. Milner Gibson, M.P., Herbert Ingram, M.P., Serjeant Parry, &c.

Accounts from St. Petersburg up to the 7th instant give a very melancholy picture of the continued general distress and want, bordering upon positive famine, existing throughout the Grand Duchy of Finland

An official organ of the episcopacy is about to appear in Vienna, with the title of Catholic Archives; it will contain all the edicts issued by the bishops to the clergy.

A prize of £300 has been offered by a gentleman, lately a member of the Bengal Civil Service, for the best treatise on one of the six systems of ancient Hindoo philosophy the Vedanta. The treatise is to be written in German or French.

The Code Napoleon has been adopted in Greece. The Moniteur Grec has commenced the publication of its text, and the entire reproduction will be equivalent to a promulgation.

ON BOARD H.M.S. "NORTH STAR," in the ARCTIC REGIONS, for Two Years, the Ship's time was kept by one of JONES'S Lovers, all other watches on board having stopped. In Silver, £4 4s.; in Gold, £10 10s.; at the Manufactory, 338, Strand (opposite Somerset House).—Read JONES'S "Statue of Watch Work." Sent free for a 3d. stamp.

WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers (opposite the Bank of England), 11 and 12 Cornhill, London, submit for selection and for 21 years' trial, their DETACHED LEVER WATCHES, which, being made by themselves, can be recommended for accuracy and durability. A warranty is given.

PRICES OF SILVER WATCHES

Patent Lever Watch, with the improvements, 1.a., the detached escapement, jewelled, hard enamel dial, seconds, and maintaining power to continue going whilst being wound ... ... ... £4 14 6
Ditto jewelled in four holes, and capped ... ... ... 5 6 0
Ditto the finest quality, with the improved regulator, jewelled in six holes, usually in gold cases ... ... 5 8 0
Either of the Silver Watches in hunting cases, 10s. 6d. extra.

GOLD WATCHES SIZE FOR LADIES

Patent Lever Watch, with ornamented gold dial, the movement with latest improvements, i.e., the detached escapement, maintaining power, and jewelled ... ... 11 11 0
Ditto, with richly engraved case ... ... ... 12 12 0
Ditto, with very strong case, and jewelled in four holes ... 14 14 0

GOLD WATCHES.—SIZE FOR GENTLEMEN.

Patent Lever Watch, with the latest improvements, i.e., the detached escapement, jewelled in four holes, hard enamel dial, seconds, and maintaining power ... ... 10 10 6
Ditto in stronger case, improved regulator, and capped ... 13 13 0
Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance ... ... 17 17 0
Either of the Gold Watches in hunting cases, £3 3s. extra.

Any Watch selected from the list will be safely packed and sent free to any part of Great Britain or Ireland, upon receipt of a remittance of the amount.

SILVER PLATE, New and Secondhand.—A Pamphlet of Prices, with Engravings, may be had gratis, or will be sent, post-free, if applied for by letter.—J. B. SAVORY and SONS, Goldsmiths (opposite the Bank of England), 11 and 12, Cornhill, London.

MAPPIN'S ELECTRO-SILVER PLATE. Messrs MAPPIN'S celebrated Manufactures in Electro-Plate, comprising Tea and Coffee Services, Side Dishes, Spoons, and Forks, and all articles usually made in silver, can now be obtained from their London Warehouse, No. 67, King William-street, City, where the largest stock in London may be seen.—Manufactory, Queen's Cutlery Works, Sheffield.

MAPPIN'S SUPERIOR TABLE-KNIVES are ivoriine that unrivalled superiority. Handles cannot come silky become loose; the blades are all of the very first quality, being their own Sheffield manufacture Buyers resorted at their London Warehouse, 67 and 68, King William-street, City; and Queen's Cutlery Works, Sheffield.

MAPPIN'S "SHILLING" RAZOR, sold everywhere, warranted good by the Makers (Mappin Brothers) Queen's Cutlery Works, Sheffield; and 67 and 68, King William-street, City, London, where the largest stock of Cutlery in the world is kept.

FISHER'S DRESSING-CASES, 188, Strand
Catalogues post-free.

DRESSING-CASES.—At Mr. MECHI'S ESTABLISHMENTS, 112, Regent-street, 4, Leadenhall-street, and Crystal Palace, are exhibited the finest specimens of BRITISH MANUFACTURES in Dressing-cases Work-boxes, Writing-cases, Dressing Desks, and other articles of utility or luxury, suitable for presentation. A separate apartment for Papier-mach Manufactures and Ingres-like-tables.—Table Cutlery, Razors, Scissors, Penknives, Steels, Paste, &c. Shipping Orders executed for merchants and captains. Same prices charged as at the Establishments.

ALLEN'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Patent Portmanteaus, Dressing Bags, Dressing Cases, and Travelling Bags, with prices and sizes, sent free by return of post.—J. W. and T. ALLEN, Manufacturers, 18 and 22, Strand.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, LIBRARY, &c. An extensive Assortment of ALABASTER, MARBLE, BRONZE, and PARISPHINE SPAR ORNAMENTS. Manufactured and imported by J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, London.

ROBERT GREEN and CO., Upholsterers and Cabinet-makers, 204, Oxford-street (one door west of Portland-street), solicit the attention of persons furnishing to their complete sets of Dining and Drawing-room FURNITURE, &c. One set consists of an elegant walnut-tree five-foot Chiffonier, with plate glass back and doors, and marble slab handsome carved walnut loo and occasional Tables, superior Settees, covered in rich stitch cloth, two small chairs and one easy-chair, covered to match, all fitted with chintz loose cases; also a large size rich gilt Chimney-glass. The whole would be delivered in town for £2 guineas originally cost double the amount. Other sets, secondhand, equally low.

BEDDING.—Economy, Durability, and Comfort.—J. and S. STEBB'S SPRING and FRENCH MATTRESSES make the most elastic and softest bed. A price-list of every description of Bedding, Mattresses, and Quilts sent free. Bedsteads of every description, in wood, iron, and brass, cribs, cots, &c. Elderdown Quilts in silk and cotton cases.—J. and S. Stebb, Bedstead, and Bed-room Furniture Manufacturers, 13, Oxford-street W.

JOHN WELLS and CO., 210, Regent-street, Cabinet and FURNITURE of superior design and manufacture, at moderate prices. Designs and list of prices gratis by post.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE. WAUGH and SON, 3 and 4, Ludgate-street.

PAPERHANGINGS and DECORATIONS. JAMES CROSS, 32, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street, the Public and the Trade are supplied with the largest and cheapest Stock in the Kingdom, commencing at 1½d. per piece, for Sixpence N.B. Estimates given for House Painting, Decorating, &c.

KITCHEN RANGES.—THE LEAMINGTON PRIZE KITCHENER combines a large hot-plate with roasting and baking oven, and with a small boiler, effects a great saving in fuel, and does not smoke. For price-lists, &c., apply to C. S. LOWNDES, Ironfield Works, Leamington; or to Messrs. R. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, where one may be seen in operation.

SLACK'S FENDER, Table Cutlery, Kitchen Furniture, and General Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouse, is the most economical establishment with good quality. Iron fenders, 6s. 6d., 8s., 9s., 9s. 6d., 10s., 12s., with standards, superior fenders, drawing-room ditto, 16s. 6d. and 18s. 6d.; fireirons, 2s. 6d. to 16s. 6d.; patent stove-rods, 1s. 6d. and 2s. 6d. Orders above £2 sent carriage-free. Catalogues gratis, or post-free.—Richard and John Slack, 336, Strand (opposite Somerset House).

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the BEST.—GARDNER'S Lamps, from 3s. 6d. each. All who require a really good and cheap Lamp, should inspect Gardners' vast and recherché assortment, which will be found unequalled, consisting of several thousand patterns. The show-rooms, the largest in London, extend the entire length of Parkhurst-terrace, Ironmonger-lane, Cheapside.—Gardners (by appointment to her Majesty's), 453 and 83, Strand, Charing-cross, and 3 and 4, Duncannon-street. Established 101 years.

D. HULETT and CO., Manufacturers of GAS CHANDELIERS, Hall Lanterns, Glass Lustres, and every description of Gas Fittings. A large assortment of the Newest Designs always on hand. Every article marked in plain figures. Palaces of the Nobility, Mansions, Club Houses, &c., fitted with Economy.

CHUBB'S FIRE-PROOF SAFES are constructed of strong Wrought Iron, and the Detector Locks which secure them are gunpowder-proof. Detector Locks for every purpose. Street-door Latches. Cash and Deed Boxes. Illustrated price-lists sent on application.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

FLOODS SUPERIOR FURNITURE POLISH may be obtained of Messrs Fortnum and Mason, Piccadilly; or at the wholesale depôt, 84, Wells-street (next 84, Oxford-street), W. Price one shilling per bottle.

NO VENT-PEG REQUIRED for BARLOW'S SYPHON TAP. By all means see its action explained. Price 9s. 6d.; Electro-plated, 9s. each. Engravings gratis, or post-free.—James Barlow 14, King William street, Monument-house.

UNADULTERATED WINES.—FELTOE, SONS, and CO., Importers, 26, Conduit-st., Regent-st. London (established 1760), call attention to their extensive stock of Genuine Wines free from acidity. The Nutty Sherry, 36s. cask. Carriage-paid.

CELEBRATED CANTERBURY PUNCH.—One dozen of this delicious beverage in quart hock bottles (six to the gallon) will be forwarded carriage-free to London, hamper and bottles included, on receipt of Post-office order for 28s., payable to THOMAS PAUL DE LASAUX, Wine-merchant, Canterbury.

GOODRICH'S SISAL CIGARS! at his Tobacco, Snuff, and Cigar Stores, 407, Oxford-street, London, near Soho-square. Box, containing 14, for 1s. 9d. Post-free, six stamps extra. Pound Boxes, containing 100, 12s. 6d. None are genuine unless signed "H. N. Goodrich."

REAL ALPINE KID GLOVES!!! Next Delivery of all the New and Brilliant Colours for Spring, in every size, each, the Registered VICTORIA BANDALETTE FASTENING ATTACHED, Invisible.

ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE PER PAIR.

The Best Fitting

and Most Durable Glove to be procured at Any Price!!!

Address, RUMBELL and OWEN, 77 and 78, Oxford-street, London, Sole Inventors and Patentees of the VICTORIA BANDALETTE, or SATTACHEE FACILE!!

N B. Sample Pairs forwarded for two extra stamps

NOW READY!!!

RUMBELL and OWEN'S superbly-finished Steel Plate ENGRAVINGS, illustrating each of their Real Kid-made Pinnaced Silk Robes, Entirely New, for the Spring Fashions, forwarded Gratis, with Patterns, per-post-free!!

Address, Rumbell and Owen, 77 and 78, Oxford-street, London.

SILK SKIRTS READY-MADE. The Largest Stock of Made-up Silk Skirts in the Metropolis, in all the New and Brilliant Colours for Spring, at RUMBELL and OWEN'S, 77 and 78, Oxford-street

600 BLACK FRENCH GLACE and SPITALFIELDS DUCAPE SILK SKIRTS, ready-made, always in stock, with Velvet Bogie Passementerie and Crape Trimming, from 24 Guineas, at RUMBELL and OWEN'S, 77 and 78, Oxford-street.

PARIS GLOVE WAREHOUSE, 221, Regent-street
GLOVES AT THE OLD PRICES!!
BAKER and CRISP have just received 1200 dozen of the Best Paris
KID GLOVES, which they are now selling at 3s. per dozen,
or 3½ per pair,
notwithstanding the present high price of Gloves at other houses.
B. and C. beg to acquaint their patrons and the public generally that, previous to the advance in kid skins, they fortunately entered into articles of agreement with the well-known Firm of DE LA RENTE and CO., of Paris, to be supplied by them during the spring and summer of 1857; and thus enabling them to sell
THE RE-1 GLOVES
cheaper than any house in the world.
Purple Silk for Two Extra Stamps.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street, London.

LAST YEAR'S MUSLINS
AT HALF THE ORIGINAL COST.
Patterns Free.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

FRENCH BAREGES, BALZARINES,
Printed Llamas,
Swiss Cambrics, &c.
Half their cost.
Patterns free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

MOURNING MUSLINS, BAREGES,
Etherines, &c.
The Cheapest lot in the Kingdom.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

7000 DOZEN FRENCH CAMBRIC HANDKERCHIEFS.
6s. 9d. to 36s. per dozen
Hemmed stitched ditto, 7s. 6d. to 15s. half dozen.
Samples free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street

SPRING DRESSES.—PATTERNS of the NEW FABRICS now ready Post free Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

THE SPRING SILKS at KING'S, 243, Regent-street, Sac and Skirts, £1 5s Checked Silks, £1 10s Jasper Silks, £1 15s Broche Silks, £1 17s 6d. Broad Ecosse, £2 2s. Gros Royals, £2 10s. Moiré Antiques, £2 12s. 6d. and Flounced Silks, £1 10s. to £5 Patterns sent post-free.

NEW SPRING FABRICS at KING'S, 243, Regent street. Cambric Dresses, 5s. 6d. French Muslins, 5s. 6d Brilliants, 5s 6d Barèges, 9s 6d Llamas, 10s. 6d Barèges, 12s 6d Mousseline de Soies, 15s Flounced Muslins 7s 6d to 18s 6d Flounced Barèges, 12s 6d. to 25s. 6d Flounced Silk and Wool Fabrics, 12s 6d to 30s And Irish Poplins, £1 5s 6d. to £1 17s 6d Patterns sent post-free

BALL and EVENING DRESSES, at SHEATH'S, 264, Regent-street, London 1500 yards of the richest Josephine Silks—colours—pink, sky, silver-grey, hyacinth, and white, at 5s. 6d. per yard, worth 7s. 6d 900 Rich Brocade Grenadines, all the last year, usual price 2s 100 Brocaded Flounced ditto, at 30s., worth 3 guineas 200 Richly-worked Muslin Robes, Dresses, all at 21s. White and coloured Tulles, extra wide, 1s. 6d per yard. Tarlatans, in every colour, 6½d per yard Sheath's Patent Skirt. Address W. W. Sheath, 264, Regent-street.

GREAT SALE of REAL VALENCIENNES LACE, EDGINGS, &c., at SHEATH'S, 264 Regent street
Thousands of yards of Edgings, from 3½d. per yard.
" Narrow Laces " 1½d. "
" Wide " " 18d. "
Patterns sent post-free.
Address W. W. Sheath 264, Regent-street, London.

HALF-YEARLY SALE at her MAJESTY'S CLOTHS
SILWELL and CO. have the honour to inform Ladies that they have purchased from the Commissioners of Customs a quantity of Goods viz., LACE, CAMBRIC HANDKERCHIEFS, &c., that have been seized.
Lot 1.—Embroidered and plain trimmed Lace Cambric Handkerchiefs.
2.—Valenciennes, Brussels, and other Foreign Laces. (See p.)
3.—Lace Caps, made-up Embroideries, &c.
4.—Rich Fancy Bonnets and Satin Shapes.
S. and Co invite ladies purchasing for trousseaux to these very choice Goods, which will be sold at a considerable reduction in Prices.
They would also call attention to a Lot of Ladies' Silk Stockings, and Irish Poplins.
Compton House, 44, 45, and 46, Old Compton-street; and 46 and 47, Frith-street, Soho, London.

THE GREAT SALE of DRAPERY, Silks, Cloaks, Shawls, Lace, &c., at 192, Regent-street
A day having been fixed for the commencement of the alterations, and a portion of the Stock still remaining, which must be sold, Messrs Wade and Company have to call PUBLIC ATTENTION to the prices, and will be ready on MONDAY NEXT, at ten o'clock, to submit the same to their customers at such prices as must effect an immediate Sale. There are some extraordinary bargains in rich Silks.
WHITE and COMPANY
(Late Gorringe and Bradley),
192, Regent-street.

JUPONS à RESSORT DEPOSE.—For the Ball-room, Promenade, or Travelling, these PATENT SPRING PETTICOATS are perfection: they never crease or get out of order, and are particularly graceful and ladylike. Packed in a small box, and sent any distance upon receipt of a Post-office order for 10s. 6d. Address, Mrs. ROBERTSHAW (90), Oxford-street.

CAPPER, SON, and CO., Linendrapers to the Queen, 69, Gracechurch-street, City, during the alterations of their recent buildings, continue as usual, in their extensive back premises, their Family Linen, Silk Mercery, General Drapery, and Ladies' and Infants' Outfitting Business.
The temporary entrance to the shop is at 120, Fenchurch-street, the fifth door from the corner of Gracechurch-street.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN, BY APPOINTMENT
Established in 1778.
BABIES' BASSINETTES, Trimmed and Furnished, ready for use, are sent home free of carriage.
BABIES' BASSINETTES, 30s. to 300s.
Trimmed and furnished to correspond
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, GRACECHURCH-STREET, LONDON
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post.

Sent post-free, Descriptive Lists of
COMPLETE SETS OF BABY LINEN, which are sent home throughout the Kingdom free of carriage
UNDERCLOTHING FOR HOME, INDIA, AND ALL COLONIES.
for Ladies and Children of all ages.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN, BY APPOINTMENT
Established in 1778
LADIES' WEDDING OUTFITS sent home, free of carriage.
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, GRACECHURCH-STREET, LONDON.

CAPPER SON, and MOON, 154, REGENT-STREET, LONDON
BASSINETTES, 30s. to 300s.
BABY LINEN.
Books giving descriptions and prices sent gratis.

CAPPER, SON, and MOON, 154, REGENT-STREET, LONDON
LADIES' UNDER-CLOTHING.
TROUSSEAUX.
Books giving descriptions and prices sent gratis.

BABIES' WHITE CASHMERE CLOAKS, One Guinea
Hoods, Half-a-Guinea
53, Baker-street (near Madame Tussaud's Exhibition).
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday)

BABIES' BERCEAUNETTES, Two and a Half Guineas.
Baskets to match, One Guinea.
53, Baker-street.
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday)

LADIES' RIDING TROUSERS, Chamois Leather, with black feet.
53, Baker-street (near Madame Tussaud's Exhibition).
W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday)

MARRIAGE OUTFITS, Complete.
Cotton Hosiery, 8s. 6d.
White Dressing Gowns, One Guinea.
Real Balbriggan Hosiery.
53, Baker-street.
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday)

BLACK MERINO RIDING HABITS For Little Girls, 2½ Guineas
Ladies, Rising Habits, 3½ to 5 Guineas.
53, Baker-street.
W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday).

MUSLINS of the PAST SEASON. The whole of the Stock of THE FRENCH MUSLIN COMPANY to be cleared out at ridiculous prices for such goods. Patterns Free.—18 OXFORD-STREET.

EMBROIDERED CHRISTIAN NAMES.—LADIES' HANDKERCHIEFS.—Christian Names embroidered by the Sisters of Paris, with the new distinct mode. Price 1s. 9d., by post 14 stamps; 3s. 9d. the half-dozen, by post 42.
FRENCH MUSLIN COMPANY, 18, OXFORD-STREET.

SILKS, Rich, Plain, Striped, and Checked Glacé, at 22s. 6d. per dress (20 yards). Well worth the attention of Families. Patterns sent free by post.—JOHN HARVEY, SON, and CO., 9, Ludgate-hill. Established upwards of fifty years.

SILKS.—Cash will be paid on delivery for Silks, Satins, Velvets, Lace, Shawls, Gloves, Ribands, Hose, &c. Manufacturers are requested to send Samples or Patterns and Prices for immediate Cash to JOHN HARVEY, SON, and CO., 9, Ludgate-hill.

SPRING SILKS at REDUCED PRICES Twenty Thousand Pounds' worth of the above goods are now being offered for sale by BEECH and BENHALL, Beehive, 63 and 64, Edgware-road, London, at the following prices (patterns returning all that is elegant and useful in Striped, Checked, Brocaded, and Plain Glacé Silks, at 25s. 6d., 29s. 6d., 33s. 6d., 35s. 6d., and 38s. 6d. the Full Dress.

1800 RICH SILK ROBES for two or three flounces, suited to Promenade, Dinner, or Evening wear, at 45s. 6d., 49s. 6d., 55s. 6d., 65s. 6d., and 75s. 6d. each full length, for body and trimmings included (great bargains)
N B.—Patterns for inspection postage-free to any part

ELEGANT FOREIGN FLOUNCED BAREGE ROBES, In great variety, are now being sold at the following reduced prices, viz., 9s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 29s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., extra lengths for Dress and Jumping included. Patterns for inspection postage-free Address BEECH and BENHALL, Beehive, 63 and 64, Edgware-road, London.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS. This Garment, so much used and so highly approved of for Home and Continental Travelling, may be had of the Maker, J. PHILIPPS, 32, Brompton-crescent, Knightsbridge.
P.S.—Directions for measuring, patterns of material, and list of prices, sent post-free on application

EARLY-CLOSING HOSIERY ESTABLISHMENT.—HIRD'S LONGCLOTH SHIRTS, Fit for 37s. 6d and 42s. Linen Collars, 12s. a dozen. 52 different sizes to choose from. A. J. HIRD, 363, Oxford-street (four doors east of the Pantheon).

TO HOSIERS, GLOVERS, and SHIRT-MAKERS. Whereas certain Parties are about to apply to the Trade a Collar got up in imitation of the Army and Navy four-fold Collar Patented by me for Great Britain in May, 1856,
I hereby give notice that immediate proceedings will be taken by me against all Parties buying or selling any Collars which infringe upon my rights.
Witness,
R. A. BROOMAN, Patent Office, 66, Fleet-street, London.

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR, Patented,
To be had everywhere. Note that all are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY AND NAVY."

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR, Patented, can be worn in the usual way, or to turn down. Note that a the families are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY AND NAVY."

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR. The above consists of four substances, and is the best Shirt Collar ever Patented. Note all are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY AND NAVY"

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR, to be had of all Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers throughout the United Kingdom. All are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY AND NAVY."

NEW TURNOVER COLLAR, by DARE, of Piccadilly. Three-fold band, and no seam. A. N. Dare, 86, Piccadilly, W., Inventor and Registrar of the Piccadilly Collar Excellent Shirts 40s Half dozen

SHIRTS.—RODGERS'S IMPROVED CORAZZA SHIRTS Fit for 35s. 6d and 42s. For cost, elegance, and durability, they are unequalled. Sent with rules and illustrations, containing instructions for measurement, post-free Rodgers and Sourse, Improved Corazza Shirtmakers, 26, St. Martin's-lane, London, W.C. Established sixty years

SHIRTS.—RODGERS'S IMPROVED COLOURED SHIRTS, 26s., 31s. 6d., and 37s. 6d. the half-dozen, in all the newest designs, including Foxes, Stags, Horses, Dogs, Pheasants, &c., &c. An assortment of Patterns, Book of Illustrations, with directions for measurement, post free for two stamps.—Rodgers and Sourse, Improved Corazza Shirtmakers, 26, St Martin's-lane, London, W. C. Established sixty years

ROBERT SHAW'S PORIZO SHIRT.—Half-hunting, 3 and 4 guineas; cap 100. Price's Patent Candle Co. The fit and work of these Shirts are unequalled, and the fabrics are of the same sterling makes for which the house has been celebrated for above seventy years.—Address Robert Shaw, 100, Oxford-street, Established 1757.

THE NEW REFORM BILL at DOUDNEYS' (Tailors and Cloak Makers, by Five Special Appointments, to the Queen and Royal Family of England and France), 17, Old Bond-street; 25, Burlington Arcade; 49, Lombard-street. Established 1784

DO YOU KEEP LIVERY SERVANTS?—DOUDNEYS' LIVERIES please masters and servants. Footman's Suit, best quality, £3 3s.—17, Old Bond-street; 25, Burlington-arcade, and 49, Lombard-street. Established 1784

QUALITY the TEST of ECONOMY—mere Cost no Proof of Cheapness.—First-Class CLOTHING on best Terms.—Dress Coats, 3 guineas.—R. PEY'S Suit, 21s., per inch, accordingly. Established upwards of 30 years. W. BERDOE, Tailor, 96, New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill.

CHARLES PACKER (late Antoni Forrer), ARTIST in HAIR to the QUEEN, by Appointment.
Hair Jewellery Department, 125, Regent-street
Fancy and Fancy dits, 78, Regent street.
Jet and Mourning ditto, 76, Regent-street.

ANTONI FORRER, ARTIST in HAIR and JEWELLERY to the QUEEN, by Appointment,
34, Baker-street, Portman-square,
(Opposite the Bazaar)
N.B. Antoni Forrer has no connection whatever with his late establishment at 150, Regent-street

LADIES' ORNAMENTAL HAIR.—Stacey LEE and SONS have always ready for wear the largest assortment in England. Falls for Coronets, twenty different sizes, of each colour, varying from 2s. 6d. to £2. Fronts, with natural partings, from 5s. 6d. Tresses, Bands, Side Net Pieces, which never sell, equally cheap. Price Lists post-free.—STACEY and CO., Hairdressers and Manufacturers, 44 and 45, Cranbourn-street (six doors east of Leicester-square, W.C.

VIOLETS.—BRIEDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET SCENT presents a bunch of violets fresh from the fields, with the dew lasting and does not stain the handkerchief. Price 2s. 6d.—157, New Bond-street (facing Redmayne's)

JAMES LEWIS'S MARROW OIL for the HAIR, Jockey Club Frangipanni, and Wood-Violet Perfumes for the Handkerchief, and Iodine Soap for the Skin.—Manufactory, 5, Hardwick's-bal Chops, Holborn; and Crystal Palace

JONES'S FLESH SOAP. Is per packet, allays irritation, and produces a soft and healthy skin. To be had through any Italian Warehouseman and Chemist.—Jones and Sons, near the Turnpike, Islington, London

SOAP.—JOHN KNIGHT'S PRIMROSE SOAP. The attention of Families, Housekeepers, Laundresses, &c. is invited to this now well-known and highly appreciated domestic article, which, possessing all the sweetness of a toilet soap, is still the most economical that can possibly be obtained for general household purposes. It is sold by most of the respectable Oilmen and Grocers in London, and by those of the country in the more ordinary yellow soap. In particular to observe that "John Knight, Primrose, York-place, St. George's East," is stamped on each bar.

THE BELMONT GLYCERINE SOAP contains Price's Pure Glycerine, distilled, by their patent process from Palm Oil. It is recommended for washing infants and shaving. It softens the skin in a marvellous manner, and agrees most soap for general use. PRICE'S CANDLES, which will not drop grease when carried. Also, used as chamber candles, prevent damage to dresses and carpets. They should be burnt in the candlesticks made specially for them, as their freedom from waste renders ordinary candlesticks somewhat cost; having stamped round the edges, "Price's Patent Candle Company, Limited." All the above may now be had retail through any Druggist, Perfumer, or Grocer.
The Soap, in English Ornamental Boxes, price 6d., 1s., and 1s. 6d. each; the Candles, in Boxes, 1s. and 2s.; Candlesticks, 2s. 6d. each.
And wholesale at
BELMONT, MANUEL LONDON.

PRICE'S PURE GLYCERINE SOAP.—This valuable Soap for winter use is sold in Boxes 6d., 1s., and 1s 6d. PRICE'S NEW CHAMBER CANDLES, which will not drop grease when carried about. In Boxes, 1s. and 2s.; and every description of Candle manufactured by Price's Patent Candle Company, may be obtained of Chemists and most of WILLIAM SHARMAN, 253, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, Wholesale Agent to Price's Patent Candle Company.

THE only FOOD suitable for INFANTS and INVALIDS, reared by Analytical Chemists, is BULLOCK'S SEMOLA, recommended by the most eminent medical men. In use only at is 6d., 3s. 6lb., and 5s., secured with the Signature of the Proprietors, FRANKS and BASSETT, Operative Chemists, 22, Conduit-street, Regent-street, London.

THE BEST FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, AND OTHERS. ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY, for making superfine Barley Water in fifteen minutes, has not only obtained the patronage of her Majesty and the Royal Family, but has become of general use to every class of the community, and is acknowledged to stand unrivalled as an assuredly pure, nutritious, and light food for infants and invalids, as much approved of for making a delicious custard pudding, and excellent for thickening broths or soups. ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS for more than thirty years have been held in constant and increasing public estimation as the purest farine of the oat, and as the best and most valuable preparation for making a pure and delicate Gruel, which forms a light and nutritious supper for the aged, is a popular recipe for colds and influenza, is of general use in the sick chamber, and, alternately with the Patent Barley, is an excellent food for infants and children. Prepared only by the Patentees, ROBINSON, BELVILLE, and CO., Purveyors to the Queen, 54, Red-Lion-street, Holborn, London. Sold by all local tea dealers, Druggists, and chemists in town and country, in packets of 6d. and 1s.; and Family Canisters, at 2s., 5s., and 10s. each.

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY.—H. and J. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W. Observe, opposite the York Hotel. Perfection, as regards power and definition, for FIELD, RACECOURSE, OPERA, and general out-door day and night purposes, full Waistcoat-pocket PERSPECTIVE GLASSES, weighing only four ounces, each containing from 12 to 24 lenses, consisting of Grecian glass, will shew distinctly a person's countenance at 24 and 3 miles. They save every person attending on the Race-course, and at the Opera-house. Country scenery and Ships are clearly seen at 8 to 10 miles. Double Opera and Race Glasses, Reconnoitring, Deer-stalking, and Hunting. Her Majesty's Coast-Guards are now making use of them as day and night glasses. A great variety of Barometers, &c. They have also become in general use by Gentlemen of the Army and Navy, and by Sportsmen, Gentlemen, Gamekeepers, and Tourists. The most powerful and brilliant Telescopes, possessing such extraordinary power that some, 3½ inches, with an extra astronomical eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons. Saturn's ring, and the double stars; with the same Telescope can be seen a person's countenance three-and-a-half miles distant, and an object from fourteen to seventeen miles. All the above can be had of larger and all sizes, with increasing powers, and are sold by H. and J. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W., opposite the York Hotel.

EYESIGHT.—Optical Improvements, to enable persons at an advanced age to read without spectacles and to discriminate objects with perfect distinctness. Messrs. SOLOMONS, Opticians, have invented and patented SPECTACLES and GLASSES of the greatest transparent power. The valuable advantage derived from their invention is, that, instead of vision becoming dimmed, fatigued, weakened, and in numerous cases seriously injured, it is preserved and strengthened; and very aged persons are enabled to enjoy their sight at the most minute occupations; can see with these lenses at a much less magnifying power, and they do not require frequent changes to the dangerous effects of further powerful assistance. Persons can be suited at the most remote parts of the world by sending a pair of spectacles, or one of the lenses out of them, in a letter, and stating the distance from the eyes they can read small print with it, and those who have not made use of spectacles by stating their age.—39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W (opposite the York Hotel).

DEAFNESS.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme cases of Deafness, called the Sound Magnifier, Organic Modification, or Invisible Tube, is now brought into use, and is not to be in the least perceptible, the most delicate sensation of singing noises in the head is entirely removed. It affords instant relief to the deafest persons, and enables them to hear distinctly at a church and at a theatre. Sold by SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W., opposite the York Hotel.

PULVERMACHER'S MEDICAL ELECTRIC CHAIN (approved by the Académie de Médecine, Paris, and rewarded by the Great Exhibition), a discovery of extraordinary curative properties to which no pills or any other medicine can be compared. At once safe, speedy, and sure in its effects, even in the most severe cases, it may be applied by any one, being the wonderful phenomena it produces have hitherto only been observed and its effects upon the body. No medicine can be taken at the same time. Thousands of cures above how remarkable, even many natural and effectual it is in rheumatism, neuralgia (as head and tooth ache), liver complaint, indigestion, asthma, lumbago, gout, sciatica, deafness, colds, spasms, epilepsy, paralysis, and all nervous affections. Chains, 6s. 6d. to 21s.; for rheumatic and other severe complaints, 42s. to 84s. each. Pulvermacher and Co., 73, Oxford-street, at once the Princess Theatre. Agents Wm. Sharman, 253, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, Savory and Moore, Bond-street, and Hanbury and Chemists, 13, New Bond-street; T. Williams, 54, Piccadilly, Gibson, 211, Haymarket, and G. Wood, 117, Cheapside. R. Bailey, 76, Lambeth-street, and all respectable chemists.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Just ready. New and Revised Edition, price 2s. cloth; post-free, 2s. 8d.,

THE ILLUSTRATED DRAWING-BOOK, comprising a complete Introduction to Drawing and Perspective; A By ROBERT SCOTT BURN. 200 Engravings.

Now ready, price 5s. 6d. post-free, 5s. 6d.

THE ILLUSTRATED WEBSTER READER, containing numerous Engravings by eminent Artists

Also ready, price 3s.; post-free 3s. 2d.

THE ILLUSTRATED ARCHITECTURAL ENGINEERING and MECHANICAL DRAWING BOOK. By H. S. BURN. Great Work Warehouse, 65, Hemett's Quadrant.

THE ILLUSTRATED WEBSTER'S SPELLING-BOOK, price 1s.; coloured 2s. Post-free, 2d. extra. Illustrated with 450 splendid Engravings, by Gilbert, Harvey, Dalziel, &c.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Ready this day, price 2s. cloth, 2s. 6d. roan, postage-free,

PRACTICAL DICTIONARY of ENGLISH SYNONYMS. By J. C. MACKENZIE. 216 pages. The author of this present work has been ten years in perfecting it. It forms an essential auxiliary to correct composition, and indispensable to all who would wish to write the English language with elegance.

Just ready, price 1s.; coloured 2s.; post-free, 2s.

The ROYAL PICTURE ALPHABET of HUMOUR and MORAL TALES, or, Words and their Meanings Illustrated. Beautifully Printed in Colours. A charming Alphabet Book that will delight as much our young friends

JOHNSON AND WALKER SUPERSEDED!

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE. Price 3s. 6d. cloth; 4s. roan; postage-free. As an authority in the English language Noah Webster's Dictionary will be always used in preference to any other. This edition contains 50,000 more Words than "Walker," and its Rules for Pronunciation are perfect WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Just ready, price 5s., post-free.

THE PHILOSOPHY of COMMON LIFE; or, the Science of Health. By JOHN SCOFFERN, M.B., late Professor of Chymistry at the Aldersgate School of Medicine. A Popular View of the Conditions and Appliances of Human Existence, the Anatomy and Physiology of the Body; Empirics, and their Failacies, Cosmetics, their Preparation; Dress in Relation to Health; Sexual Poisoning, and the Means of Preventing It. A popular Work upon the Science of Health from such a pen as Dr. Scoffern's will be read with no ordinary interest.—WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

HOW to SPEAK with PROPRIETY, upon the Principles of Noah Webster, LL.D., with Hints upon Reading, Composition, &c. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

BRIDAL ETIQUETTE. By Madame de CHATELAIN. 6d.; post-free, 7d.

HOW to DRESS with TASTE. A most desirable Companion for the Toilet Table. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

HOW to WOO: WHEN and WHOM. Price 6d.

HOW to BEHAVE; or, The Spirit of Etiquette. A Complete Guide to Polite Society. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

HOW to be HEALTHY and to PRESERVE the MENTAL and BODILY POWERS. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Ready this day, at all the Libraries, price 7s. 6d.; post-free, 8s.

EUGENIE; or, The Spanish Bride: A Tragedy in Five Acts. "An affecting story, beautifully written." The LADY and the LAWYER; or, Honesty is the Best Policy: A Satirical Comedy. By FLORENCE DE VERE. 300 pages. "The lawyers, their sayings and doings graphically exposed: illustrating many peculiarities of the London Corporation, the Court of Chancery, the Royal British Bank, &c., &c."

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Just out, with Steel Engraving by Heath, containing 416 beautifully-Illustrated pages, crown 8vo, gilt gilt, price 5s.

THE FAMILY FRIEND.

WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Just ready, full of fun, is each, fancy covers,

COMIC COCKER. 75 Illustrations by Alfred Crowquill. COMIC GRAMMAR. With 80 Illustrations by Leech. London: WARD and LOCK; and all Booksellers.

Second Edition, enlarged and considerably improved; cloth, 5s.

FISCHEL'S GERMAN READING BOOK, on an entirely new principle. A story, by Franz Hoffmann, literally translated, with copious Notes and an Elementary Grammar. By Dr. M. E. FISCHEL, of Queen's College, London. "The result cleares the Grammar imperceptibly as he proceeds with the story."—Times. "We cordially recommend the work, as manifesting a great improvement in the art of teaching.

D NUTT, 270, Strand, London.

On March 1, No. 1, price 3d., to be completed in Ten Weekly Numbers, profusely Illustrated, crown 8vo, BOOK of ENGLISH SONGS.

By CHARLES MACKAY.

Also on March 1, No. 1, uniform with "Songs," &c.,

The MORMONS. By CHARLES MACKAY, LL.D.

HOULSTON and WRIGHT, 65, Paternoster-row; and all Booksellers.

"I TOO;" and OTHER POEMS. By ISABELLE GIFFORD. Cheap Edition. Fcp. cloth, 1s. 6d. Free by post on receipt of the amount in postage-stamps

London: KEMBLE and SON, 407, Oxford-street; and all Booksellers.

Cr. 8vo, cloth, price 2s. 6d.; post-free, 2s. 10d.; with Map, 6d. extra,

LONDON AT ITS ZENITH: HOW TO GO AND WHAT TO SEE; with Two Hundred Engravings. London: H. G. CLARKE and Co., 252, Strand

Profusely Illustrated by ANELAY, price 3s. 6d., cloth, gilt,

THE MOTHER'S MISTAKE.

By Mrs. ELLIS

London: HOULSTON and WRIGHT, Paternoster-row.

DARK DEEDS. "Dark Deeds" deals with tragic memorials of terrible occurrences, and is of the most absorbing interest. Price 1s. 6d.

London: G. VICKERS; and all Booksellers.

Just published, price 6d., post-free,

COMMON BLUNDERS made in Speaking and Writing Corrected. By C. W. SMITH. "Every one who would speak and write good English should purchase it."

GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row, London.

BRICK-MAKING.—A Pamphlet containing Two Papers to which the Society of Arts awarded their Silver Medal forwarded on receipt of 13 penny-stamps.—HUMPHREY CHAMBERLAIN, Kempsey, near Worcester

A TREATISE on ACACIA CHARCOAL (prepared by Electricity), and the Antiseptic Laws. Great results from simple means in Fever, Ague, Dysentery, Leprosy, Scrofula, all Contamination, Ulcers, Diarrhœa, Spermatorrhœa, Skin Diseases, Indigestion, and many minor complaints. Post-free.—W. WASHINGTON EVANS, 2 Bernard-street, Primrose-hill, London.

HUNT ON STAMMERING

Just published, Second Edition, price 5s. 6d.; by post, 5s. 10d.,

A TREATISE on the CURE of STAMMERING &c. By JAMES HUNT PH. D., M.R.S.L., &c. "Unquestionably the most popular treatise ever given to the world. It explains a beautiful and humane system, and in doing so indicates rapidly and succinctly the character, and, to a great degree, the cure of all hindered effects of the various species of defective organs for the carrying of limpid modes of speech. The volume is a really admirable treatise, and no less scientific than philosophic."—Sun, Jan. 26.

In the press, by the same Author,

A MANUAL of the PHILOSOPHY of VOICE and SPEECH. Price 7s. 6d.

London: LONGMAN and Co.; by post, from the Author's residence: 8, Sion New Burlington-street, W.

Just published, price 2s. 6d.; post-free,

PHYSIC and its PHASES; or, the Rule of Right and the Reign of Wrong. By ALCIPHRON, "Nature's Attorney."

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., Stationers'-court; and all Booksellers.

Just published, post 8vo, price 2s. 6d.,

VARICOSE VEINS and their TREATMENT. By HENRY T. CHAPMAN, F.R.C.S., &c.

Also, by the same Author, Second Edition, price 5s. 6d.,

THE TREATMENT of ULCERS and CUTANEOUS ERUPTIONS on the LEG

"We, with pleasure, record Mr. Hocking's Abstract, Vol. xvi JOHN CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street

Second Edition, 6d. post-free

PAINLESS TOOTH EXTRACTION without CHLOROFORM, by CONGELATION. By J. WHITEMAN WEBB, L.S.A., Operative Dentist, 31, Lisson-Grove, Bloomsbury-square.—Operations daily, except Wednesday, from 10 to 4

Just published, price One Shilling,

THE COMPRESSED AIR BATH in the TREATMENT of CONSUMPTION, Asthma, and Palpitation of the Heart. By A. SIMPSON, M.A.M.D., Assistant Physician to Bon Secours Hospital.

"In conclusion, I can, with full confidence, declare that I regard the Compressed Air Bath, with the associated treatment which has been now referred to, as the only real and efficacious means which we possess for coping with consumption, severe chronic bronchitis, and asthma."—Dr. Macleod

Edinburgh: SUTHERLAND and KNOX; London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co.; and free by post from Mr. HORTON, Holly Office, Yorkshire.

50,000 BIBLES, Prayer books, Church Services, elegantly-bound Books for Presents, at FIELD'S GREAT BIBLE WAREHOUSE, 65, Regent's-quadrant (corner of Air-street), the largest, cheapest, and best bound Stock in the World, and the only House for the celebrated Guinea Family Bible and Half-Guinea Services. Catalogues grats. The Clergy supplied

A GUINEA PRAYER-BOOK for 6s. 6d.—The PICTORIAL PRAYER-BOOK, large type, with 700 beautiful Engravings in antique binding, for 6s. 6d.; or post, price 7s. 6d. A few copies, in beautiful morocco binding, with illuminations, for 12s. 6d., post-free. Only to be had at JOHN FIELD'S Great Bible Warehouse, 65, Regent's-quadrant.

NO CHARGE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, Cipher, or Initials.—SOUTHGATE'S Cream-laid Adhesive Envelopes, 4d. per 100; Cream-laid Note, full-size, five quires for 6d.; thick Ditto, five quires for 8d.; Foolscap, 9s. per ream; Sermon Paper, 4s. 6d. All kinds of Stationery equally cheap, at H. RODRIGUES', 21, Piccadilly, London

WEDDING CARDS, Enamelled Envelopes stamped in silver, with arms, crest, or flowers; "At Homes," and breakfast invitations in splendid variety. Ball Programmes. Card-plate elegantly engraved, and 100 superfine cards printed, for 5s. 6d.—Observe, at HENRY RODRIGUES', 21, Piccadilly, London.

EVERY COUNTRY RESIDENT should send at once to HOPKINS and GOTTO, 20, Oxford-street, for their Sample Packet of STATIONERY. Sent post-free on receipt of Six Postage Stamps. Country parcels charge for Embossing Crests, Initials, or Address. Country parcels over 20s. carriage-free.

25,000 BIBLES, Prayer-Books, and Church Services, in every description of binding and type, being the cheapest, largest, and best-bound Stock in the Kingdom, at HOPKINS and GOTTO'S, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

PARKINS and GOTTO have opened Three large Show-rooms for the display of cheap, useful, and elegant Articles for Birthday and Wedding Presents, from 2s. 6d. to 30 guineas each.

Writing Cases, fitted, from 2s. 6d.
Dressing Bags, 9s. to 15 guineas.
Work Boxes, mahogany or rosewood, 2s. 6d. to £7 7s.
Rosewood Dressing Cases, lined with silk velvet, silver-top bottles, and jewel drawer, 40s.
Gentlemen's Travelling Dressing Cases (best), 12s. 6d.
Writing and Dressing Cases combined, 30s.
Pocket Books, Letter Cases, and Purses in 12s.
Key Boxes and Jewel Cases.
Porte Monnaies and Tablets.
Despatch Boxes, from 21s.
Scales and Paper Weights
Card Cases, Tablet Cases, and Ditto, in pearl, silver, and inlaid.
Albums and Scrap Books.
My Books, in lock cases.
Inkstands, in bronze, ebony, walnut, oak, and buhl.
Reticules and Carriage Bags.
Envelope and Stationery Cases.
Glove Boxes and Letter Boxes.
Ladies' Companions, 7s. 6d.
Cases of Choice Cutlery.
Card Baskets and Table Mats
Ivory Paper Knives
Rose Stands and Slides
Scent Cases.

PARKINS and GOTTO, Manufacturers, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

THE DAILY NEWS, LONDON MORNING PAPER.—Price 4d.

Liberal and Independent—Early Political, General, and Commercial Intelligence.

Office, 10, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.—To be ordered from all Booksellers. Supplied by Evening mail to Country Customers (postage-free) at 18s. 6d. per quarter.

1857.—ENORMOUS REDUCTION from the old Monopoly Prices.—The FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, Sun-buildings, NEW YORK, have much pleasure in offering with the compliments of the "new year" a most remarkable Reduction in the Retail and Subscription Rates of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS (1½d. cents.), Punch (2d.), Illustrated Times (2 cents.), Weekly Times, Lloyd's News of the World, and Reynolds's Paper, each 1 cts.; Dispatch, 1½ cts.; Bell's Life, 1½ cts. All the London Penny Journals, heretofore retailed at 4 cts., will be placed at 3 cents Yearly and half-yearly subscription at a proportionate reduction. Price-list free.—Established 1837

VERY GREAT REDUCTION in the PRICE of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS in AMERICA—viz.,

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Per year | By mail only | seven dollars |
| " | City Delivery | eight dollars |
| " | With splendid prize Engraving (value four dollars) nine dollars. | |
| Single Copies | at Retail | 10 cents |
| " | post-free | 15 cents |
| " | Double Numbers. Double Price. | |

No Extra Charge for Double Numbers, Coloured Supplements, &c., in yearly subscribers.

All the previous Coloured Numbers on hand, price 50 cents each, post-free. The only stock of Back Numbers and Volumes in America. And the only establishment where this Journal can be had at the above low rates.

Address,
FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY
Sun-buildings, New York.

Established 1852

THE ONLY PLACE in AMERICA where the following MONTHLIES are kept for transient sale is at the FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY,
Sun-buildings New York

Single Copies mailed for establishment Yearly Subscriptions received

The National Magazine.
The Train.
Titan
Monthly Parts:
Chambers's Journal.
London Journal
Family Herald.
Cassell's Paper
Reynolds's Miscellany.
Notes and Queries
Leisure Hour.
Sunday at Home.
Art-Journal.
Practical Mechanics' Journal.
Illustrated London News
Illustrated Times, &c., &c.

Established 1852
Price List on application.

PUNCH reduced to Four Dollars a Year. To be had at this price only of the FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, Sun-buildings, New York.

LAST DATE.—LONDON DAILY TIMES Reduced to Seven Dollars a Year FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, Sun-buildings New York

WEEKLY TIMES Reduced to Three Dollars a Year. FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, Sun-buildings, New York

LLOYD'S NEWSPAPER, News of the World, Reynolds's Newspaper, each reduced to Three Dollars per Year. FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, Sun-buildings, New York

FOR ONE DOLLAR we will MAIL to any Address in AMERICA, post-free, Twelve late Specimens of the leading London Papers enabling persons who may wish to subscribe to make a selection with full knowledge. Address
FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY,
Sun-buildings New York.

AMERICAN MONTHLIES post-free to any Address in AMERICA.
Putnam, 2½ per annum; Harper 2½ per annum Knickerbocker, 2½ per annum Hunt's Merchants' Magazine, 2½ per annum; and Godey's Ladies' Book, 2½ per annum.
FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY,
Sun-buildings New York
Established 1852

THE LEADING AMERICAN MAGAZINES and WEEKLY PAPERS supplied with the utmost promptness to Subscribers in Great Britain, on the Continent, Australia, India, or the Pacific Islands. Address, FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY,
Sun-buildings, New York
Established 1852

SEVEN DOLLARS ONLY per ANNUM for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS in AMERICA. To be had at the price only of the FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, Sun-buildings, New York. Established 1852

BELL'S LIFE, Seven Dollars per Year only! FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, sun-buildings, New York

WEEKLY DISPATCH, Seven Dollars per Year only! FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, Sun-buildings, New York.

THE CHEAPEST HOUSE in AMERICA for LONDON PAPERS is the FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY Examine our Price-list for the proofs (free to any part of the Continent). We import our own papers, work cheap, and give every attention to promptness in mailing.—Address, FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY, Sun-buildings New York. Established 1852

FREE TRADE in all BOOKS, Music, &c.; 20 discount to the in. off all books, magazines, periodicals, quarterly reviewers, almanacks, pocket-books, diaries maps, prints, &c. The rate of postage is 2d. for each half-pound; 4d. discount in the in. cent, even after paying the postage or carriage; a £5 order sent carriage-free to all parts of the United Kingdom. Town orders, 5s. and upwards, sent free. Exporters and private buyers are respectfully informed that detailed prospectuses will be sent post-free to all applicants.—S. and T. GILBERT, 4, Copthall-buildings, back of the Bank of England, E. C. Copy the address.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

A CHRISTMAS PIECE. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. An elegant Pianoforte arrangement of the Composer's celebrated Song, Christmas Chimes "What Bells are those, so soft and clear?" Illustrated by Alfred Crowquill. Price 3s. Postage-free for stamps.—HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street.

LA MIA LETIZIA. By BRINLEY RICHARDS.—A Pianoforte arrangement of Mario's beautiful Air in "I Lombardi." Price 3s. "This deservedly favourite melody has been arranged by Brinley Richards in a more than usual success."—Morning Post. Also, the same as a Pianoforte Duet, price 4s. Postage-free for stamps.—HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street.

ROBERT, TOI QUE J'AIME. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. An arrangement for Pianoforte of the celebrated Air de Ballet in Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable." Price 3s. Postage-free for stamps.—HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street

THE SPIRIT of the DELL. Ballad. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. Just published. A charming ballad, and not to be mistaken for any other. Illustrated Title. Price 2s. Postage-free for stamps.—HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street.

COME WITH ME TO FAIRY LAND. Song. By CHERRY. Composer of "Shells of Ocean," &c. The third edition of this beautiful song is now ready, price 3s. Postage-free for stamps.

Publisher, HAMMOND. 9. New Bond-street.

THE DAYS OF THE ROSES ARE OVER. New vocal Duet. Price 3s., free for stamps. "Very effective for voices of moderate compass."—Examiner. J. H. JEWELL, (Rose Soho-square) 104, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury

D'ALBERT'S ALBUM for 1857.—The Third Edition of this popular Work, beautifully illustrated by Brandard, is now ready. The sale of M. D'Albert's Album for 1857 has surpassed that of any former year. It contains a great variety of new Waltzes, new Quadrilles, Polkas, &c.; is splendidly bound and illustrated; and forms the most attractive Musical Gift-book ever published. Price 21s.; post-free

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S BOBBING AROUND.—A Quadrille, in which is introduced the most popular air of the day. Price 3s. net.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S QUEEN'S WALTZ, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S ST. PETERSBURG, New Quadrille on Russian Airs. Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s., post-free.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CZARINA SCHOTTISCHE. Illustrated. Price 3s.; post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S SOLDIERS' POLKA. With a Portrait of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, by Brandard, in Colours. Price 3s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S EMPEROR'S GALOP, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s. Solo or Duet, Post-free. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CORONATION POLKA. Beautifully Illustrated by Brandard. Price 3s., Solo or Duet Post-free. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CRIMSON ROSES. Ballad by Signor PARAVICINI. Composed for and sung with great success by Mdlle. Dobby. Price 3s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S YOUNG PUPIL, in 24 Nos., containing the following popular Airs of the day, arranged for the Youngest Performer on the Pianoforte. Price 1s. each, postfree, six Numbers, 5s. 6d. each

| | |
|---|---|
| No. 1. D'Albert's Fair Star Valse. | No. 14. Low Back'd Car. |
| 2 Do. Slow-step Valse. | 15. The Original Narcaviana. |
| 3. The Irish Emigrant. | 16. D'Albert's Marguerite Valse. |
| 4. Red, White, and Blue. | 17. Home, Sweet Home. |
| 5. D'Albert's Sultana's Polka. | 18. Pretend pour la Syrie. |
| 6 Do. Como Quadrille. | 19. Last Rose of Summer. |
| 7. Nelly Bly. | 20. Bonnie Dundee |
| 8. The Campbells are Coming | 21. Caller Herring |
| 9. Ye Banks and Braes. | 22. Bohemian Air. |
| 10. D'Albert's Fairet Valse. | 23. Ben Bolt. |
| 11. Do. King Pippo Polka. | 24. D'Albert's Queen of Roses Valse. |
| 12. Ann o' Lauzie. | |
| 13. D'Albert's Palmyra Quadrille | |

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

PAST and PRESENT. New Song. By JOHN BARNETT; written by E. R. HUMPHREYS, Esq., Head Master of Cheltenham Grammar-school. Price 3s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' ENGLISH MELODIES, arranged for the Pianoforte by the favourite composer Price 3s. each; or, as duets, 4s. 6d.; post-free.

No. 1 Home, sweet home
2. The British Grenadiers March
3. By lodging is on the cold ground.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' IRISH MELODIES. Price 3s. each; or, as duets, 3s. 6d. post-free.

No. 1. St. Patrick's Day
2. Oft in the stilly night.
3. By not yet and The Brown Irish Girl

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SCOTCH MELODIES. Price 3s. each; or, as duets, 3s. 6d.; post-free

No. 1 The Blue bells of Scotland
2 Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.
3. Auld Lang Syne

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE ALEXANDRE HARMONIUM AT SIX GUINEAS.

ALEXANDRE and SON'S Harmonium at the lowest price possible, to bring the instrument within the means of all classes It is in an Oak Case, with Expression Stop. Also a Celestial for Private Houses and for Chapels, and in

INDISPENSABLE TO THE SCHOOL-ROOM.

The same Harmonium will be taken in exchange for any of the more expensive descriptions, without loss or diminution.

Alexandre and Son obtained the Prize Medal of honour at the Great Exhibition at Paris, 1855. Their Harmoniums have been pronounced to be by Rossini, Auber, Adam, Halévy, Labarre, &c., and by the Professors of the Conservatoire de Paris

The same exquisite Harmoniums range from 19 to 55 guineas. These are brought to the greatest perfection, and are equally adapted to the

CHURCH OR DRAWING-ROOM,

AS AN

ACCOMPANIMENT TO THE VOICE OR PIANOFORTE.

Messrs. Chappell have just received a number of Alexandre's celebrated which combines the excellence of both instruments. The two can be used in combination by the same performer, or each instrument is perfect in itself Price from 46 to 150 guineas.

HARMONIUM PIANOFORTES,

An Immense Stock of

PIANOFORTES BY THE BEST MAKERS,

from Twenty Guineas upwards, which can be thoroughly recommended and warranted

Messrs. Chappell and Co. have just opened a number of

NEW ROOMS FOR INSTRUMENTS,

enabling the purchaser to select a Pianoforte or Harmonium from the largest Stock in London, and to try the merits of the various makers side by side.

Full descriptive Lists of Harmoniums and of Pianofortes will be sent on application to

CHAPPELL AND CO.,

50, NEW BOND-STREET; 15, GEORGE-STREET, HANOVER-SQUARE

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price Fifty Guineas.—This instrument has (unlike the ordinary Cottage) the Check Repeater Action and the fullest Grand compass of Seven Octaves. It is strengthened by every possible means to endure the greatest amount of wear, and to stand perfectly in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description, the tone is round, full, and rich, and the power equal to that of a Bichord Grand. The case is of the most elegant construction, in rosewood, the touch elastic, and the repetition very rapid. Every possible precaution has been taken to ensure its standing well in time Chappell and Co. especially invite the attention of the public, the profession, and merchants to the Foreign Model, feeling assured that no Pianoforte, in all respects comparable, has hitherto been made in England at the same price. Every instrument will be warranted, and (if desired) exchanged within twelve months of the purchase.—50, New Bond-street, London.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

GUARDO O CARO.—Waltz for Voice and Pianoforte, composed expressly for Madame Rudersdorff. By A. RANDEGGER. Price 4s., post-free. This is the most successful vocal composition lately published; it has been always rapturously encored. By the same Composer Bonnie Dundee Waltz, Yesterday and To-morrow, 4s. each; Be sure you call, 4s.; The Maniac Gaile, 3s. Post-free.

J. J EWEN and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London.

VARENNA.—Valse brillante pour le Piano. By ERNST PAUER. Price 1s. 6d. Sent post-free. Published by EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London.

MENDELSSOHN'S THREE MARCHES, Pilgrims March, from the 42d Psalm; War March of Priests, from "Athalie" (copyright); and Wedding March, from "Midsummer Night's Dream" (original edition). Price each, Pianoforte Solo, 1s.; Duet, 1s. 6d. Post-free.—EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London, publishers of all Mendelssohn's Works. Catalogues grats.

KOENIG'S JOURNAL for CORNET-PISTONS and PIANOFORTE, contains all the most popular Songs, Airs from Operas and Dance Music. The PERSHALL Number includes Jullien's Excelsior Waltz, and Minnie Polka "Floating on the Wind," by Glover; and "Thou Stream," from "Midsummer Night's Dream" (original edition). Price each, Pianoforte Solo, 1s.; Duet, 1s. 6d. Post-free.—EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London, publishers of all Mendelssohn's Works. Catalogues grats.

KOENIG'S JOURNAL for CORNET-PISTONS and PIANOFORTE, contains all the most popular Songs, Airs from Operas and Dance Music. The PERSHALL Number includes Jullien's Excelsior Waltz, and Minnie Polka "Floating on the Wind," by Glover; and "Thou Stream," from "Midsummer Night's Dream." by S. W. Waley. The last Part of Koenig's Tutor Cornet-à-Pistons is now ready, price 3s. Jullien and Co.'s Twelfth for Cornet Solo (No. 1) contains sixteen popular Airs, price 1s.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S BILLET-DOUX WALTZ. Beautifully Illustrated by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S MY MARY ANN POLKA. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent street, W

JULLIEN'S MINNIE POLKA, Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent street, W.

JULLIEN'S FLIRTATION POLKA, performed with the greatest success at Her Majesty's Theatre. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S FRENCH QUADRILLE, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 3s., postage-free. 2.4, Regent street, W

JULLIEN'S CONSTANCE WALTZ Illustrated in Colours by Brandard Price 4s., postage-free. 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S EXCELSIOR WALTZ, performed by Herr Koenig at M. Jullien's Concerts with greatest success and nightly encored. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

G. A. OSBORNE'S NEW PIANOFORTE WORKS:—

1. Ah she is Mine, and the Miserere
2. Fantasia on favourite airs, in Travaiore.
3. No, non udrà., and Di provenza il mar.
4. Lehmu and Pargo c.ara.
5. Robert toi qui l'aimes
6. A favourite Russian air. as a Duet.

Price of each 3s., postage-free

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

NEW DANCE MUSIC

THE WO DLAND SISTERS WALTZ.
THE DIANA WALTZ
THE DREAM of MELODY WALTZ
THE EDINBURGH POLKA
THE BARNEY WILLIAMS QUADRILLE

Containing all the favourite Songs now being sung by this very popular Actress Price of each, 3s., postage-free

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

SABBATH STRAINS: a Collection of Favourite Sacred Melodies, easily and effectively arranged for Pianoforte. By FRANZ NAVA. Price of each, as Solo or Duet, 1s., postage-free.

| | |
|---|---|
| No. 1 | I know that my Redeemer liveth. |
| 2 | With rapture clad |
| 3 | Agnus Dei, from Mozart's 1st Mass |
| 4 | Before Jehovah's awful throne |
| 5 | Holy, holy, Lord God Almighty |
| 6 | Gloria in Excelsis |
| 7 | Hear my pray er |
| 8 | But thou didst not learn |
| 9 | Qual nelcervo |
| 10 | Vital spark of heavenly flame. |
| 11 | My song shall be of mercy |
| 12 | Gloria, from Mozart's 12th Mass. |
| 13 | O Lord, our Governor |
| 14 | Lord, remember David |
| 15 | The Hallelujah Chorus |
| 16 | Rose, bear'st thou |
| 17 | Kyrie from Mozart's 12th Mass. |
| 18 | Vainel be to the holy beauns |
| 19 | O had I Judah's lyre |
| 20 | Gods in mans Beams |
| 21 | Sound the loud timbrel |
| 22 | In Jewry is God known. |
| 23 | He was despised. |
| 24 | Cujus animam |

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

MUSICAL PRESENTATION LIBRARY

Three Guineas' worth of Music presented gratis, to every Annual Subscriber to the above library.

Subscribers are liberally supplied on loan, with every description of New Vocal and Instrumental Music, and have also at their disposal the whole of the Standard Works England Volumes, including the standard Operas Handel, German, French, and English songs, and all kinds of Instrumental Music.

At the expiration of the Term of Subscription, each Subscriber has the privilege of selecting Three Guineas worth of music, the property—from 100,000 different pieces,

THREE GUINEAS WORTH OF MUSIC.

Terms of Subscription

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| For One Year | .. | £2 3 0 | For Three Months .. £1 5 |
| For Six Months | .. | 1 11 6 | For One Month .. 10 10 |

2.4, Regent-street, W

JULLIEN and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY Three Guineas worth of Music Gratis to all Subscribers.

Prospectuses sent free on application to Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street W

JULLIEN and CO.'S CONCERTINAS, by the most celebrated Makers, as used by Signor Regondi, &c.,

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 1. The Amateur Concertina, | | | |
| | 48 silver couples, highly ornamented | .. | 12 12 |
| No. 2. The Drawing-room Concertina. | | | |
| | 48 ivory keys .. .. .. | | 10 10 |
| No. 3. The Amateur Concertina. | | | |
| | 48 ivory keys .. .. .. | | 8 8 |
| No. 4 The Everyday Concertina, | | | |
| | 48 ivory keys .. .. .. | | 6 6 |

Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street.

JULLIEN and CO.'S CORNET-à-PISTONS Approved and tried by HERR KOENIG

Manufactured by ANTOINE COURTOIS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| No. 1. | The Drawing-room Cornet-à-Pistons (by Antoine Courtois), used by Herr Koenig .. .. .. | £6 6 |
| 2. | —The Concert-room Cornet-à-Pistons (by Antoine Courtois), used by Herr Koenig, at M. Jullien's Concerts | 8 8 |
| 3. | —The M. Blary Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. | 6 6 |
| 4. | —The Amateur Cornet à-Pistons .. .. .. | 5 5 |
| 5. | —The Navy Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. | 4 4 |
| 6. | —The Guinea Cornet-à-Pistons First quality) .. .. | 2 2 |
| 7. | —The Ordinary Cornet-à-Pistons (Second quality) .. .. | 1 1 |

List of Prices, with Drawings of the Instruments, may be had on application. Instruments of every description supplied at the lowest possible prices.—JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, London, W.

COLLARD and COLLARD'S SEMI-COTTAGE PIANOFORTES.—To be SOLD, at low prices, for cash, or HIRE, with the option of purchase, eight fine-toned instruments, with 62 octaves and repetition actions in handsome rosewood cases. Also a Semi-cor and full-sized concert grand and double action Harp, by Erard. At HOLDERNESS', 441, New Oxford-street.

HARMONIUMS.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. are agents for ALEXANDRE'S NEW PATENT MODEL. 201, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. have a great variety by all Makers, New and Second-hand for SALE or HIRE. 201, Regent-street.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LOVELL, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, FEB. 21, 1857.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 847.—VOL. XXX.] SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1857. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE.

THE STATE OF PARTIES.

THE numbers of the majority which on Monday night defeated Mr. Disraeli's amendment prove that the financial policy of the Government as indicated in the Budget receives the support, not simply of the party politicians who make it a point to vote for the Government whether it be right or wrong, but of the plain, truth-loving men of both sides of the House. The opposition to the scheme or plan of Sir G. C. Lewis—though Mr. Gladstone does not approve of its being called a plan—was inconsistent and self-contradictory, and therefore valueless; and those who complained of it for taking off too much taxation, and those whose quarrel with it was that it took off too little, were alike powerless to suggest a better of their own. In fact, there was no other possible Budget even sketched in outline for the consideration of Parliament, and thus the Government had anadvantage in the debate of which all the mere rhetoric in the world was unable to deprive them.

The division list shows some curious results, and a singular disintegration of parties. If it were strange to see Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Gladstone voting together, it was stranger still to see Mr. Milner Gibson, Mr. Cobden, and Mr. Sidney Herbert supporting them; and, perhaps, stranger than all the rest to see such different men as Sir John Tyrell and Mr. Cardwell not only making hearty speeches but voting against them. Lord John Russell, though evidently not over well disposed in favour of the existing Ministry, gave them a speech which, if it helped them in some respects, damaged them in others—and a vote which helped to swell the majority with the names of those "pure" Whigs—sadly diminished in number—who still look up to him as their legitimate leader. Sir James Graham went with Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Gladstone; and to the same lobby proceeded Mr. Miall, Sir Joseph Paxton, and Mr. Warren. Never was there greater party confusion—but never did confusion lead to a clearer result, or one more easily to have been anticipated.

What effect will the triumph of the Government have on the newly-formed Coalition? Will Mr. Gladstone continue to work in a leash with Mr. Disraeli? or will he supersede him in the leadership of the Conservative party in the Lower House? Such are some of the questions which suggest themselves, and to which it is not very difficult to frame a reply. The very small, but somewhat over-clever, party of which Mr. Gladstone is the spokesman were known to be in an unhappy position long before the opening of the Session. But it is now abundantly evident that they have placed themselves in a worse. They hunger and thirst for office, and, in pursuit of it, have shown that they are not very hard to please as to the companionship into which they thrust themselves. Their coalition with the Liberals weakened the Liberal party more than any circumstance within memory. But Lord Palmerston, having earnest work to do, succeeded in getting rid of them. It was well for his own fame and for the credit of the country that he did so. As soon as Lord Aberdeen, Mr. Sidney Herbert, Sir James Graham, Mr. Gladstone, and the Duke of Newcastle were relieved from the duties they had shown themselves so incompetent to perform, the war ceased to be mismanaged, national enthusiasm was restored, and public credit was placed on an enduring basis. But it is hard to convince some persons that they have mistaken their vocation or their position. Having the highest opinion of their own genius—a genius which at the best seems to be but a genius for word-splitting,—and unaware apparently of their ill favour with the country, the Peelites (why should the honourable name of Peel continue to be affixed to a party who have neither Peel's wisdom nor his high principle?), rejected by the Liberals, made up their minds during the last recess to offer their services to the Conservative party. The result has been as every one expected. Mr. Disraeli, seeking to strengthen his position, has weakened it; Mr. Gladstone and his followers have done him the same ill turn that they did to the Liberals—have brought discredit upon his leadership, and have tainted both him and Lord Derby by companionship powerless for good, but very potent for evil

But, though the Government have gained a victory as regards the

YORK, IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.—FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.—(SEE PAGE 178.)

Budget, there are circumstances both in the temper of the country and in the feeling of Parliament which ought to warn a statesman so sagacious as the Prime Minister that he does not possess the unlimited confidence of the people, and that if he would retain power he must condescend to enunciate a policy. He was the man who, by universal consent, was designated as the fittest to vindicate the honour of the country and maintain its supremacy in arms at a time when the political horizon was heavy with the thunderclouds of foreign war. He has justified that confidence, and gained not only the respect of his contemporaries, but that place in history which is the best and greatest reward of patriotic statesmanship. But if he is to remain in power he must prove that he understands the wants of peace as well as the necessities of war, and that he has a wise domestic, as well as a dignified foreign, policy. As yet he has given no sufficient indication that such is the case, but seems, from many circumstances which his friends have observed with pain, to act as if the present moribund Parliament truly represented the state of public feeling, and as if the desire for Reform were as moribund as the Parliament. During the war his position was invulnerable; but, the war being over, he has descended to the level of less-gifted Ministers, and must meet the wishes of the country on many far greater questions than that of the Budget and the war nuisance—important as it is—or run the risk of being overthrown by men who may, perhaps, be his inferiors in genius, but who may chance to have the advantage over him in earnestness of purpose and true appreciation of the wants of the time. Hitherto it has been the unfortunate practice of successive Governments and Parliaments never to accede any great measure of reform, parliamentary, fiscal, or social, until the people were driven to the verge of revolution for want of it. There are many men yet amongst us in the prime of life who remember how narrowly the country escaped a protracted and sanguinary struggle at the time of the Reform agitation from 1830 to 1832. A still greater number are able to recall to mind the imminent danger in which all our institutions were placed by the dogged, obstinate, unreasoning refusal of the most powerful parties in the State to untax the bread of the people. Is the country always to run such risks? Is no reform ever to be granted except upon compulsion, and, as it were, at the pistol's mouth? The pitcher has gone often to the well, and has not yet been broken; but will it never break? The reasons alleged by Lord Palmerston and some of his supporters for refusing to consider a proposition of reform so temperate and safe as that introduced last week by Mr. Locke King, are the very reasons which should have induced him to entertain it. We say nothing of Sir Joshua Walmsley's motion, which was simply an absurdity, and as such was scouted by many good Reformers; but we do hope that Lord Palmerston and the other members of the present Ministry will seriously bethink themselves of the expediency—not to say the necessity—of devoting some portion of their attention to the question of Parliamentary Reform. If they do not, Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Disraeli are quite capable of taking the question out of their hands, and of turning it to account for the advantage of the party.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

From the Supplement to the London Gazette of Tuesday, the 24th Feb.]

WAR-OFFICE, Feb 24.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officers and men of her Majesty's Navy and Marines, and officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of her Majesty's Army who have been recommended to her Majesty for that decoration—in accordance with the rules laid down in her Majesty's Warrant of the 29th of January, 1856 on account of acts of bravery performed by them before the enemy during the late war, viz.:—

ROYAL NAVY (INCLUDING THE NAVAL BRIGADE EMPLOYED ON SHORE) AND ROYAL MARINES.

C. W. Buckley, Commander. J. T. Burgoyne, Commander. J. Roberts, Commander H. Cooper, Boatswain. J. Trewavas, Seaman. J. Kellaway, Seaman. G. F. Day, Commander. J. E. Commerell, Commander. W. Rickard, Quartermaster.

NAVAL BRIGADE.

W. H. L. Captain. E. St. J. Daniels, Midshipman. W. N. W. Hewett, Lieutenant. J. Sullivan, Boatswain's Mate. J. Shepherd, Boatswain. [illegible] Gorman, and M. Schofield, Seamen. H. J. Raby, Commander. J. Taylor, Captain of the Forecastle. H. Curtis, Boatswain's Mate.

BALTIC.

G. Ingouville, Captain of the Mast. J. Bythesea, Commander. W. Johnstone, Stoker. C. D. Lucas, Lieutenant.

ROYAL MARINES

G. D. Dowell, Lieutenant. J. Prettyjohn, Corporal T. Wilkinson, Bombardier

ARMY

[illegible] Dragoons: Sergeant-Major J. Grieve.

[illegible] Light Dragoons: Private S. Parkes.

[illegible] Hussars: Lieut. A. R. Dunn.

[illegible] Lancers: Troop Sergeant-Major J. Berryman.

[illegible] Transport Corps (late, Royal Artillery: Captain A. Henry. Royal Artillery: Brevet Lieut.-Col. M. C. Dixon. Gunner and Driver Arthur.

Royal Engineers: Lieut. G. Graham. Lieut. D. Leanox. Corporal J. Ross. Corporal W. J. Lendrim. Sapper J. Perie.

[illegible] Guards: Brevet Major C. Russell.

[illegible] Battalion Grenadier Guards: Private A. Palmer. Sergeant A. Adams.

[illegible]-foam Guards: Brevet Major G. L. Goodlake. Privates W. Strattock, G. Strong.

[illegible] Fusilier Guards: Brevet Major R. J. Lindsay. Sergeant Nicholas. Private W. Reynolds.

[illegible] Battalion 1st Regiment: Private J. Prosser.

[illegible]d Regiment: Brevet Lieut.-Colonel F. F. Maude; Private J. Connors.

[illegible]th: Privates M. Hughes, W. Norfield.

[illegible]h. Ensign A. Moynihan (late of the 90th).

[illegible]th: Corporal Lance-Sergeant) P. Smith.

[illegible] Private J. Lyons.

[illegible]rd: Brevet Lieut.-Colonel E. W. D. Bell. Lieutenant L. O'Connor Coloral R. Shields.

[illegible]th: Privates W. Coffey, J. J. Sims.

[illegible]. Brevet Major H. Rowlands. Serg.-Major A. Maddea.

[illegible] Serg. W. M'Wheency.

[illegible] Private J. M'Dermond.

[illegible] Serg. G. Walters. Corporal J. Owens.

[illegible] Private T. Beach. Brevet Major F. C. Elton.

[illegible] Private C. M'Corrin.

[illegible] Capt. T. De Courcy Hamilton Private J. Byrne

[illegible] Serg. J. Parks Private A. Wright.

[illegible] Private Alexander

[illegible]th. Brevet Major C. H. Lumley. Serg. J. Coleman

[illegible]st Battalion Rifle Brigade: Brevet Major Hon. H. H. Clifford. Capt [illegible] Cunynghame. Brevet Major C. T. Bourchier Private F. Wheatley.

[illegible]nd Battalion: Lieut. J. Knox. Privates R. M'Gregor, R. Humpston Sandshaw.

WAR DEBTS.—On the motion of Mr Wilson, a return has been published showing the state of the funded and unfunded debt created in consequence of the late war, with the annual outgoings necessary to redeem the same. Including principal and interest, these sums will, in 1857, amount to £3,671,000; in the two following years it will amount to £4,626,000 and £4 707,000 respectively. In 1860 it falls to £3,685,000, and in 1861 to £2,643,000. From this time it gradually decreases down to £1,981,000 in 1873. In the following year, 1874, it falls to £951,000. In 1878 it will be only £407,000, at which figure it will remain until 1885, when it becomes £261,000, at which amount it continues permanently. Besides this liability, the war created an annual charge of £191,668 on account of funded Exchequer Bills, &c.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday.

My dear readers! I really don't know if you are much interested in the recital of the doings of the end of the Carnival, and all the turmoil and forced gaiety, and excitement, and eating, and drinking, and dressing, and dancing, and parading, and tomfoolery, got up for the occasion; I am not, but que voulez vous? My duty as chronicler of the events of the day calls upon me to relate what passes, in the hope it may amuse other people, quite independent of any amusement it may or may not afford me. In fact, there is nothing else to tall about, these junketings taking the place of all other occupations and interests, politics included, except when some of the papers civilly give each other the lie on the Anglo-Persian question, or hazard a few remarks on that of Neufchâtel, which nobody pays any attention to. Being at Rome, therefore, let us do as the Romans (of the fall?) do; and, as last week, follow the peregrinations of the Parisienne.

The last grand ball at the Tuileries was more than usually splendid: the Empress, whose dancing till a late hour with great animation seems to contradict a rumour which was becoming pretty general as to fresh prospects of an addition to the Imperial family, was dressed in pink crape, with a tunic of English point lace, the front of the corsage covered with emeralds and diamonds; the head-dress consisted of a diadem of emeralds and diamonds, with the back hair attached by, and falling in ringlets over, the comb. The dress, however, that perhaps attracted the greatest attention was that of the beautiful Comtesse Castiglione, consisting of a gown of red satin, covered with bouillonnés of red crape below, and a lace tunic above. The coiffure was composed of two red feathers, fastened in the middle at the point of the forehead, and turning backwards round the ears. This lady wore at the fancy ball of Mdme. Walewska a costume yet more remarkable. The robe and corsage were of cloth of silver, the latter perfectly tight and considerably décolleté, with extremely short sleeves, and no ornament or trimming whatever, but a large diamond heart; the former displaying an under skirt looped up at one side, so as to display the ankle, round which a bracelet was clasped. On the head five diamond hearts were held together by an arrow transpiercing them, and a flowing veil completed the costume. At the ball at the Tuileries the dress and general appearance of the Duke of Brunswick attracted the attention of all beholders. He wore a tunic so covered with embroidery that the colour thereof was hardly to be discovered; red trousers, scarcely less embroidered: the cockade and epaulets of jewels that figured at the Exhibition, and fourteen orders in brilliants, seven at the right side, and as many at the left. An accident, in which a voltigeur of the Imperial Guard contrived, in waltzing, to let his partner fall on the knees of the Emperor, excited a good deal of confusion and merriment.

On Monday a soirée dansante took place at the Tuileries: and on Tuesday the gaieties of the Court circle wound up with a ball at the Princesse Mathilde's.

Last week was celebrated, at the church of St. Louis en l'Ile, the marriage of the Princess Ida Czartoryska with the Comte Jean Dayalmski. The service was performed by the Cardinal Donnet, and attended by the representatives of all the Polish families in Paris, as well as by Prince Lucien Murat, the Maréchaux Vaillant and Magnan, and various other personages of the day.

SETTLEMENT OF THE PERSIAN QUESTION.

The settlement of the Persian quarrel has been so often announced and so often contradicted that any report on the subject must be accepted with caution, once more we are affirmed that there is every probability of an arrangement satisfactory to both parties. The draught of a convention relating to the points in dispute was forwarded from Paris to London on Tuesday. According to this account the islands of Karrak and Ormuz be ceded to the English, who will evacuate Bushire, while the Persians will, in turn, give up Herat. The dismissal of the Shah's Prime Minister will not be insisted upon, nor also the other demand relative to the manner in which Mr. Murray is to be received at Teheran, and which was considered derogatory to the Shah's dignity. It is added that Persia has agreed to receive Consuls in those places where Russian Consuls are established

The Paris correspondent of the Times, writing on Wednesday, says:—

I believe that Colonel Ouseley has not yet left Paris; but his departure is said to be fixed for this evening or to-morrow. On the Persian question I can only add that, as I am informed, the articles of the proposed convention with England specify that the latter Power shall henceforth be treated as the most favoured nation that is, as Russia, with respect to commercial advantages; and, moreover, that she shall have a right to found an establishment in the Isle of Karrak and another in Ormuz. These conditions would appear to be independent of the evacuation of Herat by the Persians, and the abandonment of Bushire by the English. The English Government had demanded the right to appoint a Consul at Reshush, a port of the Mazanderan on the Caspian Sea; but the Persian Envoy alleged that the existing treaties with Russia contain a clause prohibiting foreign diplomatic agents from residing on the shores of that sea, and no other foreign Power has an agent there. But it may enjoy the right of having Consuls on several specified points in the interior of Persia, and on the coasts of the Persian Gulf. If the conditions to be submitted to the English Government be accepted, Feruak Khan will probably go to London, merely for the ratification of the treaty between us and Persia.

AMERICA.

The screw-steamer, Alps, arrived at Liverpool on Thursday, having left New York on the 14th inst.

Congress has got into a dilemma. In accordance with law, both Houses met on the 11th inst. in convention to count the votes for President and Vice-President. The ceremony is of itself of no practical importance usually, but, in this instance, a point of much interest has arisen. It is well known, that, in consequence of a severe snowstorm which blocked up the roads, the Wisconsin presidential electors were unable to reach the capital of that State on the 3rd of December, and vote for the President and Vice-President, as required by law. Their proceedings were unavoidably postponed till the 4th of the month, and the question is shall the vote of Wisconsin be ruled out? After arguing the point in joint convention for some time, the Senate retired, and subsequently the debate was kept up in both Houses until the hour of adjournment, without any decision being arrived at.

The Missouri Senate had passed a resolution declaring the emancipation of slaves in that State impracticable, impolitic, unwise, and unjust, and that it should be discountenanced by the people. The House had confirmed the resolution by a vote of 107 to 69.

The Kansas correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat reports that a rencontre had taken place at Tecumseh, between Judge Elmore, and the correspondent of the National Era, named Eagin. Both parties were wounded, but not dangerously.

The Secretary of War had recommended to Congress the appropriation of 8000 dols. for the suppression of the slave trade on the principle asserted in the Act of 1819, and had favourably endorsed the application of the American Colonisation Society for 30,000 dols. for a similar object

After an investigation of thirteen days' duration, marked by circumstances of an extraordinary character, and attended with an unparalleled public excitement, the testimony in the Bond-street tragedy was brought to a conclusion on Thursday, the 12th. The Coroner was to have summed up on the 14th.

The Governor-General of Canada has issued his proclamation summoning the Provincial Parliament to meet at Toronto on the 26th of the present month

The news from California is interesting. Governor Johnson, in his message to the Legislature, denounces repudiation, and recommends the payments of the illegally-contracted State debt. The entire State debt amounts to but a trifle over three millions of dollars. On the 9th ult. California was shaken by a violent earthquake. The shock was attended, however, with but little damage. The George Law brought 1,097,806 dols. in treasure, which is some 700,000 dols. less than the semi-monthly shipment at a corresponding period last year.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

The steamer America arrived at Trieste at half-past six on Wednesday morning. The India mails arrived at that port with advices from Hong-Kong to Jan. 15; Calcutta, Jan. 24; Madras, Jan. 27; Ceylon, Feb. 1; and Bombay, Feb. 2.

There is no change in the position of affairs in China. The Chinese made an unsuccessful attempt to retake Tee-Totum Fort. The Europeans on board the steamer Thistle, in all eleven persons, were treacherously murdered by "braves" in disguise among the native passengers. The steamer was carried off, and abandoned after being dismantled. The Government of Hong-Kong has increased the police force, and taken precautionary measures against incendiarism.

Total exports of tea to Great Britain, about 41,000,000 lb., against 54,000,000 last year.

Intelligence from Bushire to the 17th of January states that the troops were still unmolested by the enemy. An attack had been made by detachments of cavalry and horse artillery on a depôt of Persian stores and ammunition, twenty-two miles from the camp, and the object attained without loss.

A despatch of reinforcements from India to Persia had commenced.

Letters from Bombay state that Mr. Murray had arrived at Bushire, and that the English had established their head-quarters at Bussorah.

COUNTRY NEWS.

NATIONAL SUNDAY LEAGUE.—A public meeting, attended by about 6000 persons, was held on Sunday last on Newcastle Moor, to protest against the conduct of the opponents of the National Sunday League at a meeting held on the previous Monday night, and to adopt a petition to Parliament in favour of the objects of the League. The chair was taken by Mr. Thomas Gregson. Mr. Cowen, who employs a great number of persons in the neighbourhood, moved a resolution expressive of the opinion of the meeting that the efforts of the National Sunday League to obtain the opening of museums, galleries, &c., on Sundays deserves the support of the working classes. An amendment was moved by the Rev. Mr. Rutherford, but the resolution was carried by a large majority, and the petition to Parliament in favour of the objects sought by the League met with the general assent of the meeting, only fourteen hands being held up against it. Mr. Rutherford declared himself willing to hold a discussion on the Sunday question, which was at once accepted by the friends of the League.

LORD LIEUTENANCY OF THE WEST RIDING.—The office of Lord Lieutenant of the West Riding of Yorkshire, vacant by the death of the Earl of Harewood, will of course soon be filled up by the Government. It will be remembered that the late Earl Fitzwilliam was deprived of the office by the Ministry of Lord Liverpool, for the political offence of attending a county meeting at York, to petition for an inquiry into the outrage at Peterloo, Manchester, on the 16th of August, 1819. The office was then bestowed upon Lord Lascelles, who in the following year became Earl of Harewood. On his death it was bestowed on Lord Wharncliffe; and again on his decease it was given to the late Earl of Harewood. It would seem just and natural that the honour should now revert to Wentworth House, whence it was taken by so unjust and illiberal a punishment for an act which was highly meritorious.—Leeds Mercury.

BOSTON, SLEAFORD, AND MIDLAND COUNTIES RAILWAY.—On Monday last the half-yearly meeting of this company was held at the Euston Hotel—Mr. Ingram, M.P., in the chair. The report states that, since the last half yearly meeting, the works between Grantham and Sleaford have progressed most satisfactorily, and there is no doubt that this section will be ready for traffic in May next. An agreement has been made with the Great Northern Railway Company for working the line when completed to Sleaford, and afterwards to Boston, for a period of ten years, for fifty per cent of the gross earnings, keeping in good repair the entire property; so that one-half the earnings from the opening of the line will be available for dividend. The Great Northern and the Ambergate Railway Companies have agreed to carry over their respective lines all local rent from the midland district for shipment at Boston at the rates proposed by the conowners of such district, thereby enabling the directors to comply with the conditions on which these gentlemen have promised their pecuniary assistance in extending the line to Boston. The directors have entered into a provisional contract with Messrs. Smith and Knight for completing the line to Boston, and are also proceeding with the purchase of the lands over which the proposed line will pass. Immediately on the agreement with the conowners being perfected the works between Sleaford and Boston will be commenced, and, as they are of an unusually light description, the contractors will be enabled to have that part of the line opened for traffic early in the spring of next year. The report, after stating that the trade of Boston has considerably increased, and on completion of the railway the probability that 500,000 tons of coals will pass over it to Boston for shipment for Continental ports, expresses the unabated confidence of the directors in the success of the undertaking. On the motion of the Chairman the report was adopted. The directors and auditors were elected, a meeting was then made special, and the directors were authorised to exercise the borrowing powers of the company. A vote of thanks to the Chairman and directors concluded the proceedings

THE WEATHER.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE CAMBRIDGE OBSERVATORY, FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEB. 25, 1857.

| Day. | Barometer corrected and reduced to 32° Fahr. at Sea Level. | Highest Barometer. | Lowest Barometer. | Dry Bulb Thermometer. 9 A.M. | Wet Bulb Thermometer. 9 A.M. | Dry Bulb Thermometer. 3 P.M. | Wet Bulb Thermometer. 3 P.M. | Direction of Wind. | Amount of Cloud (0 to 10). | Rain in Inches. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Feb 19 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 44.4 | 42.3 | 44.3 | 41.2 | S. | 10 | 0.030 |
| " 20 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 42.8 | 41.4 | 42.1 | 40.2 | S. | 10 | 0.025 |
| " 21 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 43.7 | 42.7 | 44.5 | 42.1 | S. | 10 | 0.027 |
| " 22 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 44.1 | 42.6 | 44.1 | 42.0 | S. | 8 | 0.000 |
| " 23 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 43.6 | 42.1 | 43.6 | 41.7 | W. | 3 | 0.000 |
| " 24 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 43.2 | 41.8 | 43.2 | 41.4 | SE. | 0 | 0.000 |
| " 25 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 43.2 | 41.8 | 43.2 | 41.1 | NW. | 3 | 0.031 |
| Means | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 43.6 | 42.1 | 43.6 | 41.4 | | | 0.063 |

The range of temperature during the week was 26.6 degrees

Dense fog prevailed throughout the day and night of the 20th, and on the morning of the 20th; and it was misty on the morning of the 24th. The weather has been generally fine and the sky clear since the 21st, and the zodiacal light was noticed on the evenings of the 20th, 23rd, and 24th.

Hoar-frost was noticed on the night of the 20th, and on the mornings of the 23rd, 24th, and 25th. A little rain fell at 2.30 p.m. of the 20th, at 10h. a.m. of the 21st, and between 9h. and 10h. a.m. of the 25th, but on the latter occasion the sky became clear at midnight

A splendid aurora was seen at 11h. 20m. p.m. of the 22nd, almost due south, but was only visible for about two seconds, when it fell into fragments and disappeared. Another, as bright as Sirius, was seen at 9h. 10m. p.m. of the 20th, to the east of Alpha Hydræ.

J. BREEN.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Lat 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above sea 34 feet.

| DAY. | DAILY MEANS OF | | | | | THREE HOURS. | | WIND | | RAIN in 24 hours. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Barometer Corrected | Temperature of Dew Point | Dew Point. | Relative Humidity. | Amount of Cloud. | Minimum at 10 A.M. | Maximum at 10 P.M. | General Direction. | Movement in 24 hours. | Read at 10 A.M. |
| | Inches. | ° | ° | | 0–10 | ° | ° | | | Inches |
| Feb. 18 | 30.021 | 44.7 | 41.3 | 89 | 9 | 37.9 | 52.1 | S. | 153 | 000 |
| " 19 | 30.126 | 43.3 | 40.3 | 90 | 10 | 39.3 | 47.2 | N. E. | 75 | 000 |
| " 20 | 30.203 | 42.9 | 38.3 | 85 | 5 | 35.3 | 49.4 | SSE. SW. | 138 | 000 |
| " 21 | 30.310 | 43.3 | 40.3 | 84 | 8 | 33.9 | 50.4 | SSW. | 246 | 005 |
| " 22 | 30.251 | 42.9 | 39.1 | 78 | 5 | 33.4 | 52.3 | SSW. | 286 | 000 |
| " 23 | 30.297 | 40.5 | 37.4 | 90 | 5 | 31.9 | 49.2 | N. ENE. | 54 | 000 |
| " 24 | 30.231 | 41.7 | 36.4 | 83 | 6 | 29.7 | 51.8 | | 185 | 000 |

ERRATUM.—Feb. 16, Maximum Thermometer for 32.9 read 52.9.

The daily means are obtained from observations made at 6h. and 10h a.m., and 2h., 6h., and 10h. p.m. on each day, except Sunday, when the first observation is omitted. The corrections for diurnal variation are taken from the Tables of Mr. Glaisher. The "Dew-point" and "Relative Humidity" are calculated, from observations of the dry and wet bulb thermometers, by Dr. Apjohn's Formula and Dalton's Tables of the Tension of Vapour. The movement of the wind is given by a self-recording Robinson's Anemometer, the amount stated for each day being that registered from midnight to midnight.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

A FIRST-CLASS debate in the House of Lords is usually as uniform in its inception and its conduct as the field-days at Aldershott. The manner of the proceeding is generally thus:—The Earl of Derby or Lord Lyndhurst one evening asks Lord Clarendon for the production of certain papers; and, when they are laid on the table, the noble Lord who intends to move in the matter gives notice that he will, on a future day, call attention to the subject; and the notice duly appears day after day in their Lordships' minutes, with the words "no day named" attached to them. After the lapse of perhaps a week the formal terms of the motion find their way into the Order Book, and in a day or two afterwards the actual evening of debate is fixed. About three weeks is ordinarily occupied in the process of incubation of a full-dress discussion in the Upper House. Such discussions, therefore, are comparatively few and far between. A sitting from five o'clock until it is time to go to dinner is the normal disposition of their Lordships. In the present Session, however, they have shown a tendency to loquacity, which seems rather to increase than to diminish, and, in the present week, their exertions have been consecutively wonderful.

On Monday there was every necessary preparation for the Lords to have a long night—that is, a sitting till ten o'clock for the Lord Chancellor was to bring on one of his vexed measures of Legal Reform —lucus a non lucendo—the phrase is trite, but apt; and those Peers who are familiarly called "Law Lords" are famous continuers in debate, especially when it is their province to fall foul of each other. In this case, however, their unanimity is wonderful in a desire to hunt the Lord Chancellor, principally because he has been the means of introducing into the House an old colleague of his on the judicial Bench, in the person of Lord Wensleydale, who is likely to disturb the monopoly of legal discussion which has hitherto been enjoyed by my Lords Lyndhurst, Brougham, Campbell, and St. Leonards. Accordingly, three of these Peers were duly arrayed on Monday to scarify the bill of the noble and learned Lord on the Woolsack. There was Lord Lyndhurst, still making men wonder at a triumph of intellect over physical decay which has been paralleled perhaps only by Talleyrand. Lord Campbell came to throw his last stone at his noble and learned friend before he went the circuit; and Lord St. Leonards came specially to the House, for the first time this Session. If they came, as is their custom, on evil deeds of opposition to the Chancellor intent, they must have soon felt their combativeness melting away before the really melancholy mess which the Keeper of the Great Seal was making of the business. Lord Cranworth is a fluent speaker; and in delivering judgments in his courts he is tolerably clear, and even sequential; but on this occasion, such a specimen of the inconsequent, the rambling, and the repetitional, and, in short, of that peculiar system of dialectics of which Mrs. Nickleby was a chief professor, has seldom been heard. All the Peers naturally went to hear the end of Mr. Disraeli's speech in the Commons, and remained to listen to the whole of Mr. Gladstone's leaving the second estate of the realm represented by that curious average, stated by Lord Lyndhurst, of a third of a Peer to each of the few benches which are usually occupied in that House. No wonder the "old man eloquent" disdained to speak to such an audience, and the sitting concluded derisively.

The next evening was Lord Derby's first night this season. The question was China; the association with tea was obvious, and the attendance of ladies in great numbers was therefore appropriate. By-the-by, Lady Palmerston had a "Thé Dansante" on that very evening. It is not to be denied that Lord Lyndhurst "draws" better than Lord Derby; and Lord Ellenborough has filled the galleries better than either of them before now. But certainly the noble Earl had every reason to be satisfied with the number and the aspect of his audience. There were quite enough bonnets in the side galleries and in the boxes below the bar to create that unpleasant bushfulness in the more youthful orators of the House of which Lord Redesdale complains—hardly from any personal feelings of his own. The Corps Diplomatique were well represented too; Mr. Dallas, as usual, taking advantage of any opportunity of spending his evenings in watching the legislative doings of the Britishers. As the House of Commons was employed in considering whether the British Constitution should be referred to a Select Committee, of course the places appropriated to members of the Lower House were inconveniently crowded; while the steps of the throne were peopled as thickly as the steps leading to St. James's-park were on the day of the Duke of Wellington's funeral. Mr. Disraeli and Lord Stanley were conspicuous there as listeners to the eloquence of their chief and sire; while Mr. Labouchere watched the case on the part of the Government.

The audience was therefore both fit and full. And no doubt Lord Derby made a great speech; but it was not a speech such as one likes or expects from him. It is pleasant and exciting to listen to the ceaseless rush of his declamation, to those grand sentences five minutes long, in which the verb and the nominative case always preserve their due equilibrium, and which are always rounded with a flowing period. It is agreeable to hear his choice of sarcasm, his flights of humour, never too high; the humour of a joker of jokes; his splendid fallacies, his daring assertions, and sometimes even his bitter invective. Now, the other night all this was not as usual continuous and rapid; with all the vigour and the earnestness neutralising the somewhat monotonous shrillness of the voice, and the angularity of the gesture and attitude; but it was broken by the reading of long extracts from Blue-books, which, to say the truth, went very near to justify the application of Sir J. Graham's phrase of "pottering;" for be it observed that Lord Derby grows dimmer of eye than one likes to mention, that time has much "thinned his flowing hair," and that he exhibited a sign of physical weakness, not noticed in him hitherto, of taking many glasses of water during his speech. The consequence was that the oration halted, and grew cold; and very few of the large audience remained to the end of the third hour which it occupied to hear the elaborate peroration which caused the adjournment of the debate (most unconstitutional proceeding in the Upper House), in order that the Bishop of Oxford might have an opportunity of answering its glowing appeal, on behalf of the Chinese, to the right reverend bench.

It is well known that the Duke of Argyll believes it is his mission to crush Lord Derby, and in this case he did his possible; but what that is one had rather be excused from describing. And, though Lord Grey speaks things which are suggestive enough, somehow no one delights to listen to him. Altogether this was not the best specimen of great nights in the Lords that we have ere now witnessed.

WILLS.—The will of the Hon. Sir Edward Hall (Baron) Alderson, was proved under £50,000.—Sir William Lewis Salisbury Trelawney, Bart., of Cornwall, £6000. The Dowager Countess of Carhampton's will has just been proved in London. Edward Crossdale, Esq., M.D., late of Boulogne, £35,000. Daniel Chambers Mackright, Esq., M.D., of Jersey, £2000. Henry Waterland Root, Esq., of Lincoln, £10,000. William Todd, Esq., of Barnsbury-park, £20,000.

WRECK OF THE PENINSULAR STEAMER "MADRID."—A telegraphic message was received on Thursday morning to the effect that the steamer Madrid, conveying the outward mails struck on a rock at the entrance of the port of Vigo on the 20th inst. All on board were saved

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

(Continued from page 193.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY

IRISH SEA-COAST FISHERIES BILL

On the motion for the second reading of the Irish Sea-coast Fisheries Bill,

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL for IRELAND opposed the bill as setting at nought the regulations established for the protection of the fisherman, and as calculated to destroy the fisheries. The bill did not materially differ from that which the House rejected last year, and he hoped members would not change their opinion.

Mr KENNEDY supported the bill, which he said would only place Irish fishermen in the same position as their English brethren.

Mr. NAPIER contended that the measure would not effect its object. Its provisions seemed only intended to benefit the Wexford coast; it would not apply to the rest of Ireland.

After some further conversation, in which Mr. Meagher and Mr. Bowyer supported the bill, while Colonel Dunne, Lord Naas, Mr. Bellew, and Mr George Butt opposed it,

Mr. M'MAHON replied; after which

The House divided, and the second reading was rejected by a majority of 185 to 16.

JUDGMENTS EXECUTION BILL.

The House then went into Committee on the Judgments Execution Bill On the first clause,

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL for IRELAND moved an amendment, that, on asking one Court to enforce the judgment of another, that Court should be provided with a copy of the judgment instead of a memorial

Mr. CRAUFURD strongly opposed this amendment, as destructive of the principle of the bill

After some discussion the amendment was agreed to by a majority of 99 to 77.

Mr. CRAUFURD then moved to report progress, that he might have time to consider whether it was worth going further with the bill.

The motion was agreed to, and the House resumed.

The Commons Inclosure Bill was read a third time

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL for IRELAND obtained leave to bring in a Bill to Consolidate and Amend the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Laws in Ireland.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

On the motion of Lord CAMPBELL it was agreed upon that a Select Committee should be appointed to inquire into the state of the law in respect to the publication of the proceedings of Parliament, of Convocation, and of public meetings generally, and to report thereon to the House.

The Supplemental Health of Towns Bill was read a second time.

THE WAR IN CHINA.

The adjourned debate upon this subject was resumed by the Earl of CARNARVON, who contended with much ability that the lorcha Arrow was, to all intents and purposes, a Chinese vessel, and, therefore, that the war against Canton was wholly unjustifiable.

Lord METHUEN defended the conduct of the British authorities at Canton, as well as that of the Government, on this subject.

Lord ST. LEONARDS condemned the affair at Canton as illegal and unjustifiable, and supported the resolutions of the Earl of Derby. The noble and learned Lord confined himself almost exclusively to a legal argument, which he urged with the view of showing that the lorcha was subject to all intents and purposes a Chinese vessel.

Lord WENSLEYDALE also confined himself to a legal argument proving that she was really a British vessel.

The Earl of MALMESBURY deprecated the whole proceedings against the Chinese authorities as immoral, impolitic, and unjust.

The Earl of ALBEMARLE drew a distinction between a junk and the lorcha in question, for the purpose of showing that the Chinese officials had not made a mistake in the matter; but must have very well known that they were guilty of a most unjustifiable act when they boarded the Arrow.

The EARL OF ELLENBOROUGH submitted that the extreme measures taken against Canton were wholly unjustifiable, and condemned the Government for not having immediately recalled Sir John Bowring, the author of them.

The Earl GRANVILLE justified the conduct of the British authorities at Canton.

The Bishop of OXFORD found fault with the Government in a speech that excited considerable attention

Their Lordships then divided. The numbers were—

| For the Earl of Derby's resolutions :— | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Contents, Present | .. | .. | 53 |
| Proxies | .. | .. | 57 |
| | | | — 110 |
| Non-contents, Present | .. | .. | 71 |
| Proxies | .. | .. | 75 |
| | | | — 146 |
| Majority for the Government | .. | .. | 36 |

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

NEW MEMBER.—Mr. Rebow took the oaths and his seat for Colchester in the room of Lord John Manners

THE BUDGET. Mr. GLADSTONE gave notice that he should move his amendment on the Tea and Sugar Duties in Committee of Ways and Means, instead of upon the motion for going into Committee, as he had originally intended

THE CHINESE WAR.

Mr. CORDEN, pursuant to notice, rose to move the following resolution:—"That this House has heard with concern of the conflicts which have occurred between the British and Chinese authorities in the Canton river; and, without expressing an opinion as to the extent to which the Government of China may have afforded this country just cause of complaint respecting the non-fulfilment of the Treaty of 1842, this House considers that the papers which have been laid upon the table fail to establish satisfactory grounds for the violent measures resorted to at Canton, in the late affair of the Arrow; and that a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into the state of our commercial relations with China." The hon. member said he brought the subject before the House with no feeling of personal hostility towards the Government, whose feelings, on the contrary, he would have been glad to spare, if he could have done so consistently with his duty. He had brought the subject before the House in order that it might be known that we were at war, with whom the war originated, and that the whole affair might be thoroughly sifted, not from any feeling toward the Chinese, but for the vindication of the national honour. Hear, hear. And he asked the House to deal fairly with the question, and not consider it simply as a dispute between a strong Power and a weak one. He had observed with regret that there had lately been two politics in the House—one towards a strong Power, and another towards a weak Power. As the House was aware, the dispute had ostensibly originated in the boarding of the lorcha Arrow by the Chinese, it being contended by Sir John Bowring that that vessel was in reality British, sailing under the British flag. Lord Lyndhurst, however, whose knowledge of international law no one could question, said the Arrow was entirely Chinese. In his (Mr. Cobden's) opinion, the letter written home by Sir John Bowring was the most flagitious public document ever published. But even admitting that the lorcha's register was all in order, how would such a dispute have been settled with a strong Power? Some time ago a coloured seaman, a subject of Britain, was seized on board an English vessel in the harbour of Charleston, and the English Consul, instead of ordering Charleston to be bombarded, wrote to Washington; and, communications being opened with the American Government, the dispute was settled in an amicable manner, and in a way which ought to have been adopted at Canton with the Chinese. No attempt had been made to show that in boarding the lorcha while the British flag was flying, the Chinese had wilfully insulted this country. But it was contended by the Chinese that no such flag was flying; and even if it were there was no real intention of insult; and it was clear from the correspondence that had been published that, while on the side of the Chinese there were courtesy, submission, and forbearance, on the other side there were arrogance and presumption, with a preconceived design to pick a quarrel (Hear, hear). But it was said that the English and Americans, had not been properly treated in Canton for some years, and that the condition of the last treaty had not been observed by the Chinese. If this were true why had not the English Government interfered before, instead of letting the matter drift into a war upon a question in which it was most decidedly in the wrong? A Blue-book had just been published containing correspondence about "coming to the Chinese there were courtesy, submission, and forbearance, on the other side there were arrogance and presumption, with a preconceived design to pick a quarrel (Hear, hear). But it was said that the English and Americans, had not been properly subjected as well as the French ascending two miles, the channel of the river deepens, and thence to Perth, or rather to Mount Eliza, the highland immediately below the town, it varies in depth from twenty-five to sixty feet, spreading out into a large sheet of water called Melville Water, four miles below Perth. The opening of the bar and the improvement of the navigation of the shoal parts of the river, have been a subject of anxious investigation, and it is hoped that measures may be made practicable for removing these obstacles and giving the capital the great advantage of an open communication with the sea.

ABORIGINES OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

The communication between the two towns has been hitherto chiefly by sailing and passage-boats. A steamer ran between them in 1854 but she was not suited to the river, and was laid up in consequence of the death of her owner. Another steamer better adapted to the peculiar wants of the community and the river was sent out from England last year. The high road runs on the north bank of the river, and has been opened and made by convict labour. It is now in course of being macadamized, and, when complete, will form a fine line of communication.

Twelve miles up the River Swan is Perth, the capital of the colony, containing at present about 2000 inhabitants. It is beautifully situated on the banks of the river, and can boast of several churches, a large hospital, schoolhouses, and many agreeable private residences.

The soil in the neighbourhood of Perth varies very much, but much of it is of very excellent quality; and the show of fruit, flowers, and vegetables in Perth and its environs is exceedingly good.

The vine, the olive, the castor-oil tree, the orange, and the lemon, all thrive here in the open air, and a single bunch of grapes has been known to weigh 26 lb. The olive bears its fruit in three years, instead of seven as in the Mediterranean, and most English fruits (except currants and gooseberries) do well.

Seven miles further up the river is the thriving village of Guildford, near which an extensive bridge has been erected by convict labour across the River Swan, connecting the large farms on the upper Swan with the main road to Perth and Fremantle. It was erected under the able superintendence of Lieut. Du Cane, R.E., after the model of the bridges in use in America. A range of hills, called the Darling Range, from 800 to 1400 feet above the sea, runs parallel to the coast, varying from fifteen to twenty miles distance from the sea. Across these hills the roads to the flourishing settlements on the upper branches of the Swan River have to be carried. The ascents are steep, but have been greatly improved since the introduction of convict labour. The new ascent of the hills on the road to the Toodyay Settlement (part of which is shown in the Sketch) is a very excellent piece of work, and has proved of material benefit to the settlers in the transport of their wool and other produce.

Hence to York, the chief settlement over the Darling Hills, is fifty miles east, and to Toodyay forty miles north-east; and of course to keep in proper repair such long lines of communication, which are only now emerging from their primitive condition of bush tracks, requires a large supply of labour. York and Toodyay are at present the principal corn-producing districts of the colony, although a considerable breadth of land in the southern districts, near Bunbury, has been within the last few years brought under cultivation, and produces excellent crops of corn.

York is pleasantly situated in the rich valley of the Avon, and thence the farms and stations extend still fifty miles further. The high land at the back of the town of York, which appears in the Sketch (engraved upon the first page of the present Number), is known as Mount Bakewell, or more familiarly as "old Bakewell;" the inhabitants of York being justly proud of their handsome friend.

Like most Australian rivers the Swan, or Avon as it is called at York, only runs in the winter, and sometimes not even then, being entirely dependent on the rain that falls in the winter months; but there are occasional reaches, or "pools" as they are termed, where the water remains fresh and sweet the whole year round, except in very severe droughts of which, however, there is only one on record—when the pools become brackish.

The improving little sea-port town of Bunbury, a portion of which is shown in the accompanying Illustration (by another Correspondent), is pleasantly situated at the mouth of the Leschenault Estuary, into which three rivers discharge their waters. There is much good land in the neighbourhood, and many thriving farms; and between it and the Vasse (celebrated for its butter and potatoes), and as far as Augusta, forty miles south of the Vasse, the Tuart timber, for which an Admiralty contract has been recently taken, mainly grows.

The jarrah-tree, which is impervious to the white ant and the Teredo navalis, grows all along the Darling Range, and a large quantity for the South Australian railways has been shipped at Bunbury and the Vasse.

(To be continued.)

BUNBURY, IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

SKETCHES FROM CHINA.

CANTON STREET-GUARD.—BEARING SILK-WORMS.

THE first portrait sketch shows one of the Canton guards. A considerable portion of the land forces are a mere municipal police [illegible] stated, among the allied [illegible] Chinese soldiers [illegible] here portrayed may not be very [illegible] withstanding his show of arms [illegible] military maxims [illegible] in the case, take, for instance, "The [illegible] hundred years unemployed, but not a [illegible] Empire parade and their articles of war [illegible] military laws are such as [illegible] to assail them on the army.

"Before going to battle [illegible] "The day of battle [illegible] through fear, saves his life shall be [illegible] heaven and as a warning. To kill an enemy shall be rewarded as meritorious act. If a soldier is killed, his family are compassionated. The coward, &c., the conquered, cannot live: if he rushes forward it is not certain that he dies, but if he draws back it is impossible that he can live. Let the officers inculcate this principle on the men, that they may doubtless be brave, and killing the thieves, their enemies, meritoriously distinguish themselves." The policy of this article is, however, to say the least, questionable; and lamentable effects of it were seen at Chang-keang-fou, which was defended solely by Tartars, whose ancestors had, two hundred years before, put the finishing stroke to the conquest of China, by a most brilliant exploit in that very place. It was then one of the largest cities in the country, and, in its own province of Kiang-tau, second only in importance to Nankin, the capital. The Tartars crossed the Yang-tse-Kiang on the ice, and took the city by a coup de main. The first Emperor of the Manchou dynasty gave it them as a prize, and in their hands it had since remained subject entirely to Tartar laws and customs. The original natives inhabited the suburbs which grew up around it, and became their servants. In the first watch a curfew tolls, for the close of the gates, when all Chinese have to leave the walled city, which was essentially Tartar and of all places, threatened the greatest resistance to a foreign foe. But the city walls were deserted [illegible] and the greater part of the garrison as they retreated from street to street made but a slight defence, while not a few preferred suicide—some, perhaps, from a high but mistaken sense of honour, which forbade them dying or falling alive into the enemy's hands; others from a dread of the hard fate which awaited them at the hands of their own countrymen, if they survived the capture of their posts.

Again: "The utmost pains must be taken to preserve their arms in good order, and keep their ammunition dry. Let a man be as careful as he may the cartouch-boxes are of so inferior an order that a shower of rain would render a Chinese army which depended on their fire-arms [illegible] totally inefficient. The Chinese soldier has no bayonet nor manœuvres with the matchlock on parade, as the European, nor in time of peace does he mount guard with arms, loaded except at reviews, the fire-arms are unloaded.

"When an officer is wounded or taken, the men shall make the utmost efforts to carry him off or rescue him, if they neglect to do so, and defeat ensues, the guilty men shall be decapitated." This article is generally a dead letter, the officers being usually those whose lives were forfeited by a retreat. They, by their personal valour, have done something to uphold the dignity of the nation. At Woosung nearly all the rank and file fled, leaving their guns to be worked by the superior Mandarins, the chief of whom fell at his post.

"Soldiers must not quit the pursuit of a flying foe or plunder." We cannot authenticate an instance of their quitting a flying foe for plunder; but in the war in 1842 the authorities often acknowledged that their own soldiers plundered more than their enemies, and the protection of the barbarians against natives was often, especially at Shaug-hsang-Fu, sought for and accorded.

"The utmost vigilance and silence are required of men on duty at any pass or post. On obtaining any information they must depute able men to communicate it speedily and secretly." On the night before the taking of Woosung such was the din of gongs and howling, and the light established by each Chinese soldier carrying a lighted lantern that, guided by them, the captains of our surveying vessels not only sounded the entrance and the line of battering positions, but also marked by anchoring buoys the positions for the several ships as they were taken up on the following morning.

"While encamped the patrols must be vigilant, and particularly so at night. On any alarm none must act hurriedly or with levity. Secret orders must be carefully obeyed, and not allowed to transpire from one another." At the night attack on Ningpo thousands of Chinese fell from every soldier carrying a lantern. As soon as the gate guards had been reinforced, the Chinese were repulsed; and, directed by the light of their own lanterns, each musket and bold pace ball took effect on them.

The other military regulations are as much disregarded as the above articles of war. In short, in a Chinese camp of the present day there is little or no discipline. This should not be the case where merit alone (at least so say the edicts) can make a military Mandarin, all alike rising from the ranks. Under the head of military laws may be mentioned the following. Protection of the palace, the person of the Emperor, and his apartments, together with those of his Empress, the Empress Mother, and grandmother. Military forces, except in great emergency, cannot be called out without the sanction of the Emperor: and every movement must be reported to the Commander-in-Chief, by him to the military board, and by them to the Emperor. Betrayal of trust, including defeat, is severely punished, according to rank. Protection of the frontier is under military surveillance. No person is allowed to pass without a [illegible] under a penalty of blows.

CANTON STREET-GUARD.

The second picture is of stronger domestic interest. Silk is the staple manufacture of China. In a work published by Imperial authority, numerous woodcuts accompanied by letterpress explanatory of [illegible] the silk manufacture, [illegible] operations connected with the planting of the mulberry and the rearing of the [illegible] worm, up to the final weaving of the silk. Besides the common machinery of China, which differs somewhat from that of Europe, they occasionally, in feeding the worms, have recourse to a wild specimen of the morus tribe, as well as to the leaves of another tree, supposed to be a variety of ash.

The Chinese pay especial attention to the quantity of food which the silkworm will consume, which, they say, depends the quantity of silk which the worm will produce. They calculate that the same number of insects which would, if they had attained their full size in from twenty-three to twenty-five days, produce twenty-five ounces of silk, would only yield twenty ounces if their growth occupied twenty-eight days, and only ten ounces if forty days. During the first twenty-four hours of the creature's existence, the patient Chinese feeds the object of his care forty-eight times, or once every half hour, and during the second day and night thirty times, and so on, reducing the number of meals as the worm grows older. The care bestowed on their culture, and the numerous precautions taken to preserve them clean and warm, are curiously expressed in the following extract from an old Chinese work on the subject:—

The place where their habitations are built must be retired, free from noisome smells, cattle, and all noises; a noisome smell, or the least fright, makes great impressions upon so tender a breed; even the barking of dogs and the crowing of cocks are capable of putting them in disorder when they are newly hatched.

For the purpose of paying them every attention, an affectionate mother is provided for the worms, who is careful to supply their wants: she is called Iaun-mou, mother of the worms. She takes possession of the chamber, but not till she has washed herself, and put on clean clothes which have not the least ill smell; she must not have eaten anything immediately before, or have handled any wild sweetmeat, the smell of which is very prejudicial to these tender creatures; she must be clothed in a plain habit, without any lining, that she may be more sensible of the warmth of the place, and accordingly increase or lessen the fire; but she must carefully avoid making a smoke or raising a dust, which would be very offensive to these tender creatures, which must be carefully humoured before the first time of casting their slough. Every day is to them a year, and has, in a manner, the four seasons: the morning is the spring, the middle of the day the summer, the evening the autumn, and the night the winter.

The scene of the Illustration, a sort of silk-farm, may be thus described from Davis's excellent work, "The Chinese":—

When the worms have cast their several skins, reached their greatest size, and assumed a transparent yellowish colour, they are removed into places divided into compartments, preparatory to their spinning. In the course of a week after the commencement of spinning the silken cocoons are complete and it now becomes necessary to take them in hand. Each in turn into mohs, which would immediately lose the web cut, and spoil the cocoons. When a certain number therefore, has been laid aside for the sake of future [illegible] in the bulk of the cocoons are killed by being placed in [illegible] layer of salt and leaves, with a complete exclusion of air. They are subsequently placed in moderately warm water, which dissolves the gluttinous substance that binds the silk together, and the filament is wound off upon reels. This is put up in bundles of a certain size and weight, and other becomes an article of merchandise under the name of raw silk, or is subjected to the loom, and manufactured into various stuffs for home or foreign consumption. Notwithstanding the apparent simplicity of their looms, they will imitate exactly the newest and most elegant patterns from England or France. The Chinese particularly excel in the production of damasks and flowered satins. Their crape has never yet been perfectly imitated; and they make a species of washing silk, called at Canton pongee, which becomes more soft as it is longer used.

SILK CULTURE IN CHINA: PREPARING RAW SILK.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, March 1.—First Sunday in Lent. St. David.
MONDAY, 2.—John Wesley died, 1791.
TUESDAY, 3.—Boileau died, 1711. Otway born, 1651.
WEDNESDAY, 4.—Ember Week. Saladin died, 1193.
THURSDAY, 5.—Battle of Baroosa, 1811.
FRIDAY, 6.—Michael Angelo born, 1476.
SATURDAY, 7.—St. Perpetua.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 7, 1857.

| Sunday | Monday | Tuesday. | Wednesday. | Thursday. | Friday. | Saturday |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| M A h m h m | M A h m h m | M A h m h m | M A h m h m | M A h m h m | M A h m h m | M A h m h m |
| 2 36 | 3 18 | 3 58 | 4 40 | 5 19 | 6 40 | 7 51 | 8 57 | 10 1 | 8 55 | 9 45 | 10 33 | 11 20 | 9 — | 10 10 |

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Monday, and During the Week, the New Comedy of DOUBLE-FACED PEOPLE. The New Drama of A WICKED WIFE. After which, on Monday, last night of the Pantomime. On Tuesday and Every Evening, Double-Faced People; A Wicked Wife; and The Irresistibles

ROYAL PRINCESS' THEATRE.—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM; Saturday, the CORSICAN BROTHERS (after which, OUR WIFE); on. The Rose of Amiens Mendelssohn's celebrated overture to "Midsummer Night's Dream" will commence at Seven o'Clock

THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Third Week of Mr. and Mrs. BARNEY WILLIAMS, the celebrated Irish Boy and Yankee Gal MONDAY, and during the Week "Ireland As It Is!" "A Night at Notting-hill," "Is and Out of Place!" to conclude with "Barney the Baron"

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—MONDAY MARCH 2nd, and the week, ROB ROY, with novel Equestrian Effects, invented by Mr. W. Cooke, and the original Music. Rob Roy, Mr. James Holloway. After which EQUESTRIAN SCENES in the CIRCUS. To conclude with the Equestrian Comic Pantomime of PAUL PRY on HORSEBACK. Commence at Seven o'Clock. Dress Boxes, 4s.; Upper Boxes, 3s.; Pit, 2s.; Gallery, 1s.; Upper Gallery, 6d

GREAT NATIONAL STANDARD THEATRE. During the week the HAND of CARDS. SEALED SENTENCE. The celebrated Mr. BARNUM and the original TOM THUMB on Friday and Saturday next, concluding with the comic PANTOMIME, and famous Transformation Scene.

MR. ALBERT SMITH'S MONT BLANC, BADEN, UP the RHINE, and PARIS, is NOW OPEN every evening (except Saturday) at Eight o'clock Stalls, 3s.; area, 2s.; gallery, 1s. Stalls can be secured at the Box-office, Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every day, between Eleven and Four, without any extra charge.—The Morning Representations take place every Tuesday and Saturday, at Three o clock.

GOMPERTZ'S PANORAMA of the LATE WAR will REMAIN OPEN at GEWESTRY until Wednesday next, March 4th; after which it will visit Wellington, Nottingham, and Bamburgh.

MISS P. HORTON.—Mr. and Mrs. GERMAN REED'S POPULAR ILLUSTRATIONS—GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION, 14, Regent-street, with entirely new part—Our Wards, Governess, and Enraged Musician—Introducing English, French, and Italian Songs, every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight. Saturday Morning, at Three. Admission 3s. and 1s.; Stalls, 3s. May be secured at the Gallery; and at Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street

THE SISTERS SOPHIA and ANNIE, in their Original Entertainment, entitled SKETCHES from NATURE, will appear at the CHICHESTER HALL, Lord Nelson-street, LIVERPOOL, on MONDAY, MARCH 2, and every evening during the Week.

MR. W. S. WOODIN'S OLIO of ODDITIES, with New Costumes and various novelties, Vocal and Characteristic, EVERY EVENING (Saturday excepted), at Eight. A Morning Performance every Saturday, at Three. Private Boxes and Stalls may be secured without extra charge, at the Box-office Polygraphic Hall, King William-street, Charing-cross. The Hall has been entirely renovated.

ST GEORGE'S HALL, LIVERPOOL

A GRAND FANCY DRESS BALL, IN AID OF THE FUNDS OF THE ROYAL INFIRMARY,
NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN HOSPITALS,
AND THE
NORTH AND SOUTH DISPENSARIES, WILL BE HELD
ON TUESDAY, the 3rd MARCH NEXT,
IN ST. GEORGE'S HALL,
Which has been granted by the WORSHIPFUL the MAYOR and COUNCIL for the occasion

LADY PATRONESSES:

| | |
|---|---|
| The Right Hon. the Countess of Derby | The Right Hon Lady Arabella Hesketh |
| The Right Hon. the Countess of Sefton | The Right Hon. Lady Caroline Townley |
| The Right Hon. the Countess of Wilton | The Hon. Lady Cust |
| The Right Hon. the Countess of Ellesmere | Lady W. W. Wynn. |
| The Right Hon. the Lady Annette de Trafford | |

The Committee deem it necessary to state that every one must appear in Fancy or Court Dress, Naval or Military Uniform.
Tickets £1 1s. each, which may be obtained by addressing
G. WINTER ROSS, Esq., TREASURER, Liverpool.

MR. BRINLEY RICHARDS' GRAND EVENING CONCERT at EXETER HALL, on MONDAY, MARCH 2, 1857.—Last Appearance of Mr Frank Bodda on London before Easter; and first appearance of M. Pizzi, the Sardinian Minstrel; and of Madame Anna Thillon, since 1853. Vocalists—Mdme. Rudersdorff, Mdme. Weiss, Mdme. Anna Thillon, and Winney. M. Pizzi, Mr. Allen Irving, and Mr Weiss Pianoforte, Mr Brinley Richards. M. Pizzi, the Sardinian Minstrel. Conductor, Mr Balfe—Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 5s.; Gallery and Orchestra, 2s.; Area (under West Gallery), 1s.; Stalls by the Patronesses' Gallery, Half-a-Guinea.—Tickets may be had of Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street; Messrs. Cramer, Beale, and Co., 201, Regent-street; Messrs. Keith, Prowse, and Co., 48, Cheapside; and of Mr Brinley Richards, 6, Torrington-street, Russel-square.

MUSICAL UNION, WILLIS'S ROOMS.—SOIREES.—TUESDAY, MARCH 3. Quintet Music, Instrumental and Vocal Haydn, Beethoven Mendelssohn, Spohr, Onslow, Adams, and Walper Artists Sainton, Goffrie, Hill, Blagrove, Piatti, &c. Herr Pauffer (Pianist from Vienna, Mr Land, and a Select Choir. For further particulars see Times and Post, or Chappell and Co.'s, and Olivier by letter addressed to the Director. Reserved seats. J. ELLA.

CANTERBURY HALL, Westminster-road.—The above Magnificent HALL is Open Every Evening for Musical Entertainments, supported by Artists of Celebrity.—Commence at 7 o'clock precisely.—Admission, 6d.; until Twelve.

THE ORIGINAL GENERAL TOM THUMB, who appeared Three Times before her Majesty in 1844, performs Three Times daily at the PRINCE of WALES BAZAAR, 209, Regent-street—from 12½ to 2; 3½ to 5, and 7½ to 9 o'clock. New Songs, Dances, Costumes, Imitations, &c.—Admission, 1s., regardless of age. Stalls, 2s.; Children half-price

CAMDEN HOUSE SCHOOL, BRIGHTON. Principal, Mr. WILLIAM OLDIN. As there were no vacancies, and certain applications were being rejected, Mr Oldin has, at a considerable outlay, enlarged the premises. The next Quarter commences on Wednesday, March 25.

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send to the HERALDIC OFFICE
Name and County. No Fee for Search Sketch, 2s. 6d., or Arms.
H. SALT, Grant Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

LINCOLN'S INN HERALDIC OFFICE, First and only Established office in London, and during a series of years have Furnished, Sketched, Emblazoned, &c., Arms of most of the Nobility and Gentry.—H. SALT, Grant Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn. GRANTS of ARMS Furnished, Copied, &c.

STUDIO and LIBRARY, Open from Ten to Four Daily
MONUMENTAL BRASSES.
Ecclesiastic Seals, Hatchments, &c. Arms Painted and Quartered
H. SALT, Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

GENTLEMEN having SKETCHES, give them to persons who do not engrave them by the Laws of Heraldry, therefore the Heraldic Office now executes them. Book-plate Arms, 21s.; Crest on Seals, &c., 8s. 6d.
H. SALT, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

HERALDIC SIGNET CREST RING.—Solid fine Gold, Bloodstone, Onyx, or Cornelian, with Crest Engraved, £1 15s.; or Pen-and-Ink Presentation Seals, &c.—H. SALT, Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

HERALDIC ENGRAVING.—Book Plate, with Arms, 7s. 6d. Crest on Seal or Ring, 5s. 6d.; on Die, 8s. Arms quartered and painted. Lever Press with Crest, 25s. Carriage Arms for stamping on Paper, Envelopes, or Wax.—CULLETON, Royal Heraldic Office, 2, Long-acre (one door from St Martin's-lane). Sketches of heraldic engravers permanently employed ARMS, CRESTS, &c.—Gold Medal for Engraving.—Crests on rings or seals, 8s.; on die, 7s.; arms, crest, and motto, 25s.; book-plate, 25s. Price-List by post.—T. MORING, Engraver and Heraldic Artist, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

SOLID GOLD 18 carat, Hall-marked, Oval, Sard or Bloodstone RING, engraved with CREST, Two Guineas, or Shield-shaped, 45 Shillings; Seals Desk Seals, Pencil-cases, &c.—T. MORING, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

ARMS, CRESTS, &c.—No Charge for Search. Correct Sketch and description, 2s. 6d., in colour, 5s. Monumental brasses, seals, dies, and diploma plates in Mediæval and modern styles. Lever-press and crest-die, one guinea.—T. MORING, Middlesex Heraldic Office, 44, High Holborn, W. C.

ROYAL HERALDIC OFFICE and GENEALOGICAL INSTITUTION for GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND, 2, Long-acre, one door from St. Martin's-lane). Family Pedigrees Traced from Ancient Manuscripts, Monastic Records, "Doomsday Books," and old Heraldic works at the British Museum; fee, 5s. Family Arms Found free of charge; Sketch, 2s.; in Colours, 5s. 6d. or stamps. Armorial Bearings registered at the College of Arms (the only legal office in London). The Heraldic Studio and Library open from 11 to 4.—MR. CULLETON, Gentleman.

LECTURE on ART.—MARYLEBONE LITERARY and SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTION, Edwards-street, Portman-square.—On WEDNESDAY EVENING, March 4th, 1857, Mr. HENRY OTTLEY will deliver a Lecture, AN HOUR WITH THE OLD MASTERS! being a Sketch of the History of Painting, from the first dawn of the revival in Italy to the time of the Carracci. The Lecture will be illustrated by numerous specimens after the various masters. To commence at Eight o'clock. Admission: reserved seats, 2s.; area, 1s.; gallery, 6d. Programmes.—Tickets to be obtained of Messrs. Paul and Bernard Colnaghi, and Co., 13 and 14, Pall-mall East; Messrs. H. Graves and Co., 6, Pall-mall; Mr. Mitchell, 33, Old Bond-street; Mr. Sams, 1, St. James's-street; and at the Library of the Institution.

MR. SALAMAN'S THIRD LECTURE.—NATIONAL DANCES and NATIONAL MUSIC, with Pianoforte, Violin and Vocal Illustrations, by Messrs. Salaman, Distelmann, and Miss Williams. TUESDAY EVENING NEXT, at Eight o'Clock, at the MARYLEBONE INSTITUTION, 17, Edwards-street, Portman-square Reserved seats, 3s.; area, 1s.

KENNINGTON AGRICULTURAL and CHEMICAL COLLEGE, Lower Kennington-lane, near London.
Principal—J. G. NESBIT, F.G.S., F.C.S., &c.
Youths intending to become Farmers, Land Stewards, Chemical and Manure Manufacturers, or Managers of Mining Property, will find the course of instruction in the College such as to fully qualify them for their respective pursuits. The terms for senior and junior students may be known on application to the Principal
ANALYTICAL AND ASSAY DEPARTMENT.
Analyses and Assays of every description are promptly and accurately executed in the Laboratories of the College.

COUNTY FIRE OFFICE,
ESTABLISHED 1808
50, Regent-street, and 14, Cornhill, London.
Capital, £400,000
TRUSTEES AND DIRECTORS
The Right Hon. Lord Northwick — Henry B. Churchill, Esq.
Sir Richard D. King, Bart. — The Rev. James Sherman.
Sir Glynne Earle Welby, Bart., M.P. — The Rev. Isaac Spencer.
The Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P. — Wm. Henry Stone, Esq.
Frederick Squire, Esq. — &c., &c., &c.
Sir George R. Onslow, Bart.
John A. Beaumont, Esq., Managing Director.
Charles Stevens, Esq., Secretary.
The Rates of Premium charged by the County Fire Office are upon the lowest scale consistent with security to the insured.
When a Policy has existed for seven years a return of 25 per cent. or one-fourth of the amount of Premiums paid is declared and allowed thereon.
The Returns paid to the present time exceed £210,000
All Losses are settled with promptitude and liberality.
Prospectuses and full particulars may be obtained upon application to the Agents of the Office in all the principal towns of the United Kingdom, and at the Offices in London.

LONDON ARMOURY COMPANY (Limited), Bermondsey, Sole Manufacturers of ADAMS' PATENT REVOLVERS, with all improvements May be had of any respectable Gunmaker in London, and in the principal towns in the United Kingdom

EAST and WEST INDIES, AUSTRALIA, &c.—Plans and Rates of Passage for all the First-class Steamers and Sailing Vessels Estimates for outfits
C. R. THOMPSON, LUCAS, and CO.,
London Warehouse House, 109, Strand, Southampton.
Baggage and Parcels shipped and cleared inwards. Insurances effected.

AUXILIUM INSTITUTE.—Clerical, Scholastic, Legal, and Medical Agency. Established in 1855 for the Negotiation of Engagements in all Professions. Partnerships negotiated. Legal and Medical Practices and School Property transferred.—Offices, 154, Strand (3 doors east of Somerset-house), W C

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 5, Piccadilly, between the Haymarket and Regent-circus.—Open from Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages received (privately) and taught at any time suiting their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes, no extras. Improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve lessons. Separate rooms for Ladies, to which department (if preferred) Mrs. Smart will attend.—Apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

A MARRIED MEDICAL MAN, of 26 years' experience, living in the neighborhood of Leamington, will be glad to RECEIVE A PATIENT who requires care and attention.—Address, J. S. P., Rugby, Post-office

MEDICAL.—A Married PHYSICIAN, residing in a pleasant and healthy Watering-place in the South Coast, wishes to receive into his family a LADY or GENTLEMAN who, from Mental or Physical Debility, may require the kind and constant Medical Supervision Carriage exercise, &c. Address M.D., care of Messrs. Gale, Baker, Wards and Oldfield, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, E.C.

MR. JOHN DAVIES, Surgeon-Dentist, has the honour of notifying to the Nobility, Gentry, and Public generally that he may be personally consulte in every branch of Dental Surgery as usual. American, French, and English mechanism employed on the most reasonable terms. 57, Rupert-street, Haymarket House, corner of Coventry-court, New-road

THE AQUARIUM.—Living MARINE and FRESH-WATER ANIMALS and PLANTS, sea-water tanks, glasses, and every other requisite on sale. An Illustrated priced and descriptive list on application. The Tanks by Somers and Weekes at their prices.—W. ALFORD LLOYD, 19 and 20, Portland-road, Regent's park, London, W

THE STAUNTON CHESSMEN from 15s. to £10 10s. per set. Sold at all the principal fancy repositories: wholesale, JAQUES, Hatton-garden, E.C. CAUTION! In order to guard against fraudulent imitations observe each set bears Mr. Staunton's signature

GOODRICH'S SISAL CIGARS! at his Tobacco, Snuff, and Cigar Stores, 497, Oxford-street, London, near Soho-square Box, containing 10, for 1s. 8d. Post-free, six stamps extra. Pound Boxes, containing 100, 12s. 6d. None are genuine unless signed "H. N. Goodrich"

MICROSCOPES.—J. AMADIO'S BOTANICAL MICROSCOPES, packed in mahogany case, with three Powers, Condenser, Pincers, and two Slides, will show the Animalcule in water. Price 18s. 6d. Address JOSEPH AMADIO, 7, Throgmorton-street, Bank. Post-office orders payable at the Chief Office.

STEREOSCOPES and STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES at SPENCER, BROWNING, and CO.'s.—Hand Stereoscopes, 6d. to 31 10s., from 4s. 6d. per dozen. Great Novelty, Swiss and other Views mounted as Transparencies, and exhibiting the effects of Sunrise, Moonlight, &c.; price 1s. 6d. each, only at Spencer, Browning, and Co.'s, 111, Minories, E. The trade supplied

SEEDS.—BUTLER and McCULLOCH'S Descriptive CATALOGUE of VEGETABLE and FLOWER SEEDS, with valuable Treatises on Bulb Culture, intended to assist Amateurs in selecting their Seeds and cultivating their own Gardens To be had on application, or free by post, South-row, or Strand side (opposite Southampton-street), Covent-garden Market, London.

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS for early sowing, sent post-free, at the annexed prices.—100 fine Hardy Annuals, 5s.; 50 ditto, 3s.; 36 ditto, 2s. 6d.; 12 ditto, 1s. 6d. Descriptive catalogues with sample packet, for 3d.—From WILLIAM KNIGHT, Florist, 67, High-street, Battle, Sussex.

PALMERSTON SAUCE.—This extraordinary piquant and delicious condiment is acknowledged by epicures to possess a peculiar zest, entirely unknown in any other preparation now in use for Fish, Flesh, Fowl, &c. &c. Sole proprietor, W. O. EMERSON, 9, Cammomile-street, City. Sold retail throughout Europe by all respectable oilmen grocers, &c.

THE CONTINENTAL WINE COMPANY, Birchin-lane, E. Cornhill, continue to supply GOOD and INVIGORATING WINES at 18s. per dozen. Pale or Gold Sherry, at 30s. and 36s. Country orders must contain a remittance.

SALT and CO.'S EAST INDIA PALE and BURTON ALES. BREWERY, BURTON-ON-TRENT.
STORES—London, Hungerford-wharf, Liverpool, 32, Henry-street Manchester, 37, Brown-street Sheffield, 12, George-street, Birmingham: Old Count House, High-street Bristol, 12, Small-street. Dublin 11, Temple-lane. Edinburgh: Portbopetoun Warehouse, Glasgow: 12, Tunnel-street. These Ales are in casks of eighteen gallons and upwards, and in bottle, obtained from all respectable bottlers.

PALE INDIA ALE and STOUT, 4s. 6d. per Dozen Quarts; 2s. 6d. per Dozen Pints. Scotch Ale, 5s. 6d per Dozen Quarts. Excellent Sherry, 36s high. Fine old Port 36s. per dozen.—WOOD and WATSON, 3, Chesterfield-place, City.

UNADULTERATED WINES.—FELTOE, SONS, and CO., Importers, 26, Cornhill-street, Regent-street, London (established 1815), adhere to their undeviating principle of supplying Wines free from acidity. The Nutty Sherry, 36s. cash. Carriage-paid.

CELEBRATED CANTERBURY PUNCH.—One dozen of this delicious beverage in Quart Bottles (as to the gallon) will be forwarded carriage-free to London, hamper and bottles included, on receipt of Post-office order for 30s., payable to THOMAS PAUL DE LABAUX, Wine-merchant, Canterbury.

WINES EXTRAORDINARY.—Port, Sherry, Marsala, Madeira, all 24s. per dozen, produce of Spain and Portugal Vines at the Cape of Good Hope. Two Samples for Twelve Stamps. Terms cash. Sole agents for the Cape Wines.—W. and A. GILBEY, Wine Importers, 372, Oxford-street (Entrance in Berwick-street), W.

ICES COMMENCED for the SEASON.—J. TUPP, Confectioner, No 27, Oxford-street (near Rathbone-place, and the Soho Bazaar), a spacious and convenient Establishment-room. Soups, Sandwiches, Pastes, Coffee, Tea, &c. always ready 27, Oxford-street

DO YOU DOUBLE UP YOUR PERAMBULATORS?—See T. TROTMAN'S new PATENT SAFETY FOLDING PERAMBULATOR, folded in an instant.—Patent Carriage Works, High-street (Cash), Camden-town, London, N.W.

SELF-BREAKING PERAMBULATOR.—The characteristic advantage of HINE'S NEWLY-PATENTED PERAMBULATOR over every other is obvious at a glance It contains of a most simple but effective mechanical contrivance, by which both hind wheels become at once locked, and the further progress of the carriage instantaneously arrested the moment the hand of the person propelling it is with drawn or from improperly placed, so that such accidents as have arisen in a few cases from children thrown out of common use, from their slipping from the hands of the nurse, or falling off the pavement or down inclines, are rendered impossible. In the use of the Self-breaking Perambulator no extra labour or attention is demanded. It is made both simple and durable of the best materials only, after the manner of, and equal to, the best carriage-builders, and is not liable to get out of order Prices Single, from £3 to £10.—Dec. 54
Sole Metropolitan Depôt at WILLIAM S. BURTON'S General Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouses, 39, Oxford-street, W.; 1, 2, 3, and 3, Newman-street; 4, 5, and 6, Perry's-place.

ART-UNION of LONDON.—(By Royal Charter).—Prizeholders select for themselves from the Public Exhibitions Every Subscriber of One Guinea will have, besides the chance of a Prize, two prints—The Clemency of Cœur de Lion," by H. C. Shenton, from the Historical Picture by John Cross, which gained the Government premium of £300—and "The Piper," by E. Goodall, after F. Goodall, A.R.A.
444, West Strand, 14th January, 1857. GEORGE GODWIN, } Honorary LEWIS POCOCK, } Secretaries

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, Paddington, for the RELIEF of the SICK, free of all Denominations. Support entirely by Voluntary Contributions. The Governors have the gratification of announcing that his Grace the Duke of WELLINGTON has consented to preside at the ANNIVERSARY DINNER in aid of this charity, to take place at the London Tavern, in May next. Gentlemen being willing to act as Stewards are requested to signify their consent to the Secretary at the Hospital.
February 26, 1857. ROBERT I. NEWMAN, Secretary

THE PEN SUPERSEDED.—MARKING LINEN.—The most easy, permanent, and best method of marking all kinds of linen, silk, or books is with the PATENT ELECTRO-SILVER PLATES Any person can use them. Initial plate, 1s.; name plate, 2s.; set of movable numbers, 2s.; crest, 5s.; with directions, sent post-free for stamps. Movable alphabets, and stamps with shifting dates.—J. CULLETON, Patentee, Heraldic Engraver to the Queen, 2, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane), W. C.—No travellers employed.

TO DRAPERS' ASSISTANTS.—WILLIAM TARN and CO., or Norwegian Causeway, having nearly completed the extensive addition to their Premises, are now prepared to engage, by almost every department of their business, RESPECTABLE YOUNG MEN, who have had good experience, either in Town or Country. Apply on Tuesday, or any day next week, personally, or by letter.

THE only FOOD suitable for INFANTS and INVALIDS, manufactured by Analytical Chemists, is BULLOCK'S SEMOLA, recommended by the most eminent medical men In 7lb. only, at 1s. 6d., 3s., and 5s., secured with the Signature of the Proprietors, PERRINS and BARNETT, Operative Chemists, 72, Cornhill-street, Regent-street, London.

ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS, for more than Thirty Years have been held in constant and increasing public estimation as the purest farine of the oat, and as the best and most valuable preparation for making a pure and delicate Gruel, which forms a light and nutritious supper for the aged, is a popular recipe for colds and influenza, is of general use in the sick-chamber, and, alternately with the Patent Barley, is an excellent food for Infants and Children
Prepared only by the Patentees, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, & CO., Purveyors to the Queen, 64, Red-lion-street, Holborn, London
Sold by all respectable Grocers, Druggists, and others in Town and Country, in Packets of 6d. and 1s.; and Family Canisters, at 2s., 5s., and 10s. each.

NOTICE.—PORTRAIT of the QUEEN.—To meet the great demand for the NUMBER for FEBRUARY 7, with COLOURED SUPPLEMENT, a New Edition has been printed, and may be had at the original price if ordered immediately. Stamped, 1s.; Unstamped, 10d.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.—Next week we shall engrave the Victoria Cross, and publish, with illustrations, the complete list of the names and the achievements of the gallant men who have received it.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1857.

ENGLAND has honours and rewards for her brave and for some of her great men. An extraordinary Gazette, published late on Tuesday night, announced the names and the achievements of the gallant officers and men, both of the Army and of the Navy, to whom has been awarded the Victoria Cross for bravery exhibited in actual conflict with the enemy during the late war. Every recipient of this mark of Royal favour and national approbation may well be proud to wear it; for in this new order of nobility it is personal merit that is alone regarded, and the common soldier or sailor is as noble as his officer, and stands upon an equality of heroism with his General or his Admiral. The greatest reward of the true hero is appreciation. If gracefully and spontaneously bestowed, as in the present instance, it is better than rank or title—better even than the money which many prosaic souls believe to be the mainspring of all mortal effort. Like fresh air and sunshine, it is as cheap as it is wholesome and invigorating.

But should such a national recognition of merit be confined to the military and naval professions? Does no man deserve well of his country except in the battle-field or on the deck? Personal courage and self-devotion in time of war are among the noblest of the virtues, and merit all the honour which the Sovereign or the People can bestow. But peace has its heroes as well as war. Such heroes, however, are ignored in this country. France has a Legion of Honour, in which the poet, the painter, the sculptor, the musician, the philosopher, the philanthropist, the inventor, the astronomer, the mathematician, the geologist, the naturalist, the comedian, the agricultural improver, and all the men whose labours either delight, refine, or improve society, may be enrolled, as well as the soldier and the sailor who do their country service in the hour of peril. But Great Britain, though it has a legion of such men, has no other recognition of them than the commercial one. If the author finds a public to buy his works, he is appreciated in the same way as a grocer of whom people buy their tea is appreciated: but in no other. The Crown knows him not, nor cares to acknowledge him. If he have no public at his back, and writes in advance of his age, his case is all but hopeless; and the poorhouse, or the niggardly charity of the Minister of the day, when he is tottering into the grave or into a lunatic asylum, is all the prospect, except posthumous fame and a monument, that this world can afford him. So of all other branches of the intellectual and fine arts. Their appreciation, and consequently their reward, rest with individuals alone, and is a matter with which the State, through its highest personage, gives itself no concern. Occasionally, it is true, a knighthood is bestowed upon a painter or a musician who has managed to obtain entrance into courtly circles; but this honour, as a reward of genius, has lost much of its value by being bestowed upon men of no genius, and even of no talent, whom accident has made Mayors, Aldermen, and Provosts, of cities and towns through which it has pleased her Majesty to pass.

An order of civil merit is greatly needed in this country. If the soldier and the sailor prize their cheap ribbon and their cheap cross, so dearly purchased, the heroes of peace would prize a similar distinction quite as highly. We know of no reason why it should be given to the one class, and withheld from the other, unless it be the old reason—or unreason—that it has never been done before; and that the path of Routine is the only safe and decent path in which official personages can walk themselves, or allow their Sovereign to precede them. Such an institution would not only be a means of expressing the gratitude of the nation towards men who confer honour upon its language and its name, advantage upon its arts and sciences, and give extension to its commerce and increase to its wealth, but would partake largely of an educational character. The people in this as in other countries are social and gregarious. If they are told, by the plain symbol of an order of merit, by a ribbon, a cross, or a star, that the Queen and the Government deem Mr. A. to be a great poet or author, they will be induced to read Mr. A.'s works. If they are told in the same way that Mr. B. is a great philosopher, they will study him; and so on through the whole alphabet of that genius which it is a national privilege to possess, but of which the nation, immersed in its own business, and having none to guide it, is too often profoundly ignorant. If such recognition were to cost the taxpayers of the country anything but the almost infinitesimal sum necessary to buy a few yards of ribbon—which many a manufacturer in Coventry would be glad to make the nation a present of for the purpose—we might attach some little weight to the objections that Mr. Barnacle, of the Circumlocution-office, or Mr. Prosy, M.P. for all England, would be certain to raise against it. But it would cost nothing but a little moral courage on the part of the Ministry to propose it. That it will be done some day we have no doubt; and whether it be done at Lord Palmerston's instigation, or at that of Lord Derby, it will be equally advantageous to the country, and equally honourable to him who shall effect it.

We report elsewhere the proceedings that took place on Wednesday evening at the annual meeting of the Society for Promoting the Repeal of the Taxes on Knowledge. We have not once only, but twenty times, expressed our entire sympathy with the objects of the association, and our opinion of the impolicy of the Excise-duty upon paper—whether considered in reference to its effect upon commerce and the employment of the rural and urban population, or upon the dissemination of useful and civilising knowledge. We believe the soundness of the arguments employed by those who advocate, as we do, the repeal of the duty is very generally admitted. The question is not a party one, and appeals to no prejudice or foregone conclusion of any kind, and is supported by the most eminent men both in and out of Parliament. The only real objection comes to it from successive Chancellors of the Exchequer, who one after the other decline to meddle with it; and silence—or attempt to silence—the friends of cheap knowledge and untaxed manufacture by the statement that they cannot possibly afford to relinquish the million of pounds sterling which it brings into the Treasury. But we know, and the present Budget shows, that the Government can afford to forego a great deal of money if it chooses. A million per annum is doubtless a goodly sum; but the Government which spends about £540,000 per annum in stationery, and in the printing of cumbrous and unreadable, and sometimes very useless, Blue Books, of which a large proportion find their way to the shops of the dealers in waste paper before they are a week old, might, by a little wholesome pressure of public opinion, be forced to relinquish the million, and save a portion of the loss by reforming its stationers' and printers' bills. The reduction would assuredly not be all loss to the nation, for, by throwing open a very important department of manufacture, many thousands of the rural population who are now burdens upon their parishes might find constant employment, to the great relief of the poor-rates, and to the general enrichment of the community. Sir Cornewall Lewis is himself an eminent literary man, and must know the injurious effect of the tax upon all concerned with the production of literature, from the humblest makers of the raw material to the most illustrious of living authors, whose thoughts are by means of paper communicated to the world. The loss to the revenue from the abolition of the duty would, we feel convinced from a pretty intimate acquaintance with and long study of the subject, be but partial and temporary; and the country, after the lapse of a few years, instead of being poorer, would be much the richer, if the present Chancellor would only resolve to do the right thing in this particular instance, irrespective of consequences. What has the country lost by the repeal of the hundreds of Customs and other duties which it owes to the wise courage of the late Sir Robert Peel? Nothing; but, on the contrary, it has largely gained. So it would be with the repeal of the Excise-duty on paper after the first few years of freedom, if the Chancellor of the Exchequer would add a little boldness to his acknowledged wisdom. A tax that cannot be justified on any rational ground must fall, sooner or later. The cry of "Cheap Bread!" was a tower of strength to the Minister who adopted it. We cordially recommend that of "Cheap Knowledge!" to the present Government.

An incalculable amount of nonsense has been uttered and printed about Scottish rights and Scottish grievances during the last few years. Noble Lords and learned Professors have vied with each other in the extravagance of their nationality and self-laudation; and a whole host of stump orators have harangued gaping crowds touching the shameful manner in which they have been treated by the Legislature of the United Kingdom. The people of Scotland have, however, awakened at last to a real grievance, and directed their attention to the difference between their political condition and that of the people of England. Here they have found a monstrous grievance in the law relating to the county franchise, which calls loudly for reform; but, on asking for help to remedy that evil, they meet with no response from the Scottish Rights Association. The noble Lords and learned Professors who boast so loudly of the superior intelligence of the Scottish peasantry have not a word to say against an electoral system which places the people of England so far above those of Scotland with regard to the elective franchise, but we are glad to believe that the Scottish people will do without their assistance.

Many of our readers are doubtless not aware that the county franchise in Scotland is restricted to owners of property worth £10 annually, instead of being extended to all who possess a 40s. freehold. The origin of this remarkable anomaly belongs to the period of the religious persecutions in Scotland, when the Duke of York, afterwards James II., was endeavouring to crush the spirit of the Covenanters who stood up so bravely for freedom of conscience. Finding that the middle classes throughout the country were generally opposed to the tyrannical measures of Charles and his advisers, the Duke of York persuaded the Scottish Parliament to pass an Act in 1681 for the disfranchisement of the 40s. freeholders, and the wrong then inflicted still remains in full force. Since the passing of the Reform Bill, in 1832, several attempts have been made to awaken public attention to the subject, but it is only within the last few months that the people of Scotland have begun to grapple with it earnestly. The Rev. Dr. Begg (of Edinburgh), Mr. Duncan Maclaren (late Provost of that city), and several other leaders of the freehold movement—after having held public meetings in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Paisley, and other large towns, where the expression of sympathy with the cause has been hearty and unanimous—are now in London, with a view to ascertain what amount of support they are likely to receive from the members of the House of Commons. So far as we can learn they have met with a hearty reception from the great body of English Liberals, and have even obtained promises of support from many Conservatives.

We understand that the subject will be brought before the House of Commons at an early period of the Session. Mr. Laing, M.P. for the Wick Burghs, has promised to introduce the bill, which will be supported by Mr. Roebuck, Mr. Cobden, and other leading Reformers. Considerable curiosity is felt as to what course the Government may take.

THE COURT.

The Queen and the Prince remain at Buckingham Palace at present. Such arrangements have been made for the reception of her Majesty at Windsor Castle on Tuesday next.

There have been almost daily dinner parties during the week at the Palace. Among the guests of her Majesty and the Prince have been his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary, the Turkish Ambassador and Madame Musurus, the Hanoverian Minister (Count Kielmansegge), the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, the Sardinian Minister (Marquis d'Azeglio), the United States' Minister and Mrs. Dallas, Lord and Lady John Russell, the Earl and Countess of Clarendon, Lady Blomfield, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl and Countess of Bessborough, the Earl of Ellenborough and Lord and Lady Colville, the Marquis of Abercorn and Lady Louisa Hamilton, the Earl of Eglinton, the Countess de Flahault, Viscount Monck, Major-General Sir Chas. Yorke, the Right Hon. C. P. Villiers, and Sir John Ramsden.

On Sunday the Queen and the Prince, with the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, the Princesses Alice and Helena, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household, attended Divine service in the private chapel of Buckingham Palace. The Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Windsor officiated.

On Thursday the Prince Consort, on behalf of her Majesty, held a levee (the first this season) in St. James's Palace. There was an unusually large attendance, and a great many presentations took place. The Queen drove out in the afternoon, accompanied by Prince Arthur and the Princesses Helena and Louisa.

THE PAPER-DUTY.

A large and influential meeting was held on Wednesday night in St. Martin's Hall, being the sixth annual public meeting of the Association for Promoting the Repeal of the Taxes on Knowledge. The chair was taken by Sir Joseph Paxton, M.P.; and near him we observed the Right Hon. T. Milner Gibson, M.P., Herbert Ingram, M.P., Mr. Serjeant Parry, Dr. Watts, Dr. Epps, and others.

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, said he had hoped that by that time they would have been in a position to congratulate themselves on the repeal of the obnoxious Paper-duty, but since the meeting of Parliament the Chancellor of the Exchequer had dispelled that hope for the present. The Chancellor of the Exchequer was evidently driven to his wit's end to find an excuse for the retention of the tax, but yet he retained it notwithstanding. He believed that the object of the tax was to prevent the spread of knowledge, and that was why the duty was maintained. The honourable gentleman then gave a number of statistics showing to what an enormous extent the glass trade had increased since the duty had been repealed; and so it would be with paper. The duty on the glass used in the original Crystal Palace would have been about £40,000, whereas without the duty the total cost of the glass was £13,000. Had the duty been on the glass they would never have had a Crystal Palace, because the glass alone with the duty would have cost £35,000 (Cheers). Bad as the tax was on light, it was infinitely worse on knowledge. The Paper-duty was a stoppage upon all improvement. It was impossible under such an obnoxious tax to improve the manufacture of paper. No paper-maker could try experiments, as he had to pay duty upon his experiments.

Dr. Epps rose to propose the following resolution:—"That the excise on paper limits its supply and enhances its price, is ruinous to the small manufacturer, restricts the field for the employment of capital and labour, and thus tends to produce pauperism and crime; and that the interest of the country imperatively demands that a less injurious mode of raising money be resorted to than a tax on so important a manufacture." It was, indeed, extraordinary that any Government of the present day, the Government were the legalised robbers of the day, because it was well known that they constantly put their stamp on a ream of paper sold for 20 lb., when in fact it confessedly weighed but 18 lb.

Dr. John Watts seconded the resolution. In America the cost of common wrapping paper was 1d. a pound, here the price was 4d. a pound. Of course being taxed attributable to the tax and the interference of the Government. After showing how the duty interfered with the manufacture and unduly limited what would be a profitable field of labour, employing hundreds of thousands of labourers (cheers), the hon. gentleman said industry, starving in other branches, and idle, took up the tax.

Mr. H. Ingram, M.P., spoke in support of the resolution, observing that previously he was disinterested in the question before the Paper-duty was matured to his own personal interests. Some time ago he was sanguine of a large book trade in works of an educational character; but the heavy loss which the operation of the duty entailed upon him compelled him to give up the premises he then occupied. When he first put his books at his paper mills, where it could be done more conveniently and at less cost, there were people who said that the repeal of the duty would not reduce the price, and protect the distance of the leather-duty the repeal of which had not decreased the price of shoes, which had rather gone on increasing since the repeal of the tax. But the Leather-duty was an exceptional case: there was a limit to the number of skins available for the manufacture of leather, and that limit was not wide enough to meet the demand. In no other country in the world was there a Paper-duty. In that England stood alone (Hear, hear). The Chinese, who invented paper, might well call us outside barbarians (Cheers). When this tax was first put on it was described as a war tax, and when it was first talked about the House of Commons were so indignant that they passed a resolution denouncing the rumour that they intended to impose an Excise-duty, declaring the statement to be false and scandalous, and directing that the authors of it should be apprehended and brought to punishment. But, notwithstanding this resolution, they passed the Paper-duty. What punishment they deserved for so doing it was not for him to say, neither was it for him to say what punishment the present House of Commons deserved for keeping it on (Hear, hear). The Income-tax, he said, as it was, was not half so objectionable, or half so inquisitorial, as the Paper-duty, and he confessed that he felt ashamed of the moneyed and middle class of this country in making so much noise about the Income-tax, while they were comparatively indifferent to the continuance of the Paper duty. In the United States the annual production of paper was 270,000,000 lb., while the total quantity manufactured in England was only 160,000,000 lb., not more than one half of which was for home consumption. It had been said that this was a rural manufacture: it was so, and if the duty were abolished it would employ hundreds of thousands of the rural population. In the neighbourhood of Peterborough, "twitch," one of the most deleterious weeds known to agriculturists, was being experimented upon as a raw material for paper. The experiment had been most successful, and a very valuable description of paper had resulted; but he believed the attempt to introduce this material must be abandoned on account of the Excise. There was a regulation under which a drawback was allowed for the Paper-duty on Bibles and Prayer-books, and during the last two years the amount of that drawback was £22,361. But why should not the same favour be shown to Wesley's and Watts's hymns, and all other books of a religious or educational character? At one time or another the repeal of this tax had been advocated by all the great statesmen of the present day by Chancellors of the Exchequer, and by one or two Prime Ministers. Lord Stanley, last year, at a meeting at Lynn, denounced it in eloquent terms; and even Sir Cornewall Lewis, though he did not condemn it, "damned it with faint praise" (Hear, hear).

The resolution was then put and carried unanimously.

Mr. Serjeant Parry moved, "That the tax on paper is a tax on knowledge, which, by destroying the author's fund, deteriorates cheap literature, and checks the enterprise of the best publishers; and that it ought, therefore, to be immediately repealed."

This resolution was seconded by Mr. Helps and carried.

Mr. M. Gibson, who was loudly cheered, moved that the thanks of the meeting be given to Sir J. Paxton, whose sympathies, he said, had always been with the industrious classes, and would, in his place in Parliament, be amongst the steadiest of the supporters of the repeal of the Paper-duty (Hear). It had been his (Mr Gibson's) lot to see many Chancellors of the Exchequer and other Ministers on the subject of this duty, and he must say that he had always been received with courtesy, but there had invariably been some reason or other advanced, unsupported by anything like argument, against the repeal, and the result was he was politely bowed out ("Hear," and a laugh). The present Chancellor of the Exchequer, however, was the first that had attempted to defend the tax upon other grounds than that of financial necessity.

The resolution, having been seconded, was carried by acclamation; and, the Chairman having briefly acknowledged the compliment, the meeting separated.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

VISIT OF THE PRINCE OF WALES TO THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH STATION, LOTHBURY.—Last Saturday afternoon the Prince of Wales, accompanied by Major-General Wylde, Mr. Gibbs, and Dr. Becker, visited the Electric and International Telegraph Company's station in Lothbury. His Royal Highness was received by Messrs. Critchley, Marsh Phillips, and Till, three of the directors, and proceeded to inspect all the departments of the establishment. The Prince's attention appeared particularly attracted by the direct telegraphic communication with Hamburg, Berlin, Vienna, &c.; and he expressed much gratification with his visit.

CONVERSAZIONE OF THE SOCIETY OF ARTS.—When the Society of Arts holds a conversazione, the invited should have some idea antecedently of the aim and purpose of the occasion. If the intention be to prepare a treat for lovers of art, or for the undergraduates in art, then those who pretend to none of the knowledge of virtuosi or the sentiment of dilettantism, but who rather concern themselves with the interests and progress of manufactures and commerce, will, no doubt, considerately abstain from crowding the Society's rooms with an insincere presence. If, on the other hand, the pursuit of commerce is to be considered the large proportion of those who seek only to gratify their taste or to be amused will stay away. But especially if, as on this occasion, that minor department of commerce yclept "trade" is to have the turn, then, the fact being made known, the art folk and the merchant-folk will refrain, unless, indeed, each of them as participate in the amiable disposition to go a shopping. As it is, all of these three sections, who, on last Saturday evening, were jostled, hustled, or rather conglomerated, together, must have been unanimous in dissatisfaction the art-folk at being artlessly and remorsely borne past the objects which their longing eyes and yearning hearts desired; the man of commerce that there was no room for "raw produce," or for him; and, worst of all, the hardship and injustice were great to the dames of society, &c. The pursuit of art under difficulties was bad enough, but not to be permitted to buy or procure to buy in peace is quite intolerable. It is plentiful to find in the experience of this class of visitors to the Society of Arts. He very happy to have long sought in vain through the crush of the crowd, at the risk of being run over by the cookes straw-hat fair and bonnets to get a look at the coveted object but, alas! on like a river though much warmer goes the moving mass. How distracting not to be able to compare the fairy relics of various Chamberlain and Co with those equally desirable of Underland and Co! Nor are the traders though we know the fee-table terms established without their grounds complaint. If invited to enjoy the privilege for a night into the mansion of the Society of Arts, they have a right to expect ample space and verge enough for proper observation of their goods. Besides it is unbecoming that a place of serious oriental manner or of ancient family as it will be apt very unlikely to divert attention from the stalls of shop-keepers. We say so if it should be on Thursday or the other. It is as very well to improve on the week but in other nights to be doubt whether, to the risks of disordered utensils and confounding passions, confused journeys, entangled interests, cold draughts, lost hats, and all sort of things which occurred last week in the Adelphi, is properly termed a conversazione.

THE CHINESE AND PERSIAN WARS.—On Monday a numerously-attended meeting against the Chinese and Persian wars was held at the Bridge House Hotel, London-bridge; Frederick Doulton, Esq., in the chair. A resolution was carried unanimously condemning the bombardment of Canton and the expedition against Persia, and protesting against the power of declaring war, or of entering on hostilities, being intrusted to any subordinate official, such powers being by the British Constitution vested in her Majesty alone. The meeting was addressed by the Rev. Henry Richards, Rev. J. Burnet, Rev. J. Waddington, Mr. Passmore Edwards, and other gentlemen.

MANSION-HOUSE.—On Tuesday the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress entertained at dinner the Master, Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Fruiterers' Company, the Wardens and Court of Assistants of the Bowyers' Company, the Master and Wardens of the Lorimers' Company, the members of the Court of Common Council of the wards of Tower, Aldersgate, Aldgate, Bassishaw, Billingsgate, Vintry, and Walbrook, and their ladies, as well as a number of private friends. Covers were laid in the Egyptian-hall for 180.

BURNING OF WHITFIELD'S CHAPEL, TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.—On Monday morning, between the hours of three and four o'clock, the large chapel termed the Tottenham-court-road Chapel or Tabernacle was found to be on fire. Before the messengers had time to reach the nearest station, a few hundred yards from the spot, the fire broke through the roof and in a very brief period it fell in with a tremendous crash, making a noise like a salvo of artillery. For a few seconds the fury of the fire was arrested, but it presently burst forth with greater violence, nor was it overcome until the roof from end to end of the chapel was burnt entirely off, the belfry gutted, and many of the tablets extensively damaged.

THE UNEMPLOYED.—On Thursday afternoon a meeting of the unemployed was held on the site of the Smithfield Market, for the purpose of giving some information relative to the system of Poor-law relief, and also with regard to free emigration to the Colonies. About 2500 persons were present.

THE ROYAL BRITISH BANK.—Formal notice has been given that Vice-Chancellor Kindersley proposes on Saturday (to-day) to make a call of £15 per share on all the contributors of the Royal British Bank who have not already settled on the list since the 9th January.

It is said that the judgment of the Committee of Council in the case of the Knightsbridge Churches will probably not be delivered until May next.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, attended by Sir George Wetherell and Major Clifton, inspected the whole of the troops in the north and south camps at Aldershott on Monday. His Royal Highness returned to town in the evening.

THE PERSIAN EXPEDITION.

(See next page.)

We have been favoured by a Correspondent with the accompanying Sketches, by an officer, in the Bushire Roads, showing part of what occurred during the attack and capture of Bushire.

1. View of Kurrachee Harbour outside the Bar—The 2nd Europeans embarked from this place. Many of them had been suffering from fever, and seventy men of the 1st Fusiliers had been transferred to them. The principal object in the town is the church, a building with a large ugly tower, which makes a capital mark for entering the harbour. The lighthouse seen on the projecting point of land is called Minora Point.

2. A Sketch taken while the Semiramis was entering the harbour of Bunder Abbas. The H.E.I.C. steam-frigates Feroze and Ajdha are the only vessels in the room up. There were about thirty ships, including steamers, lying at anchor in this harbour before they started for their destination—Bushire.

3. Another View of the Island of Kishur, showing the entrance to Clarence Straits, between Kishur and the Persian coast.

4. The Bay of Halliah.—On the right is Halliah-hill. Near the first clump of date-trees (on the right) is the place for landing; the shore being rocky more to the left. The gun-boats were stationed here to defend the landing of the troops. The firing commenced here on Sunday, Dec. 7, at about half-past six in the morning, from the gun-boats, and the enemy's troops were soon dislodged from clump No. 3, and were seen flying in all directions. After this no opposition was made to the landing. The boats in the foreground contain the 64th (H.M.) Regiment, and the Bombay (or 4th) Rifles. The Bombay and Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy are two small steamers, employed in towing boats, &c.

5. The Feroze, Punjaub, and Feroze shelling an old Portuguese land battery, at which the Persians made a stand; but much could not be seen from the Semiramis. On the right is an Indus flat—a small iron steamer, drawing about three feet water.

6. Bushire, from the Semiramis, taken from the Semiramis as she was going from Halliah towards the town.

7. Bushire from the "Semiramis." The action commenced about half-past seven o'clock in the morning. The Persians sent off a boat with a flag of truce, asking for a day to consider about surrendering; the answer was that they should have one hour. This was probably a ruse, to gain time. By some mistake the Victoria commenced firing before this boat had reached the shore; the Persians returned the fire, and defied a landing at the spot close to the Semiramis. The action then commenced, and shots were falling thick and close to the Semiramis, when the Feroze came up, and diverted the fire of the enemy. An incessant fire was then carried on from the Semiramis for upwards of two hours and a half—assisted by the Feroze, Ajdha, and gun-boats—during which time the gun at the corner of the wall was dismounted by the fore-gun of the Semiramis, and all the guns from the round forts silenced, with the exception of the one on the left. By far the most troublesome guns were those on the three sandbag batteries on the right of the town, but these were at last silenced; a well-aimed shell from the H.E.I.C. corvette Faulkland doing much damage. No. 3 was the last to hold out. About one o'clock the firing had ceased, and the Persians had hauled down their flagstaff, in token of surrender. Our troops were seen marching up, and at five o'clock a loud cheering drew our attention to the British flag waving on the walls of Bushire.

THE PERSIAN EXPEDITION.

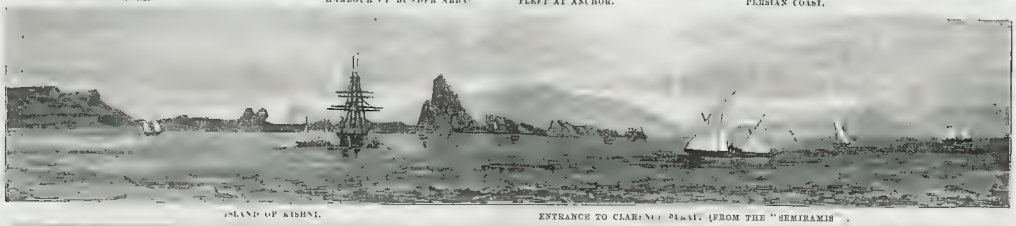
MINORA POINT AND LIGHTHOUSE. KURRACHEE HARBOUR. OYSTER ROCK. CHURCH AND TOWN OF KURRACHEE. OYSTER ROCKS.

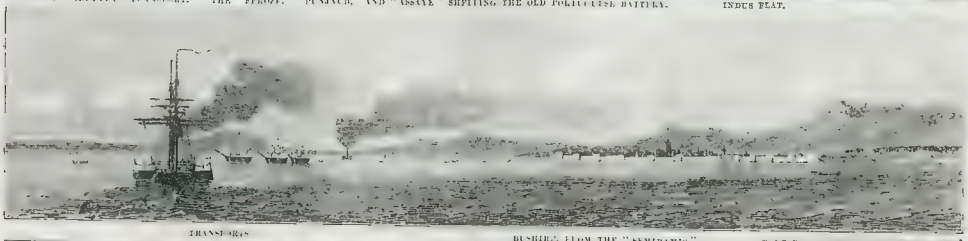
ISLAND OF KISHM. HARBOUR OF BUNDER ABBAS. FLEET AT ANCHOR. PERSIAN COAST.



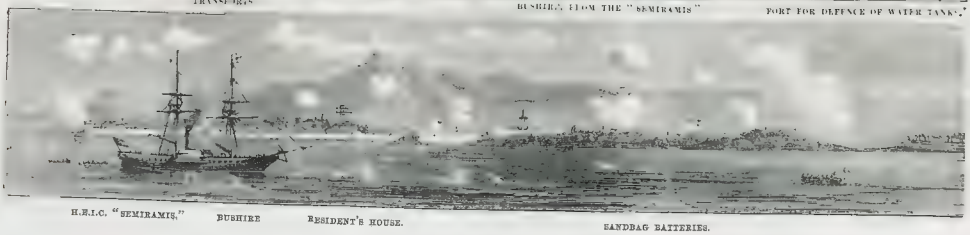
ISLAND OF KISHM. ENTRANCE TO CLARENCE STRAIT. (FROM THE "SEMIRAMIS".)

64TH REGIMENT AND BOMBAY (4TH) RIFLES. THE "BOMBAY" STEAMER AGROUND. GUN-BOATS. THE "SIR JAMSETJEE JEJEEBHOY." HALLILAH HILL.

THE "ABDULLA" TRANSPORT. THE "FEROZE," "PUNJAUB," AND "SSAVE" SHELLING THE OLD PORTUGUESE BATTERY. INDUS FLAT.



TRANSPORTS. BUSHIRE, FROM THE "SEMIRAMIS." FORT FOR DEFENCE OF WATER TANKS.



H.E.I.C. "SEMIRAMIS." BUSHIRE. RESIDENT'S HOUSE. SANDBAG BATTERIES.

PARIS IMPROVEMENTS: THE PALAIS DE JUSTICE, SAINTE CHAPELLE, AND PONT AU CHANGE.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

IMPROVEMENTS IN PARIS.

PARIS is fast losing the picturesque features of its olden architecture; and although tortuous streets relaid out by line, and narrow streets widened, must be considered as important public improvements, this convenience is obtained by the sacrifice of many buildings endeared to memory by historical association, and to the artistic eye by picturesqueness of form.

Nevertheless, the Governments of France, during the last twenty years, have, in certain instances, shown a conservative spirit in the direction of the public works at Paris; and amongst the interesting edifices of past ages which have thus been spared are the Saint Chapelle and the Palais de Justice, both which have been restored with architectural fidelity, which is rendered the more striking by its juxtaposition with the modern streets. Hence we attach a higher value to these beautiful conservations of ancient art.

In the large Engraving upon the preceding page, the artist, a resident in Paris, has shown with excellent effect the two beautiful edifices just mentioned. At the base of this group is the greater portion of the Pont au Change, which here crosses the Seine: a portion of the quay, with its colossal arches, serves as the framework of the picture.

The restoration and enlargement of the Palais de Justice has been a work of some twenty years. Insulated on three of its sides, and seen from the site chosen by our Artist, the appurtenancy of the edifice is deeply characteristic of its gloomy history, and the wicked purposes to which it was long destined. If we except a house lost in the shade, and a few minor alterations in the main front of the edifice, it presents the imposing remains of one of the oldest palaces of the Kings of France, occupying a comparatively small space, but presenting a wonderful variety of architectural character. This vast edifice is nearly as old as the Palais des Thermes, the residence of the Roman Government of Gaul, as well as of the Kings of the first and second races. The Palais de Justice was used for public purposes long before the invasion of the Franks, as testified by the fact that in 1784 a bas-relief representing Mercury, apparently of the fourth century, was found during some excavations in a part of the building facing the Rue de la Barillerie. On the same stone was the figure of a ship being the well-known symbol of Paris. The Kings of France of the first race resided in this palace, and the two next, until about the end of the fourteenth century. Robert, son of Hugh Capet, made considerable additions to it about the year 1000; it was entirely rebuilt by Philip le Bel in 1313, Louis XI., Charles VIII., and Louis XII., extended it; and Francis I. made it his residence in 1531. In 1774 the buildings adjoining the Saint Chapelle (seen on the left) were completely destroyed by fire. Since then the Palace has received constant improvements; and, since 1840, a considerable portion of it has been rebuilt.

The portion shown in the Illustration is the upper portion of the Doric colonnaded front. To the north the style of the building changes from the Italian to the Mixed Gothic of the fourteenth century, beginning with a body crowned with two segmental pediments, flanked by small turrets, and ending with a buttressed wing according to the original designs, which connects the palace with La Tour de l'Horloge, or the clock tower. The design of this wing is connected along the Quai de l'Horloge, and terminates at a round tower called the Tour de César, between which and the adjoining Tour Bonbec is the entrance to the Conciergerie. One of these towers has been occupied by Marie Antoinette, by Danton, Hebert, Chaumette, and Robespierre. At the time the palace was built these towers were already used as prisons, and several stories of gloomy cells descended as low as the waters of the Seine. It was here that the guillotine carts used to receive the victims of the Reign of Terror. Further on is a third round tower, connected with the former by a short curtain, but not shown in the view.

The Tour de l'Horloge was considerably lowered some years ago. The bell called Veuin du Palais, now replaced in this tower, repeated the signal from St. Germain l'Auxerrois for the massacre of St. Bartholomew. The splendid clock which now adorns the Quai aux Fleurs was replaced there in 1852; it was carved by Germain Pilon in 1585, and occupies the place of a clock erected there by order of Charles V. The emblematic sculpture is coloured and gilt: it relates to the Order of Henry III., &c., supported by figures of Justice and Piety, by Pilon, who also sculptured the caryatidal figures supporting the arch, and the angels supporting the arms which crown the pediment.

The Doric front is that of the famous hall of the Pas Perdus, built in 1622 by Jacques Desbrosses, the architect of the Luxembourg; it occupies the site of the celebrated great hall of the palace built by Louis XI., with magnificence equal to that of Sainte Chapelle, of which the roof and elegant steeple are seen on the left. The entire edifice has already been engraved and described in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Beneath is the Pont au Change, low and heavy, its piles chafed and worn by the stream, which here runs with considerable force. It is connected to another bridge by large vaults supporting the quay. This bridge was built between 1639 and 1647. Under the Apostate there were only two bridges over the Seine; the small bridge over the other branch of the Seine, and the great bridge which took the name of Pont au Change, when Louis VII. allowed the money-changers to establish themselves in the houses along one of the sides of the roadway. The other side was exclusively taken up by goldsmiths.

The Palais de Justice has been restored and rebuilt by M. Duc, architect; the clock has been carved by M. Toussaint.

We have here, too, a glimpse of another phase of Parisian life. The large vaults along the river bank are used in the daytime as an abode by certain industriels, who rake up the sand of the Seine to pick up a scanty living, and who are in large bands there when they have neither the strength nor the courage to strive after by regular work; moreover, despite the great numbers of houses recently built in Paris, lots of persons pass the night in this retreat of filth and squalor.

CURIOUS SHROVE TUESDAY CUSTOM.

THE ceremony of tossing the Pancake in the school-room of Westminster School took place on Tuesday. By a culpable aberration of the Calendar, Shrove Tuesday this year falls on a saint's day (St. Matthias), of course a whole holiday, and much of the fun was lost, which consists in the intrusion of the cook in the midst of school hours, and the hot haste with which the young gentlemen rush from Homer or Virgil to a participation in the proceedings of heathen deities to the pursuit of a modern edible in its travels from Tun to pancakes. Indeed, the important ceremonial would have been omitted altogether but for the discovery that the chief actor in the pantomime had a right to a certain honorarium by usage, and insisted on performing his part, school-day or holiday. Accordingly, after the Abbey service, many of the boys were present in the school-room, and the masters appeared in full canonicals. At twelve the verger entered, with his wand of office, and announced "Pancake!" The gentleman in the white apron took one view of the high bar in the middle of the room, and tossed a pancake, a very hard one indeed, and suspiciously like a toasted crumpet, over it into the middle of about fifty boys, after which the farinaceous compound was, as might be expected, seen no more. All that was visible was the scuffling and kicking; such as is generally confined to the outdoor amusement of football in one of those delightful stages of the game which are called "bullies" at Eton. The pancake after this must have been a delicate morsel to the happy winner of it.

At Eton, some of the upper boys used to write long copies of verses on this day, which were hung up on pegs round the College hall. In the sixteenth century they were originally confined to praise or dispraise of Bacchus, and the poem retained the name of "Bacchus" after the subject was changed. The football playing, thrashing the fat hen, and tolling the curfew-bell, common in various parts of England not many years ago, on this day are now discontinued, and no longer form part of the "manners and customs of ye Englyshe in ye nineteenth centurne."

PATENT LAW.—The second edition of Mr. Peter Burke's "Compendium of the Patent Law as now Amended" has just appeared, and must in its present cheap form prove useful to inventors and to all interested in the protection of inventions. This edition has the further new feature of combining together a summary of all the points of patent law since the passing of the Patent Law Amendment Act of 1852.

The widow of the great French botanist, De Jussieu, died at Paris last week at the advanced age of ninety. The Government for many years kindly allowed her to occupy apartments in the Jardin des Plantes.

Colonel Ouseley was presented to the French Emperor on Tuesday last, who had a conversation with him on British India.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE EARL OF HAREWOOD.

THE serious accident which this amiable and respected nobleman met with while out with the Bramham-park hounds, on the 24th January, terminated fatally on the 22nd inst. The Earl, after lingering in an uncertain and precarious state, expired on the 22nd, at his seat, Harewood House, Yorkshire, in the presence of nearly all the members of his afflicted family. His Lordship, the Right Hon. Henry Lascelles, third Earl of Harewood, Viscount Lascelles, and Baron Lascelles of Harewood, in the county of York, Lord Lieutenant of the West Riding, and Major of the Yorkshire Hussar Yeomanry, was the second son (his elder brother, Edward, Viscount Lascelles, died in 1839) of Henry, second Earl of Harewood, by his wife, Henrietta, eldest daughter of Lieut.-General Sir John Saunders Sebright, Bart. He was born the 11th June, 1797; and, when young, went into the British Army. He was present with his regiment (the Grenadier Guards) at the battle of Waterloo. He afterwards retired from the service; and, for several Parliaments prior to the passing of the Reform Bill, represented, on Conservative principles, Northallerton in the House of Commons. He succeeded, in 1841, his father, who died suddenly while returning from hunting. He married, the 8th July, 1823, Lady Louisa Thynne, second daughter of Thomas, second Marquis of Bath, by whom he leaves five sons and six daughters. His eldest daughter is the wife of Charles Wm. Wall, Esq., of Hillingdon place, Middlesex; and his second daughter is married to the present Lord Wharncliffe. The Earl is succeeded by his eldest son, Henry Viscount Lascelles, now fourth Earl of Harewood, who was born in 1824, and married, in 1845, the Lady Elizabeth De Burgh, eldest daughter of the Marquis of Clanricarde, by which lady, who died suddenly on the 9th February, 1854, he has four sons and two daughters.

THE COUNTESS OF HUNTINGDON.

THE RIGHT HON. ELIZABETH ANNE, COUNTESS OF HUNTINGDON, was the daughter and heiress of the late Richard Power, Esq., of Clanmore, county of Waterford, and the wife of Francis Theophilus Henry, present Earl of Huntingdon, to whom she was married the 8th Sept., 1825, and had issue a son, Francis Power Plantagenet, Lord Hastings, and three daughters. Her Ladyship, to the deep regret of all who knew her, died on the 15th inst., at Ringmecn, Queenstown, county Cork.

THE EARL OF CASTLE-STUART.

THE RIGHT HON. EDWARD STUART, third Earl of Castle-Stuart, Viscount Stuart and Baron Castle-Stuart, of Castle-Stuart, in the county Tyrone, in the Peerage of Ireland, and a Baronet of Nova Scotia, was the eldest son of Robert, the second Earl, by his wife Jemima, only daughter of Colonel Robinson, R.A. He was born the 11th Sept., 1807, and married, in Feb., 1839, Emmeline, only surviving child of the late Benjamin Bathurst, son of the Right Rev. Henry Bathurst, Bishop of Norwich. He succeeded his father, as third Earl, on the 10th June, 1854; and died on the 20th inst., of gout in the stomach, at East Cliff, Dover. As his Lordship has had no issue, his honours are inherited by his next brother, the Hon. Charles Andrew Knox Stuart, now fourth Earl of Castle-Stuart, who was born the 23rd April, 1810, and married, in 1835, Charlotte Raffles Drury, only daughter of the late Quintin Thompson, Esq., and niece of the celebrated Governor of Java, Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles; by this lady the Earl has an only son and seven daughters. The house of Stuart, Earls of Castle-Stuart, is of the blood royal of Scotland. It descended from King Robert II.'s third son, the famous Robert Duke of Albany, and Regent of Scotland. The Barony of Castle-Stuart dated from the 7th Nov., 1619; the Earldom was created on the 28th Dec., 1800.

SIR ROBERT BARLOW, BART.

SIR ROBERT BARLOW, second Baronet, of Fir Grove, in the county of Surrey, was the fourth son of Sir George Hilaro Barlow, G.C.B., an eminent civil officer of the East India Company, and Provisional Governor-General of India in 1802, who was created a Baronet in 1801. Sir Robert Barlow was born at Calcutta, on the 24th September, 1797; he entered the East India Civil Service in 1817, and became eventually one of the Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Bengal, or Native Supreme Court of Judicature at Calcutta. He married, the 27th September, 1832, Augusta Louisa, third daughter of Major-General Richard Augustus Seymour, Governor of St. Lucia, by which lady (who died in November, 1836) he leaves an only child, Morison, his successor, and now the third Baronet. Sir Robert Barlow died on the 21st ult.

SIR J. A. DUNLOP AGNEW WALLACE, BART.

GENERAL SIR JOHN ALEXANDER DUNLOP AGNEW WALLACE, K.C.B., seventh Baronet, of Craigie, Ayrshire, Colonel of the 88th Regiment (the Connaught Rangers), was the son of Sir Thomas Dunlop Agnew, the sixth Baronet, by his first wife, Eglantine, daughter of Sir William Maxwell, Bart., of Monreith, and sister of Jane, fourth Duchess of Gordon. He was born the 16th April, 1775, and entered the British Army in 1787, when but twelve years old, and served for the almost unprecedented period of seventy years, during the whole of which time his name was always on the active list. He first joined the 74th Regiment in India, and was Aide-de-Camp to his maternal uncle, Colonel Hamilton Maxwell, then in command of a division of Lord Cornwallis's army, and he was subsequently Aide-de-Camp to Lord Cornwallis himself. He was present at the siege of Seringapatam, and, after the fall of Tippoo Saib's lines and camp, and at the storming of Kistnagurree and the battle of Seringapatam. He was in three separate actions before he was fifteen years of age. In 1796 he was at the reduction of Minorca. From thence he joined the army under Sir Ralph Abercromby, and was at the landing at Aboukir, in Egypt, at the battles before Alexandria, and at those of Rhinnelch, Rosetta, and Grand Cairo. In all these famous affairs he led the grenadiers of the 58th Regiment. He next commanded the Connaught Rangers in the Peninsula. He was a Colonel at the battle of Busaco, and there, at the head of the 45th and 88th Regiments, made a celebrated charge, which is said to have secured the victory. Colonel Wallace on that brilliant occasion had scarcely re-formed his line when Lord Wellington, accompanied by Marshal Beresford and a number of other officers, galloped up to him, and, seizing him warmly by the hand, said, "Wallace, I never witnessed a more gallant charge than that you made just now." In the public despatches of the Duke of Wellington Wallace has prominent mention made of his conduct at Busaco. The Duke's despatches tell no less honourably of him at the battle of Fuentes d'Onor, and again, at the head of a brigade, at Salamanca. Soon after this last engagement a severe attack of fever and ague rendered Colonel Wallace incapable for a time of further exertion; but he again commanded a brigade in the army of occupation in Paris in 1815. When retiring from the active command of the Connaught Rangers, on his promotion to the rank of Major-General, in 1819, he was presented with a splendid sword by the officers of the regiment. In the year 1831 he was appointed to the Colonelcy of this same regiment. He received the gold medal and two clasps for actions in the Peninsula, and for Egypt; and was a Knight of the Order of the Crescent from the Sultan. He was made a K.C.B. in 1833, and became a General in 1851.

General Sir Alexander Dunlop succeeded his father as seventh Baronet in 1825: he married, the 23rd June, 1829, Janet, daughter of William Rodger, Esq., and leaves four sons and one daughter. The gallant General died at his seat on the shores of Loch Ryan, in Wigtonshire, on the 14th inst. He was one of the last of the Peninsular veterans. He is succeeded in his Baronetcy and estate by his eldest son, William, a Captain in the Grenadier Guards. The Wallaces, Baronets, spring from the same race as the renowned Sir William Wallace, of whom General Sir Alexander Dunlop Wallace just deceased was not an unfit representative. Sir Alexander's grandmother, Frances Anne Wallace, an heiress, was the celebrated Mrs. Dunlop, the friend of Robert Burns; and his mother, Eglantine Maxwell, was sister of the famous Duchess of Gordon, whose four daughters married the Dukes of Manchester, Richmond, and Bedford, and the Marquis Cornwallis—on whose Staff in India Sir Alexander began his brave and honourable career.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The French Emperor and Empress took an airing on Sunday last in an open carriage to the Bois de Boulogne.

The Duke of Wellington will preside at the next anniversary dinner of the Printers' Pension Society.

The Prince of Nassau left Paris on Saturday last to visit the palace and forest of Fontainebleau.

Lord Napier was one of the passengers on board the Persia, which left Liverpool for New York on Saturday last.

The Duke and Duchess of Montpensier were expected at Madrid on the 22nd, on a pleasure tour.

His Highness the Prince of Leiningen, accompanied by Captain Thurston, has been staying in Oxford during the last few days on a visit to J. E. Codrington, B.A. of Brasenose College, nephew of General Codrington, late Commander of the forces in the Crimea.

The British Minister at Brussels gave a grand fête on the 13th inst. to the Diplomatic Corps, the Belgian Ministers, and the members of the English aristocracy resident in the capital. The Count of Flanders and the Prince de Schaumbourg-Lippe were among the guests.

The Lord Bishop of London, having now gone into residence in London House, will preach at St. James's Church in the afternoon on the first and third Sundays in each month while he is in town.

The Emperor of Austria has ordered that a monument to Leonardo da Vinci shall be erected at Milan, and that his fresco, in the Convent delle Grazie, in that city, representing the "Lord's Supper," shall be restored.

Mr. Charles Alison, Oriental Secretary to her Majesty's Embassy at Constantinople, has been appointed Secretary of Embassy to the same mission, in the place of Lord Napier, lately named Minister to the United States.

A grand ball was given at Carlsruhe on the 14th inst. at the Museum, which was attended by the Grand Duke Michael of Russia and the Princess Cecilia of Baden, whom he is to marry.

Letters from Beyrout, dated the 6th, mention that Sir Henry Bulwer, the English Commissioner for the Principalities, had arrived in that city on the previous evening from Constantinople. Sir Henry, it is said, is charged with a special mission to Syria.

Baron Koller is appointed Austrian Minister at Berlin. He is replaced as Plenipotentiary in the commission of the Danubian Principalities by M. Von Lichtenau, Privy Councillor.

Sir Moses Montefiore, Bart., will shortly leave on another pilgrimage to the Holy Land, accompanied by Lady Montefiore as far as Italy, where her Ladyship will remain for the benefit of her health.

The Grand Duke Constantine of Russia arrived at Frankfort on the evening of the 7th inst., from Hanover, and the next morning, after receiving the military authorities of the place and the officers of the garrison, left for Darmstadt.

The King of the Belgians has ordered M. Dufour, jeweller of Brussels, to repair a diamond necklace for the Princess Charlotte, at a cost of 100,000f. The necklace is to be formed of part of the brilliants which belonged to the Princess Charlotte of England, his Majesty's first wife, and which the King has preserved with religious respect.

Sir John M'Neill has accepted the office of Honorary President of the Associated Societies of the University of Edinburgh, in the room of Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, Bart.

Mr. William Smith O'Brien has been summoned to attend the Grand Jury of the county Limerick at the ensuing assizes. This is the first time he has received a notification of the same character since his return.

At the Hôtel de Ventes, in the Rue Drouot, at Paris, full-length portraits of George III. of England and his Queen, by Sir Joshua Reynolds, were sold last week for 1500 francs.

We regret to hear that Mr. Serjeant Wilkins continues seriously indisposed, and with little hope of early recovery.

Two young Austrians and two Turks have been admitted into the French Naval College for Engineers.

Messrs. Hachette and Co., the Paris publishers, are now publishing a complete and uniform translation of the works of Dickens—the first that has been attempted in France.

Mr. C. S. Whitmore, of the Oxford Circuit, has been appointed Judge of the Southwark County Court, in the room of Mr. George Clive, now M.P. for Hereford.

Accounts from Athens to the 14th inst. state that the Greek Senate had rejected the financial arrangement concerted with the protecting Powers.

The French Government has appointed two Consuls to Persia—one to Bushire, and another who is to reside at Shiraz—during the time Bushire is occupied by the British troops.

The barque China, now on its way from the Cape of Good Hope to London, has on board a young elephant, a present to the captain from the King of Siam, and which, if it survive the voyage, he intends presenting to the Queen.

The Royal Agricultural Society hold their annual meeting at Salisbury this summer.

The Rhine is now completely clear of the ice which a short time back obstructed its navigation, and the bridge of boats at Cologne has been replaced.

The Sydney Empire reports the discovery of a rich gold-field near the Manning River. The Melbourne Herald states that three nuggets, weighing respectively 381, 323, and 189 ounces, had been picked up at Korong diggings.

All the secondary German Powers, it is expected, will follow the example of Austria, and issue a general amnesty for political offences committed in 1848-49-50.

In consequence of the great amount of business in the County Court of Liverpool, it is proposed to appoint a second judge.

At La Rochelle, on Monday week, three suns appeared in the heavens, placed in the same line, the real one in the centre. The two mock suns were of course less brilliant than the real one.

The Post-office authorities propose to place clerks on board the Australian mail-packets between Alexandria and England, in order that the mails may be sorted on board.

The Copenhagen Flyveposten announces that the Danish Note on the Duchies to the two great German Powers will be dispatched during the present week, and will be accompanied by a detailed memorandum and two annexes.

A sum of £10,000 has been advanced to the Master of the Mint towards defraying the cost of the Baltic medals, the entire estimate for which is £13,412 6s.

The Armenians who inhabit the Ottoman Empire, and who form a community of about 3,000,000 individuals, have resolved to appoint a special agent at London and Paris to protect their interests. Their choice has fallen on a member of the Dunlop Duz, one of the most influential Armenian families throughout the East.

A memorial from the principal houses in the trade with Singapore was presented on Monday to the President of the Board of Control, against an act contemplated by the Legislative Council of India for levying tonnage dues at that port.

Messrs. Croskey and Co., the agents of the Hamburg and Brazilian mail steamer Petropolis, about to start for Rio from Southampton, have been apprehended by the official authorities from making a collection of letters for the Brazils.

The city of Bordeaux has nominated a deputation, taking from the Municipal Council and the Chamber of Commerce, and headed by the Mayor, to proceed to Paris, to support the pretensions of Bordeaux to be the port of one of the projected lines of Transatlantic steamers.

Russia has commenced negotiations for the construction of a railway from Moched, near Tiflis, to Teheran.

The negotiations for the junction of the Prussian and Russian Railways are nearly completed. The arrangements respecting the junction of the Warsaw and St. Petersburg line with the East Prussian, and the Warsaw and Cracow line with the Upper Silesian, are settled.

Letters from Smyrna state that some valuable coal mines in the Valley of the Meander, about forty miles from that city, have lately attracted attention, and are likely to be made available for commercial purposes.

Lord Ebrington has presented to Harrow School seven massive silver cups, in cases lined with velvet and satin, to be held by the champion for the time being of the following games and pastimes, namely—running, leaping, swimming, batting, bowling, fielding, and rackets.

A deputation from the Strangers' Home for Asiatic Seamen had an interview with Lord Stanley of Alderley on Wednesday, at the Board of Trade.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

THE debate on the Budget, with Lord Palmerston's majority of 80, has been followed by Lord Derby's onslaught on behalf of the Chinese. His Lordship's address purported to be upon a grave subject; and one is therefore not surprised, knowing the peculiar mode in which it usually pleases him to handle such questions, to find the report of his speech studded all over with "a laugh," "laughter," and the like. His concluding appeal, however, to the fathers of the Church to assist him in damaging the Ministry was in another key, and most effectively solemn. Remembering how much good talk was got out of Don Pacifico in the same illustrious assemblage a few years ago, it is not surprising that the acts and punishment of Mr. Commissioner Yeh should have procured for the subject the dignity of an adjourned debate. The decision of the Lords upon the subject is not unimportant; but the announcement of the sailing this week of a vessel, the Northfleet, "with shot and shell," for Canton, is as truthful an index to the opinions of England on the Chinese question. The people of this country will not be led away by factious eloquence or false sentiment, and John Chinaman is no martyr, but an obstinate demi-savage.

Government are unconvinced by the arguments in favour of a new expedition in search of Sir John Franklin, and have intimated that no expedition of such magnitude will be sent out. Those who advocate renewed more exploring vessels will be sent out. Those who advocate renewed research contend that we have all but exhausted the field, and have clearly ascertained where the missing navigators are not, leaving for examination an intermediate tract, of no very great extent, and which may be reached with no very great peril, where either our heroes or their remains will be found. They further dwell upon the immense moral effect which would be produced upon our sailors by a final testimony that England never abandons her children, wherever they may be. But the Admiralty has made up its mind that Franklin is dead; has written it down in its books; and will hear no more upon the subject. This intimation, and the very summary dismissal of a proposal by Sir J. Wahnsley to refer our representative system to a Select Committee, have been the chief incidents of the week, in addition to the grander debate. We must not omit to mention that, though Mr. John Macgregor, of Glasgow, did not vote upon the expulsion of Mr. James Sadleir, of Tipperary, he has since marked his sense of the fitness of things by taking—not the Hundreds, he was too delicately minded to ask those; but the other nominal office kept for retiring members. "Macgregor hath vanished for ever and aye" from the House of Commons. Apropos whereof, Mr. Humphrey Brown, of Tewkesbury, has been to his constituents, and has "explained" his connection with the British Bank; that is to say, he has declared himself to be spotless, but bound by oath not to divulge the secrets that would prove his innocence. One would have supposed that an oath of secrecy to a dissolved bank was like an oath of loyalty to an extinct dynasty; but we must wait for legal disclosures before we judge Mr. Humphrey Brown's tender conscience.

According to organs of some authority, the dispute between England and Persia is adjusted, and the war is over. It is stated that all the points of importance insisted on by England have been conceded, and especially her demand to have a Consul wherever Russia has one. The Moniteur has published the treaty between Persia and France, and the mode in which the high contracting parties are described in it is too astounding to be overlooked. Beginning with an invocation to the Deity, "the element and merciful," the treaty is made between—

His high Majesty Napoleon, whose elevation is equal to that of the planet Saturn, the sovereign of whom the sun is a standard, the shining rays on the firmament of crowned heads, the son of the heaven-roof royalty, the ornament of the diadem, the splendour of the standards and of the Imperial signs, the illustrious and liberal monarch; and his Majesty, elevated like the planet Saturn, the Sovereign to whom the sun is a standard, whose splendour and magnificence equal that of the starred sky; the sublime Sovereign, the monarch whose weapons are numerous as the stars, whose greatness reminds us of that of Djemschid, whose magnificence equals that of Darius, the heir to the crown and throne of the Achæmides, the sublime and absolute Emperor of all Persia.

It is a consolation that we are already in alliance with the first of these tremendous persons, and the sooner we propitiate the second the better.

The dreadful coalpit explosion, near Barnsley, continues of course to occupy general attention. Upwards of 170 lives have been sacrificed, and this in a mine which appears to have been deservedly regarded as a model of ventilation. Practical men seem to think that some more stringent measure of police might be advantageously adopted with regard to the management of mines. The industrious, but most obstinate, miner himself is, generally speaking, unfit to be intrusted with the care of his own life. The fact that the Davy lamp gives a comparatively bad light is enough to ensure for it his dislike; and we are acquainted with a proprietor of mines who, insisting upon the lamp being placed in every labourer's hand, was answered by the manager, "Of course, Sir, it shall be done, but the men will put their picks through the wire." How can one deal with such men? In the present case, however, the ventilation of the mine was so good that the naked-candle practice was deemed to be safe, and the unhappy men who have died are supposed to be held blameless.

The generosity of the English public is very rapidly evoked by a tale of sorrow, and it is creditable to us that it is so. But the wisdom of the course which we have more than once suggested to the charitable—namely, that they should confide their alms to the sitting magistrates—has been abundantly proved in the case of a woman called, or calling herself, Allsop, who, with a story of having lost five sons in the service of the Sovereign, at once enlisted all sympathies in her behalf. To those accustomed to such matters there was a flavour of the begging-letter about her style; but at sixty real misfortune often takes a whining tone, and, in short, all hearts were opened, and many purses. A letter from Colonel Phipps, containing an excuse rather than a reason for not extending to her the Royal bounty, was assailed with a good deal of the abuse which is usually kept quite ready and hot for supposed error at Court. But the magistrate investigates the case, and the woman turns out to be an impostor, the five sons a fable, and her reference to a legal gentleman as a witness unwarranted. She is an old begging-letter writer. But for the magisterial filter, large sums, in addition to what had been privately sent her, would have thus been unworthily applied. It would be well, by the way, if donors who send money for a specific object would place their charity at the discretion of the Bench in the event of such object proving an Allsop.

Mr. Rowland Hill's plan for facilitating the delivery of letters, by the division of London into districts, has been at once comprehended and accepted by the public; and we are told that, out of the 200,000 letters of the morning delivery, something like 120,000 are already found to bear the postal initials. This is satisfactory, showing that the practical character of the plan is recognised.

---

The Etna left Southampton on Tuesday last with the first overland Australian mail. She will wait at Alexandria for the first homeward Australian mail, which is expected to be brought by the steam-packet Oneida.

MUSIC.

THE Concerts of the AMATEUR MUSICAL SOCIETY go on with undiminished spirit and success. That of Monday last was one of the best they have given. The room was overflowing with fashionable company; the music was of the most classical description; and the execution, on the whole, was not unworthy of the music. The great orchestral performance of the evening was Mozart's symphony in C, known by the name of the "Jupiter," which was played with great fire and laudable precision. The other orchestral pieces were Mozart's overture to the "Zauberflöte" and Meyerbeer's overture to the "Etoile du Nord." An extraordinary sensation was created by the appearance of Miss Lando, a young singer unknown to the public. Her entrance into the orchestra, accordingly, was closely noticed, but her voice was no sooner heard than every ear became attentive. She sang Mendelssohn's magnificent song, with Goethe's words, "Suleika," with such vocal power, such passionate expression, and such pure and beautiful execution, that a burst of acclamations from every part of the room spoke the surprise and pleasure of the audience. Loudly called upon, she repeated the song with greater confidence, and, if possible, increased applause. This success was of the most legitimate kind, for the young lady (whose aspect was remarkably modest and prepossessing) was evidently an entire stranger. There was a general buzz of "Who is she?" "Where does she come from?" And we learned from our own inquiries of that sort that this was her first appearance in public; that she is the sister-in-law of Mr. Aguilar, one of our most distinguished pianists; that she has received a thorough musical education in Frankfort, and now contemplates adopting music as a profession. That her career will be successful cannot be doubted. She afterwards sang "The Alpine Shepherd's Song," a new and beautiful composition of Mr. Wiley's, and completely confirmed the impression she had previously made. The other vocal pieces were Hatton's four-part song "When evening's twilight," and Horsley's famous glee, "By Celia's arbour." They were both well sung by Messrs. Heming, Coleridge, Bushby, and Stroud; and both were encored.

MR. CHARLES SALAMAN, the eminent composer and pianist, is delivering, at the Marylebone Literary and Scientific Institution, a series of three lectures on "Music in Connection with the Dance." Two lectures have been given; the third is announced for Tuesday next, the 3rd March. The first was on music and the dance from the earliest times to the Roman Empire; the second embraced the period of the middle ages and down to the eighteenth century; the last is to be on national dances and national dance-music. The lectures are illustrated by vocal and instrumental music, in the performance of which Mr. Salaman is assisted by Miss Williams, a very pleasing young singer, and Mr. Deichmann, an excellent violinist. In the treatment of his subject Mr. Salaman travels over a vast field both of space and time. His lectures contain a great quantity of curious matter, evidently the fruit of varied and extensive reading. The whole human race have danced and sung ever since the world began; and Mr. Salaman endeavours to show how they have been dancing and singing during all that time in every age and every country. He has ransacked for information the pages of poets, dramatists, historians, and geographers, both ancient and modern; and his gleanings have been ample as well as interesting. It is impossible for us to give even an outline of the multitude of topics which he introduces—the bare syllabus of one of his lectures would form a lengthy article. But, having described generally the design and subject of the lectures, we can add, with truth, that he carries out his plan with great ability and success; that he writes and speaks very agreeably; and that his manner, as well as his matter, never fails to arrest and keep alive the attention of his hearers.

MISS ARABELLA GODDARD'S SECOND CONCERT, on Tuesday evening, was, if possible, even more brilliant and successful than her first. It was attended by a crowded audience, including many of our musical celebrities. The great feature of this series of concerts is Miss Goddard's performance of Beethoven's pianoforte sonatas, written in the latest period of his career—works so original in form and style, and so full of enormous difficulties, that, from the illustrious composer's own day down to the present time, they have been generally deemed unplayable and unintelligible. But Miss Goddard is earning a reputation of opinion as to these compositions in the mind of every one who hears her perform them; for she shows not only that they can be executed, but that they are full of the most exquisite beauties of the art. As musical execution on every instrument has long been progressing, and is now as progressive as ever, we have little doubt that the day will come when even our amateurs will successfully attack difficulties which only Miss Goddard and a very small number of similarly-gifted artists are at present able to conquer.

The arrangements for the NORWICH FESTIVAL of this year are now nearly completed. It is to be held on the 15th, 16th, 17th, and 18th days of September. The sacred pieces are to be the "Messiah" (of course), Beethoven's "Mount of Olives," Mendelssohn's "Lobgesang, Mozart's "Requiem," and Spohr's "Hymn to God." Haydn's "Seasons," too, will form a part of one of the morning performances. At the evening concerts there will be selections from Macfarren's "May-day," Hatton's "Robin Hood," and Pierson's "Pause." Howard Glover's "Tam o' Shanter" will be the finale to one of the concerts. We learn, with much regret, that the committee have declined to accept Mr. Henry Leslie's new oratorio of "Judith," on the score of the expense of copying the music, and some other items, which, it is said, would amount altogether to £120. An entirely new orchestra, on a plan approved by Mr. Benedict, the director of the festival, is about to be erected.

BOSTON POPULAR CONCERTS.—Unequalled success has attended this project; the attendances have averaged nearly 1000 persons, and the performances have given perfect satisfaction. At the next concert (the fifth of the series) Rudersdorff, Amadei, Braham, Irving, Randegger, and Mr. Thirlte, the able organist of St. Botolph's, will appear in the "Stabat Mater" and a grand miscellaneous selection. The same distinguished party will also, in the last week in March, visit Spalding, Lincoln, Spilsby, and Louth. Their talent is certain to command large audiences.

MR. and MRS. HOWARD PAUL give their comic and musical entertainment, "Patchwork," at the Free-trade Hall, Manchester, on the 3rd of March.

THE THEATRES.

OLYMPIC.—Under the title of "A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing," Mr. Tom Taylor has presented another version of Mdme. Girardin's "Une Femme qui Déteste son Mari," which was produced on Thursday week. The subject is anglicised, and Colonel Kirke substituted for the agent of Robespierre. The arrival of Colonel Churchill with Kirke's disgrace leads to the dénouement. Mrs. Stirling supports the character of the heroine.

STRAND.—A new piece at this theatre, entitled "Pride and Poverty, or the Real Poor of London," demands notice. It is an adaptation from a French melodrama, similarly called "Les Pauvres de Paris;" the copyright of which, it appears, has been secured by Mr. Charles Reade, but which Messrs. Benjamin Barnett and J. B. Johnstone are said to have invaded. Mr Reade has threatened proceedings against the manager, but we have not heard that any have commenced.

ADELPHI.—"In and Out of Place" is the title of a new Transatlantic trifle for the display of the various talents of Mrs. Barney Williams. As a play-acting maid-servant, who does all manner of mischief, and appears in many characters, appropriately costumed, she has ample opportunity of proving her versatility. Whether as dancer, "Yankee gal," or French, German, and Irish applicant for service, the half-silly old gentleman who has just discharged her, she was equally excellent, and it is impossible to name her best assumption. With all this eccentricity there is, as we have remarked on former occasions, an elegance of demeanour in Mrs. Williams which imparts to her style a peculiar grace, and places her in the first rank of artists.

LYCEUM.—This theatre added on Monday a new farce to its répertoire which is likely to maintain a permanent place on the boards. It is written by Messrs. E. H. Yates and W. Harrington, and is whimsically entitled "A Friend from Leatherhead." The business of the piece is as whimsical as its appellation, and consists of a number of extravagant details that provoke immoderate laughter. The plot scarcely admits of being told, so thoroughly accidental (to use a technical term) is it in its elements. We must, however, give it in brief. Captain Squiffen (Mr. J. G. Shore) has a wife (Mrs. B. White), who is persecuted in her walks with the attentions of a bizarrely-dressed gallant, who turns out to be Squiffen's friend from Leatherhead, Mr. Loophole (Mr. Toole). This gentleman feels the perplexity of his situation, and makes various attempts to avoid an interview with the lady. He resorts to the most unexpected expedients: among these, he disguises himself in the shawl and bonnet of the lady turned inside out, and forms a skirt for his legs out of the sofa-cover; making, at the same time, the pillow serve for a mock infant; and in this manner he meets the lady with a tale of desertion, the guilt of which he fixes on Shanks, her footman. When all expedients fail him he precipitates himself from the window, through the roof of a greenhouse, and is brought up again in a desperate condition, in a state of wild terror, and his arms and legs encased in flower-pots. Of course the whole weight of the performance rested with Mr. Toole, who exerted himself with the utmost energy, and accomplished a very remarkable success. The performance, in fact, was in every respect a triumph.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

NOTTINGHAM MEETING opened, like Lincoln, with the triumph of Mr. Thomas Parr and his good-looking Apathy (another of his clever

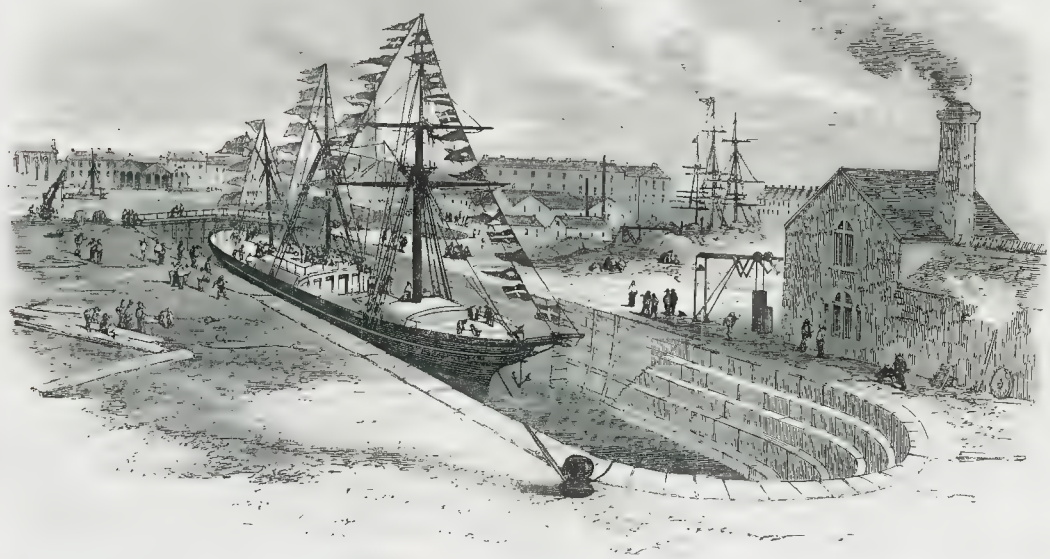
THE GREAT WESTERN DOCKS, PLYMOUTH: THE FLOATING DOCK.

OPENING OF THE PLYMOUTH GREAT WESTERN DOCKS.

The new Docks—which have long been in course of construction at Plymouth, and which were so much needed for the better accommodation of the larger class of vessels belonging to the mercantile marine—were opened for traffic on the 11th inst.; and, although the occasion was allowed to pass with little of the ceremonial observances with which the completion of works of such magnitude are sometimes honoured, there can be no doubt that the undertaking is one which is calculated to promote the commercial interests of the metropolis of the west in a greater degree than any other enterprise which has marked the history of Plymouth. The three towns of Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport, which are immediately contiguous to each other, contain together a population estimated at 120,000. There is not a finer port in the United Kingdom. It possesses harbours which can be entered by the largest vessels ever constructed, irrespective of the state of wind and tide, and there are magnificent docks available for Government vessels; but, until now, it has been matter of just reproach to the port that it possessed no floating dock for the use of merchant shipping. That reproach, however, has been removed by the construction of the Great Western Docks, the plans for which were prepared by Mr. I. K. Brunel, and carried out under the superintendence of Mr. Power, resident engineer, at a cost little short of a quarter of a million sterling.

The works include a floating dock, with an area of 13 acres, length of quay-wall, 3490 feet; entrance-gates, 80 feet wide. There is also a graving dock, 387 feet in length, having gates 80 feet wide, and width of chamber 92 feet. The area of the wharfs around the floating dock exceeds 15 acres. There is a pier 400 feet long, 40 to 80 feet wide, and with a depth of water of from 18 to 40 feet under low water spring tides. In addition, there is a pontoon 300 feet long, 40 feet wide, with a depth of water alongside of from 12 to 24 feet under low water spring tides, and capable of containing 4000 tons of coals. To make the works as complete as possible, an hotel has been erected, and warehouses, bonding-stores, &c., provided.

The opening of the docks took place, as already stated, on the 11th inst., when the fine screw-steamer Ethe, 1100 tons burden, Captain Hammill, was taken into the dock without the least difficulty. Considerable interest was manifested upon the occasion, the Ethe being dressed in colours, and the docks visited during the day by hundreds of persons. On the following morning she was removed into the graving dock, where she is now undergoing repair. She was upon a voyage from London to the Mediterranean with a general cargo, when it became necessary to put into Plymouth to repair a defect near the sternpost. The Ethe belongs to Mr. Newall, of Gateshead, the well-known manufacturer of wire rope, and she was built expressly for laying electric wire cables, in which duty she has been employed almost up to the present moment.



THE GREAT WESTERN DOCKS, PLYMOUTH: THE GRAVING DOCK.

RUINS OF BRAHMUNABAD, IN SIND.

THE ANCIENT AND RUINED CITY OF BRAHMUNABAD,

IN SIND.

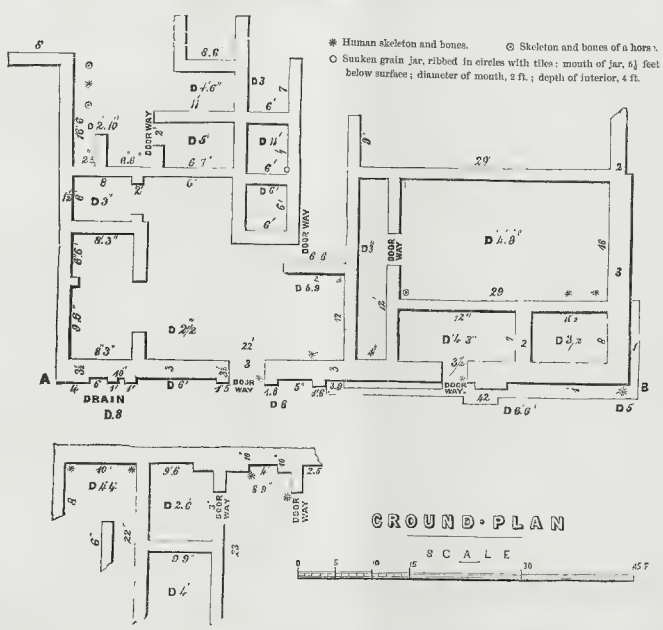
In our Journal of last week we illustrated some of the relics found by Mr. Bellasis in the ruined city of Brahmunabad. We now engrave a general view of the site of the city. The most prominent object is the remains of a high tower of brickwork standing isolated on a large heap of ruins. This may have been the citadel on one of those circular towers such as are seen in Sind to this day in the forts of Hyderabad and Omercote.

The present appearance of the city is a vast mass of ruins, forming irregular mounds or hillocks, as shown in our drawing, with here and there open spaces or squares, evidently the bazaars and market-places. The musjid on the left is a modern edifice erected by a faqueer or devotee, who has selected one of the mounds, and thereon fixed his abode and raised his flagstaff amid this scene of solitude and desolation. He is an ascetic of a peculiar sect. He ministers both to Mussulmans and to Hindoos, and the followers of both religions reverence him, and give him alms and charity.

Brahmunabad, in the seventh and eighth centuries, is described as a fortified and populous city containing 14,000 bastions, a tenab distant from each other. It is supposed to have been destroyed by an earthquake about the year A.D. 1020. The fort walls which surround the city and many of the bastions are still distinctly visible. These walls are nearly four miles in circumference, and within this area are the ruins of a city once densely populated. On the eastern side is the dry bed of a river, said to have been one of the old courses of the Indus. The site of the city, protected by its fortified walls and its slightly-elevated position, is preserved from the influence of the inundation. The ruins are all above the general surface of the country, and have not been submerged. Viewed from the plain at some distance, the ruins present the appearance of a range of low undulating hills.

The second Engraving shows the ground plan, and the third the front elevation of one of the houses excavated by Mr. Bellasis, which he thus describes:—

We selected for excavation a heap of ruins standing on the verge of the principal bazaar or square. We had not commenced many minutes before we came upon the edge of a wall: clearing it, we soon came upon a cross wall, and then upon another, and another, until a house with a variety of rooms began fast to take shape, and disclose its proportions. We had not dug two feet before we came to quantities of bones, and at that, and greater depths, skeletons were so numerous that it was hardly possible to dig a powra (a large hoe) full of earth without bringing up particles of bones. As far as I could judge, many were undeniably human bones, and others those of cattle and horses. The human bones were chiefly found in doorways, as if the people had been attempting to escape, and others in the corners of the rooms. Many of the skeletons were in a sufficiently perfect state to show the position the body had assumed: some were upright, some recumbent, with their faces down, and some crouched in a sitting posture. One in particular, I remember, finding in a doorway: the man had evidently been rushing out of his house, when a mass of brickwork had, in its fall, crushed him to the ground, and there his bones were lying extended full length, and the face downwards. These bones, on exposure to the atmosphere, mostly crumbled to dust, and it was very difficult to obtain anything but fragments. But in excavating you often obtain a good section of the skeleton, and thereby can easily tell the position of the body. In one of the rooms I found a large grain jar, ribbed in circles: its mouth was arched over with brickwork. I at first took it for a well, but afterwards discovered it to be a sunken grain jar. The diameter of its mouth was two feet, and inside it was empty for four feet, the bottom portion being filled with mould, possibly the decomposed remains of the grain.



* Human skeleton and bones.
⊙ Skeleton and bones of a horse.
○ Sunken grain jar, ribbed in circles with tiles: mouth of jar, 5½ feet below surface; diameter of mouth, 2 ft.; depth of interior, 4 ft.
DOOR WAY
DRAIN
D.8
A
B GROUND-PLAN SCALE

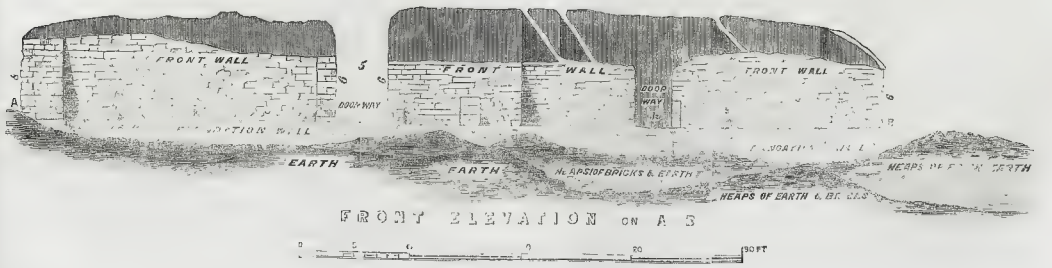
GROUND PLAN OF ONE OF THE HOUSES EXCAVATED AT BRAHMUNABAD.



FRONT ELEVATION OF HOUSE AT BRAHMUNABAD.

TOWN AND TABLE TALK ON LITERATURE, ART, &c.

WHILE travelling northwards last week we had the pleasure of seeing, by the particular courtesy of the committee, the Art-Treasures Exhibition Building at Manchester which Prince Albert is to open in person on Tuesday, the 5th of May. As we approached this temple of the arts we were particularly struck with the unpretending character of the building. It is something more than a rough shell for so sweet a kernel. It is not a bandbox; it is not a barn. We must describe it as "wit" has always been defined, that is, by something which is not. Well, it is not the Louvre as restored by Napoleon III., but it will prove a Louvre as filled by Napoleon I. It is not a Hyde-park Exhibition Building of 1851; it is not a Sydenham Crystal Palace of 1854; it is not a South Kensington piece of corduroy construction, nor a Bridgewater Gallery, nor a Fitzwilliam Museum—both so badly lighted; but a suitable, and therefore sensible, erection for what it is meant to contain as an exhibit to the best advantage. It does not arrest attention, nor does it provoke criticism. In this respect it is like a really well-dressed person: you do not see that the person is really well-dressed until you begin to look minutely, and then you see that the eye was satisfied because there was nothing on which the eye could rest with particular pleasure, or with the least appearance of dissatisfaction. As we entered (a more courteous committee it would be, perhaps, difficult to assemble north of Trent), we confess to an expressed utterance of delight at the general lighting of the building, so especially adapted as it appears to be to the wants of the works of art it is designed to contain. We were pleased, too, with the paper selected—a kind of neutral green, with a modest but appropriate pattern—on which Mr. Agnew's noble loan of £5000 worth of pictures told with admirable advantage on the day the building was first placed upon its trial. We may add, that three heads have been at work in this building: that Messrs Young, of London and Edinburgh, have been the contractors; that Mr. William Dredge has been the engineer throughout; and that Mr. Edward Salomons has been the advising architect to the committee in all architectural and decorative details.

Easter week in London will open with an attraction. We are in want of attractions. That real hero of the East, William Russell, will supply the attraction required by delivering, we believe in Willis's Rooms, his first lecture on his personal experiences in the Crimea. If Mr. Russell speaks as well as he writes he will prove an attractive lecturer. Many will subscribe to his course it is said of four lectures —out of liking for the lecturer who has rendered so much public service past and present; many will attend out of curiosity, some few from dislike; but we think he is sure of a large, a well-informed, and at attentive audience.

And so we are to lose the only fountain in London that really did its work, and was a pleasant fountain withal, rich with many dramatic associations. Yes, the Middle Templars have determined to erect a Library and Lecture Hall on the site of the Middle Temple fountain. The Benchers have chosen Mr. H. R. Abraham as their architect, and the new buildings will be "in the Gothic style of the fifteenth century." The Inner Temple Church and the Middle Temple Hall are the only buildings of consequence, and both are good, in the Temple as it stands. Yet there is merit in Mr. Sydney Smirke's river-side additions to Paper-buildings, and we have little fear of Mr. Abraham's labours on so inviting a site as the Middle Temple Fountain. Yes, indeed, we shall miss that thin and not very lofty fountain which used to shame those flashy failures which the Works and Woods at Whitehall have placed in Trafalgar-square, and still seem to consider excellent taste.

Lord Ellesmere, it is said, will be best remembered by the rebuilding of Bridgewater-house. It is true he had a fine taste for art, and bought judiciously. He encouraged Delaroche, and he bought and gave to the nation the famous Chandos portrait of Shakspeare. He was Chairman, too, of the last Commission on the British Museum; but he was too easy, and by his inactivity the Commission were stopped of all public utility. He had a taste for letters, and would have made good figure a century back in any collection of Royal and noble authors. One Egerton was famous in King James I.'s reign for his friendship for living poets, and he left a fine library behind him; another Egerton has been immortalised by Milton's "Comus;" and a Henry Egerton lives in reputation as the father of inland navigation in England. The late Lord Ellesmere will not be readily forgotten.

Here's a new author among us!—ay, and a sensible one, moreover; a landlord withal; and known to thousands who would never suspect that he was addicted to English composition and printer's ink. "You cannot read me, my dear friend." we think we hear this new author say, offering his well-filled box of snuff, and praising the friend we had just parted from as "a dear, excellent good creature." We allude to Mr. John Green, the proprietor of Mr. Evans's Supper-rooms, who has just put forth a new edition of his "Handbook," containing three closely printed large octavo double-columned pages of "Odds and Ends about Covent-garden." By all means obtain this curiosity. It is full charged" with anecdote of every kind—most oddly put together; but containing matter of moment not to be found elsewhere. Mr. Green gathers indiscriminately; and to have lived in Covent-garden at once exalts an inhabitant into a hero. There are numerous passages that lead to nothing, and some that tell you nothing; and to some of these our dear old vintner adds, "More anon." We have, therefore, a promise of something more; and right glad are we to learn that this is the case. Mark, especially, the curious passage about Button's Coffee-house:—

"On Sunday morning died, after three days' illness, Mr. Button, who had long kept Button's Coffee house, in Russell street, Covent-garden, a very noted place for wits, being the place where the Lyon produced the famous Tatlers and Spectators, written by the late Mr Secretary Addison and Sir Richard Steele, Knt., which works will transmit their names with honour to posterity.—See the Daily Advertiser for Tuesday, October 8th, 1719."

We observe that Mr. H. Ottley has announced an illustrated lecture, "At Home with the Old Masters," to be given at the Marylebone Literary and Scientific Institution on Wednesday evening next. It will be a sketch of the history of painting in Italy, from the first dawn of the revival in the thirteenth century down to the time of the Carracci, and will be illustrated by examples after the various masters. The subject is an extremely interesting one in connection with the present movement, and the Great Art Exhibition about to be opened at Manchester.

MR. DITTY.—(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)—In your last week's impression, under the head of "Board of Trade Returns," you state that the duty on malt is 2s. per bushel, and not per cent. As this may mislead some of your numerous readers you will perhaps state that the duty is 2s 7d. and five per cent. R. JACKSON, Inland Revenue, Ash Street, Feb. 21, 1857.

PRESENTATION OF PLATE TO COLONEL THE HONOURABLE HENRY BOYLE BERNARD.—On the anniversary (Feb. 2nd) of the embodiment of the 87th South Cork Light Infantry Militia, a deputation from the officers of the regiment met at the Imperial Hotel, Cork, to present to their Colonel, the Hon. H. B Bernard, two elegantly-chased silver cups and stands ornamented with flowers and medallions, and bearing the following inscription: "Presented to Colonel the Honourable Henry Boyle Bernard, commanding 87th South Cork Light Infantry, by the Officers of his Regiment, as a sincere token of their esteem and regard."

"BURGLARY AND FIRE ALARUM."

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

YOUR description of the "Burglary and Fire Alarum" in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of Saturday last recalls to my memory that when I was a boy, about twenty-six years since, an old man called upon my father with a small model of a similar apparatus, and invited him to see a full-sized one at his house. From what I saw of the model, and my father's description of the thing itself, the construction and operation were as follows:

A wooden frame, surmounted by a brass lion's head, was fixed to the wall of a bed-room. The frame contained an alarum and a number of ivory telltales, which latter were entirely concealed so long as everything was right. If an attempt entered through the street door the first effect was to cause the alarum-bell to ring, an electric light to spring out of the lion's mouth, and a label, engraved "Thieves at the street-door!" was exposed to view in the wood frame. There were some thirty or forty different labels, such as "Fire in the nursery!" "Thieves at the dining-room windows!" &c., &c., so as to show at once the precise spot requiring attention.

From an old memorandum-book of my father I find that the inventor was Mr. J. Darby, of 51, Gee-street, Goswell-street. I remember also stating that he had patented the thing, and that the first door the

NEW BOOKS, &c.

RENEWAL OF THE BANK CHARTER.
ANNALS of BRITISH LEGISLATION. Part 10, to be issued immediately, will contain Abstracts of Reports from, and evidence before, the Secret Committees of the Houses of Lords and Commons appointed in 1847 to inquire into the causes of the distress among the Commercial Classes, and how far it has been affected by the laws regulating the issue of Bank Notes payable on demand.

The Houses of Lords and Commons having ordered that the above Reports be reprinted, it is believed the "publication of the analysis of their contents will prove of particular interest to the Commercial World.

ANNALS of BRITISH LEGISLATION.
Edited by Professor LEONE LEVI.
Is a Condensed and Classified Summary of Parliamentary and other Public Papers. Issued post-free to Subscribers only.
Annual subscription £2 2s., payable in advance, for which not less than 1000 pages, super-royal 8vo, will be given.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill

MRS. CASKELL'S MEMOIRS OF CURRER BELL.
Just ready, in 2 vols. post 8vo, with a Portrait,
THE LIFE of CHARLOTTE BRONTE.
Author of "Mary Barton," "North and South"
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

THE PRACTICAL MECHANIC'S JOURNAL, No. 158, MARCH 1, 1857, 1s., price 1s., completing Vol. [illegible]. CONTENTS.—A large Copperplate Engraving of Crawford's Mechanical Washer for Manufacturing Purposes—Fifty Wood Engravings and Thirty-two Quarto Pages of Letterpress, with Original Articles on Inventive Property Mechanical Warrants for Inventions and Discoveries—Law of Patents in Sweden Difference of Action of Self-forming Machine—The Earl of Caithness's Protractor—Mr. Lady's Improvements in Parabolic Reciprocal Governors—Mr. Kell's Improvements in Steam Engines—Mr. Sharp's Improvements in Machinery for Cutting Screws—Mr. Thomson's Improvements in Machinery for Cutting Screws—Mr. Thomson's Improvements in Machinery for Making Screws—Mr. Clay's Improvements in Machinery for Making Screws—Mr. Clay's Improvements in Machinery for Making Screws—Mr. Clay

"THE DEAD RABBIT."
PAINTED BY J. CLARK.

FROM THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

We have engraved this picture in order the more easily to call attention to a promising little painting which, in the distraction of the general exhibition, might possibly be overlooked. It contains indications of that simplicity of feeling and quiet sympathy with the joys and sorrows of boyhood which is so characteristic of Mulready. It bears some resemblance, also, in its handling to the style of the great painter; that is to say, the effect is gained by an amount of stippling which leaves a certain illusive indistinctness, or "muzziness" if you will.

The story is too simple and obvious to need description. The artist has, however, so successfully rendered the expression of the boys' regret for the fate of their favourite that we can scarcely refrain from testifying our sympathy with their simple grief; especially as their disappointment must be so much increased to find that poor "bunny" will no more be able to nibble any of the fresh green fodder they have provided with such solicitude, and so plentifully. There is a touch of humour, though, in the way in which the bigger boy is holding up the rabbit. In order to ascertain if their pet be really quite dead, he holds it up by the ears in the most unceremonious and boylike manner possible. Indeed as we have forgotten much of our boyish experience, we should suspect that boys in general have a theory that rabbits are provided with particularly long ears wholly and solely in order that they may be suspended by them. Boys are prone also to try the same suspensory experiment in natural history with the conveniently loose integument of the back of the dog's neck, and some of the more mischievous even with the tempting bushy tail of a cat or pussy. And this reminds us that kindness to dumb animals—such as the pleasing specimen we have in our picture—is by no means an invariable trait in the character of boys; on the contrary, they have unhappily established a character for cruelty almost as much as for mischief. Some of this latent propensity will, no doubt, manifest itself even in these boys, and be vented on that culprit cur when they discover him sneaking under the hutch with such a very cool-seeming criminal and, if we may be excused the solecism—"hangdog" expression.

"THE DEAD RABBIT"—PAINTED BY J. CLARK.—FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION IN SOUTH INDIA.

The magnificent example of the Great Exhibition of 1851 appears to have reached every portion of the civilised world; and in many distant lands to have been nobly imitated. We have frequently recorded and illustrated these beneficial results, and by the aid of an obliging Correspondent we have now the gratification of adding to the number the Industrial and Agricultural Exhibition at Coimbatore, in the Madras Presidency, South India.

Our Correspondent writing from Coimbatore, Dec. 22, says: "The Madras Government, with its usual most laudable tendency to progress, has this year sanctioned the holding of these Exhibitions throughout most of the districts in the presidency. As it was a total novelty here, the wildest reports gained credence among the natives. While some imagined that the ulterior object was to facilitate forming an estimate for raising their taxes, a wilder notion prevailed that the destruction of caste was aimed at; and that when the crowd was collected in the building, an insect would be let out of a box, and that whomsoever it alighted he would from that moment lose all his privileges of caste. In spite, however, of these rumours, the Exhibition proved a great success.

"On the 1st of December the building was finally opened, and the collector, Mr. L. R. Thomas, delivered an appropriate speech, in the language of the district, explaining the objects of the Exhibition.

"The principal building was 300 feet long by 77 feet broad. It was a complete cocoanut palace. The pillars that supported the building were the stems of the tree, and the roof and walls were composed of its leaves. At one end of the building was a long dais, in which the Europeans and the better class of natives were ranged. This was adorned in the most gorgeous Oriental style. In the centre a fountain threw up its refreshing jet. Down the four sides were placed long tables on which were ranged the produce of industry. Round the pillars were clusters of the gram of India, bending with their heavy ears; round others clustered the sugar-cane and the banana; others were ornamented with the spoils of the field—the horns of the bison, the antlers of the elk, and enormous skulls and tusks of the elephant, with innumerable skins of tigers, cheetahs, bears, &c.

"The Exhibition lasted four days. Three days the crowd had admission, and the fourth day was devoted to the native ladies, whose prejudices will not allow of their appearing in public. Sub-committees were appointed on all the various classes, and a large sum was disbursed in prizes. The impression created has been most favourable; and, no doubt, we may expect a much larger competition on a future occasion. The plan is well calculated to develop the resources of the country."

THE INDUSTRIAL AND AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITION AT COIMBATORE, MADRAS PRESIDENCY

FASHIONS FOR MARCH.

FASHIONS FOR MARCH.

THE newest Parisian fashions manifest a decided approximation to the style of dress which prevailed during the reigns of Louis XV and Louis XVI. The make and the trimmings of dresses, the style of arranging the hair, the designs for setting jewellery—all are accurately copied from pictures of the date above mentioned. In short, there is quite a rage for the style Louis XV and the style Louis XVI.

Pearls were never worn in greater profusion than at the present time. Nets formed of strings of pearls, and just sufficiently large to inclose the torsade of hair at the back of the head, are favourite head-dresses. These nets are edged round by pearl fringe, and at each side and at the back are tassels of pearl. In front a cordon of pearls is passed between the bandeaux of hair. The same style of head-dress has a very elegant effect when composed of blue beads (imitation of turquoise), or of blue beads and pearls mixed together.

Another favourite coiffure adapted for Court costume, or for very full evening dress, consists of loops of gold beads or of pearls at the back of the head, and two plumes of ostrich or marabout feathers fixed at each side, and waving gracefully over the nape of the neck. With this head-dress, as with the nets just described, strings of gold beads or pearls may be passed between the bands of front hair. Two or three rows of gold chain are sometimes worn as bandeaux on the head, and the effect is at once simple and becoming.

In regard to the make of the corsages of dresses suited to mourning and out-door costume, the newest style is that shown in our Illustration (Fig. 2). For the skirts of silk dresses flounces are indispensable. The bonnet shown in the Illustration just mentioned is also one of the newest and most approved types of fashion. The cloaks most in favour are those made of dark-coloured velvet—brown, dark green, and violet are favourite hues. The form of these velvet cloaks is frequently circular, others have ends of moderate length in front; very broad silk fringe and passementerie of diversified designs are the trimmings usually employed for velvet cloaks.

Some of the newest evening dresses are remarkable alike for richness of material and for the splendid and tasteful style of their trimming and ornament. A robe of garnet-colour velvet has recently been made with a demi-train. On each side of the skirt there is a beautiful arabesque design formed of gold soutache, intermingled with pearls. The corsage is ornamented in a corresponding manner. The sleeves are slit along their whole length, and the opening is confined at intervals by gold ornaments. The under sleeves of tulle, in small puffs, descend to the wrists, where they are confined by richly jewelled bracelets. The coiffure to be worn with this dress consists of a gold net, enriched with sequins, and on one side, just behind the ear, a large white rose.

FUNCHAL, MADEIRA.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

We may here describe a very becoming Swiss costume recently worn at a fancy-dress ball. The skirt was of pink silk, with side trimmings of black velvet, and a large bow of black velvet fastened on each of the pockets. The corsage, of white muslin, was high to the throat, and entirely covered with rows of narrow black velvet ribbon, crossing each other so as to form a lozenge pattern. Across the shoulders bretelles of broad pink ribbon. The sleeves, of white muslin, descending to the elbows, were in the bell form, trimmed with pink ribbon and black velvet, and gathered up in front of the arm by large black velvet bows. The plaits of hair, which descended very low on the neck, were intermingled with bows of pink ribbon and black lace.

Tulle, crape, or tarlatane, are the materials most generally employed for ball dresses. For trimming, a beautiful kind of flowered ribbon has been introduced, which is very effective for edgings, flounces, or for finishing the double or triple skirts, &c. These flowered ribbons also admit of tasteful arrangement on the corsages and sleeves.

Floral designs are those at present most in favour for setting jewellery. Nothing can exceed the beauty of some of the new designs of this kind recently introduced, and intended for parures to be worn in Court costume or full evening dress. An eminent jeweller has recently completed a circlet for the head, consisting of lilies formed of diamonds, pansies composed of sapphires, and fuchsias of rubies; the stamens are formed of fine pearls.

Châtelaines are regaining fashionable favour; but those recently introduced are somewhat different in style from the same kind of ornament worn a few years ago. The most elegant consist of two long chains of gold, confined together by a slide set with jewels or beautifully enamelled. From one of these chains is suspended a watch, in the back of which is frequently set a valuable cameo. To the other chain may be affixed a jewelled cassolette, or any other trinket which taste may dictate.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Fig. 1. Ball dress of white tulle, over a slip of white glacé. The skirt is formed of three double lapes of tulle, gathered up in festoons by chains of pearl. The corsage is draped, and in the centre there is a bouquet of white camellias. The sleeves, which are exceedingly short, are formed of a single puff and frill; and on each shoulder there is an agraffe of pearls. Head-dress pearls, and blue and white marabouts. Necklace, bracelets, and earrings of pearl

Fig. 2. Dress of velvet, of a beautiful hue of brown, at present very fashionable in Paris, where it is designated la nuance Teba, in honour of the Empress, who, it will be remembered, bore prior to her marriage the title of Countess de Teba. The skirt of the dress is perfectly plain, without trimming of any kind; but it is made exceedingly full, and is sufficiently long behind to form a short train. The corsage is high, and has a round turn-over collar. The basque presents a novelty; being set on in large box plaits round the waist—a style which, be it observed, is suitable only to a very slender figure. The sleeves have a flat piece on the shoulder, and below it a puff and a broad frill. The under sleeves consist of large bouillons of plain muslin, with worked cuffs turned back, and the wrists are encircled by coral bracelets. A small round collar of worked muslin turns over the velvet collar of the dress. The bonnet, of emerald-green velvet, is shaped so as to form a small point in front of the forehead. In the inside of the brim a fall of black lace slightly veils the cap. The outside of the bonnet has also a trimming of black lace, which is carried round the curtain at the back. At each side there are three small black and green ostrich feathers. Strings of green velvet ribbon. Under trimming, bouquets of geranium.

Fig. 3 (Bridal Costume). Double skirt of white satin, richly trimmed with Brussels lace. The lace is disposed in a novel and highly effective style. It is set in pyramidal groups, each formed of horizontal rows of lace gathers, in slight fulness. On the front of the lower skirt are two bows and ends of broad white satin ribbon, and a ceinture of the same ribbon is fastened in a bow, and long, flowing ends in front of the waist. The corsage, which is high to the throat, is trimmed with horizontal rows of lace and white silk fancy buttons. Spanish sleeves, loose at the ends, and entirely covered with rows of lace, one above another, with bows of white satin ribbon on the shoulders. Round the throat a small white lace collar and a veil of white tulle, edged with a broad hem, within which is a running of white ribbon. The bridal wreath is composed of orange blossom and jasmine.

Fig. 4. The dress of this sitting figure, which is only partially shown in our Engraving, is of pink tulle, with three broad flounces edged with fancy ribbon of a floral pattern. The head-dress consists of a wreath, or rather a narrow cordon, of pink flowers, which passes across the upper part of the head; and on each side there is a tuft of pink and white marabouts, fixed by pearl-headed Italian pins.

MADEIRA.

This beautiful island, so celebrated for the health-giving and restorative character of its climate, has recently been visited by an epidemic and scarcity of food, under the most afflicting circumstances. The visitation has, however, called forth the indefatigable exertions of many humane individuals, "whose benevolence has not only largely contributed to avert famine, but there is every prospect of its being the instrument of lasting benefit to the recipients and the Island of Madeira." Foremost in this "generous band" was the Rev. A. J. D. D'Orsey, whose friends, anxious to testify to him and to the inhabitants of the Island their interest in its prosperity, and their deep sense of Mr. D'Orsey's generous devotion to the cause of the sufferers from the late epidemic, have resolved to request his acceptance of a small fund, to which they have determined severally to contribute. They desire to offer to Mr. D'Orsey as a sincere though inadequate expression of esteem, and of their high appreciation not only of his recent benevolent exertions in this country, but of his present laborious and continued efforts to render the succour bestowed instrumental to the permanent benefit of the recipients.

Mr. T. Vernon Wollaston has kindly consented to act as treasurer, and subscriptions may be paid either directly to him, at 10, Hereford street, Park-lane, or to his account, "for the Rev. A. J. D. D'Orsey," at Messrs Martin and Co.'s, 68, Lombard street, London.

The subscriptions already received are No. 1, £20, No. 2, £25, No. 3, £5, No. 4, £5, No. 5, £5; No. 6, £5.

The details of the means by which so much good has been effected by Mr. D'Orsey, and his co-adjutors in the good work, are worthy of record. Taking charge of the parish in which he lived, and having obtained a list of the dead, of the widows and orphans, and of the families who had suffered from the late epidemic, Mr. D'Orsey caused it to be announced to the people that they would receive applications every day at four o'clock. Accordingly, he sat with a coadjutor at his gate, and on a sheet entered the names, description, number of adult residents, &c. This took ten days. Meanwhile, the cottages were visited, and many of them were found to be in a wretched condition. It was then announced that no one should receive alms until the whole house had been completely cleansed with whitewash and quicklime all nuisances removed, and all sanitary laws complied with. This visitation was a work of time, for there are 350 cottages in the parish, and only thirty could be efficiently visited in one day. Next came the distribution of beds, blankets, shirts, rice, tea, sugar, wine, &c. The rice was issued weekly, one pound for each member of a family; the parish allowance was 3 cwt. per week, or 3-5 cottages represented fully 1000 persons. Many families were found living on less than one penny per day per person; most of these living but one meal, and that a small portion of Italian corn, with chopped cabbage. To the infirm were given soups made from the preserved meats sent to the island; and to those reduced by suffering was given a small quantity of port wine. Some of the poor creatures were still weak, pale, and tottering from the effects of famine, but the majority, though very poor, regain their strength thanks to the wonderful climate, to an abundant crop of the sweet potato, to a fine harvest, and to the truly seasonable relief from England. We need scarcely add that the humane and benevolent efforts of those who have signalised themselves in this great work of charity are entitled to special distinction by some testimony which should mark such generous conduct for imitation.

The sanitary importance of Madeira, as a change from the trying cold of England to a milder atmosphere, has led to the publication of several works more or less descriptive of the island. The most valuable and complete book upon the subject is, we believe, a volume entitled "Madeira: its Climate and Scenery: a Handbook for Invalid and other Visitors." By Robert White. Published by Adam and Charles Black, Edinburgh. Of this work a new edition has just appeared, in great part rewritten and enlarged by Mr. Yate Johnson, who has resided several years in the island. Thus, the chapters on Natural History, on Physical Geography, Agriculture, and Gardening, the Government, General Statistics, and the Excursions into different parts of the Island are entirely new; and large additions have been made to the chapter on Meteorology. As a specimen of the work we may quote the following spirited description of the View engraved upon the preceding page—the Bay of Funchal:

Let us cast our eyes over the scene visible from the bosom of the bay. Lying at the very base of the hills, and having a southern aspect, the city stretches itself along the margin of the bay, resting each extremity on a shoulder supported by a cliff. Here and there is a pier or a tower, but on the whole the public buildings are few and inconspicuous. The atmosphere around them, however, is clear and smokeless, and the houses, rising as they recede from the shore, are brilliantly white. Many of them run up to a great height above their bases, to afford the merchants a look-out over the bay. The governor's residence is a large but plain structure, seen across one of the public parks. Of the forts, the largest occupies a commanding position on a height behind the city, overlooking the convent of Santa Clara; another is perched on a black insulated rock that stands bristling with cannon and flagstaves a gunshot from the land; and a third crowns the Pontinha, a rocky point that stretches from the land near the Loo rock. In this neighbourhood a grove of cypresses near the edge of the cliff indicates one of the cemeteries of the Portuguese. A tall column on the beach, the substantial Custom house, another public walk planted with trees, and the fort of Sant Iago, stand out from the front line of houses; while further to the east the new Lazaretto is seen at the mouth of a gorge. Numerous neat houses in terraced gardens, or upon points of rock, dot the surrounding slopes; and at the upper limit of the inhabited district, 1900 feet above the sea, the eye is caught by an edifice with a domed tower at each side. This is the church of Our Lady of the Mountain, where an image is lodged which is the object of many a devout pilgrimage on the part of the people below, for it has the credit, especially amongst mariners, of having wrought divers miraculous deeds. The mountains above rise, bare and rocky, to the height of between 3000 and 4000 feet; a belt of chestnut-trees and a few plantations of pine alone breaking the barrenness of the acclivities; and these, by the illusion of distance, appear only like patches of brushwood. Numerous ridges indicate the course of ancient lava streams, whilst deep ravines and their way into the heart of the hills and expose their precipitous sides to the day. Bringing our eyes down again to the shore we perceive how shallow is the indentation to which the name of bay is given. Between Brazen Head and Cruz Point, its two extremities, about five miles and a half apart, the line of coast forms an easy curve inwards to the depth of about three-quarters of a mile. The cliffs, especially those on the east, are high and of a sombre colour. They look sternly down upon the ocean, and seem to throw glances of defiance on the waves as they rush to their feet and strive to undermine them.

Funchal, the chief town of Madeira, is situate in lat. 32 deg 37 min. 45 sec. north, and long. 16 deg. 55 min. 30 sec. west from Greenwich. Consequently noon at Funchal occurs 1h. 7m. 43s. after noon at Greenwich. It is distant by ship's course about 1332 geographical miles from Southampton, 1164 miles from the Lizard Point, 536 miles from Lisbon, 625 miles from Gibraltar, 90 miles from the coast of Africa, and 260 miles from Santa Cruz, in Teneriffe. The mean rise and fall of the tide at Madeira is seven feet; the variation of the compass in 1843 was 21 deg. west.

THE PLANET JUPITER.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

DURING the present opposition Jupiter has approached nearer to the Earth than since 1834, and has been otherwise favourably situated for telescopic observation in these latitudes. The irregularities in the form and darkness of the belts have been very remarkable at times, as will be seen from three sketches of the planet which I inclose, and which were taken under favourable circumstances with the Northumberland twenty-feet telescope. The first figure represents Jupiter on

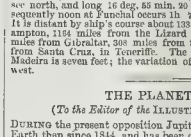

FIG 1 SEPT. 16, AT 9.45 P.M.

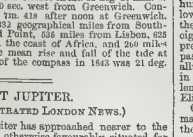

FIG. 2 SEPT. 30, AT 11.50 P.M.!

September 16, at 9h. 45 m. p.m. the principal belt had a waved appearance; but the one immediately below it was of nearly uniform breadth and shade. On September 30, shortly before midnight—at which time the planet should have turned nearly the same face towards the Earth as on the former occasion the appearance was as represented in Fig. 2, the belt north (or apparently below the Equator) being broken up into irregular fragments of different degrees of shade, and one very dark spot being particularly apparent. The great belt was nearly as broad though not so uniform as before, and there were a number of semiluminous spots visible along its surface. A narrow belt and two broken belts preserved nearly the same dimensions and position as on the former occasion. On Oct. 1, at 9h. 42 m.

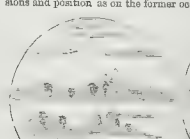

FIG 3. OCT. 1, AT 9.42 P.M.

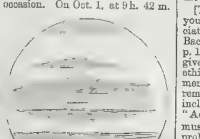

FIG. 4.—APPEARANCE IN 1855

p.m., when a different part of the surface of the planet was turned towards the earth, the appearance was still more irregular (Fig 3). The lower edge of the principal belt was nearly straight, the upper much carved and indented. The belt below appeared like a confused mass of small islands, and a number of narrow bands arranged parallel to the Equator were scattered over the disc. Two very bright spots were visible just above the irregular edge of the principal belt.

During the opposition of 1855 the appearance was equally singular, although generally more constant (Fig. 4). The whole of the northern portion of the planet was as dark as the belts are commonly seen, whilst the opposite hemisphere was quite bright. Three faint belts were visible

The above figures represent the planet as viewed in an inverting telescope. A power of 350 was generally used. J. BIRD.

PRESERVED MEAT AND VEGETABLES FROM RUSSIA.—The Russian Government has just granted extensive privileges to a company established by M. Chollet and others, for preserving and exporting, on a great scale, large quantities of meat and vegetables produced in the plains of the Dnieper. At present the increasing scarcity in this and other countries has, in certain seasons, been absolutely thrown away, on account of the difficulty of bringing it to any market, and the absence of any means for its preservation. A number of capitalists in St. Petersburg and Moscow have lately taken up the plan devised by M. Chollet, to make a profitable use of the enormous amount of alimentary substances which southern Russia would supply, and which might go far to relieve the distress and anxiety now felt in France about the increasing scarcity of food. A company, having a capital of twelve millions of francs, has been formed for the purpose, and it is hoped contracted to supply the Russian Government at its first contract, with 12 million rations of compressed vegetables every year for the next ten years. At a late meeting of the Paris shareholders M. Chollet exhibited some excellent à-la-mode beef preserved by the process which it is intended to apply, and stated that a sufficient quantity for an ample dinner for one man could be sold for 15 centimes (three halfpence). Colegnani's Messenger.

Memorabilia,

LITERARY, ANTIQUARIAN, SCIENTIFIC, AND ARTISTIC.

"A little chink may let in much light."—OLD PROVERB.

VISIT OF THE DUKE OF WURTEMBERG-MUMPELGARD TO JAMES I., IN 1610.

AMONG the Additional Manuscripts in the British Museum is a small thin quarto, containing the autograph diary, written in French, of Hans Jacob Wurmsser von Vendenheym, who accompanied Louis Frederic, Duke of Wurtemberg-Mumpelgard, in his diplomatic mission to England in 1610, on the part of the united Protestant German Princes. This diary extends from 16th March to 24th July of that year, and affords brief but interesting notices of the places visited by the Duke, both in coming and returning. He embarked from Flushing (where an English garrison was stationed) on Tuesday, 12th April, and arrived at Gravesend on the following day, where he was waited on by Sir Lewis Lewkanor, Master of the Ceremonies, and the next day conveyed in the Royal barges to London, "au logis de l'Aigle noir." On the 16th the Duke had his audience of the King, who received him sitting under a "des" of cloth of gold, accompanied by the Queen, the Prince (Henry), the Duke of York (afterwards Charles I.), the Princess (Madame Arabella Scuart), and the young Prince of Brunswick, at that time also on a visit to James. Several days were afterwards spent in receiving and paying visits, and on the 23rd the Feast of St. George was kept with the usual ceremonies. On the 30th we have an entry of some interest to Shakspearean readers—"S. E. alla au Globe, lieu ordinaire ou l'on joue les Commedies; y fut representé l'histoire du More de Venise."

We know from the evidence produced by Mr. Collier that "Othello" appeared as early as 1602; and this entry proves that it retained its popularity in 1610. On the following day, 1st May, is another entry of scientific interest:—

S. E. alla au parc d'Elthon (Eltham) pour veoir la perpetuum mobile. L'inventeur a appelle Cornelius Trebel, natif d'Alkmar, homme fort blond et beau, et d'une très douce façon, fait un contraire des esprites de la sorte. Nous y vismes aussy des Esphettes, qui jouent d'elle mesmes.

I have not met with any mention of this philosopher in other papers of the period; but it is certain that in 1631 he published a work in Latin, entitled "De quintessentia, et Epistola ad Jacobum Regem de perpetui mobili inventione." No copy of this work seems to be preserved in the libraries of the British Museum or the Bodleian, but possibly some of the readers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS may know of one.

The King had previously left London (on the 24th) to go to his hunting-box in Northamptonshire; and on the 4th May the Duke followed him and slept at Ware, at the inn called the Stag, where, says the author of the Diary, "Je fus couché dans une lict de plume de cigne, qui avoit huict paids de largeur." This is, perhaps, the earliest precise notice yet found of this famous bed, and it serves to illustrate the passage in Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night," act iii. s. 2, in which he alludes to the "Bed of Ware." This bed still exists, and is engraved in Shaw's "Ancient Furniture," where it is stated to be 10 ft. 9 in. in length, by 10 ft. 9 in. in width, and to have been made in the reign of Elizabeth

On leaving Ware the Duke proceeded to Royston, Cambridge, Newmarket, and Thetford, where he rejoined the King on the 7th, and the next morning the Duke went to church with his Majesty, as it was the day "que sa Majesté observe infaillablement pour estre celuy de sa delivrance de l'assasinat des Contes de Gaury (Gowry)." This is a remarkable passage, since other authorities give the 5th of August as the anniversary of this conspiracy. On the same day James took his guests with him to hunt the hare (as a suite amusement), and they saw a hawk seize some dotrels, "oiseau qu'on laisse prendre par une estrange manière," and also the trained cormorants, which, at the word of command, plunged into the water and brought up eels and other fish, which they, on a sign given, permitted quelque "chose bien merveilleuse à voir." On the same day, also, arrived the news of the assassination of Henry IV. of France, which took place on the 14th May. The news, however, did not prevent the King from hunting the hare the next day; and after dinner the whole party returned towards London, which they reached on the 10th. On the 25th the Duke of Wurtemberg left London and travelled by Rochester and Canterbury to Dover, whence, on the 29th, he embarked with his suite, and arrived safely at the port of Veer, in Zealand, on the following day.—F. MADDEN.

NOTES.

SHAKSPEARE AND ARISTOTLE.—Shakspeare, in "Troilus and Cressida," represents Priam quoting from Aristotle the remark that young men are not good learners of moral philosophy. Omitting the anachronism, I wish to know whether your readers could suggest in what way Shakspeare can be supposed to have become acquainted with the fact that Aristotle does say so? Whatever he thought of Shakspeare's classical attainments, I suppose no one ever imagined that he had read the Ethics of the philosopher in which the sentiment occurs—τῆς πολιτικῆς οὐκ ἔστιν ἀκροᾶσις ἐφηβαίου ὁ νέος—B. I., c. iii, § 5). This is one of the most difficult treatises in the Greek language. Even at the present day there is hardly a single good translation of it to be found; and in the poet's time I much doubt whether there was any English translation, good or bad. Among those who profess a moderate acquaintance with literature in this age, I should like to know how many would ever have known it save through the medium of Shakspeare himself. LEX.

[The sentiment—put into the mouth of Hector, not of Priam—that young men are not good learners of moral philosophy once enunciated, would be readily adopted as an important truth, and Bacon ("Advancement of Learning," Works vol. I., p. 103; vol. IV., p. 106) has introduced it, assigning reasons differing from those given by Aristotle, who applies the notion to politics and not to ethics (Nichom. Eth. I., p. 1.) Shakspeare may have taken the sentiment, the reasons, and the error direct from Bacon. The error is remarkable, considering that it passed the eyes of several scholars, including Hobbes, who assisted Bacon to a Latin version of his "Advancement." If there be no error, then their text of Aristotle must have read ἡθικῆς, instead of πολιτικῆς, which, however, is not probable, since Aristotle repeats the same thought in his Politics (III., i. vii., 9.)]

QUERIES.

AN ENGLISHMAN WITH A WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN NAME.—The Hon. Mr. A. Poulett, son of the first Earl Poulett, was the godson of Queen Anne, and bore Christian name. Is there any similar instance of an Englishman being called by a woman's name?

MACKENZIE WALCOTT, M.A.

THE WORD CREE.—Can any of your readers inform me of the origin of the word "Cree"? It is used as a verb in Yorkshire, to designate the softening of rice, wheat, or other similar articles by water in the oven. I have looked in several dictionaries, and do not find the word, and I have asked the residents of several other counties and they did not know its origin, or indeed its meaning, never having heard it used before. I should also be glad to be informed if the word is used in any other county, and where?—F. H. F., Doncaster.

ANSWERS.

WHY, AND AT WHAT PERIOD WAS A MAN'S TRADE FIRST TERMED HIS "CALLING"?—An answer to the above query is given by Mr. Stanley, in a note on 1st Corinthians, vii., 20 "Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called." Mr. Stanley says, "From the Latin translation vocatio, of the Greek κλῆσις, has flowed the peculiar sense which the words "vocation," "calling," &c., have acquired in most European languages, as applied to professions and conditions of Life." (Stanley's "St. Paul's Ep. to Corinthians," vol. I., p. 130).—C. B H

"THE LOUNGER'S COMMON PLACE BOOK."—The editor of this work was Jeremiah Whitaker Newman. Some particulars of his life will be found in The Gentleman's Magazine for June, 1846, supplied by Dr. Wreford, of Bristol. J. K. R. W.

TEMPORA MUTANTUR, &c.—In reply to J. D., S. M. T., Halifax, and other correspondents, we beg to say that the words are—

Omnia mutantur, nos et mutamur in illis
Illa vices quasdam res habet, illa suas, and that they will be found in the "Delitiæ Posterum Germanorum," vol. i., p. 686.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

[illegible] the Earl of [illegible] to the motion of Lord Belhaven for papers connected with the negotiations of the grant supposed to be made by Queen Anne to the Darien Company, [illegible] the Imperial Majesty of England and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE DESERT ROUTE.

(Concluded from page 156.)

OUR friend the Turk has not proceeded many hundred yards on his homeward track before his charity is put to the test, and he falls in with a wearied old pilgrim, a native of Nazareth (engraved in last week's Number), one whose grey and venerable beard proclaims him but a sojourner for a few fleeting hours in this world of sorrow. The old man may well be proud of his citizenship. Abou Moosa proudly proclaims himself from Nazareth, but poverty had many years since scared him away from his beloved native village, and Beyrout has since been his home, and will eventually be his lone resting-place. The old man has grown blind with age, but he loves of a fine warm evening to be led forth to the roadside, where, seated on his accustomed stone in the quiet solitude, his soul seeks, by prayer, communion with that great founder of his faith who condescended to become his fellow-townsman, and with whom all Nazarenes may claim this high privilege up to this day. The Turk, though a bigoted Moslem, has a great veneration for the long, white, flowing beard of the old man of Nazareth (who, from his continually occupying one spot, is as well known in Beyrout as the Cadi or the Pacha himself is), and, descending from his horse, he places a small piece of money in the poor old fellow's hands, which he tells him is to buy a new pipe bowl with—for if we look narrowly into the picture we perceive that the pipe-stick alone remains.

KHAN NEAR NAHAR-EL-KELB, THE ANCIENT LYCUS, THREE LEAGUES FROM BEYROUT.

GIRL OF BEYROUT.

At a small distance from the Beyrout Gate, through which we pass in proceeding to Naher-el-Kelb, or the Dog River, is a public fountain at which, at stated hours of the day, all the pretty Beyrout-born lasses regularly assemble, ostensibly for the purpose of carrying home water, in reality to have a little chat about the shape and price of the new-fashioned nose-rings, and other like Syrian and Egyptian ornaments. The young lady who is reclining against the wall of the fountain, her water-pot resting on a stone against which she herself leans, is the daughter of a shopkeeper at Beyrout, of the Greek faith; she has many aspirants to her hand, both on account of her beauty and her money, and is probably turning over in her mind which to choose. Syrian ladies, let them be ever so wealthy, fetch and carry water till they get married, and even after marriage they perform many menial indoor offices. The girl in the picture is a fair specimen of the general run of Beyrout beauty: her features and hands are good, and so are her feet, though ensconced in those unseemly yellow shoes trimmed with red bows: she wears stockings, which is a certain indication at Beyrout of being well to do in the world; her dress is a chased-pattern Damascus silk, and the shawl round her waist is of Tripoli manufacture. A thin white muslin cloth is thrown over her cap and handkerchief in the arrangement of which Beyrout belles expend no little time: this muslin serves to envelop her face on the approach of any native gentleman, according to long-established usage; but she will let you or me approach, nothing fearing, and even offer us half of the apple that is concealed in the wide folds of her shawl; because, even in Beyrout, they know how to respect English gallantry and conduct. The approach of our friend the Turk scares her away, and as we have nothing more to see so attractive by the wayside, and the night is setting in dark, we will just peep in at the Khan by the wayside, near Maher-el-Kelb, and then get on board our boat and set sail for Latakia.

The Khan, as you perceive, is a wretched old affair, damp, and full of rubbish. Here, at a temporary charcoal stove, a poor coffegee is eternally making coffee for casual droppers-in; while his boy, in what was once a white skullcap, is handing the small cups to and from the guests. Two recent arrivals are seen partaking of this luxury. The horse is probably a joint-stock affair, the property of both, on which they perform their journeyings alternately the distinguishing sign of their intentions being the unloosening the shoes from the soles of their feet—a sure indication that the one means to walk and wishes the other to mount; as no peasant in Syria would ever be guilty of wearing his boots when on a journey. A Cyprus hen, and her newly-fledged chickens, are busily running to and fro in search of grubs; and the Arab Reis stalks in to tell us that wind and tide are favourable.

We have got to Latakia, how or when does not much signify. Here we are, in the main street, and a very extraordinary-looking place it is, too, if one were to judge by the badly-plastered walls and worse-shaped doorways. Not much is to be seen without; but, on the contrary, the interior of some of the houses in this street for instance, that very identical one near the black girl that is carrying the bag of wheat—have marble pavements, and princely apartments to boot. All is a scene of dilapidation in the streets. The earthquake of 1822 has left very many signs of its mighty strength and duration. The two handsomely-carved pillars on the right-hand side are what once constituted a magnificent mosque. Opposite to it, and, indeed, all the way down the streets, are places of timber carelessly run across from roof to roof, on which bits of old carpets and tattered old mats are thrown to exclude the fierce mid-day heat. At every twenty paces there is a coffee-shop, and loiterers lazily linger in this pestiferous neighbourhood, smoking their pipes, and inhaling the not very odoriferous smells from the numerous rubbish-heaps in the immediate vicinity. The minaret in the distance is on the outskirts of the town, and there the scenery is as picturesque and the air as pure as they are the reverse in this narrow and filthy thoroughfare.

LATAKIA.

STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS, AFRICANS, AND SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS

YESTERDAY week the Chairman of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, Colonel Sykes, accompanied by Captain Eastwick, paid an official visit for the inspection of this new Asylum; and expressed their entire satisfaction with the completeness of the arrangements, and perfect adaptation for the purposes for which it has been erected.

The first stone of this institution (which is situated in the West India Dock road, Limehouse) was laid by his Royal Highness Prince Albert on the 31st of May last, an Engraving of which ceremony appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of the 14th of June, 1856. Her Majesty and Prince Albert have taken a lively interest in the welfare of this institution, and have contributed liberally in aid of its funds.

The building is now finished, but the institution cannot be opened for want of funds. It is capable of accommodating 230 inmates, with apartments for superintendent, hospital, registry, shipping and secretary's offices, and, including lighting, warming, hot and cold baths and lavatories, has cost £8550, besides £1250 for the freehold of the site, and £270 for the remainder of the lease. The expenses of furniture, and of sundry necessary charges preparative to the opening of the Home, will amount altogether to £5000; so that the total cost will be £13,000. Towards this amount £6400 has been contributed.

The object of the institution is to offer to Indian sailors and other Orientals who come to England a comfortable and respectable lodging, with wholesome food, at a cost which shall render the institution self-supporting. Lodgers are to pay not less than eight shillings a week, for which they will be supplied with three meals a day, medical attendance, baths, washing, &c.; so that they will have no other necessary outlay but to furnish themselves with clothing, the means of doing which on the most reasonable terms will be also provided, by the establishment of a storeroom at the Home. In addition to these benefits, arrangements will be made to take charge of their money and other property, when desired; to make remittances to their families and friends; to render them advice, and afford them information, to protect them from imposition; to procure them employment in vessels; to present to all who can read, and desire it, a copy of the Holy Scriptures in their own language, and to provide means for instructing those who are willing to be taught in the truths of the Gospel, and in the English language.

"THE STRANGERS' HOME," WEST INDIA DOCK ROAD, LIMEHOUSE.

The president of this establishment is Sir E. N. Buxton, Bart., and the honorary secretaries are Lieut.-Colonel Hughes and Major Tudor Lavie.

Letters from several influential Indian gentlemen have been received, thanking the directors for the efforts they are making for the welfare of their countrymen who are brought to England; and when it is taken into consideration that, in the different sea-ports of India, in Ceylon, China, and Australia, comfortable homes for British seamen and others have been provided by parties residing on the spot, and in some cases assisted by the contributions of the natives, it is high time that such an institution as the Strangers' Home should be established in England, frequented as our ports have been for many years past by thousands of Asiatics and other natives of the East, of Africa, and of the Islands of the South Pacific.

LUNDHILL COLLIERY, BARNSLEY, THE SCENE OF THE RECENT EXPLOSION.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

COALPIT EXPLOSION AT LUND-HILL.

In our latest edition last week we gave a brief notice of the explosion, attended with great loss of life, which took place at noon on Thursday, at the Lund-hill Colliery, near Wombwell, on the South Yorkshire Railway. The pit, which is about 220 yards deep, belongs to Taylor and Co., and is worked by separate shifts of men night and day. The day-workers—about 200 altogether—descended at six o'clock in the morning. At twelve o'clock twenty-two of them, who reside near the pit, came up to dinner, the rest remaining to partake of that meal in the pit. Shortly afterwards a fearful explosion occurred, which shook the ground for a great distance around, and the frame in which the cage descended was blown to the top of the shaft and lodged in the gearing above the pit mouth. Numbers of men from neighbouring collieries flocked to render assistance, and on Thursday evening nineteen men had been drawn up alive. The interior of the pit was set on fire by the explosion, and the flames spread with such rapidity as to cut off all chance of reaching that part of the pit where the rest of the men (about 130) were supposed to be. Some idea of the fearful nature of the fire may be gathered when we state that the flames ascending the air-shaft, 220 yards deep, reached more than twenty yards above the top, illuminating the country for a distance around. Telegraphic messages were sent to Sheffield for a number of fire-engines, some of which soon arrived. The overlooker states that when he went round the pit before the day-men descended on Thursday morning all was then perfectly safe. The fire began to blaze from the air-shaft about four o'clock, and sent up an immense number of sparks and pieces of burning wood, which had a most terrible appearance. Several of the miners that came out alive were dangerously injured. One of them died on Saturday morning.

Between half-past four and five o'clock on Thursday afternoon a consultation was held between Mr. Cox and one of Messrs. Taylor and Co. and some of the leading mineral-viewers of the neighbourhood, as to making an attempt to explore the main road as far as possible. The general opinion was that imminent danger awaited those who might make the effort, while some thought there was a possibility of the risk not being great. But each stood there ready for the attempt; each volunteered, calmly and after consideration, to face a danger greater than that of most battle-fields. When the preparations had been completed Mr. Coe got into the cage, accompanied by Mr. Webster, of the Wombwell Main Colliery, and Mr. Maddison, of the Hoyland and Elsecar pits. They got to the bottom, and made their way to the south for 300 yards, doing all that was possible to make good the doors and stoppings that had been blown out, and thus partially to restore the ventilation.

They spent more than an hour and a half continuously in the burning mine. Their prolonged absence caused the greatest anxiety as to their fate; and the fears were much heightened by what occurred not long before the watched for signal from below was heard. For about that time the flames shot high up above the "cupola," bricks and shattered timbers were scattered far and near; the lurid glare spread over miles of country; and a broad, well-defined streak of soot and ashes was deposited across several of the adjoining fields, while the bank was covered with coal and wood-ashes. Those below knew nothing of what had occurred; those above attributed it to a second explosion, which had probably done immense damage to the works. There is no doubt that what we have described was coincident with the rapid extension of the flames, which placed the searchers in so much danger.

Another long and anxious consultation was held, and its result was a determination to cover with boards and puddling the mouths of the upcast and pumping shafts. At this time the level ground and the steep slope between Wombwell and the colliery were crowded; and when the determination became known it naturally staggered the hopeful and appalled to silence those who had scarcely dared to hope that yet many human beings might be got up alive. That the measure showed on the part of the proprietors, viewers, &c., a conviction that no hope could be entertained that any one below was alive, is true; but, even if such had not been their conviction, they believed that such a step was the most prudential; for it was felt that no search could be attempted while the fire raged, and that no one could get through the fire to the shaft, so as to escape; that nothing could be done until the fire was at least checked; and that it could not be checked until the ingress of air was prevented. The effect of stopping up the two shafts was soon seen in the disappearance of flames from the cupola; but the smoke showed that the coal was still smouldering most extensively, and that no one could reach the bottom alive

The proprietors of the pit felt that in permitting the downcast shafts to be closed they incurred a most grave responsibility; and the referees on the [illegible] were then the opinion of a number of colliery viewers and fire-men, whom they invited from the surrounding districts upon the subject; and that opinion was one of unanimous approval. In order to [illegible] the proprietors and the gentlemen [illegible] had been consulted [illegible] viewers met [illegible] together and invited the representatives of the press to be present at the meeting and hear the opinions on the subject.

The Chairman (Mr. J. Woodhouse Day, an eminent colliery-viewer), in referring to the closing of the downcast shafts, observed that such a measure was calculated to excite public alarm, considering that a great number of bodies were left in the pit; but it was the only hope. The accident occurred at half-past twelve o'clock, so that a period of seven hours elapsed before the pit was closed. Another resolution was that Messrs. Webster, Coe, and Maddison should be deputed to carry out the views of the committee. The proprietors of the colliery were called in, and were informed of what had been done, and were fully satisfied. The opinion of Mr. Day was that practical men should carry out the views of the committee, rather than that the responsibility should rest upon the owners of the pit.

Mr. Webster gave an account of the result of his visit to the mine. On getting to the bottom of the shaft they found that the lower portion of the sides and broadgates were entirely blown out, and destroyed, and on proceeding further they found the coal around the furnaces was in a complete state of ignition. The coal and woodwork in the upcast shaft had taken fire, and the flames were spreading rapidly. He could compare it to nothing but to a stream of molten metal being poured down the shaft. They proceeded about 200 or 300 yards along the south level, and found the whole of the furnace down, and the coals on fire. They proceeded up the levels and broadgates as far as they dared to venture, until they came in contact with the foul air, and were obliged to retreat. They returned to the shaft, and then made an examination of the north levels, along which they proceeded for a distance of 400 yards, up to the fourth broadgate. During the investigation they found many dead bodies, and the men who accompanied them brought the remains to the shaft. One man was found dead close to the bottom of the shaft; further on they found ten bodies in a mass. Not [illegible] the furnace it was supposed that a large number of bodies were lying, as the men generally congregated near the fire at dinner-time. The furnace was blown down, and the stables (containing six horses) were on fire. When they got near the upcast shaft they saw immense masses of coal and rubble falling down. The shaft was like a furnace. The difference in the state of the fire when he entered the pit and when he left it was very great. They were in the pit above two hours. In the narrative of their proceedings between the two shafts were completely blown away, and therefore they crept in the level, the pit was dead—fire, full of bad air. They would have succeeded in putting up stoppages, but the murderous impression existed that they were obliged to retreat. They were so placed that if they had not retreated they would have been excluded from the air and suffocated, because the air was "backing" direct from each shaft. Messrs. Webster, Coe, and Mr. Maddison seconded the shaft, and held a consultation; but their companions ascended in haste, saying that it was impossible for any one to remain down any longer. Under these circumstances they left their fate, to acquaint the owners with the position of the mine, and to state that it was imperative to close the shafts, as there was no probability of saving any more lives, and that it was the only chance to render near the pit in a condition fit for working in again. He consulted with the men who had gone down with them. They were called in separately, and asked if they were of opinion that it was impossible to get any more bodies out of the mine? They concurred with them, and they acted upon their resolution and the decision by covering over the tops of the pits. In a few minutes after they left the mine the cupola—the top of the upcast shaft—was seen to ignite above the summit, and the sparks from that body of flame ascended 100 yards higher.

Mr. Morton (Government Inspector): This was very strong evidence that you had nearly remained too long.

Mr. Maddison confirmed the statements of Mr. Webster. He particularly mentioned the impression they had received as to the state of the flames from the time they first saw them until they left the pit. The fire was really awful when they came back. When they passed the stables at first they could go up to the fire and kick the horses with their feet, but when they came back they durst not approach the place; the flames extended from one end to the other. They would have been killed if they had not retreated at the time they did.

Mr Bartholomew: It would be satisfactory to the public to be assured that the pit was not closed until there remained no chance of saving any more lives.

Mr. Morton expressed his approval of a proposal which had been made to force carbonic acid gas into the pit with a view to extinguish the fire yet burning. If the pit had not been closed they would not have been able to get into them again for many months, the probability was that the shafts would have closed themselves, and the loss of the whole colliery would have been imminent. There could not be a doubt that the bodies in the shafts were closed there was not a living man in the pit. He supposed, of course, that the search was not abandoned until all hopes of recovering any bodies were extinguished.

Mr. Webster: Certainly not. I did not leave that mine until every hope was gone. The men who accompanied us begged us to return, but we did not come back until we were positively frightened for our own lives. If we had remained longer we should have been lost.

On Friday evening it was decided by a number of scientific and practical gentlemen, who have assumed the responsibility of the steps to be taken for restoring the pit to a safe state, that it should be filled with incombustible gas. Arrangements were at once made to carry out this decision; but it was afterwards determined to delay the experiment until the committee had consulted Mr. Nicholas Wood, an eminent colliery-viewer from the neighbourhood of Durham.

On Saturday evening another consultation was held at the office of the proprietors, by Messrs. Day, N. Wood, C. Morton, Government Inspector, Elliott, and other colliery-owners. The decision arrived at was not to try the experiment of introducing incombustible gas into the mine, but only to introduce steam and allow a considerable quantity of water to accumulate in the workings. This state of things was to continue until Wednesday next, when it was understood that Mr. Wood and the other members of the managing committee would again meet and consider what further steps might be necessary.

Pending the decision of the conference of scientific men the measures recommended by them on Saturday were carefully carried out in the early part of the week, under the superintendence of Mr. Webster and Mr. Maddison. The effect of those measures in subduing the fire is evident from the experiments which have been made.

Fresh anecdotes of painful interest keep coming to light in connection with this unfortunate affair. The following scene was witnessed by one of the searching party who explored the pit immediately after the explosion. A man named Joseph Simmonds was found, and the party seized hold of him to put him in the chair. Suddenly, however, he broke away from them, and rushed towards one of the workings. He was caught a second time, and being probably in a state of delirium from the gas he had inhaled, struggled with superhuman strength, and made off into a part of the workings where it was not safe to follow him. He is now buried in the pit.

It is intended to erect a shed capacious enough to contain the whole number, and as the bodies are brought up, they will be placed in coffins, which are in course of preparation, and deposited in this structure. To each of them will be attached a ticket, containing if the deceased be identified his name, otherwise a number according to the order in which it is brought up. Every effort has been made by the proprietors to ascertain the names of all in the pit. The result of the inquiries which have been made is stated to be satisfactory; and even this number will probably be increased upon subsequent inquiry.

The efforts in aid of the survivors will no doubt become general throughout the country. Subscriptions have been received in the proprietors from several persons living in distant places. Proceedings are being taken for organising public subscriptions in Sheffield and Manchester.

The Leeds Mercury of Tuesday last remarks that "the Barnsley coal district has been the scene of some of the most appalling accidents that can be found on record. To go back to a comparatively recent date, we find that no fewer than fourteen accidents have occurred, by which an aggregate of between four and five hundred lives have been sacrificed. In addition to numerous explosions which have happened in the neighbourhood of some of the principal pits, at the present time, be read with interest—On April 4th, 1838, twenty-six individuals lost their lives in a colliery at Silkstone, near Barnsley, by the irruption of a quantity of water into the workings. On the 21st of November, 1841, fifteen men and boys were killed by an explosion at the Mount Osborne Colliery, which is situated within half a mile of the town of Barnsley; and, being the first serious explosion of firedamp that had occurred in the neighbourhood, it excited a great deal of interest. In 1842 two accidents occurred at Hopwood's Colliery, at Barnsley, by which five lives were lost. At the Oaks Colliery, on the 11th of June, 1845, three men were killed. On the 23rd January, 1847, six lives were sacrificed through an accident in the Darley Main Colliery, situated within two miles of Barnsley—a colliery which afterwards attained some degree of notoriety by an explosion which was attended with great loss of life. On the 7th of March, in the present year, three men and a boy were working in the Oaks pit, about a mile from Barnsley, and met with a sudden death from an explosion of [illegible] the [illegible] which was [illegible] that stands [illegible] out of the shaft—which was nearly three hundred yards deep, into the air to the height of forty or fifty yards. On that occasion the explosion originated, according to the evidence, in an old break or abandoned working. The machinery of the pit was very considerably damaged, and many of the bodies were not recovered until some days after the explosion, although in the first instance a large proportion of the unfortunate workmen were brought out alive. On that occasion the whole of the men killed had resided in Barnsley and the immediate vicinity, and the greatest gloom pervaded the town. About £1000 was raised for the relief of the survivors and sufferers by a general subscription, and the fullest investigation was made into the cause of the accident. In August of the same year two men were killed by an accident at the Dark-main pit. Less than two years another explosion of an appalling character followed at the Darley-main Colliery, by which seventy-five lives were lost, which created a great sensation throughout the kingdom. In this instance there was an absence of that external shock by which explosions are generally attended. Notwithstanding the absence of noise, the workmen about the pit-hill at once became aware, from the issuing of the smoke, accompanied by a strong smell of sulphur, that the pit had fired; and, as the working machinery in this instance was fortunately uninjured, immediate steps were taken to rescue the sufferers, and during the following day the greater part of the bodies were recovered. On the 20th July, 1851, three men were killed by an accident at the Wrsbro'-park Colliery. On the 7th June, 1851, three men lost their lives at the Oaks Colliery. On the 26th July, 1854, an accident occurred at the Lund-hill pit, the scene of the late explosion, by which five men were killed. The shafts were only then in process of sinking, and the sinkers, after having been out a day or two, incautiously descended the shaft, when a quantity of foul air ignited which had accumulated, and an explosion of a most terrific character followed. On this occasion the violence of the report from it was heard at a distance of seven miles. A person who was working at the mouth of the shaft was blown into the air to an altitude of about 180 feet. Another man took refuge in the mouth of the shaft, and by that means the sinker's escaped. At Elsecar, by which nine lives were lost; and shortly before that the explosion at Warrenvale had occurred, by which fifty-two human beings were sent into eternity."

The painful interest excited by this awful calamity has induced us to dispatch to the scene of destruction our Special Artist, Mr. Loadley, which we engrave this week, and hereafter we shall illustrate the accident more in detail. Our Correspondent writes from BARNSLEY, Sunday evening.

Every train to-day has brought a large number of "excursionists," who by their conduct seemed bound to a fair or country fête rather than to the scene of a frightful calamity. Each road leading to the pit was covered with throngs of people, who were busy for miles in every direction; and the immediate neighbourhood of the works could only be compared to Greenwich-hill on a summer Sunday. At two o'clock there were from 10,000 to 12,000 persons on the spot, and few indeed were those who appeared to think they were standing immediately over the boiling cauldron of the human beings, hurried without a minute's notice into eternity. In the human beings, hurried without a minute's notice into eternity. In the human beings, hurried without a minute's notice into eternity. In

REAL ALPINE KID GLOVES!!!
First Delivery of all the New and Brilliant Colours for Spring, in every size, with the Registered VICTORIA BANDALETTE FASTENING ATTACHED, Complete,
ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE PER PAIR.
The Best Fitting and most Durable Glove to be procured at Any Price!!!
Address, RUMBELL and OWEN, 77 and 78, Oxford-street, London, Sole Inventors and Patentees of the VICTORIA BANDALETTE, & ATTACHER FACILEMENT.
N.B. Sample Pairs forwarded for two extra stamps.

THE NEW SPRING SILKS
At RUMBELL and OWEN'S.
PANTHEON HALL OF COMMERCE.
The Full Dress Bar Glacés ... ... Twelve Yards for The Victoria Rich Glacés ... ...
The Jasper Checked Glacés ... ... £1 10s. 6d.,
The Rainbow Satin Bar Glacés ... ...
The Metallic Glacés ... ... Widest Width.
The Gossamer Bar Glacés ... ...
The Parisian Checked Glacés ... ...
The Rich Brocaded Silks ... ... Twelve Yards for
The Gros d'Orsays ... ... £2 12s. 6d.
The Gros des Indes ... ... Widest Width
The Gros Royal Cashel Glacés ... ...
The Jasper Fluted Glacés ... ... Fourteen Yards.
The Broche Flounced Silks ... ... From £2 10s. 6d.
The Velvet Flounced Silks ... ... to 4½ Guineas
The China Flounced Silks ... ... the Robe.
The Satin Bar Flounced Silks ... ...
Patterns free, postage-free.
N.B. The above are manufactured of the Purest Silk, and produced in all the New and Brilliant Colours for the Spring Fashions.
Address, Rumbell, and Owen, 77 and 78, Oxford-street, London.

LAST YEAR'S MUSLINS
AT HALF THE ORIGINAL COST.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

FRENCH BAREGES, BALZARINES,
Printed Llamas,
Swiss Cambrics, &c.
Half price.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

MOURNING MUSLINS, BAREGES,
Balzarines, &c.
The Cheapest lot in this Kingdom.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

7000 DOZEN FRENCH CAMBRIC
HANDKERCHIEFS,
at 12s. 6d., 15s., and 18s. per dozen
Hemmed stitched, direct from the Manufacturer, at half-duties.
Samples free.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

BABIES' WHITE CASHMERE CLOAKS
One Guinea.
Hoods, Ruffs-a-Guinea.
33, Baker-street (near Madame Tussaud's Exhibition).
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday)

BABIES' BERCEAUNETTES,
Two and a Half Guineas.
Baskets to match, One Guinea.
33, Baker-street.
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday).

LADIES' RIDING TROUSERS,
Chamois Leather with black foot
33, Baker-street (near Madame Tussaud's Exhibition)
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday)

MARRIAGE OUTFITS, Complete,
Cotton Hosiery, 9s. 6d.
White Dressing Gowns, One Guinea.
Real Balbriggan Hosiery.
33, Baker-street
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday).

BLACK MERINO RIDING HABITS
Very Little Cloth, 24 Guineas
Ladies Riding Habits, 14 to 6 Guineas.
33, Baker-street.
W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday).

HALF-YEARLY SALE AT HER MAJESTY'S CUSTOMS
SEWELL and CO. have the honour to inform Ladies that they have purchased from the Commissioners of Customs a quantity of Goods that have been seized
Lot 1.—Embroidered and plain trimmed Lace Cambric Handkerchiefs, 2 Valenciennes Insertions, and other Foreign Laces. [&c.
2.—Lace Caps, made-up Embroideries, &c.
3.—Rich Paris Beaded and Satin Ribbons.
4.—Lace Veils, Ladies' Dress Trimmings, and other Foreign Laces.
They would also call attention to a Lot of Ladies' Silk Stockings, very slightly shop
Compton House, 44, 45, and 46, Old Compton-street; and 46 and 47, Frith-street, Soho, London, W

MUSLINS of the PAST SEASON.
The whole of the Stock of
THE FRENCH MUSLIN COMPANY
to be cleared out at ridiculous prices for such goods.
76, NORTON-STREET.

EMBROIDERED CHRISTIAN NAMES.—
LADIES' HANDKERCHIEFS, with Christian Names embroidered by the Nuns of Pau, with the new dotstich needle. Price 1s. 6d. per dozen; 4 stamps to fill the half-dozen, by post to all
FRENCH MUSLIN COMPANY, 16, OXFORD-STREET.

SILKS, Rich, Plain, Striped, and Checked
Glacé, at 29s. 6d per dress of twelve yards. Well worth the attention of Foreign Residents sent free by post.—JOHN HARVEY, SON, and CO., 9, Ludgate-hill. Established upwards of fifty years.

SILKS.—Cash will be paid on delivery for Silks, Satins, Velveta Lace, Shawls, Sleeves, Ribands, Hose, &c. Manufactured goods wanted for Samples or Patterns and Prices for immediate Cash to JOHN HARVEY, SON, and CO., 9, Ludgate-hill.

SPRING SILKS at REDUCED PRICES
Twenty Thousand Pounds' worth of the above goods are now being cleared sale by BEECH and HERRALL, Beehive, 63 and 64, St. Ann's-square, Manchester, at the following reduced prices, viz.:—
Rich Striped and Checked Glacés, 25s. 6d., 29s. 6d., 33s. 6d., and 39s. 6d. the Full Dress.
1800 RICH SILK ROBES
for two or three flounces, suited to Promenade, Dinner, or Evening wear, at 2½, 3, 3½, 4, 4½, and 5 guineas.
Patterns for body and trimmings included (great bargains)
N.B.—Patterns for inspection, postage free to any part.

UPONS à RESSORT DEPOSE. —For the Ball room, Promenade, or Travelling, these PATENT SPRING PETTICOATS are perfection, never crease or get out of order, and are particularly graceful and ladylike. Packed in a small box, and sent any distance upon receipt of a Post-office order for 16s. 6d. Address, Mrs. ROBERTSHAW 100, Oxford-street

LADIES REQUIRING FANCY NEEDLE-
WORK, of the most fashionable description and best quality, are requested to favour the Misses RAMSEY, of No. 2 Bourgeois-row, Bedford-square, with their orders, as they may depend upon every description of Fancy Embroidery, whether worked on canvas or muslin, for the work table or dressing table. Berlin Wools, &c.
Established 1840.

TO HOSIERS, GLOVERS, and SHIRT-MAKERS
Whereas certain Parties are forging to the Trade a Collar cut up in imitation of the Army and Navy four-fold Collar Patented by me for Great Britain in May, 1850,
I hereby give Notice, That immediate proceedings will be taken by the against all Parties buying or selling any Collars which infringe upon my rights.
Witness
R. A. BROGMAN, Patent Office, 66, Fleet-street, London.

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR,
Patented.
To be had everywhere. Note that all are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY AND NAVY"

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR
Patented, can be worn in the usual way, or to turn down collar with the Genuine are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY AND NAVY."

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR.
The above consists of four substances, and is the best Shirt Collar ever invented. Note all are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE PATENT ARMY AND NAVY"

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR,
to be had of all Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers throughout the United Kingdom. All are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY AND NAVY."

CAPPER, SON, and CO., Linendrapers to the Queen 69, Gracechurch-street, City, during the alteration of the present premises, continue as usual, their extensive stock of Linens, their Family Linen, Silk Mercery, General Drapery, and Ladies' and Infants' Outfitting Business.
The temporary entrance to the shop is at 120, Fenchurch-street, the fifth door from the corner of Gracechurch-street, E C

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN, BY APPOINTMENT
Established in 1778.
BABIES' BASSINETTES
Trimmed and Furnished,
ready for use, are sent home free of carriage.
BASKETS
Trimmed and furnished to correspond.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, GRACECHURCH-ST., LONDON, E C.
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post.

Sent post-free, Descriptive Lists of
COMPLETE SETS OF BABY LINEN,
which are sent home
throughout the Kingdom free of carriage.
UNDERCLOTHING FOR HOME, INDIA, AND ALL COLONIES,
for Ladies, and Children of all ages

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN, BY APPOINTMENT.
Established in 1778.
LADIES' WEDDING OUTFITS
and home, free of carriage
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, GRACECHURCH-ST., LONDON, E C

CAPPER SON, and MOON, 164, REGENT-STREET,
BASSINETTES, 30s. to 300s.
BABY LINEN
Books giving descriptions and prices sent gratis.

CAPPER, SON, and MOON, 164, REGENT-STREET,
LADIES' UNDER-CLOTHING.
TROUSSEAUX.
Books giving descriptions and prices sent gratis.

SPRING DRESSES.—PATTERNS of the
NEW FABRICS sent to any part free.
Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

THE SPRING SILKS at KING'S,
243, Regent-street.
Ballroll Silks,
£1 2s.;
Checked Silks,
£1 10s.
Jasper Silks,
£1 19s.
Brocha Silks,
£1 17s. 6d.
Gros d'Ecossais,
£2 2s.
Gros Royals,
£2 10s.
Moiré Antiques,
£2 19s. 6d.
and Flounced Silks, £5 10s. to £5
the Robe
Patterns sent post-free.

MOURNING FABRICS at KING'S,
No. 243, Regent-street.
Black Silks, Checks,
£1 2s. 6d.
Gros Royals,
£1 17s. 6d.
Widows Silks,
£2 12s. 6d.
Flounced Silks
£3 10s. 6d. to £5 5s. 6d.
Moiré Antiques,
£2 19s. 6d. to £5 5s.
Crapes, Cambrics,
Bareges,
Balzarines,
Satins,
Cashmeres,
Flounced Barèges,
15s. 6d.
Patterns free.
And Irish Poplins,
£1 5s. 6d.
The Full Dress Items
Patterns sent post-free.

THE GREAT SALE of DRAPERY,
Silks, Cloaks, Ribbons, Lace, &c., at 199, Regent-street.
A day will have been fixed for the commencement of the advertising, and a portion of the Stock still remaining, which must be sold, Messrs White and Company have made a still FURTHER REDUCTION in the prices, and will be ready on MONDAY NEXT, at ten o'clock, to submit the same to their patrons and the public at such prices as must effect an immediate Sale. They are extraordinary bargains in rich Silks.
WHITE and COMPANY
(Late George and Bradley),
199, Regent-street.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED
CLOAKS.—This Garment, so much used and so highly approved of for Home and Continental Travelling, may be had of the Maker, J. PHILLIPS, 37, HIGH-STREET, SHREWSBURY.
P.S.—Directions for measuring, patterns of material, and list of prices, sent post-free on application.

EARLY-CLOSING HOSIERY ESTA-
BLISHMENT.—SHIRTS & LONGCLOTH SHIRTS, 42s. for 37s. 6d and 45s. Linen Collars, 11s. a dozen. 26 different sizes to choose from.—A. J. HIRD, 363, Oxford street (four doors east of the Pantheon).

SHIRTS.—RODGERS'S IMPROVED
CORAZZA SHIRTS, 35s for 31s. 6d. and 42s. For ease, elegance, and durability, they have no rival. A book with eighty illustrations, containing instructions for measurement, post-free Rodgers and Bourne, Improved Corazza Shirtmakers, 59, St. Martin's-lane, London, W.C. Established sixty years.

SHIRTS.—RODGERS'S IMPROVED
COLOURED SHIRTS. 26s., 31s. 6d., and 37s. 6d. the half-dozen, in all the newest designs, including Foxes, Stags, Hares, Dogs, Pheasants, &c., &c. An assortment of Patterns, Book of Illustrations, with directions for measurement, post-free for two stamps.—Rodgers and Bourne, Improved Corazza Shirtmakers, 59, St. Martin's-lane, London, W. C. Established sixty years

ROBERTSHAW'S PORIZO SHIRT.—
Registered, 5 and 6 Vic., cap. 100, Price, 8 for 38s. The fit and work of these Shirts is unrivalled, and the fabrics are of the same quality, makes for which the house has been celebrated for above seventy years.—Address Robertshaw, 100, Oxford-street. Established 1777

DO YOU KEEP LIVERY SERVANTS?—
DOUDNEYS' LIVERIES please masters and servants Footman's Suit, best quality, £3 3s.—7, Old Bond street, 23, Burlington-arcade and 69, Lombard-st. Established 1794.

CAUTION.—GEORGE HOBSON, TAILOR,
57, Lombard-street, begs to notify to his customers and the public generally, that a person in the same street is copying his name and motto of "Economy with Economy" but that he has no connection with him or any other house in London

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES for AUSTRALIA, in good or inferior condition. Mr. and Mrs JOHN ISAACS, 319 and 320, STRAND, opposite Somerset-house continue to give the highest price in Cash for Ladies', Gentlemen's, and Children's Clothes, Regimentals, Underclothing, Boots, Books, Jewellery, and all Miscellaneous Property. Letters for any day or distance punctually attended to. Parcels sent from the Country, either large or small, the utmost value returned by Post-office order the same day. Reference, London and Westminster Bank. Est. 45 yrs.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Miscellaneous Property, &c. The highest price given Ladies or Gentlemen waited on (if required) by Mr. or Mrs. G. HYAM, 16, Tyler-street, Regent-street, W.; or, parcels being sent, the utmost value in cash immediately remitted.—Established 52 years.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES.—Mr.
and Mrs. HART, 31, Newcastle-street, Strand, continue giving the highest prices for any description of Ladies and Gentlemen's WEARING APPAREL; also bronzed, satin and velvet dresses; regimentals, uniforms, point lace, India shawls, [illegible] trinkets, books, furniture, miscellaneous property, &c. Letters attended to immediately waited on at their residences any time or distance, by addressing as above. Parcels sent from the country, the utmost value resulted by Post-office order per return.—Established 1761.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES.—Mr.
and Mrs. LEVY, 4, [illegible] Strand, continue to give the highest prices for [illegible] CLOTHES of every description.—Regimentals, Books, [illegible] and Miscellaneous Property. Ladies and Gentlemen above for disposal can be waited on at their residences, or letter addressed to Mr or Mrs. Levy, 251, Strand opposite Twining's Banking Establishment. For all parcels from the country a post-office order remitted by return of post. Established 65 years.

DINNER, DESSERT, and TEA SERVICES.
A large variety of New and good Patterns. Best quality, superior taste, and very moderate prices. Also, every description of Cut Table Glass, equally advantageous
THOMAS FEARCE and SON, 23, Ludgate-hill, E C.

DEANE'S TABLE CUTLERY celebrated for more than 150 Years—unfluxed
[illegible] Ivory Handles, at 32s. per dozen; ditto, Balance Handles, from 25s. per dozen; ditto, Medium Handles, from 20s. per dozen; ditto, Balance Handles (an exceedingly cheap and serviceable quality article), 16s. per dozen; also, Bone, Horn Shap[illegible] Knives and Forks of every description, all warranted. Plated Dessert Knives and Forks with silver, Pearl, Ivory, and Plated Handles, in cases of 12, 18, or 24 pairs; also plated Fish-carving Knives, from 42s. per dozen. Silver and Plated Fish Carvers of the newest and most elegant designs always in stock. Deane's Catalogue for March now ready, gratis.—Deane, Dray, and Sons' celebrated Cutlery
DEANE, DRAY, and CO.'s General Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouses (opening to the Monument), London-bridge. Established A.D. 1700

BEDDING.—Economy, Durability, and Comfort.—J. and S. STEER'S SPRING and FEATHER MATTRESSES make the most elastic and softest bed. A prize-list of every description of Bedding, Blankets, and Quilts sent free. Bedsteads in every description, in wood, iron, and brass cribs, cots, &c. Eider-down Quilts, to silk and cotton sateens.—J. and S. Steer, Bedding, Bedstead, and Bed-room Furniture Manufacturers, 17, Oxford-street, W.

THE BEST BED for a CHILD is one of TRELOAR'S METALLIC COTS, 4 feet long, 2 feet wide, with movable sides and lifters. Price 21s. Each. Three years' price list, including a cocoanut-fibre mattress. Packed and delivered at any railway station in the Kingdom free.—TRELOAR, Iron Bedstead Manufacturer, 42, Ludgate-hill, London, E. C.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the BEST.—
At Moderator Lamps, from 5s. 6d. each. All who require a really good and cheap Lamp, should inspect Gardners' vast and unrivalled collection, which will be found unequalled, consisting of several thousand patterns. The show-rooms, largest in London, extend the entire length of Frasiger-square, opening into Buccannon-street.—Gardners (by appointment to her Majesty), 453 and 455, Strand, Charing-cross, and 2 and 4, Buccannon-street. Established 104 years.

D. HULETT and CO., Manufacturers of
GAS CHANDELIERS, Hall Lanterns, Glass Lustres, and every description of Gas Fittings. A large assortment of the Newest Designs always on hand. Every article warranted. Sole Agents and Patentees of the Mercurial Gas Regulator —50 and 56, High Holborn.

MODERATOR LAMPS.—The simplicity, solidity, and careful finish of the mechanism of T. FEARON and SON'S LAMPS render them less liable to derangement than any other kind, and have gained for them so general a preference. The patterns are equally unexceptionable, and (with great originality) combine every style that is beautiful and pure in taste.—Thomas Fearon and Son, 22, Ludgate-hill, E. C., Direct Importers of only the finest Oil.

FOR REMOVING FURNITURE, GLASS,
&c., in Town or Country, by Road or Railway, without the expense of Packing, apply for estimate to J. TAYLOR, Carman to her Majesty, 4, Upper Berkeley-street, Portman-square. FURNITURE WAREHOUSED

CHUBB'S FIRE-PROOF SAFES are constructed of strong Wrought Iron, and the Detector Locks which secure them are guarantees—[illegible] Detector Locks for every purpose, Street-door Latches, Cash and Deed Boxes. Full Illustrated price-lists sent on application.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

HALL'S PATENT CABINET MANGLE
SUPERSEDES ALL OTHERS.—Prices, Drawings, Testimonials, &c., post-free, to any address from WOODS, Smithfield Iron Works, Stowmarket.

BARLOW'S PATENT CASK-STAND.—
By all means use its admirable and perfect action explained. Price 1s. JAMES BARLOW, Jeweller, 14, King William-street, Mansion-house. Engravings gratis or sent post-free

TO ANGLERS.—CHARLES FARLOW, 191,
Strand, manufacturer of superior FISHING RODS and TACKLE, at moderate prices. Catalogues gratis.

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY, and R. SOLOMONS, Optician, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W. Observe, opposite the York Hotel —Portability, combined with great power in FIELD, RACE-GLASSES, OPERA, and general use. Just received, a great powerful Walscout-pocket PERSPECTIVE GLASSES, weighing only four ounces, each containing 11 achromatic lenses, and measuring when glass, will show distinctly a person's countenance at 2½ and 3 miles distance, and every object in proportion. Also, a large assortment of Telescopes, Country scenery and Ships are clearly seen at 8 to 10 miles distance. Many are unshakable by the most violent motion. Barometers, Thermometers, and many minor complaints. Post-free.—W. WASHINGTON EVANS, 11, Bernard-street, Russell-square, Piccadilly, London

EYESIGHT.—Optical Improvements, to enable persons at an advanced age to read fine print, and to discriminate objects with perfect accuracy at any distance.—Messrs SOLOMONS, Opticians, have invented and patented SPECTACLES, by which the most frequent impairment of sight is completely remedied. A single retard this invention is that, instead of the usual glasses being flat, they are concave, and in numerous cases seriously injured, it is preserved and strengthened, and very acute persons are enabled to employ their sight at the most intense occupation, even with those lenses of a much less magnifying power, and they do not require the frequent changes so necessary in effects of further, useful assistance. For [illegible] to be suited at the most reasonable rates of charge, will be sending a pair of spectacles, or one of the glasses out of them, in a letter, and stating the distance from the eyes they can read small print with it, and they will have not the slightest objection to exchange it after having—39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W. (opposite the York Hotel).

DEAFNESS.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme cases of Deafness, called the Sound Magnifier, Organic Vibrator, and [illegible] Conductor. It fits in the ear so exactly as not to be in the least perceptible the unpleasant sensation of singing noises to be the least heard entirely removed. It affords great relief to the deafest persons, and enables them to hear distinctly at church and at public assemblies.—Messrs. SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W., opposite the York Hotel.

PULVERMACHER'S MEDICAL ELEC-
TRIC CHAIN (approved by the Académie de Médecine, Paris, and rewarded by the Great Exhibition), a discovery of extraordinary curative properties to which no publication can do justice, is prepared And persons, or any number in a family, can use it, and consequently [illegible] by sending 2s. 6d. stamps, or 30s. per year. Its produce; how infallible and instantaneous are its effects upon the body. Its invalid might be summed up in a few words—Power and remarkable, yet truly natural and efficacious, it is in rheumatism, neuralgia (or head and tooth ache), low complaints, indigestion asthma, lumbago, gout, sciatica, deafness, colds, spasms, [illegible] palsy, paralysis, and all nervous affections. Chains, 10s. 6d., 21s., 31s. 6d., 42s., 52s. 6d., and upwards. Pamphlets, 10s. 6d. each. Pulvermacher and Co., 73, Oxford street, and during the Princess Theatre Opera Season, 194, Regent-street. Battery and Hooper, Electrical Engineers, 74, [illegible] Wharf, Strand, and 3, Duke-street, Adelphi

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Now ready, in 2 vols., with fine Portraits, 21s.,

ELIZABETH DE VALOIS, QUEEN of SPAIN, and the COURT OF PHILIP II. By Miss FREER

REVELATIONS of PRISON LIFE; with an Inquiry into Prison Discipline and Secondary Punishments. By CHARLES PEARSON. Third and Cheaper Edition, revised. 10s. 6d.

CASUAL WARDS, HOSPITALS and ENGLISH NURSES. By a LADY INMATE. Third and Cheaper Edition, Illustrations, 5s.

A PILGRIMAGE INTO DAUPHINE. By the Rev. G. M. MUSGRAVE, A.M., Oxon. 2 vols., Illustrations, 21s.

PEN and PENCIL PICTURES. By THOMAS HOOD. 1 vol., with numerous Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Now ready, in 1 vol., with 1500 Engravings of Arms,

SIR BERNARD BURKE'S PEERAGE and BARONETAGE for 1857

"Sir Bernard Burke's Peerage and Baronetage for 1857' has just appeared, the issue being the nineteenth edition of this very complete genealogical and heraldic dictionary, which has for many years taken precedence of all works of its class. The additions and emendations have been brought down to the latest period of publication."—Illustrated London News.

HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers (Successors to Henry Colburn).

Now ready, at all the libraries in 3 vols.,

THE DAYS of MY LIFE; an Autobiography. By the author of "Margaret Maitland," &c.

MARRIED for LOVE. By the author of "Cousin Geoffrey." 2 vols.

ISABEL, the YOUNG WIFE and the OLD LOVE. By J. C. JEAFFRESON. 3 vols.

WILDFLOWER. By the author of "The House of Elmorn." 3 vols.

HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers (Successors to Henry Colburn).

MR. OKE'S MAGISTERIAL WORKS.

Just published, 8vo. 25s., cloth,

OKE'S MAGISTERIAL SYNOPSIS. Fifth Edition

"I beg to congratulate you on the growing reputation of this valuable work."—Lord Campbell (Feb., 1857)

Also, just published, 8vo. 21s., cloth,

OKE'S MAGISTERIAL FORMULIST. Second Edition.

Also, just published, 12mo. 12s., cloth,

OKE'S LAW of TURNPIKE ROADS.

London: BUTTERWORTH, 7, Fleet-street, her Majesty's Law Publishers.

NEW TALE BY CARLETON.

Just published, price 3s.,

WILLY REILLY, and his Dear COLEEN BAWN.

BY WILLIAM CARLETON.

Dublin: JAMES DUFFY, 7, Wellington-quay. London: G. Philip and Son, 32, Fleet-street.

Just ready, the New American Novel,

LENA RIVERS.

By MARY J. HOLMES.

Royal 18mo., crimson cloth, 1s. 6d.

Cottage Library Edition, 1s.

MILNER and SOWERBY, Halifax; and all Booksellers.

"I TOO;" and OTHER POEMS. By BEELZEEBUB. Cheap Edition. Fcap. 8vo cloth, 1s. 6d. Free by post on receipt of the amount in postage-stamps

London: KEMBLE and SON, 607, Oxford-street; and all Booksellers.

Or, 8vo. cloth, price 9s. 6d., post-free, 9s. 10d., with Map, 6d. extra,

LONDON AS IT IS TO-DAY; WHERE TO GO AND WHAT TO SEE, with Two Hundred Engravings.

London: H. G. CLARKE and Co., 239, Regent-street.

FLOWER-PAINTING in 12 LESSONS.—A Course of Instruction, in which the whole art of Painting Flowers in WATER-COLOURS, from the simple outline through every subsequent stage of progress, is both Described and Illustrated. The Instructions in each progressive advance are confined to a single page, and so cut up that as not to perplex the Student with that needless quantity of reading usually found in Drawing-books. The Illustrations of Models consist of Popular Flowers, drawn and highly coloured from Nature, which the Instructions will enable the Student to imitate with the greatest accuracy, and so lead the way to draw from Nature. Price 5s.

London: PAUL JERRARD, 170, Fleet-street.

Second Edition, enlarged and considerably improved, cloth, 5s.,

FISCHEL'S GERMAN READING BOOK, on an entirely new principle. A story, by Franz Hoffmann, literally translated, with copious Notes and an Elementary Grammar. By Dr M. FISCHEL, of Queen's College, London. "The pupil learns the Grammar imperceptibly as he proceeds with the story."—Times. We cordially recommend the work, as manifesting a great improvement in the art of teaching.

D. NUTT, 270, Strand, London.

Just ready, New and Revised Edition, price 3s. cloth; post-free, 3s. 9d.,

THE ILLUSTRATED DRAWING-BOOK, comprising a complete introduction to Drawing and Perspective; &c. By ROBERT SCOTT BURN. 300 Engravings

Now ready, price 5s. 6d., post-free, 5s. 9d.

THE ILLUSTRATED WEBSTER READER, containing numerous Extracts from the best Authors.

Also ready, price 2s., post-free 2s. 2d.

THE ILLUSTRATED ARCHITECTURAL ENGINEERING and MECHANICAL DRAWING-BOOK By H. S. BURN.

MARVEL OF CHEAPNESS AND EXCELLENCE.

The ILLUSTRATED DOMESTIC SPELLING-BOOK, price 1s.; coloured 2s. Post-free, 3d. extra. Illustrated with 250 splendid Engravings, by Gilbert, Harvey, Dalziel, &c.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Ready this day, price 2s. cloth, 2s. 6d. roan, postage-free,

PRACTICAL DICTIONARY of ENGLISH SYNONYMS. By D. L. MACKENZIE. 216 pages. The author of this present work has been ten years in preparing it. It forms an essential auxiliary to correct composition, and indispensable to all who would wish to write the English language with elegance.

Just ready, price 1s.; coloured, 2s.; post-free.

The ROYAL PICTURE ALPHABET of HUMOUR and MORAL TALES; or, Words and their Meanings Illustrated. Beautifully Illustrated by Luke Limner. A charming Alphabet Book that will quite enchant our young friends.

JOHNSON and WALKER SUPERSEDED.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE. Price 2s. 6d., cloth: 3s., roan, postage-free. As an authority in the English language, Noah Webster's Dictionary will be always used in preference to any other. This edition contains 10,000 more Words than "Walker" and the Duke of Buccleuch's Dictionaries are perfect. WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

HOW to SPEAK with PROPRIETY, upon the Principles of Noah Webster, LL.D., with Hints upon Reading, Composition, &c. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

BRIDAL ETIQUETTE. By Madame de CHATELAIN. 6d.; post-free, 7d.

HOW to DRESS with TASTE. A most desirable Companion for the Toilet Table. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

HOW to WOO; WHEN and WHERE. Price 6d.

HOW to BEHAVE; or, The Spirit of Etiquette. A Complete Guide to Polite Society. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

HOW to be HEALTHY and to PRESERVE the MENTAL and BODILY POWERS. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Just ready, price 2s., cloth, gilt,

THE PHILOSOPHY of COMMON LIFE; or, the Science of Health By JOHN SCOFFERN, M.B. Containing a Popular View of the Anatomy of the Human Body—Exposition of Quackery—Cosmetics, their Preparation—Dress in Relation to Health—Moral Causes and Effects—Prevention Is

"It is the work of an eminently practical man, and valuable in every sense and sateal to which utility can be carried."—Weekly Dispatch

"Will make many a wise man wiser."—Daily News.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Ready this day, price 1s. 6d., cloth 2s.,

THE KING and the COUNTESS, or, Lovers' Trials. By S. W FULLOM, Author of "Marvels of Science," "Man of the World," &c. Fcap 8vo, pp. 192.

"This book possesses the first quality of a novel."—Spectator

"The romancer has the invention, the vivacity, the abundance of soldiers and the sparkling dialogue, which distinguish the modern French School of romance."—Critic

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Now ready, Nos. 1 and 2, price 3d. each,

PRACTICE SONGS for CLASSES. Designed to promote articulate and expressive singing.

London: WARD and Co., 27 Paternoster-row

Worth Notice.—What has always been wanted is now published.

Sixteenth thousand. Price 4s., free by post,

THE STATIONARY APPENDIX, with upwards of 7000 Words not found in the Dictionary, comprising the Participles of the Verbs, which perplex all writers. No person that writes a letter should be without this work

J. F SHAW, 35, Paternoster-row

FOR PARENTS AND TEACHERS

FAMILY SUNDAY SERVICES: Based on the Public Services of the Church of England. By a Lay Member. Roan, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.; stiff covers, 2s. 6d.

Edinburgh: R. GRANT and SON. London: J. F. SHAW and Son

NEW MUSIC, &c.

KOENIG'S JOURNAL for CORNET-à-PISTONS and PIANOFORTE for MARCH contains Duprez's Romance, "Ah! mon cher" (Travaini). Quando le sere (Louisa Miller); Green Leaves Waltz, by D'Egville; and the Soldier's Funke, by D'Albert. Price 1s.; postage-free. The First Part of Koenig's Tutor for Cornet-à-Pistons is now ready price 5s. Jullien and Co.'s Portfolio for Cornet Solo (No. 1) contains three grand airs, price 1s.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S BILLET-DOUX WALTZ, Beautifully Illustrated by Brandard Price 4s ; postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S MY MARY ANN POLKA, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S MINNIE POLKA, Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s., postage-free

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S FLIRTATION POLKA, performed with the greatest success at Her Majesty's Theatre, beautifully illustrated in Colours. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S FRENCH QUADRILLE, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.

214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S CONSTANCE WALTZ, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.

214, Regent-street, W

JULLIEN'S EXCELSIOR WALTZ, performed by Herr Koenig at M. Jullien's Concerts with the greatest success, and nightly encored. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

G. A. OSBORNE'S NEW PIANOFORTE WORKS:—

1 Ah che la Morte, and the Miserere.
2. Pensata on favourite airs, Il Trovatore.
3. No, non sdrai, and Di provenza il mar.
4. Libiamo and Parigi o cara.
5. Robert, tol qui l'adore.
6. A favourite Russian air, as a Duet.

Price of each 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.

THE WOODLAND-WHISPERS WALTZ,
THE TITANIA WALTZ
THE DREAM of MELODY WALTZ.
THE EDINBURGH POLKA
THE BARNEY WILLIAMS QUADRILLE

Containing all the favourite Songs sung by this very popular Actress. Price of each, 3s., postage-free

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

SABBATH STRAINS: a Collection of Favourite Sacred Melodies, easily and effectively arranged for Pianoforte. By FRANZ KAVA Price of each, 4s Solo or Duet, 1s., postage-free.

No 1. I know that my Redeemer liveth.
2. With verdure clad.
3. Agnus Dei, from Mozart's 1st Mass.
4. Before Jehovah's awful throne.
5. Holy, holy, Lord God Almighty.
6. Gloria in Excelsis.
7. Hearthy prayer
8. But then didst not leave
9. Qual anelante cerva.
10. Vital spark of heavenly flame.
11. My song shall be of mercy.
12. Gloria, from Mozart's 12th Mass.
13. Kyrie, from Mozart's 12th Mass.
14. Vanish before the holy beams.
15. O, had I Jubal's lyre.
16. Credo in unum Deum
17. Sound the loud timbrel.
18. In Jewry is God known.
19. He was despised.
20. Cujus animam

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

LIBRARY of DANCE MUSIC.—A Collection of the most popular Dance Music, by JULLIEN, KOENIG, &c., &c., easily and effectively arranged for Pianoforte. Price of each, as Solo or Duet, 1s., postage-free.

1 Original Polka
2 Olga Waltz.
3. Bohemian Polka
4. Original Mazurka.
5. Renani Quadrille.
6. Post-paid Galop
7 Bird of Paradise Waltz
8 Escape Polka.
9. Fleur de Marie Waltz.
10. German Polka
11. Pas de Basque.
12. English Quadrille.
13. Value d'Amour
14 Drum Polka.
15. Nemaiens Quadrille.
16. Bouquet Royal Valse.
17 Jetty Polka
18 Staum Marsch Galop.
19 Masonic Quadrille.
20. Rose de Mai Valse.
21 Blue Bell Polka.
22 Mandolina Waltz
23. Hiburnan Quadrille.
24 Prima Donna Waltz

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

D'EGVILLE'S NEW LANCERS for SIX PERSONS. Just published for Pianoforte, by Louis D'Egville, with a full description of the figures for sixteen persons Price 3s., postage-free.—JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

D'EGVILLE'S GREEN LEAVES WALTZ, for Pianoforte Price 4s., postage-free. Illustrated by Brandard

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN AND CO.'S
MUSICAL PRESENTATION LIBRARY.
Three Guineas per annum.

Three Guineas' worth of Music presented gratis, to every Annual Subscriber to the above library.

Subscribers are liberally supplied on loan, with every description of New Vocal and Instrumental Music, as they have also at their disposal upwards of Three Thousand Volumes, including the standard Operas, Italian, German, French, and English songs, and all kinds of Instrumental Music

At the expiration of the Term of Subscription, each Subscriber has the privilege of selection—for his own property—from 100,000 different pieces,

THREE GUINEAS' WORTH OF MUSIC

Terms of Subscription

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| For One Year | .. | £3 3 0 | For Three Months .. | £1 5 0 |
| For Six Months | .. | £2 2 0 | For One Month .. | £0 16 6 |

214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY. Three Guineas' worth of Music Gratis to all Subscribers.

Prospectuses sent free on application to Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

HAIL the MIGHTY WARRIORS BRAVE! New Song, written and composed by Mrs. MACKENZIE WILSON 2s. 6d.

"This song abounds with excellent points. The melody is rich and flowing, and affords a full expression of the heroic tone unfitted with deep pathos in the words. We heartily recommend it."

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., her Majesty's Music publishers, New Burlington-street, W.

NEW SONG. SPRING BLOSSOMS. Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER. Price 2s. 6d., postage-free. This Song published in the same manner form as "Summer Roses," "Autumn Fruits," and "Winter Evergreens," completes the series—as unsurpassed for the beauty of words, music, and embellishment. "Spring Blossoms" will, if possible, take the lead, as it is most graceful and pleasing

London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—The LANGUAGE of the EYE, as sung with the most distinguished success by Miss Poole, commencing "I'll avert to hear a gentle voice." Composed by G. HODGSON. Price 2s., postage-free. Caution.—This is the only edition sung by Miss Poole

DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—THINE FOR EVER. By the Author of "Will you love me then as now?" "Dearest, then, I love you more," &c. Price 2s., postage-free. This beautiful ballad possesses all the charms, both with regard to words and music, that secured for its predecessors that immense popularity which they deservedly obtained.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

MARGUERITE POLKA. By HENRI LAURENT Superbly Illustrated in Colours Price 4s.

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, 28, Holles-street.

ONE HUNDRED MELODIES for the CONCERTINA. By GEORGE CASE. Price 3s.

Just published by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

NEW CORNET TUTOR.—Second Edition, price 2s containing forty-five pages), BOOSEY'S UNIVERSAL CORNOPEAN TUTOR Edited by STANTON JONES, Bandmaster above 100 Years connected with the Terrestrial Cornucopia, &c The best work for this instrument that has ever appeared.

BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MISS DOLBY'S NEW SONG, "The Green Trees whispered low and wild" The poetry by LONGFELLOW, the music by BALFE

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MISS LOUISA VINNING'S NEW SONGS, sung at the Crystal Palace with immense success 1 "The Syren of the Hall," by Alfred Mellon. 2 "The Castle Gate," by Frank Mori Price 2s 6d each.

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

SIMS REEVES'S NEW SONG, "Come into the Garden, Maud" The poetry by ALFRED TENNISON, the music by M. W. BALFE Price 2s

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S "Annie Laurie," brilliant Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 2s Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street

MADAME OURY'S "La Mia Letizia," brilliant Transcription for the Pianoforte Price 4s Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street

GREEN'S LITTLE SONGS for LITTLE SINGERS.—A new edition, superbly Illustrated in Colours 12 Songs, 1s. each. Complete in one volume, cloth, price 6s.

BOOSEY and SONS, 28, Holles-street.

SERENADE QUADRILLE. By BALFE. With superb Portrait of Sims Reeves Price 3s

BOOSEY and SONS, 28, Holles-street.

BOOSEY and SONS' MUSICAL LIBRARY. —100,000 works in the Collection, including above 2000 Operas, in every shape. Subscription, Two Guineas per annum. Full particulars gratis from Boosey and Sons, 28, Holles-street.

FARMER'S EVENING STAR WALTZES. Illustrated in Pearlwood So.s, 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s. 6d.; Orchestral parts, 5s.

Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Postage-free

FARMER'S FIRST-LOVE WALTZES. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Solo, 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s 6d.; Orchestral parts, 5s.

Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside Postage-free

FARMER'S EMPRESS QUADRILLES. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Solos, 4s.; Duets, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s 6d Orchestral parts, 5s.

Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Postage-free.

THE PRIMROSE WALTZES, by W. H. MONTGOMERY, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard Solo, 4s., Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s 6d.; Orchestral parts, 5s.

Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Postage-free.

FARMER'S PIANOFORTE TUTOR.—"This is decidedly the most useful and best instruction book for the pianoforte we have seen."—Musical Review. Price 4s.

Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

FARMER'S MAID of the VALLEY WALTZES Illustrated by Brandard. Solo, 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet parts, 3s. 6d.; Orchestral parts, 5s.

Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Post-free

FARMER'S IMPERIAL PRINCE QUADRILLES. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard Solo, 4s.; duets, 4s.; Sept i parts, 3s 6d.; Orchestral parts, 5s.

Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Post-free.

FARMER'S ANNIE SCHOTTISCHE. Illustrated. Solo, 2s., Septet parts, 3s. 6d.; Orchestral parts, 5s. Published by JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside. Post-free

G. A. MACFARREN'S LITTLE CLARINA'S LESSON-BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, in Four Parts. Price 2s. each; or complete, 6s. Post-free, 3s., post-free

London. JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' CHRISTMAS PIECE. An elegant Pianoforte arrangement of the Composer's popular Christmas Glees and Carols, which are at once so soft and clear? Illustrated by Alfred Crowquill. Price 3s. Postage-free for stamps. HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LA MIA LETIZIA.—A Pianoforte arrangement of Marlo's beautiful air in "Letizia." Price 3s. The generally favourite melody has been arranged by Brinley Richards with more than his usual success.—"Many Fine Airs, the same as a Pianoforte Duet, price 5s. 6d Postage-free for stamps.—HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street

BRINLEY RICHARDS' ROBERT, TOI QUE J'AIME An arrangement for Pianoforte of the celebrated Air in Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable." Price 3s Postage free for stamps.—HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' New Ballad, THE SPIRIT OF THE DELL. Just published. "A charming ballad, and not beyond the capacity of any singer."—Illustrated Times Price 2s. Postage-free for stamps.—HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street.

COME WITH ME TO FAIRY LAND. Song. BY CHERRY, Composer of "Shells of Ocean," &c. The first edition of this beautiful song is now ready, price 2s. Postage-free for stamps

Publisher, HAMMOND, 9, New Bond-street.

GUARDO O CARO.—Waltz for Voice and Pianoforte, composed expressly for Madame Rudersdorff. By A. HANLEIGH. Price 2s., post-free. This most useful vocal composition lately published; it has been always rapturously received By the same popular composer, Fleurette, 3s.; Yesterday and To-morrow, 3s.; Be sure you call, 3s., The Meadow Gate, 3s

J. J. EWER and Co., 390, Oxford street, London.

VARENNA.—Value brillante pour le Piano, par ERNST PAUER. Price 1s. 6d. Sent post-free. Published by EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London.

MENDELSSOHN'S THREE MARCHES. Fligrims' March, from the 4th Sinfonia; War March of the Priests, from "Athalie" (copyright), and Wedding March, from the "Midsummer Night's Dream" (original edition) Price each, for Pianoforte Solo, 1s.; Duet, 1s. 6d. Post-free EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London, publishers of all Mendelssohn's Works Catalogues gratis.

ROSSINI'S STABAT MATER. Newly Arranged by JOSEPH WARREN, with Latin and English Words, inserted 8vo. 2s Also, gratis and postage-free, 16 Specimen Pages of 16 of Robert Cocks and Co.'s Two-shilling Handbooks for the Organ.

ROBERT COCKS and Co.'s Two-shilling Handbooks for the Organ.

RESIGNATION, New Sacred Song, by Miss M LINDSAY, composer of "The Lord will Provide," "Psalm of Life," "Evening," &c. Finely Illustrated, 2s 6d

The ORGAN: Its History and Construction. By E J HOPKINS and Dr RIMBAULT Profusely Illustrated, royal 8vo, pp. 96, bevelled cloth, gilt edges, 5s. "This is the most thorough and complete organ work ever published."—American paper

POPULAR SONGS by WRIGHTON'S Latest and Loveliest.—SI. CLAIR'S MOONING. Words by W. DORRINGTON Leg. of the Electric Royal Pyramist. Extremely Melodious, with beautiful Symphonies 2s 6d. "Mr. Wrighton is a Rising Knock," by Mr. Wrighton, Illustrated, 2s. 6d.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, and of all Musicsellers

NOVELLO'S CENTENARY EDITIONS of the ORATORIOS (complete) The WHOLE SERIES NOW REMITTED TO SUBSCRIBERS. Two Books each—Judas Israel in Egypt, Samson, Messiah, Joshua, Jephtha, Solomon, Deborah, Alexander's Feast, all 2s. each; Dettingen and Coronation Anthems, and Ode to St. Cecilia's Day, 1s. each. Handel Selections—Parts, Hymn of Praise, 2s.; Mount Sinai, 1s.; Moses in Egypt, 1s.; Israel in Egypt, 1s.; Mount of Olives, 1s.; Messiah (with Additional Accompaniments by Mozart), 1s.; Dettingen's Mass in C, 2s. each. Beethoven's Recruit (Mount of Olives), Rossini's Stabat Mater, and Romberg's Lay of the Bell, 1s. 6d. each. All the Vocal Scores with Accompaniment by VINCENT NOVELLO. The above Works may be had, bound in cloth form at 1s. 6d. each. Prospectuses and specimens sent free on application to J. A. NOVELLO, 69, Dean-street, Soho, London, W

NEW MUSIC, &c.

D'ALBERT'S ALBUM for 1857. Third Edition! The sale of the very popular work, which is beautifully Illustrated by Brandard, has far surpassed any of its predecessors. It contains a greater variety of new Waltzes new Quadrilles, Polkas, &c., &c.; is splendidly bound, and forms the most attractive Musical Gift-book ever published. Price 21s., post-free.

CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S BOBBING AROUND.—Quadrille, in which is introduced the most popular airs of the day. Price 2s solo, 4s. duet, post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S QUEEN'S WALTZ, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s ; post-free.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S ST. PETERSBURG, New Quadrille on Russian Airs. Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 2s., post-free.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CZARINA SCHOTTISCHE. Illustrated. Price 3s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S SOLDIERS' POLKA. With a Portrait of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, by Brandard, in Colours. Price 3s., post-free

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond street.

D'ALBERT'S EMPEROR'S GALOP, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s., Solo or Duet, Post-free. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CORONATION POLKA. Beautifully Illustrated by Brandard. Price 3s., Solo or Duet, Post-free. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CRIMSON ROSES. Ballad by Signor PARAVICINI. Composed for and sung with great success by Miss Dolby. Price 2s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S YOUNG PUPIL, in 24 Nos., containing the following popular Airs of the day, arranged for the Youngest Performers on the Pianoforte Price 1s. each, postfree, also as Duets, 1s. 6d. each:—

No. 1. D'Albert's Fair Star Valse
2. Do. Bow-Wow Polka.
3. The Irish Emigrant.
4. Red, White, and Blue.
5. D'Albert's Sultan's Polka.
6. Do. Como Quadrille.
7. Nelly Bly.
8. The Campbells are Coming.
9. Ye Banks and Braes
10 D'Albert's Faust Valse.
11. Do. King Pippin Polka.
12. Annie Laurie.
13. D'Albert's Palermo Quadrille
14. Low Back'd Car.
15. The Original Varsovienne.
16. D'Albert's Margarita Valse
17. Home, Sweet Home.
18. Partant pour la Syrie
19 Last Rose of Summer.
20 Bonnie Dundee.
21 Cul or Hoering.
22. Bohemian Air.
23. Ben Bolt.
24. D'Albert's Queen of Roses Valse.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

PAST and PRESENT. New Song. By JOHN BARNETT; written by E. H. HUMPHREYS, LL.D., Head Master of Caermarthen Grammar-school Price 2s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street

BRINLEY RICHARDS' ENGLISH MELODIES, arranged for the pianoforte by the favourite composer. Price 3s. each; or, as duets, 3s. 6d ; post-free.

No. 1. Home, sweet home.
2. The British Grenadiers' March.
3. My lodging is on the cold ground.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' IRISH MELODIES. Price 3s. each; or, as duets, 3s. 6d ; post-free

No 1 St. Patrick's Day.
2 Oft in the stilly night.
3 Fly not yet, 'tis the Brown Irish Girl.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SCOTCH MELODIES. Price 3s. each; or, as duets, 3s. 6d., post-free.

No. 1. Blue Bells of Scotland.
2 Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.
3. Auld Lang Syne.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE ALEXANDRE HARMONIUM AT SIX GUINEAS.

ALEXANDRE and SON have made the Harmonium at the lowest price possible, in order to place the instrument within the means of all classes. It is in an Oak Case, with Four Octaves, is alike calculated for Private Houses and Small Churches, and is INDISPENSABLE TO THE SCHOOL-ROOM.

The Six-Guinea Harmonium will be taken in exchange for any of the more expensive Instruments, without loss or diminution.

Alexandre and Son obtained the Sole Medal of Honour at the Great Exhibition in 1855, and their Harmoniums have been pronounced the best by Rossini, Auber, Adam, Thalberg, Liszt, &c., and by the Professors of the Conservatoire Paris

The more expensive Harmoniums range from 10 to 55 guineas. These are brought to the greatest perfection, and are equally adapted to the

CHURCH OR DRAWING-ROOM,

AS AN

ACCOMPANIMENT TO THE VOICE OR PIANOFORTE.

Messrs. Chappell have just received a number of Alexandre's celebrated which combine the excellence of both Instruments. The two can be used in combination by the same performer, or each Instrument is perfect in itself. Price from 40 to 60 guineas.

HARMONIUMS-A-PANOFORTES,

An immense Stock of

PIANOFORTES BY THE BEST MAKERS,

from Twenty Guineas upwards, which can be thoroughly recommended and warranted.

Messrs. Chappell and Co. have just opened a number of

NEW ROOMS FOR INSTRUMENTS,

enabling the purchaser to select a Pianoforte or Harmonium from the largest Stock in London, and to try the merits of the various makers side by side.

Full descriptive Lists of Harmoniums and of Pianofortes will be sent on application to

CHAPPELL AND CO.,

50, NEW BOND STREET; AND 13, GEORGE-STREET, HANOVER-SQUARE.

CASE'S FOUR-GUINEA CONCERTINA, with Forty-eight Keys, in mahogany frame and rosewood case The cheapest musical instrument manufactured Just published, 100 Melodies for the Concertina. Arranged by George Case. Price 3s. And First Edition of Instruction Book for the Concertina. 7s 6d. Sole Manufacturers of Case's Patent Concertinas

BOOSEY and SONS, 24 and 28, Holles-street, London.

R. S. PRATTEN'S PERFECTED FLUTES on the old system of fingering, possessing a greater amount and finer quality of tone than any other Instruments. Price from 4 guineas each, manufactured by Rudall, Rose, Carte, and Co., 20, Charles-street, London. Under the personal direction of Mr. Pratten, who is in constant attendance for the purpose of displaying the superior qualities of these instruments to purchasers.

JULLIEN and CO.'S CONCERTINAS, by the most celebrated Makers, as used by Signor Regondi, &c., &c.

No. 1. The Concert-room Concertina, £ s
48 silver bushes, highly ornamented .. 12 12
No. 2. The Drawing-room Concertina,
38 ivory keys .. .. .. 10 10
No. 3. The Amateur Concertina, .. .. .. 8 8
36 ivory keys .. .. ..
No. 4. The Everyday Concertina, .. .. .. 6 6
26 ivory keys .. .. ..

Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street.

JULLIEN and CO.'S CORNET-à-PISTONS, Approved and tried by Herr KOENIG.

Manufactured by ANTOINE COURTOIS.

No. 1.—The Drawing-room Cornet-à-Pistons (by Antoine Courtois), used by Herr Koenig .. .. .. £8 6 6
2.—The Concert-room Cornet-à-Pistons (by Antoine Courtois), used by Herr Koenig at M. Jullien's Concerts 8 6 6
3.—The Military Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. 6 6 6
4.—The Military Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. 5 5 0
5.—The Navy Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. 4 4 0
6.—The Ordinary Cornet-à-Pistons (First quality) .. 3 3 0
7.—The Ordinary Cornet-à-Pistons (Second quality) .. 2 2 0

Lists of Prices, with Drawings of the Instruments, may be had on application. Instruments of every description supplied at the lowest possible prices.—JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, London, W.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLER, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, FEB 28, 1857

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 848.—VOL XXX.] SATURDAY, MARCH 7, 1857. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE.

THE EXPLOSION AT LUND HILL COLLIERY, BARNSLEY.—(SEE PAGE 210.)

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday.

To the excitement of the Carnival has succeeded the retirement of the Carême. All is hushed in the ball-rooms, public and private; the price of fish rises, and Madame complains of a fatiblesse générale, arising solely from a maigre diet, and not at all from the reaction of six weeks of daily feasting and nightly dancing. Daily feasting? Yes, even so. In France—in Paris more especially—men, women, and children are all gourmands—gourmands frankly, naturally, and habitually. At a French dinner of any pretensions at all the quality of the viands is the chief subject of attention and conversation. Each dish, as it is handed round, is recommended, commented on, discussed, approved, or condemned. Gourmandise, so far from being a thing to be at all concealed or ashamed of, is considered in the light rather of a taste, like that for pictures or china; and he who possesses a good cook and gives dinners accordingly is looked upon much in the same light as a virtuoso who opens his saloons to let his friends enjoy the treasures of art therein collected. When, therefore, a period arrives especially devoted to feasting, the thing becomes a sort of duty—a serious occupation; and the sums laid out on edible delicacies, and the amount thereof consumed, is something startling to those not initiated in the ways of our "lively neighbours."

As, however, two things are absolutely essential to the existence of the Parisian, man or woman—namely, excitement and fashion—the utmost ingenuity is employed to make these ingredients enter into all things, however little they may seem to lend themselves to the introduction. Accordingly, church-going is now made the vehicle of these essentials of Parisian existence. Certain preachers and a certain style of sermon become la mode—more especially if these treat of the vices, follies, and exaggerations of the day; and have the same sort of interest for their hearers as the dramas and vaudevilles on similar subjects. And, generally speaking, the effect is precisely the same; no one dreams of crying mea culpa, or thinks these remarks have any peculiar application to him or to her. No; they are satires on the day, not on the men and women thereof; and are listened to, discussed, and commented on, as matters interesting from their actuality, but in no way personally concerning the individuals whose aggregate forms the society under consideration.

Manes of Vatel! prepare to greet a brother. Chevet is departed, and his death has been made a subject of réclame in the true French fashion of the "veuve inconsolable," on the tomb of whose defunct husband may, we believe, be seen to this day, in one of the two principal cemeteries of Paris, the notification of her continuing the business at such and such an address. In the papers appears a gravely-indignant refutation of certain assertions of other papers: for instance, that M. Chevet was the youngest of five sons, whereas, in fact, he was the junior of only three; with various other equally important rectifications, of the whole winding up with the information that Madame Veuve Chevet, with her family, remains at the head of the important Maison de Comestibles at the Palais Royal, the only Maison Chevet in Paris, as well as of the establishment at the Casino at Hombourg-les-Bains, near Frankfort-on-the-Maine. A quelque chose, malheur est bon—M. Chevet's demise may thus be made the means of extending Madame Chevet's commerce.

It appears that in the approaching election at the Academy the chances are chiefly in favour of M. Emile Augier, though it is likely many voices will be given to M. Victor de Laprade.

Ferouk Khan continues to be a good deal honised; the more so that he goes about holding long conversations, especially with ladies, through the medium of his interpreter: the thing is found piquant, which gets over the otherwise intolerable awkwardness and inconvenience of such a mode of communication.

The Emperor has purchased and presented to the Princess Mathilde the hotel she has occupied for some years back in the Rue de Courcelles. Some idea of the rise of value in houses may be given by the history of this one. In the first Republic it was purchased by M. Delorme for 100,000 francs in assignats, representing a few hundred francs in money. Forty years later the Queen Christina gave 500,000 francs for it, and the Emperor has bought it from her for 800,000.

The Queen Christina has purchased a palace at Rome, where she proposes to pass the winter near her daughter, the Princesse de Drago; but, as her other daughter, the Princesse Amparo Czartoryska, resides at Paris, she has refused all proposals to sell the Malmaison, for which she has a peculiar affection, and which she saved from destruction by buying it from a company of speculators, who intended to pull it down.

A most extraordinary correspondence is being carried on in the Presse Philosophique—which is chiefly supplied by former St. Simonians—between M. Proudhon and Madame d'Héricourt; the lady taking much of the nonsense ladies generally talk on such topics, respecting the rights of woman, her equality with man, &c., &c., and her adversary replying with more energy than delicacy or gallantry. We can, however, only admit in this case the verdict of the country jury on the prisoner accused of beating his wife, "Serve her right."

Memoirs seem to be the fashion of the day in France. It is said that the heirs of Marshal Soult, Duke of Dalmatia, have composed from the notes, documents, correspondence, &c., of the Marshal a voluminous memoir, many portions of which will purposely be made to serve as answers to certain parts of the "Memoirs of the Duke of Raguse."

"Les Princesses de la Rampe" has considerable success at the Variétés. At the Lyrique "Obéron," taken from the version of Wieland, is crowned with the warmest applause. The Palais Royal has a woful piece, "Ce que deviennent les Roses," in which Grassot, Hyacinthe, Brasseur, &c., represent the old age of Marco la belle, Olympe de Taverny, Suzanne d'Ange, and other heroines in the "Fille de Marbre" line of recent comedies: the subject is too grave and too painful for such treatment, and the thing is distressing and disgusting, instead of comic.

PEACE WITH PERSIA.

Official intelligence was received in town on Wednesday to the effect that a satisfactory treaty of peace with Persia was signed at Paris on Tuesday. Thus, within a few hours of the factious vote of Tuesday night, we receive another conclusive proof of the wisdom and success with which Lord Palmerston has vindicated the honour and interests of England.

By way of Russia we have accounts of a treaty concluded at Constantinople between Ferouk Khan and the Envoy of the United States, which has been ratified by the Shah. The United States is to have the right of maintaining a Legation at Teheran, and Consulates in that capital, at Tabriz, and Bender-Bushire. As regards commercial matters citizens of the United States are to be put on the footing of the most favoured nations. An Austrian Colonel has arrived at Teheran charged to negotiate a similar treaty in favour of Austria.

THE WAR IN CHINA.

The official despatches received by the last Overland Mail from Sir John Bowring and Sir Michael Seymour give accounts of the attack made upon the British shipping by a vast number of Chinese junks. The attack, which was well concerted, being made at low water, when the larger men-of-war could not safely manœuvre, was brilliantly repulsed. Sir Michael Seymour had thought it wise to abandon his posts at the Dutch Folly and the Factory Gardens, and had strengthened his positions at forts lower down the river. Five hundred men were expected from Singapore.

The details of the massacre of eleven Europeans on board the postal steamer Thistle are also communicated in these despatches. It appears that, previously to her last voyage from Canton to Hong-Kong, the Chinese passengers on board the Thistle were searched, to ascertain that they had no arms; and, this point being settled, the vessel started. No sooner was it under way than the assassins commenced operations. Having obtained knives from a woman who had secreted them under her clothes, and who had not been efficiently searched, they fell on the eleven unarmed Europeans (one of whom was the Spanish Vice-Consul), and murdered them all. Then, running the vessel into a creek, they set fire to her, and carried the heads of their victims on shore, leaving the bodies to the flames. The assassins, seventeen in number, were Chinese soldiers in disguise, and wore their uniforms under the garments they had assumed to gain admission to the vessel. There is no doubt the authorities connived at their design, and will give them the full price for the heads. The Thistle being an iron boat was not destroyed. Her hull was found next day by our boats with the eleven charred bodies decapitated.

Intelligence was received in Paris on Thursday from China which states that the Governor of Lin-tsinn had seized the central opium dépôt on Dec. 5, the property belonging to Englishmen and the East India Company.

PANIC AT HONG-KONG AND WHAMPOA.

On the 12th of January the anchorage of Whampoa was abandoned by the foreigners. The steamers that were towing under convoy of the men-of-war, the floating houses of the English and Americans were still in sight, when the Chinese began the work of plundering all that the Europeans had been forced to leave in the warehouses and in several of the houses built at the water side, making no distinction between the property of one or another nation.

Hong-Kong is prey to a complete panic, which every day increases. The foreigners residing in this colony have organised themselves on a military footing, and the patrols shoot, without mercy, any Chinaman appearing in the streets, or on the roofs of the houses, after eight o'clock in the evening.

When the mail left, the entire European colony of Hong-Kong seemed to have been poisoned, and the family of Sir John Bowring in particular were suffering the greatest agonies. All the Chinese bakers have fled. A general poisoning of the foreigners is believed to have been intended. Fortunately, no one as yet has perished.—Letter in the Monsteur.

THE CHINESE PROCLAMATION OF WAR.

From a letter dated Canton, Jan. 15, in the Moniteur de la Flotte, we learn that the Chinese Government at Pekin has addressed the following instructions to the Governors of the five ports:—

1. Until further orders, all the inhabitants of the Celestial Empire are prohibited from trading with the subjects of her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain.

2. The opium markets, which have been open for the trade of the two nations, are provisionally closed. Those markets were subjected to some very severe regulations, and only a very limited quantity of opium could be legally sold in them.

3. Around the five ports which are open to Europeans a cordon of troops is placed, for the purpose of preventing strangers from penetrating into the interior of the empire. The canals and roads are closed against their goods, which will be confiscated in case of a contravention of this decree.

4. Smuggling, until further orders, will be punished with death.

5. The Imperial fleet and troops are to attack the English wherever they meet them; treaties made with them are annulled.

6. The penalty attached to any violation of the above decrees will be death for the Chinese, and for foreigners detention until the restoration of peace.

7. The provisions of these decrees are not applicable to the markets which are open for goods conveyed by land transport across the frontiers of Siberia.

THE CHINESE REBELLION.

The Nord China Herald says:—"The death of both the eastern and northern Kings is now generally reported and believed by those who come in to Shanghai from Nanking or its vicinity. One of these reports run thus:—The assistant King, Shih Tahkai, returning from Kiangsi with an army 40,000 strong, seized the northern King, Wei Changhwui, and put him to death, became the nor hern King had put to death the eastern King, Yang Siuts'ing. All this is probable enough, yet, until confirmed by some more direct and reliable testimony, it cannot be received as a 'fixed fact.' If it be so, and Hung Nunsuien be still alive, his assistant, Lin, being now alone, may soon give a more favourable exhibition of state policy, or, at least, pursue measures more conciliatory and less cruel."

The China Mail adds to this account, that the strife among the insurgents is increasing. A Tartar major, en route to China, had arrived in a Tien-tsin junk, the supercargo of which, a native of Poh-kien, reported the provinces of Pe-chih Li and Shan-Tung quiet, but the seas much disturbed by pirates.

GREAT ALARM AT SINGAPORE.

A letter from Singapore, under date of January 21, 1857, states that Sir James Brooke had left that morning for Hong-Kong with 300 sepoys, twenty European artillerymen, and 300 tons of shot, shell, &c. The writer says:

> We are not without our disturbances here. A new police and municipal acts came into operation on the 1st inst. which have aroused the native population from their former filthy ways; but they take it unkindly, and by means of their secret societies arranged to shut all their shops on the 2nd inst., leaving the servants of Europeans all food, preventing the coolies, boatmen, cars, and cabs from plying for hire, or in any way assisting us. Of course meetings were called, and steps taken to quell the insurgent spirit. Placards were seen on the walls offering so much per head for the Europeans—as 2000 dollars for the Governor's, 500 for that of the Deputy-Commissioner of Police, and so on; and for a few days no one came to office or walked in the verandahs. But we are ready for them now. Guns are posted so as to enfilade the streets 56 and 58 pounders, with shot, shell, grape, and canister, all are now ready. Signals in case of an outbreak are arranged, rendezvous for ladies arrappointed, the rifle corps drilled daily, and a station appointed them. The place will be put under martial law; and then woe unto the arrogant Chinese, for they will be mowed down by hundreds and thousands; the head men will be seized at the outset. Doubtless, loss of life will occur to the Europeans, but not by cowardly assassinations and brutal murder, as in China. In fact, a revolutionary spirit seems to have seized upon the Chinese everywhere.

THE FRENCH IN CHINA

It is reported in Paris that, in consequence of the last news from China, the French fleet in those seas, under the command of Admirals Guerin and Rigault de Genouilly, will be reinforced by three ships of the line.

THE RUSSIANS IN CHINA

A private letter from St. Petersburg announces that it was known in that city by special courier that the Governor of Russian Siberia had dispatched a column of troops towards Kiakhta, on the frontiers of China. It is added that this measure has been adopted in accord with the Court of Pekin.

THE WAR IN CIRCASSIA.

From various quarters we learn that Russia has lately been making great preparations to carry on the war against Circassia with renewed vigour, now that she is at peace with the Western Powers. On the other hand, the brave inhabitants of that interesting country are as determined as ever to resist the invaders, and we are glad to learn that they will not be without assistance, as will be seen by the following extract from a letter of the Daily News Correspondent at Constantinople:—

> Mehemed Bey, the brave Hungarian officer who has thrown up the Sultan's service in order to take command of the patriotic army of Circassia, must by this time have reached the place of his destination. The Russian Ambassador telegraphed information of his departure to St. Petersburg; and it is possible that orders have also been sent to Odessa to do all that could be done to intercept him; but the prevailing wind has been a fair one for the English vessel conveying Mehemed Bey and his companions, and their expedition has had a start of at least three days. Notes and couriers are passing backwards and forwards between the Russian Embassy and the residence of the Grand Vizier. The English residents here have been delighted to hear of the expedition of the Poles and Hungarians to Circassia, and hardly anything else was talked of at the balls lately given by the Ambassadors. If is asserted, absurdly enough, in Russian circles, that Lord Redcliffe was a party to the movement, and even that a high personage at London had given it his support.

AMERICA.

By the Royal mail steam-ship Africa, which arrived at Liverpool on Monday, and the Liverpool and Philadelphia steam-ship Baltimore, we have intelligence from New York to the 19th ult.

The further consideration of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty was postponed until the 5th of March, on the first day of the new Administration. It appears that all the Southern members opposed it, owing to the slavery clause regarding Honduras. The Washington correspondent of the New York Courier and Enquirer says:—

> The postponement of the treaty by a close vote, as yesterday ordered by the Senate, is a proof that it is not intended ultimately to reject it. Senators are fully awake to the importance of improving the present favourable opportunity for settling the existing difficulties with Great Britain. I have no doubts whatever that the principles of the treaty negotiated by Mr. Dallas will be confirmed, and that henceforth the kingdom of Great Britain and the Republic of the United States will be firmly bound together in the ties of a common and harmonious national policy.

The House of Representatives had passed the Submarine Telegraph Bill, with the following amendments:—

> That citizens of the United States shall have the right to the use of the line for all time instead of fifty years; that the United States and the citizens thereof shall enjoy the use of the said submarine telegraph communication for all time on the same terms and conditions which shall be stipulated in favour of the Government of Great Britain and the subjects thereof, recognising the equality of rights among the citizens of the United States in the use of the said submarine communication, and the lines of telegraph which may at any time connect with the same at its terminus on the coast of Newfoundland and the United States, in any contract so to be entered into by such persons or association with that Government.

An ineffectual effort was made to table the bill, which was passed, amended as above, by a vote of 122 against 81. The amendments require the concurrence of the Senate.

In committee on the Tariff Bill, Mr. Campbell (Ohio) presented a bill, and explained that it was that reported by a majority of the Committee of Ways and Means last Session, and modified by adding various articles to the free list, and leaving the item of wool with a proviso that all wool of the value of 16c. or less and 90c. and over the pound at the port of importation shall be duty free, and leaving the intermediate kinds with the present duty of thirty per cent. Load, revenue 6,000,000 dols. directly and probably 4,000,000 dols. to 6,000,000 dols. indirectly, by the facilities it would give the manufacturing interests of the country. This, after a debate and the offering of other propositions, was agreed to as a substitute for Mr Millson's bill, which contemplated a reduction on all the present schedules. The former was still open to amendment.

Advices from Washington state that Mr. Buchanan had not completed his Cabinet.

The French Minister had demanded from the Government compensation for the injuries to the French residents during the bombardment of Greytown.

The following letter from Greytown shows that General Walker's position is still very critical:—

> GREYTOWN, MOSQUITO, Feb. 7.
>
> I told you in my last communication that there were 200 Filibusters at the company's buildings on the opposite side of the harbour, impatiently waiting for means to get up the river and fight for Walker and liberty on the 18th ult. Captain Erskine sent an officer to their camp, to see if there were any British subjects held against their wishes, and volunteered stepped out of the ranks, and were sent over here and kept at the Consul's quarters. Two or three of the Generals in command made speeches on the occasion, referring particularly to the British Iron running away with his tail between his legs at the battle of New Orleans, and abusing John Bull generally. The sixteen men were then taken back by the United States' steamship Granada, which called in specially for the object on the 21st ult. by arrangement.
>
> After three weeks' constant labour Mr. Scott got an old worn-out boat ready, and the Filibusters started on the 23rd ult. to sweep the river of the Costa Ricans. They took with them two brass guns, obtained from the company's steam-ships Texas and Tennessee. It is, however, eleven days since they left here, and they have not yet got as far as Serapiqui, but have taken possession of a native Nicaraguan's plantation about eight miles this side of it, and have (so they say) built a fort called Fort Anderson. Their steam-boat is continually coming down, and is here now, expecting the New Orleans steamer with reinforcements. Should she bring any they will probably attack the Costa Ricans, although the Commander-in-Chief says he could whip them with only seven men. Two of the men came down the river from the fort on a log yesterday. They said they deserted four days ago, and had been that time getting here; and that at least one hundred of the rest were sick with fever, leaving not more than eighty fit for duty.
>
> We have no intelligence of the state of affairs up the country by the river, but a private letter from Costa Rica, via Panama, speaks of Walker as being completely surrounded by the allied forces under General Canas, at Rivas.

According to intelligence from Mexico, dated February 1st, the treaty signed between the United States and Mexico provides that the former shall lend Mexico 15,000,000 dollars, of which 3,000,000 go to American claims, and the United States is to have a mortgage on the customs revenue, and to receive 15 per cent of the duties.

In the Burdell case the jury has returned a verdict of wilful murder against Mrs Cunningham, Eckel, and Sureigass. They were of opinion that the daughters of Mrs. Cunningham were also implicated, and recommended their safe keeping.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

ON Wednesday morning a mounted detachment of the 11th (Prince Albert's Hussars, consisting of 110 non-commissioned officers and men, under the command of Captain J. Miller, arrived at Chatham from Canterbury under orders to proceed to Hounslow Barracks.

THE Retribution, 28, paddlewheel frigate, ordered for foreign service, left Portsmouth on Monday afternoon. Her destination is reported to be China. The Orlando, sailing frigate, is expected to carry out troops of the 5th, 10th, and 18th Hussars, also to the same destination.

THE first division of the 2nd and 3rd Dragoon Guards embarked at Dublin on Tuesday, and proceeded to Canterbury, where both regiments will assemble previous to leaving for India. Each of the regiments is 700 strong, and arranged in three divisions. At ten o'clock the regiments were drawn up on the square of the Royal Barracks, and inspected by General Lord Seaton, attended by his staff. The troops afterwards proceeded to the North-wall, the bands of both regiments playing before them along the quays as far as Carlisle-bridge. The division which left was under the command of Captain Keane.

THE troops quartered at Chatham garrison, to the number of about 4000 men of all ranks, consisting of the regiments of the Line composing the Provisional Battalion, the Royal Engineers, and the Royal Marine Light Infantry, were marched to Chatham lines on Wednesday for the purpose of going through the evolutions of a field-day. The troops of the Line, divided into two battalions, under the respective commands of Colonel H. Jervis and Lieutenant-Colonel R. N. Phillips, took up their position in the centre of the columns, with the corps of the Royal Engineers on their right, and the Royal Marines, commanded by Colonel E. Rea, on their left. The whole brigade was then put through a variety of manœuvres by Colonel W. H. Eden, in command of Chatham garrison, which were performed by the troops in a satisfactory manner.

DEARNESS OF LODGINGS IN PARIS.—A very general opinion appears to prevail that rents have augmented in consequence of the number of houses that have been pulled down. This is a profound error, as the Prefect of the Seine has demonstrated in the most complete manner. Thus, the number of houses pulled down in the last five years amounts to 2624, while the number of new buildings is 3536, or more than double of the former. Inquiries made in the arrondissements of St. Denis and of Sceaux show that in the suburbs the houses newly constructed surpass exactly the number pulled down. Thus, we find that in Paris and the suburbs 18 594 houses have been constructed, against 4667 houses pulled down. Another error, equally prevalent, is contradicted by the Prefect—namely, that the old houses are more subdivided, and contained a greater proportion of lodgings than those recently constructed in their place. It is thus shown that the increase of rents does not proceed either from the diminution of the number of houses, or of the number of lodgings. To what, then, are we to attribute this dearness? The cause is clearly stated by the Prefect; it proceeds from the rapid increase of the population of the capital, from the number of foreigners and persons from the provinces, attracted by the facility of communications. In five years the population of the capital has increased to the extent of 395,000 souls, and we can scarcely experience astonishment at the supply of accommodation not corresponding with that vast demand.—Constitutionnel.

STATE OF AFFAIRS AT CANTON.

We have been favoured with the following communication from the head of a firm in the city of London long connected with the India and China trade:—

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS)

LONDON, 4th March, 1857.

FEELING a deep interest in all questions relating to the immense empire of China, and the relations of this country therewith, I have watched with some attention the discussions which have just taken place in both Houses of Parliament with reference to the policy and conduct of Sir John Bowring at Canton.

Were I to be guided by the invectives with which Sir John has been vehemently assailed by those who profess to discountenance the course he has pursued, I should feel, in endeavouring to urge one word on his side of the matter, that I was defending the acts of one lost to all sentiments of justice and humanity.

In thinking better things, however (in common, I am inclined to believe, with the large majority of the public both here and in China), of our Governor at Hong-Kong, I feel that the effect of these attacks is much weakened by the truth of the allusion by one of your morning contemporaries on the subject to the remarkable coincidence of the opinions expressed by the various speakers on the subject with their political and party views.

On the same grounds, however, that those who appear to use the name of Sir John Bowring as the medium through which to level a shaft on Lord Palmerston's Government will, doubtless, demand that public opinion should regard the coincidence above mentioned in a charitable, rather than in an uncharitable, sense, so I think, in considering impartially the acts of a far-distant Governor and Consul, the public will reject inferences substituted for facts, and prejudice for dispassionate inquiry, leaving the question as to whether Sir John Bowring or his accusers best merit this considerate treatment to the consciences of the respective parties themselves.

Being wholly unconnected with that political arena which appears to have so magical an effect on the mental vision of many of those subjected to its influence, I can afford to regard the question in dispute at least with impartiality, however inferior in ability to those distinguished individuals with whose expressed opinions I have the misfortune to differ.

Nearly all the remarks which have fallen from those who have spoken in Parliament on this subject, and especially those who have approved the proceedings of her Majesty's representatives in China, have chiefly applied themselves to the legality or otherwise of the register of the lorcha Arrow, the seizure of whose crew it is admitted on all hands was the original cause of the quarrel. Doubtless as a legal or even political encounter, this part of the question is of grave importance; but, in estimating the judgment and conduct of Sir John Bowring (to attack and abuse whom some of the speakers appear to have considered by far the more important point), I cannot help thinking that the refinements of legal interpretation are rather beside the question.

A colonial ordinance, sanctioned by a solemn treaty with the Emperor of China, issued and long acted upon by the Hong-Kong Executive, with the permission and knowledge of the British Parliament and Ministry, and unquestioned by the local authorities at Canton, is suddenly, and in the face of a Chinese population of a million and a half, openly violated by those authorities. Mr. Consul Parkes and Sir John Bowring, as well as Sir Michael Seymour, acting upon that interpretation of the colonial arrangements, which had never previously been disputed or objected to, naturally enough require an explanation as on a proceeding which had every appearance of a deliberate outrage on the British flag.

This requirement is superciliously (to use, I think, the mildest term) evaded by Commissioner Yeh, whose conduct and correspondence clearly show (at all events at the period when the animus of the matter on his part must be considered) he had no knowledge whatever of the now asserted but still questionable expiry of the British registry of the lorcha.

Surely it must occur to any reasonable person that, had Commissioner Yeh's intentions been amicable instead of the reverse, two simple courses were open to him:—1st, To protest against any supposed illegality in the colonial registry of such vessels as the Arrow; and, if he thought fit, to give notice that after a given date he should disregard such register; or, 2nd, To have demanded one or any of the crew suspected of piracy at the hands of the British Consul, in accordance as Yeh must have well known with the terms of the treaty.

As to the allusion to how we should have acted had America, Russia, or France been the offending party, I deny altogether the relevance of any such comparison, because neither of those Powers would have been guilty of the bad taste or semi-barbarous folly first to violate a British right until then unquestioned, and then to refuse all personal explanations, and decline to recognise any pleas of equality between the two Governments.

The information in the hands of the Parliament evidently shows that this refusal to treat personally on the part of the Canton authorities was the main cause of the dispute (easy of adjustment at first) becoming gradually embittered, until at last the alternatives of eating his own words or a recourse to hostile measures were the only ones open to Sir John Bowring.

These, then, are the circumstances on which those who object to the conduct of Sir John found their severe and unmeasured condemnation. They say in effect we are decidedly of opinion that the colonial ordinance, the effect of which alone rendered the Chinese seizure of the Arrow's crew offensive or improper in illegal and invalid, therefore Sir John Bowring is a monster and unfit for his responsible post. I beg to dissent in toto from this most unjust conclusion. What can these gentlemen possibly expect the attachment of a colonial Governor to be? If the greatest legal authorities in the realm are at issue as to the power of the Hong-Kong authorities to grant the register in question; and yet it is expected, nay demanded, that Sir John should not remain at his post unless he possesses legal abilities so far exceeding our greatest lawyers as to be able at once to foresee on the spot what a certain number of forensic legislators consider an admitted and acknowledged power exercised by the Colonial Executive, to be in strict law invalid, and, in fact, no power at all.

If appearances favour that, under such an argument, Sir John Bowring is placed on the horns of this dilemma—if he had acted as Lords Derby and St. Leonards and their party say he should have done, and abstained altogether from remark or remonstrance, because, as they say, he had no ground of complaint, he would have acted directly contrary to the view of the case entertained by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Wensleydale, the Attorney General, &c.

Surely, therefore, even had this diversity of opinion been known to Sir John (and it assuredly was not), he would have been justified in considering custom and mutual recognition of the lorcha's rights as quite sufficient both to evidence the arrogant and aggressive character of Yeh's conduct, and also to justify the remonstrances on behalf of Great Britain which followed. If this position is granted, the subsequent resort to hostilities became a necessary sequence, arising solely from the dogged and offensive refusal on the part of the Chinese Commissioner (during the ample interval allowed) either to make public and honourable restitution, or to treat personally with her Majesty's representatives; for had we drawn in our horns at the last moment, as we are told by some we should have done, everybody in the slightest degree acquainted with the Chinese character will be perfectly aware that the previous most unsatisfactory relations of Europeans with the Chinese at Canton would have promptly become quite intolerable, and, when at length even a member of the Society of Friends himself would be compelled to adopt the offensive, the conduct of the Chinese authorities and populace would have become still more obstinate and impracticable, and the consequences (when hostilities became compulsory) proportionately the more to be deplored.

But in some quarters it is argued that the question as to the nationality of the lorcha, and also the insult to the flag she carried, became subsequently of little moment, in consequence of two circumstances which afterwards occurred, viz.: 1st, The assumed return by Commissioner Yeh of the lorcha's crew to Mr. Consul Parkes; and, 2nd, the demand made by Sir John Bowring just prior to the commencement of hostilities, that he might be permitted to have a personal interview with the Chinese Commissioner within the walls of Canton.

As regards the first point, I do not hesitate to say that the strong probability is that an old manœuvre of the Chinese was resorted to—that of sending condemned criminals in equal number to the parties seized when a pretended restitution becomes desirable. Had Yeh succeeded in this he would have laughed nicely, as the Persians say, at our Consul's beard.

It will be urged this is a mere begging the question by thus assuming a case. I admit it, and for the same reason precisely I say it is begging the question to assume that these men were the actual crew, in the face of Consul Parkes' assertion to the contrary, whose knowledge of Chinese character and general urbanity towards them is well known; whilst the British commander of the lorcha (whose existence is conveniently all but ignored) would doubtless be present to identify his own crew, or the reverse. The non-return, or even offer to do so, of the particular individual whom the Chinese more particularly desired to seize is almost forgotten by the allies of Commissioner Yeh.

The second point is much relied upon as substantial evidence that it was a preconceived idea and intention of Sir John Bowring to resort to hostilities in any case, and to force an entrance as British Minister into Canton.

With all respect for those who think thus, it seems to me to prove exactly the reverse, and for this simple reason. Sir John appears to have found one great impediment to an adjustment of the disputes consisted in the avoidance of personal negotiations between him and Yeh, hence it appears a reasonable inference that, finding an adoption of extreme measures becoming unavoidable without (as his Excellency, I apprehend, justly conceived) a most unwarranted loss of national dignity, Sir John had recourse to the only remaining chance of a peaceful settlement by asking to see Yeh himself, and thus leaving no stone unturned prior to the hostilities which, in his judgment, had at length become inevitable. It is really lamentable to see argument so positively prostituted to prejudice or party as to see this last peaceful effort of our Plenipotentiary twisted into evidence of an impatience on his part to plunge into acts of needless and sanguinary violence.

Mr. Cobden instances an American dispute at Charleston on his side of the question; but let me in turn instance what the American thought of national dignity during this very quarrel of ours with Commissioner Yeh. A Chinese fort fires into an American boat, Jonathan considers not a month as too short notice, but twenty-four hours too long, and proceeds forthwith to demolish the said fort, with such large or small loss of life to the Chinese as the operation required.

Sir John Bowring, in fact, finds political matters much against his cause here just now. Of course, the Peace party are ready to embrace any one who will aid their hobby, from the Czar of Russia to a Kaffir chief, from Mr. Disraeli to Commissioner Yeh; whilst the Derbyites find it very convenient to fraternise for the nonce with even their arch antagonists in order to have a chance of office.

Happily for this country we have in Lord Palmerston a Premier who—to use the words of his then supporter, but now opponent, Lord J. Russell—is not the Minister of China or of Russia, but of England.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

PETER NEMO.

THE WEATHER

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE CAMBRIDGE OBSERVATORY, FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 4, 1857.

| 1857. | Barometer corrected and reduced to 32° at 9 A.M. | Barometer corrected and reduced to 32° at 3 P.M. | Dry Bulb at 9 A.M. | Wet Bulb at 9 A.M. | Dry Bulb at 3 P.M. | Wet Bulb at 3 P.M. | Direction of Wind. | Amount of Cloud (0–10). | Rain in Inches |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Inches. | | | | | | | | |
| Feb. 26 | 30·05 | 46·6 | 38·8 | 39·2 | 37·0 | 35·5 | 46·2 | 41·0 | NW. | 0 | 0·000 |
| „ 27 | 30·471 | 47·0 | 38·8 | 39·6 | 37·6 | 36·0 | 46·6 | 43·8 | SW | 10 | 0·000 |
| „ 28 | 30·513 | 45·7 | 38·9 | 37·4 | 45·7 | 43·4 | 47·4 | 46·6 | W. | 5 | 0·000 |
| March 1 | 30·593 | 42·8 | 39·2 | 42·1 | 41·8 | 41·0 | 42·3 | 42·0 | NW. | 10 | 0·000 |
| „ 2 | 30·565 | 45·8 | 39·9 | 44·3 | 43·4 | 44·0 | 45·5 | 44·9 | E. | 10 | 0·000 |
| „ 3 | 30·482 | 46·0 | 38·9 | 41·0 | 42·8 | 41·3 | 48·9 | 43·5 | NE. NW. | 10 | 0·000 |
| „ 4 | 30·194 | 40·8 | 32·2 | 35·3 | 45·3 | 41·7 | 49·6 | 48·4 | SW. | 10 | 0·042 |
| Means | 30·47 | 44·2 | 38·2 | 42·1 | 41·1 | 39·9 | 45·1 | — | — | — | 0·051 |

The range of temperature during the week was 25·1 degrees.

Hoar frost covered the ground on the morning and night of Feb. 28th and on the morning of March 1st. A little rain fell on the night of March 1st.

The weather was very fine and the sky clear throughout the 26th and on the evening and night of the 27th, and the moon was shining faintly at midnight of March 3rd. The sky was quite overcast on February 27th and from March 1st to 4th. A dense fog came over at 8h. a.m. of March 1st, and prevailed during the morning.

The wind was blowing in heavy gusts on February 27th and March 4th. On the latter day the barometer was falling rapidly, the reading at 3 p.m. being 30·070 inches, and a shower of rain fell at 8 p.m. J. BREEN.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY (THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION)

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 4″ W. Height above sea-level

| | Barometer corrected and reduced to 32° at 9 A.M. | Barometer corrected and reduced to 32° at 3 P.M. | Dry Bulb at 9 A.M. | Wet Bulb at 9 A.M. | Dry Bulb at 3 P.M. | Wet Bulb at 3 P.M. | Direction of Wind. | Amount of Cloud (0–10). | Rain in Inches |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Inches. | | | | | | | | |
| Feb. 26 | 30·[illegible] | 46·2 | 42 | 40 | 47 | 43·9 | [illegible] | [illegible] | 0·000 |
| „ 27 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | 0·000 |
| „ 28 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| March 1 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| „ 2 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| „ 3 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| „ 4 | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| Means | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] |

The daily means are obtained from observations made at 6h. and 10h. a.m. and 2h. 6h., and 10h. p.m. on each day, except Sunday, when the first observation is omitted. The corrections for diurnal variation are taken from the Tables of Mr Glaisher. The "Dew point" and "Relative Humidity" are calculated, from observations of the dry and wet bulb thermometers, by Dr. Apjohn's Formula and Dalton's Tables of the Tension of Vapour. The movement of the wind is given by a self-recording Robinson's anemometer, the amount stated for each day being that registered from midnight to midnight

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

SIR G. P. L. PHILIPPS, BART.

SIR GODWIN PHILIPPS LAUGHARNE PHILIPPS, tenth Baronet, of Picton Castle, in the county of Pembroke, was the only son of Sir William Philipps, the ninth Baronet, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of George White, Esq. He was born the 10th January, 1840, and succeeded his father as tenth Baronet the 17th of February, 1850. He died, unmarried, at St. David's, on the 12th ultimo; and as of his immediate family, his four sisters only survive, the very old Baronetcy of Philipps of Picton Castle, created in 1621, passes to his distant relative, the Rev. James Evans Philipps, Vicar of Orrington, Dorsetshire, now the eleventh Baronet. This gentleman descends directly from Lieut.-General Richard Philipps, Governor of Nova Scotia, who was younger brother of Charles, the great-grandson of Sir John, the first Baronet, and the great-grandfather of Sirs Rowland and William, the eighth and ninth Baronets. The Rev. Sir James Evans Philipps who thus succeeds, as eleventh Baronet, was born in 1793, and married Mary Anne, daughter of Benjamin Bickley, Esq., by whom he has a son, the Rev. James Erasmus Philipps, and three daughters.

In the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of the 30th March, 1850, there appeared a biographical notice of Sir William P. L. Philipps, father of Sir Godwin, just deceased, together with an account of the Philipps family

SIR COMPTON DOMVILE.

SIR COMPTON DOMVILE, Bart., of Templeogue, and Santry House, county Dublin, was the eldest son of Charles Pocklington, Esq., formerly M.P. for the county of Dublin, by his wife, Margaret, daughter of Thomas Sheppard, Esq. This Mr. Pocklington assumed the name of Domvile pursuant to the will of his maternal uncle, the Right Hon. Sir Compton Domvile, whose property, as well as that of his first cousin, Henry Barry, Lord Santry, he inherited.

Sir Compton Domvile, the subject of this notice, entered the British Army early in life; and served in the 6th Infantry Regiment in Canada, and at Walcheren. He sat in Parliament for nineteen years as representative of the boroughs of Plympton and Oxchampton, county of Devon; and he once unsuccessfully contested the county of Dublin. He was created a Baronet 22nd May, 1815. He married, first, the 21st Oct., 1811, Frances Elizabeth, daughter of the Right Hon. and Right Rev. Charles Lindsay, Bishop of Kildare, and niece to the Earl of Balcarres, by whom (who died in 1812) he had one son, Compton, who died, without issue, the 19th March, 1852, having married Isabella, eldest daughter of the Right Hon. Sir George Arthur, Bart., which lady survives him. Sir Compton Domvile married, secondly, the 7th Dec., 1815, Helena, daughter of Frederick Trench, Esq., of Heywood, Queen's County, and sister of Sir Frederick Trench, K.G.H., by which lady who survives him, he leaves two sons and four daughters, the eldest, died young, and three daughters. The sons are Charles, his successor, and F. William, who married, the 12th July, Caroline, sixth daughter of the Hon. General Meade, and niece of the Earl of Clanwilliam. Sir Compton's eldest daughter, Anna Helena, was married, the 31st June, 1842, to Sir Thomas E. Winnington, Bart., M.P. Sir Compton, who possessed large landed estates in the county of Dublin and other parts of Ireland, and was Custos Rotulorum of the county of Dublin, died at his mansion, 5, Grosvenor-square, on the 23rd ult. He is succeeded by the elder of his two surviving sons, now Sir Charles Compton William Domvile, the second Baronet.

LIEUT. COLONEL MALET.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL GEORGE GRENVILLE MALET, H.E.I.C.S., who was killed at the capture of Bushire on the 9th of last December, while gallantly and victoriously commanding the 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry, was the fourth son of Sir Charles Warre Malet, late Resident, and the brother of Sir Alexander Malet, present Baronet, of Wilbury House, Wilts. He entered the East India Company's military service when young, and was actively engaged in it for thirty-two years. He was present in several battles in the Afghan and Sikh wars, and he gave up a good staff appointment to join the expedition to Bushire. General Stalker, the Commander of the Persian expedition, in a letter to one of Malet's brothers, relates the Colonel's death thus:—"Your poor brother George was leading his men in charging the enemy from Mort Bahlou on the morning of the 9th in a most brilliant affair we had with the enemy; but the death of your brother is damned all, and made the victory a very, very dear one. He was beloved by every one men and officers, a more gallant and kind-hearted soldier never breathed. I saw him pass at the head of his men on the beach. Poor fellow! he had spared five hundred men, who surrendered, but one of these very men shot him. . . . Your poor brother, Brigadier Stopford, and Lieut. Hutson were buried yesterday morning in one grave." Col Malet married, the 31st March, 1831, Mary Fleming, daughter of Colonel John Taylor, and has had four children. This lady and his orphan children are on their way to England. Colonel Malet was one of eight brothers, of whom five have been in the East India Company's service; another is a Lieut.-Colonel in the Army, and the eldest, the present Sir Alexander Malet, is her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Germanic Confederation. Colonel Malet's third brother, who quitted the East India Company's Civil Service, and went into holy orders, is the Rev. William Wyndham Malet, present Vicar of Ardsley.

WILLS.—The will of the Right Hon. Nathaniel Baron Scarsdale was proved in London under £160,000 personalty: he has provided liberally for all his servants. John Gurney, Esq., of Eriham Hill, Norfolk, £30,000.—The Rev. W. Thresher, of Ipswich, has left bequests to Bygglesworth, £25,000.—John Wood, Esq., of Totteridge, £30,000.—Andrew Ure, M.D., £10,000.

DEATH OF MR SERJEANT WILKINS.—On Wednesday forenoon Mr Serjeant Wilkins died at his chambers, No. 8, Queen's Bench Walk, Temple, he having been for some weeks past in a state of health which almost deprived his friends of any hope of his recovery. The Temple Church was tolled shortly after his demise to announce the melancholy event.

IRISH TRANQUILLITY.—Mr. Smith O'Brien, who was serving on the county of Limerick Grand Jury at the Spring Assizes, took occasion the other day to call the attention of his brother jurors to the folly of maintaining the police force of the district at its present establishment when crime had decreased, and the general tranquillity of the county no longer rendered necessary an expenditure for a surplus force which had formerly been put on to meet the exigencies of extraordinary convulsions or agrarian outrage.

THE SCOTCH FREEHOLD MOVEMENT.—On Monday last a meeting was held in Edinburgh to hear the report of the deputation to London on the freehold question, consisting of Mr. Duncan M'Laren, the Rev. Dr. Begg, and Rodle Grieve. The deputation expressed their great satisfaction with their reception by the English Liberal members, including Mr Roebuck, Sir De Lacy Evans, Sir C. Napier, and numerous others; and that even the Conservatives had left bequests to the freeholders had given a most favourable consideration to their proposals. The support of the English members, however, would depend on the Scottish people showing that they really wanted the new freehold suffrage. They had no doubt that, although English members might not listen to any nonsense about the Scotch Ban and unicorn, they were always ready to give attention to measures for the redress of any practical inequality or grievance. Their chief difficulty was with the Scotch Liberal members, many of whom were so obsequious to the Lord Advocate that they would refuse to vote for any measure of reform which he did not sanction. To the Scotch county members, of course, they did not apply. It was agreed to request Mr. Laing, member for the Wick Burghs, to bring in a bill for extending the freehold system in Scotland, in the event of Government declining to do so. It was also resolved to take steps to get up a popular petition on the subject.

The Turin Armonia, a journal of the priest party, has been found guilty of a libel on the King, and condemned in 2000 lires and three months' imprisonment.

The mercantile marine of Russia in the Caspian Sea, according to the latest returns from Astrakan, consists of 132 vessels of different sizes, employing crews to the number of 1980 men.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

(From a Supplement to the London Gazette.)

The following is a list of the names of those upon whom this most enviable honour had been conferred, and the ground on which each was selected as worthiest, among so many brave men, of the honour conferred upon him:—

ROYAL NAVY

CECIL WILLIAM BUCKLEY, Commander; JOHN TALBOT BURGOYNE, Commander; JOHN ROBERTS, Gunner.—Landed in desperate service of a superior force and set fire to the Russian stores at Genitchi. Lieuten ant Cecil W. Buckley, also in a four-oared gig, accompanied by Mr. Henry Cooper, boatswain, and manned by volunteers, immediately landed and fired the different stores and Government buildings at Taganrog. "This dangerous, not to say desperate service, (carried out in a town containing upwards of 3000 troops, constantly endeavouring to prevent it, and only checked by the fire of the boats' guns) was most effectually performed." (Despatch from Admiral Lord Lyons, June 6, 1855, No. 429.)

HENRY COOPER, Boatswain.—Performed the desperate service of landing at Taganrog, in presence of a large force, to set fire to the Government stores. See preceding memoir of Commander Buckley

JOSEPH TREWAVAS, Seaman.—"Performed the gallant service in having cut the hawser of the floating-bridge in the Straits of Genitchi, under a heavy fire of musketry, on which occasion he was wounded." This service was performed by the crews of the launches of the fleet of paddlebox boats of the Beagle, under a heavy fire of musketry at about a distance of eighty yards; the beach being completely lined with troops and the adjacent houses filled with riflemen.

JOSEPH KELLAWAY, Boatswain.—"While boatswain of the Wrangler, in the Sea of Azoff, was taken prisoner after a stout resistance, while endeavouring to rescue Mr. Odevaine, mate." This gallant service was performed on shore, near Marioupol.

GEORGE FOOTT DAY, Commander.—With great enterprise and gallantry landed, and successfully conducted a reconnoissance, within the enemy's lines at Genitchi. This service was performed by Commander Day with the view of ascertaining the practicability of reaching the enemy's gunvessels, which lay within the Straits of Genitchi, close to the town. It was performed by Commander Day alone, on a dark but fine night, with the assistance of a pocket compass. After traversing four or five miles of low swampy ground, occasionally up to his knees in water, he at length advanced to within about 200 yards of the vessels. From the perfect silence on board them it was his conviction that they were without crews; and when he returned it was the full impression of the whole party that such was a feasible one. This opinion, however, he was induced to change on the following day, in consequence of the increasing activity which was apparent in the direction of the vessels, and therefore he determined on making a second visit to the spot. On this occasion the night was a squally one, and the journey was longer and more difficult than before. On reaching the spot, finding the vessels still there, and their crews apparently on the alert, he decided that any attempt to surprise them was out of the question.

JOHN EDMUND COMMERELL, Commander; WILLIAM RICKARD, Quartermaster.—"Crossed the Isthmus of Arabat, and destroyed large quantities of forage on the Crimean shore of the Sivash." This enterprise was performed by Commander Commerell, at night, accompanied by William Rickard, Quartermaster, and George Milestone, A.B. Having hauled their small boat across the Spit of Arabat they traversed the Sivash to the Crimean shore of the Putrid Sea. The magazine of corn, of which they were in search, lay about two miles and a half off, and to reach it they had to ford two rivers, the Kara-su and the Salghir. The forage and corn, amounting to ten tons, were stacked on the banks of the latter river, in the vicinity of a guard-house, and close to from 20 to 30 mounted Cossacks, who were encamped in the neighbouring village. Commander Commerell and his two companions contrived to ignite the stacks, the rapid blazing of which alarmed the guard, who pursued them to the shore with a heavy fire of musketry, and very nearly succeeded in taking them prisoners. The other men, from exhaustion, had fallen into the mud, and was unable to extricate himself.

GEORGE INGOUVILLE, Captain of the Mast.—On July 13, 1855, while the boats of the Arrogant were engaged with the enemy's gun-boats and batteries off Viborg, her second cutter was swamped by the blowing up of her magazine and drifted under a battery. Notwithstanding that he was wounded in the arm, and that the boat was under a very heavy fire, Ingouville, without any order to do so, jumped overboard, caught hold of her painter, and saved her.

JOHN BYTHESEA, Commander; WILLIAM JOHNSTONE, Stoker. On August 9, 1854, having ascertained that an Aide-de-Camp of the Emperor of Russia had landed on the Island of Wardo, in charge of a mail and despatches for the Russian General Commanding, Bythesea obtained permission for himself and William Johnstone, a stoker, to proceed on shore with the view to intercept them. Being disguised and well armed they concealed themselves till the night of the 12th, when the mailbags were landed close to the spot where they lay secreted in the bushes. The mails were accompanied by a military escort, which passed close to them, and which, as soon as it was ascertained that there was no more, took its departure. Availing themselves of this opportunity, Commander Bythesea and the stoker attacked the five men in charge of the mail, took three of them prisoners, and brought them in their own boat on board the Arrogant. The despatches were carried to General Baraguay d'Hilliers, who expressed himself in the highest terms of approval.

CHARLES D. LUCAS, Lieutenant.—This officer was promoted to his present rank June 21, 1854, for his gallantry in throwing overboard a live shell at the first attack on the batteries of Bomarsund.

NAVAL BRIGADE (EMPLOYED ON SHORE.)

WILLIAM PEEL, Captain.—Sir Stephen Lushington recommends this officer:—1st. For having, on the 18th of Oct., 1854, at the greatest possible risk, taken up a live shell, the fuse still burning, from among several powder-cases outside the magazine, and thrown it over the parapet (the shell bursting as it left his hands), thereby saving the magazine and the lives of those immediately around it. 2nd. On Nov. 5, 1854, at the Battle of Inkerman, for joining the officers of the Grenadier Guards, and assisting in defending the colours of that regiment, when hard pressed at the Sandbag Battery. 3rd. On the 18th of June, 1855, for volunteering to lead the ladder party at the assault on the Redan, and carrying the first ladder until wounded

EDWARD SR JOHN DANIELS, Midshipman. Sir Stephen Lushington recommends this officer:—1st. For answering a call for volunteers to bring in powder to the battery from a waggon in a very exposed position, under a destructive fire, by which having disabled the horses. 2nd. For accompanying Captain Peel, at the Battle of Inkerman, as aide-de-camp. 3rd. For devotion to his leader, Captain Peel, on June 18, 1855, in tying a tourniquet on his arm on the glacis of the Redan, while exposed to a very heavy fire.

WILLIAM NATHAN WRIGHT HEWETT, Lieutenant.—1. On the occasion of a repulse of a sortie of Russians by Sir De Lacy Evans's division on the 26th of October, 1854, Mr. Hewett, then acting mate of her Majesty's ship Beagle, was in charge of the right Lancaster Battery before Sebastopol. The advance party placed the gun in great peril, from jeopardy their skirmishers advancing within 300 yards of the battery, and pouring in a sharp fire from their rifle rifles. By some misapprehension the word was passed to spike the gun and retreat: but Mr. Hewett, taking upon himself the responsibility of disregarding the order, replied that "Such order did not come from Captain Lushington, and he would not do it till it did." Mr. Hewett then pulled down the parapet of the battery, and, with the assistance of some soldiers, got his gun round, and poured upon the advancing column of Russians a most destructive and effective fire. For the gallantry exhibited on this occasion the Lord Admralty promoted him to the rank of Lieutenant. 2. On November 5, 1854, at the Battle of Inkerman, Captain Lushington again brought before the Commander-in-Chief the services of Mr. Hewett, saying, "I have much pleasure in again bringing Mr. Hewett's gallant conduct to your notice."

JOHN SULLIVAN, Boatswain's Mate.—Recommended by Sir S. Lushington.—"For having, on or about April 10, 1855, deliberately placed a flag on a mound, in a very exposed position, under a heavy fire, to enable battery No. 5 to open fire upon a concealed Russian battery that was doing great execution on one of our advanced works."

JOHN SHEPHERD, Boatswain. Recommended by Captain Keppel, for, on July 16, 1855, while serving as boatswain's mate of the St. Jean d'Acre (attached to the Naval Brigade) proceeding in a punt with an explo-ive apparatus into the harbour of Sebastopol, to endeavour to blow up one of the Russian line-of-battle ships. This service, which was twice attempted, is described by Lord Lyons as "a bold one and gallantly executed."

THOMAS REEVES, Seaman; JAMES GORMAN, Seaman; MARK SCHOLEFIELD, Seaman. "At the Battle of Inkerman, November 5, 1854, when the right Lancaster Battery was attacked, these three seamen mounted the embrasures, and, under a heavy fire, made use of the disabled soldiers' muskets, which were loaded for the men as fast as continuing, succeeded in carrying the wounded soldier to a place of safety.

ROYAL MARINES

GEORGE DARE DOWELL, Lieutenant, Royal Marine Artillery.—An explosion having occurred in one of the rocket boats of the Arrogant, during the attack on some forts near Viborg, Lieutenant Dowell (who was on board the Ruby gun-boat, while his own boat was receiving a supply of rockets) was the first to jump into the quarter-boat of the Ruby, and with three volunteers, himself pulling the stroke oar, proceeded instantly, under a heavy fire of grape and musketry, to the assistance of the cutter's crew. The Russians endeavoured to prevent his object of saving the men and boat, but Lieutenant Dowell succeeded in taking up three of the boat's crew, and placing them on board the Ruby; and, on his returning to the spot, was mainly instrumental in bringing off the sinking cutter

JOHN PRETTYJOHN, Corporal, Royal Marines. Reported for gallantry at the Battle of Inkerman, having placed himself in an advanced position, and noticed as having himself shot four Russians.

THOMAS WILKINSON, Bombardier, Royal Marine Artillery. Specially recommended for gallant conduct in the advanced batteries, June 7, 1855, in placing sandbags to repair the work under a galling fire.

THE ARMY

2ND DRAGOONS.

Sergeant-Major JOHN GREIVE (No. 774).—Saved the life of an officer, in the Heavy Cavalry charge at Balaclava, who was surrounded by Russian cavalry, by his gallant conduct in riding up to the rescue and cutting off the head of one Russian, disabling and dispersing the others

4TH LIGHT DRAGOONS.

Private SAMUEL PARKIN, No. 636).—In the charge of the Light Cavalry Brigade at Balaclava Trumpet-Major Crawford's horse fell, and dismounted him, and he lost his sword; he was attacked by two Cossacks, when Private Samuel Parkes (whose horse had been shot), saved his life by placing himself between them and the Trumpet-Major, and drove them away by his sword. In attempting to follow the Light Cavalry Brigade in the retreat they were attacked by six Russians, whom Parkes kept at bay, and retired slowly, fighting, and defending the Trumpet-Major for some time, until deprived of his sword by a shot.

LATE OF THE 11TH HUSSARS.

Lieutenant ALEXANDER ROBERT DUNN.—For having, in the Light Cavalry charge on the 25th of October, 1854, saved the life of Sergeant Bentley, 11th Hussars, by cutting down two or three Russian lancers who were attacking him from the rear, and afterwards cutting down a Russian bussar, who was attacking Private Levitt, 11th Hussars.

17TH LANCERS.

Troop Sergeant-Major JOHN BERRYMAN. Served with his regiment the whole of the war, was present at the Battle of the Alma, and also engaged in the pursuit at Mackenzie's Farm, where he succeeded in capturing three Russian prisoners, when they were within reach of their own guns. Was present and charged at the Battle of Balaclava, where, his horse being shot under him, he stopped on the field with a wounded officer (Captain Webb), amid a shower of guns and shell, although repeatedly told by that officer to consult his own safety, and leave him; but he refused to do so, and on Sergeant John Farrall coming by, with his assistance, carried Captain Webb out of the range of the guns. He has also a clasp for Inkerman.

LAND TRANSPORT CORPS (LATE OF THE ROYAL ARTILLERY).

Captain ANDREW HENRY.—For defending the guns of his battery against overwhelming numbers of the enemy at the Battle of Inkerman, and continuing to do so until he had received twelve bayonet wounds. He was at the time Sergeant-Major of G Battery, Second Division.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Brevet Lieut.-Colonel MATTHEW CHARLES DIXON.—On the 17th April, 1855, about two p.m., when the battery he commanded was blown up by a shell from the enemy, which burst in the magazine, destroyed the parapets, killed and wounded ten men, disabled five guns, and covered a sixth with earth, for most gallantly reopening fire with the remaining gun before the enemy had ceased cheering from their parapets on which they had mounted, and fighting it until sunset, despite the heavy concentrated fire of the enemy's batteries, and the ruined state of his own

THE VICTORIA CROSS—THE NEW ORDER OF VALOUR.

Gunner and Driver THOMAS ARCHER.—When in charge of the magazine in one of the left advanced batteries of the right attack, on June 7, 1855, when the Quarries were taken, he of his own accord carried barrels of infantry ammunition for the 7th Fusiliers several times during the evening across the open. Volunteered for and formed one of the spiking party of Artillery at the assault on the Redan on June 18, 1855.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieutenant GERALD GRAHAM.—Determined gallantry at the head of a ladder party, at the assault of the Redan on June 18, 1855. Devoted heroism in sallying out of the trenches on numerous occasions, and bringing in wounded officers and men.

Lieutenant D. LENNOX.—Cool and gallant conduct in establishing a lodgment in Tryon's Rifle Pit, and assisting to repel the assaults of the enemy. This operation drew forth a special order from Gen. Canrobert.

Corporal JOHN ROSS (No. 897).—Distinguished conduct on July 21, 1855, in connecting the fourth parallel right attack with an old Russian rifle pit in front. Extremely creditable conduct on August 23, 1855, in charge of the advance from the fifth parallel right attack on the Redan, in placing and filling twenty-five gabions under a heavy fire, while annoyed by the presence of light balls. Intrepid and devoted conduct in creeping to the Redan in the night of September 8, 1855, and reporting its evacuation, on which its occupation by the English took place Corporal WILLIAM J. LENDRIM (No. 1025). Intrepidity, getting on the top of a magazine and extinguishing sandbags which were burning, when fire upon a powder-barrel took place, on the 11th of April, 1855. For courage and praiseworthy example in superintending 150 French Chasseurs, on the 14th of February, 1855, in building No. 9 battery, Left Attack, and replacing the whole of the gabions under a heavy fire. Was one of four volunteers for destroying the furthest rifle-pit 29th April.

Sapper JOHN PERIE (No. 854).—Conspicuous valour in leading the sailors with the ladders to the storming of the Redan, on the 18th of June, 1855: he was invaluable on that day. Devoted conduct in rescuing a wounded man from the open, although he himself had just previously been wounded by a bullet in the side.

GRENADIER GUARDS

Brevet Major Sir CHARLES AS TON.—Offered to dislodge a party of Russians from the Sandbag Battery, if any one would follow him: Sergeant Norman, privates Anthony Palmer, and Bailey (who was killed) volunteered the first. The attack succeeded.

3RD BATTALION

Private ANTHONY PALMER (No. 3071). Present when the charge was made in defence of the colours, and also charged singly upon the enemy as witnessed by Sir C. Russell: is said to have saved Sir C. Russell's life. Sergeant ALEXR ASHLEY (No. 3672).—On the 2nd of September, 1855, seized a shell which fell in the centre of a number of ammunition-cases and powder, and threw it outside the trench: it burst as it touched the ground

COLDSTREAM GUARDS

Brevet Major GERALD LITTLEHALES GOODLAKE.—For distinguished gallantry while in command of the sharpshooters furnished by the Coldstream Guards, on October 26, 1854, on the occasion of "the powerful sortie on the Second Division," when he held the Windmill Ravine, below the picket-house, against a much larger force of the enemy. The party of sharpshooters then under his command killed thirty-eight (one an officer) and took three prisoners of the enemy (of the latter one an officer), Major Goodlake being the sole officer in command. Also, for distinguished gallantry on the occasion of the surprise of a picket of the enemy, in November, at the bottom of the Windmill Ravine, by the sharpshooters, under his sole leading and command, when the knapsacks and rifles of the enemy's party fell into his Lands

Private WILLIAM SLOCOCK (No. 3968).—For having volunteered, when employed as one of the sharpshooters, in October, 1854, for reconnoitring purposes, to crawl up within six yards of a Russian sentry, and so enabled the officer in command to effect a surprise

Private GEORGE STRONG (No 417).—For having, when on duty in the trenches, in the month of September, 1855, removed a live shell from the place where it had fallen

SCOTS FUSILIER GUARDS

Brevet Major ROBERT JAMES LINDSAY.—When the formation of the line of the regiment was disordered at Alma, Captain Lindsay stood firm with the colours, and by his example greatly tended to restore order. At Inkerman, at a most trying moment, he, with a few men, charged a party of Russians, driving them back, and running one through the body.

Sergeant M'KECHNIE (No 3234), and Private WILLIAM REYNOLDS (No 3366). When the formation of the regiment was disordered at Alma, for having behaved gallantly and rallied the men round the colours.

2ND BATTALION 1ST REGIMENT

Private JOSEPH PROSSER (No. 1672).—1st. On the 16th of June, 1855, when on duty in the trenches before Sebastopol, for pursuing and apprehending (after exposing his own person to two close fires) a soldier in the act of deserting to the enemy. 2nd. On the 11th of August, 1855, before Sebastopol, for leaving the most advanced trench, under a heavy fire, and assisting to carry in a soldier of the 93th Regiment, who lay severely wounded

3RD REGIMENT.

Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel FREDERICK FRANCIS MAUDE.—For conspicuous and most devoted bravery on September 8, 1855, when in command of the covering and ladder party of the Second Division on the assault on the Redan, to which he gallantly led his men. Having entered the Redan, he, with only nine or ten men, held a position between traverses, and only retired when all hope of support was at an end, himself dangerously wounded

Private JOHN CONNORS (No. 2649).—Distinguished himself most conspicuously at the assault on the Redan, September 8, 1855, in personal conflict with the Russian Colonel, and officer of the 30th Regiment, who was surrounded by Russians, by shooting one and bayonetting another; and was observed inside the Redan in personal combat with the Russians for some time. Was selected by his company for the French War Medal.

7TH REGIMENT.

Private MATHEW HUGHES (No. 1879), 7th Royal Fusiliers.—On June 7, 1855, at the storming of the Quarries, for procuring ammunition, under a heavy fire, across the open ground; he also went to the front, and brought in private John Hampton, who was lying severely wounded; and on June 18, 1855, he volunteered to bring in Lieutenant Hobson, 7th Royal Fusiliers, who was lying severely wounded, and in doing so was severely wounded himself

Private WILLIAM NORMAN (No. 3443).—On the night of the 16th of December, 1854, he was placed on single sentry some distance in front of the advanced sentries of an outlying picket in the White Horse Ravine, a post of much danger, and requiring great vigilance. The Russian picket was posted about 300 yards in his front; three Russian soldiers advanced, under cover of the brushwood, for the purpose of reconnoitring. Private William Norman, single-handed, took two of them prisoners without alarming the Ruselan picket

8TH REGIMENT (LATE OF THE 90TH REGIMENT)

Ensign ANDREW MOYNIHAN.—When sergeant, 90th Light Infantry, at the assault of the Redan, September 8, 1855, he personally encountered and killed five Russians. Rescued from near the Redan a wounded officer, under a heavy fire.

17TH REGIMENT.

Corporal (Lance-Sergeant) PETER SMITH.—For repeatedly going out in the front of the advanced trenches against the Great Redan, on June 18, 1855, under a very heavy fire, after the column had retired from the assault, and bringing in wounded comrades.

19TH REGIMENT.

Private JOHN LYONS (No. 1051).—For, on June 10, 1855, taking up a live shell which fell among the guard of the trenches, and throwing it over the parapet.

23RD REGIMENT.

Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel EDWARD W. D. BELL.—Recommended for his gallantry, more particularly at the battle of the Alma, where he was the first to seize upon and capture one of the enemy's guns, which was limbered up and being carried off. He, moreover, succeeded to the command of that gallant regiment, which he brought out of action; all his senior officers having been killed or wounded.

Lieutenant LUKE O'CONNOR.—Was one of the centre sergeants at the Battle of the Alma, and advanced between the officers carrying the colours. When near the redoubt, Lieutenant Anstruther, who was carrying a colour, was wounded, and he was shot in the breast at the same time, and fell; but, recovering himself, snatched up the colour from the ground, and continued to carry it until the end of the action, although urged by Captain Granville to relinquish it, and go to the rear, on account of his wound; was recommended for, and received his commission for his services at the Alma. Also behaved with great gallantry at the assault on the Redan, September 8, 1855, where he was shot through both thighs.

Corporal ROBERT SHIELDS (No. 2946). For volunteering, on September 8, 1855, to go out to the front from the 6th parallel, after the attack on the Redan, to bring in Lieutenant Dyneley, who was wounded.

34TH REGIMENT

Private WILLIAM COFFEY (No. 2).—For having, on March 29, 1855, thrown a lighted shell that fell into the trench over the parapet.

Private JOHN J. SIMS (No. 3482).—For having, on June 18, 1855, after the regiment had retired into the trenches from the assault on the Redan, gone out into the open ground, under a heavy fire, in broad daylight, and brought in wounded soldiers outside the trenches

41ST REGIMENT.

Brevet Major HUGH ROWLANDS.—For rescuing Colonel Haly, of the 47th Regiment, from Russian soldiers. Colonel Haly having been wounded and surrounded by them, and for gallant exertions in holding the ground occupied by his advanced picket against the enemy at the commencement of the Battle of Inkerman.

Sergeant-Major AMBROSE MADDEN.—For having headed a party of men of the 41st Regiment, and having cut off and taken prisoners one Russian officer and 14 privates, three of whom he himself captured.

44TH REGIMENT

Sergeant WILLIAM M'WHEENY (No. 1982).—Volunteered as sharpshooter at the commencement of the siege, and was in charge of the party of the 44th Regiment; was always vigilant and active, and on the morning of October 30, 1854, when one of his party, Private John Kane, 44th Regiment, was dangerously wounded in the Woronzoff road, at the time the sharpshooters were repulsed from the Quarries by overwhelming numbers. Sergeant M'Wheeny, on his return, took the wounded man on his back, and brought him to a place of safety. This was under a very heavy fire. He was also one of the sharpshooters, and was severely wounded in the head December 5, 1854. Sergeant M'Wheeny brought him from under fire and dark, when they retired. Sergeant M'Wheeny brought him from under fire and was one of the sharpshooters, and was severely wounded in the head December 5, 1854. Sergeant M'Wheeny brought him from under fire and advanced guard of General Eyre's brigade, in the Cemetery, June 18, 1855; and was never absent from duty during the war.

47TH REGIMENT.

Private JOHN M'DERMOTT (No. 2040).—For saving the life of Colonel Haly, on the 5th of November, 1854, by his intrepid conduct in rushing up to his rescue when lying on the ground disabled and surrounded by a party of Russians, and killing the man who had disabled him.

49TH REGIMENT.

Sergeant GEORGE WALTERS.—Highly distinguished himself at the Battle of Inkerman, in having rescued Brigade-Major Adams, C.B., when surrounded by Russians, one of whom he bayonetted.

Corporal JAMES OWENS.—Greatly distinguished himself, October 30, 1854, in personal encounter with the Russians, and nobly assisted Major Conolly, Coldstream Guards.

55TH REGIMENT.

Private THOMAS BEACH.—For conspicuous gallantry at the Battle of Inkerman, November 5, 1854, when on picket, in attacking several Russians who were plundering Lieutenant-Colonel Carpenter, 41st Regiment, who was lying wounded on the ground. He killed two of the Russians, and protected Lieutenant-Colonel Carpenter until the arrival of some men of the 41st Regiment.

Brevet Major FREDERICK C. ELTON.—For distinguished conduct on the night of August 4, 1855, when in command of a working party in the advanced trenches in front of the Quarries, in encouraging and inciting his men, by his example, to work under a dreadful fire; and when there was some hesitation shown, in consequence of the severity of the fire, going into the open, and working with pick and shovel. In March, 1855, Major Elton volunteered, with a small party of men, to drive off a body of Russians who were destroying one of our new detached works, and succeeded in doing so, taking prisoner one of the enemy with his own hands. On the night of June 7, 1855, Major Elton was the first of his party to leave our trenches, leading his men; when in the Quarries he several times rallied his men around him

57TH REGIMENT.

Private CHARLES M'CORREY (No. 1911).—On the night of the 23rd June, 1855, he threw over the parapet a live shell which had been thrown from the enemy's battery.

68TH REGIMENT

Captain T. DE COURCY HAMILTON.—For having, on the night of the 11th May, 1855, during a most determined sortie, boldly charged and dislodged the enemy with a small force from a battery of which they had obtained possession in great numbers, thereby saving the works from falling into the hands of the enemy.

Private JOHN BYRNE.—At the Battle of Inkerman, when the regiment was ordered to retire, Private John Byrne went back towards the enemy, and at risk of his own life brought in a wounded soldier under fire. On May 11, 1855, he bravely engaged in a hand-to-hand contest with one of the enemy on the parapet of the work he was defending, preventing the entrance of the enemy, killed his antagonist, and captured his arms

77TH REGIMENT.

Sergeant JOHN PARK (No. 2800).—For conspicuous bravery at the Battles of Alma and Inkerman. Highly distinguished himself at the taking of the Russian Rifle Pits on the night of the 19th of April, 1855. He was severely wounded. Remarked for determined resolution on both attacks on the Redan

Private ALEXANDER WRIGHT (No. 2239). For conspicuous bravery through the whole of the Crimean war. Highly distinguished on the night of March 22, 1855, in repelling a sortie. Highly distinguished at the taking of the Russian Rifle Pits, on the night of April 19, 1855; remarked for the great encouragement he gave the men while holding the pits under a terrible fire. He was wounded. Highly distinguished on Aug. 30, 1855 (wounded).

90TH REGIMENT.

Private JOHN ALEXANDER (No. 2932).—After the attack on the Redan, June 18, 1855, went out of the trenches under a very heavy fire, and brought in several wounded men. Also, when with a working party in the most advanced trench, September 6, 1855, went out in front of the trenches, under a very heavy fire, and assisted in bringing in Captain Buckley, Scots Fusilier Guards, lying dangerously wounded.

97TH REGIMENT

Brevet Major CHARLES HENRY LUMLEY.—For having distinguished himself highly by his bravery at the assault on the Redan, September 8, 1855, being among the first inside the work, where he was immediately engaged with three Russian gunners reloading a field piece, who attacked him. He shot two of them with his revolver, when he was knocked down by a stone, which stunned him for a moment, but on recovery he drew his sword, and was in the act of cheering the men on when he received a ball in his mouth, which wounded him most severely

Sergeant JOHN COLEMAN.—Conspicuous for great coolness and bravery on the night of August 30, 1855, when the enemy attacked a "new sap," and drove the working party in. He remained in the open, perfectly exposed to the enemy's rifle-pits until all around him had been killed or wounded. He finally carried one of his officers, who was mortally wounded, to the rear.

1ST BATTALION RIFLE BRIGADE

Brevet Major Hon HENRY H CLIFFORD. For conspicuous courage at the Battle of Inkerman, in leading a charge and killing one of the enemy, disabling another, and saving the life of a soldier

Captain WILLIAM JAMES CUNINGHAME.—Highly distinguished at the capture of the Rifle Pits, November 20, 1854. His gallant conduct recorded in the French General Orders

Brevet Major CLAUDE THOMAS BOUCHIER.—Highly distinguished at the capture of the Rifle Pits November 20, 1854. His gallant conduct recorded in the French General Orders

Private P. WHEATLEY. For throwing a live shell over the parapet of the trenches

2ND BATTALION RIFLE BRIGADE

Lieutenant JOHN KNOX.—When serving as a sergeant in the Scots Fusilier Guards, Lieutenant KNOX was conspicuous for his exertions in re-forming the ranks of the Guards at the battle of the Alma. Subsequently, when in the Rifle Brigade, he volunteered for the ladder party in the attack on the Redan on June 18, remaining on the field until twice wounded

Private R. M'GREGOR (No. 2074).—For courageous conduct when employed as a sharpshooter in the advanced trenches in the month of July, 1855. A rifle-pit was occupied by two Russians, who annoyed our troops by their fire; Private M'Gregor crossed the open space under fire, and, taking cover in the rock, dislodged them, and occupied the pit

Private ROBERT HUMPSTON (No. 2639), and Private JOSEPH BRADSHAW (No. 3471).—Carried in daylight, April 22, 1855, a Russian rifle-pit, situated among the rocks overhanging the Woronzoff road, between the third parallel, right attack, and the Quarries (at that period in possession of the enemy). Private Humpston received a gratuity of £5, and was promoted. Private Bradshaw has since received the French War Medal

---

The Decoration, which we engrave of the actual size, consists of a Maltese cross, formed from the cannon captured from the Russians. In the centre of the cross is the Royal crown, surmounted by the lion, and below it a scroll bearing the words, "For valour." The ribbon is blue for the Navy, and red for the Army. On the clasp are two bunches of laurel, and from it, suspended by a Roman V, hangs the cross. The execution of the work has been intrusted by Lord Panmure to Mr. Hancock, of Bruton-street, and is highly creditable to his taste and skill. The decoration carries with it a pension of £10 a year.

Hereafter we shall illustrate the Decoration Printed in Colours, accompanied by a series of characteristic sketches of some of the incidents of daring and bravery for which these distinctions have been awarded.

THE 93RD REGIMENT, HIGHLANDERS.

KARANI, NEAR BALACLAVA.

THE straggling village of Karani, or Karanji, lying in the valley, about two miles and a half from Balaclava, was occupied during part of the late war by our transport service. The situation is pleasant and sheltered.

Mr. H. D. Seymour, in his excellent work on the Crimea, thus glances at the former occupation of this portion of the country:—

When Catherine II. took the Crimea the Tatars were still a powerful people, with a strong nationality. The object of Catherine was to break this up, and to prepare the country for the future habitation of the great Slave people. She therefore encouraged as many of the inhabitants of the Crimea as she could influence to emigrate, and, appealing to the religious sentiments of the Greeks, and their hereditary hatred of the Turks, she called in Greek soldiers to assist her in expelling the Tatars that were refractory.

A regiment of Albanians was raised, chiefly from the Greeks who had been in the Russian service in the Archipelago, and they were first called Arnaouts at Balaclava. The Tatars having emigrated, or been dispersed, this town, together with the surrounding country extending to the banks of the Bouiouk Ouzene, including the villages of Kadikoi, Karani, Kamara, and Alson (after removing the rest of the Tatar families to other places), was given to the Albanians as a settlement. A few years before the breaking out of the late war they numbered 600 fighting men; and each colonist was liable to be called out for four months of active service, and had the other eight at his disposal for the cultivation of his lands.

VIEW OF KARANI

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, March 8.—2nd Sunday in Lent. Raphael born, 1483.
MONDAY, 9.—David Rizzio assassinated, 1566.
TUESDAY, 10.—Sir Benjamin West died, 1820.
WEDNESDAY, 11.—Baltic Fleet sailed, 1854.
THURSDAY, 12. St. Gregory.
FRIDAY, 13.—Dr. Priestley born, 1733.
SATURDAY, 14.—Admiral Byng shot, 1757.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 14, 1857.

| Sunday. | Monday. | Tuesday. | Wednesday. | Thursday. | Friday. | Saturday. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| M h m ⊙ 45 | A h m 1 10 | M h m 1 35 | A h m 1 57 | M h m 2 15 | A h m 2 30 | M h m 2 39 |
| A h m 3 3 | M h m 3 25 | A h m 3 45 | M h m 4 6 | A h m 4 25 | M h m 4 45 | A h m 5 4 |
| M h m 5 23 | A h m 5 43 | M h m 6 3 | A h m 6 24 | M h m 6 45 | A h m 7 6 | M h m 7 27 |
| A h m 7 49 | M h m 8 13 | A h m 8 39 | M h m 9 5 | A h m 9 30 | M h m 9 55 | A h m 10 20 |
| M h m 10 45 | A h m 11 9 | M h m 11 30 | A h m 11 50 | M h m 12 8 | A h m 12 25 | M h m 12 40 |
| A h m 1 0 | M h m 1 15 | A h m 1 30 | M h m 1 45 | A h m 2 0 | M h m 2 15 | A h m 2 30 |
| M h m 2 45 | A h m 3 0 | M h m 3 15 | A h m 3 30 | M h m 3 45 | A h m 4 0 | M h m 4 15 |
| A h m 4 30 | M h m 4 45 | A h m 5 0 | M h m 5 15 | A h m 5 30 | M h m 5 45 | A h m 6 0 |

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

T. M. S.—The import of tea into Great Britain was, in 1855, 83,390,000 lb., and in 1856, 87,741,000 lb., according to the Customs entries. The Government trade tables are not yet made up for 1856. We have given an account of the import of tea into America and Russia in 1856. The latest reliable accounts of the import of tea into Russia do not come below 1855—5,236,761 R., qui. net 9,002,965 lb. in 1851. The exports of tea from China to the United States, which in 1850 amounted to 16,000,000 lb., and exceeded 23,000,000 lb. in the year ended June 30th, 1855, 31,013,999 lb., and exceeded 34,000,000 lb., 1856, 40,217,990 lb.

W. J. T., Clerk of the Correspondent is greatly in error. What we stated was that the article had declined one penny, 2s 2d on the shilling, per gallon.

A WEEKLY READER.—The standard of our silver coins is 11 oz. 2 dwt. fine, an 18 dwts. alloy and of the gold coins 22 carats fine, and 2 carats alloy.

E. B.—A denarius of Severa, Emperor of Rome, A.D. 193-211.

J. CLARKE, Dalverton.—A specimen of Queen Elizabeth. Very common.

E. C. R.—The Lancaster halfpenny, with head of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, is of no value. The wax impression of the seal is too much broken to be deciphered.

ALLEN BANDWORTH.—A London groat of Edward IV.; very common.

W. J. B.—The King of Greece married the 22nd November, 1836, Amelia, elder daughter of Augustus, late Grand Duke of Oldenburg, by his first wife, Adelaide, daughter of Victor Charles Frederick, Prince of Anhalt Bernburg-Schaumburg.

A. L. T.—The Arms of the wife, as she is heraldically speaking, an heiress, should be placed on an escutcheon of pretence in the centre of the husband's shield.

PORPAR.—The Earls of Strathmore, do not bear a Chief.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER FROM THE COMMENCEMENT.—There is no such coin as that described by you. Send an impression of the coin in wax.

J. J., Hounsdgate.—The drawings sent of coins, &c., lately found in a field near Nottingham are those of 1. Lemarius of Lucius Verus. 2. Brass weight of James I. 3. Medalet of William and Mary. 4. Brass counter of George III.

W. S. M., Coventry, will find in the original proceedings of the Royal Institution of this year a paper on "Perpetual Motion," which he may consult with advantage.

MAURICE.—The motto is copyright.

AMATEUR ANATOMIST.—In the preservation of animal substances by injection anatomists use a hot mixture of wax, resin, turpentine varnish, and vermilion, or tallow and vermilion. After the injection has remained a day or eight days well in the vessels, as much of the colour should not be dissected off as may be necessary to display the part. It should then be hung up, in a dry, airy situation, until the muscles are quite firmed. When dry, brush over freely with equal varnish. For the mode of making injections for the microscope, consult a sheep book on "The Microscope," by J. Bogg, published by Routledge and Co., London.

NOTICE.—PORTRAIT OF THE QUEEN.—To meet the great demand for the NUMBER for FEBRUARY 7, with COLOURED SUPPLEMENT, a New Edition has been printed, and may be had at the original price if ordered immediately. Stamped, 1s.; Unstamped, 10d.

THE CHINESE DIFFICULTY.

IN order to give our Readers and the Public a correct version of events occurring at Canton and Hong-Kong, we have despatched a Correspondent and Artist to the scene of the events.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

SATURDAY, MARCH 7, 1857.

APPROACHING DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT.

AFTER an animated discussion, extending over four nights, Ministers were, at an early hour on Wednesday morning, defeated, on the question of their Chinese policy, by a majority of 263 against 247. The majority included not only the great bulk of the Conservative party, as marshalled by Lord Derby and Mr. Disraeli, but the whole of the clever ("too clever by half") section of doctrinaires and wordspinners who are inspired by the eloquence and obey the behests of Mr. Gladstone; and forty-eight members more or less intimately associated with the Liberal party, in addition to the two tellers of the Anti-Ministerial phalanx, Mr. Cobden and Mr. Milner Gibson. On the side of the Ministry voted twenty-five members of the Conservative party. Forty-eight members paired off; leaving a balance of ninety-six members to be accounted for. From these we must strike off three, for Glasgow, Tipperary, and East Sussex, leaving ninety-three members prevented—by illness, absence from London, or indifference to the issue—from attending in their places on an occasion so memorable. The result took most people by surprise; and even Mr. Cobden, who closed the debate, anticipated a different verdict.

To have resigned office at such a conjuncture might have been constitutional on the part of Lord Palmerston; but though it would, doubtless, have been agreeable to Mr. Disraeli, it would have been highly injurious to the public service, both at home and abroad, if Ministers had done so. They have adopted a bolder, a wiser, and an equally constitutional course; and have resolved, as soon as the state of the public business will permit, to dissolve the present Parliament, and give the country an opportunity of pronouncing its verdict upon their whole policy, past and present, foreign and domestic, European and Asiatic. The remaining days of the present House of Commons will, therefore, be but few. Possibly within five weeks of its factious and mischievous vote it will have ceased to exist. It was called into being under Protectionist auspices, to reverse, if that had been possible, the sagacious and beneficial policy of Free-trade; and it will be dismissed with the taint of its original sin upon it, and die, as it was born, the instrument of a false principle and an unpatriotic sentiment.

We believe that the policy of Lord Palmerston and his colleagues, both as regards Russia and China, will receive in the approaching elections the cordial support of the country. We also believe that, in the short interval that will elapse before the dissolution of Parliament, his Lordship will take care to issue such a manifesto of his domestic policy as will rally around him all the true friends of a just, safe, and necessary reform of our institutions; of a practical economy in all departments of the State; of an inoppressive and productive system of taxation; and of the material, social, and moral advancement of all classes of the people. He is not likely to leave any such weighty matters as these to be the stalking-horses of his opponents, but will take such a course, on all the great questions of our age and country, as will justify his eulogists in claiming for him the foremost rank as a Peace, no less than as a War, Minister. He will not, we may be assured, base his appeal to the country on the narrow issue raised by Mr. Cobden, Mr. Gladstone, and Mr. Disraeli. The Chinese question will fit into its place, along with others equally important; and upon his policy as a whole he will either stand with renewed strength, or give way to the incohesive and heterogeneous Coalition that has its busy brain in the West Riding, its nimble tongue at Oxford, and its greedy right hand in Buckinghamshire.

In the mean time, and on the very day when, by the small majority of sixteen, the Government was condemned for doing what Mr. Cobden could not but have done, had he, like that other member of the Peace Society, been Governor of Hong-Kong, and what Mr. Disraeli and Lord Derby would, ex necessitate rerum, have been compelled to do if they had been in office, two pieces of intelligence have reached this country which help to stultify the tactics of the Opposition. The war with Persia has been terminated, advantageously to this country, and honourably but not onerously to the Government of the Shah. Though Great Britain has such multitudinous neighbours, such widely-scattered colonies, such numerous dependencies, and is in contact, through the immense frontier lines of her magnificent empire, with tribes, nations, and peoples of such varied character, language, and race, and of such conflicting passions and interests, we are at war with only one nation. The statesmen who have steered us through so many difficulties might well have been trusted to steer us through this also. Fortunately, whether trusted or the reverse by the present Parliament, their course will be equally clear;—and British honour as well as supremacy in China will be effectually vindicated by those who knew how to humble the pride of Russia, to preserve the Ottoman Empire, and restore peace to Europe.

The other piece of intelligence is equally significant of the blunder made by the Opposition in taking the excellent Chinese under their protection. When Lord Derby appeals to the Bishops, with touching eloquence, closely modelled on that of Lord Chatham, to support him against the Government by their humanity and by their Christianity; when Mr. Cobden discourses upon the amenity, the learning, the industry, the peacefulness, the innumerable kind, good, and amiable qualities of the countrymen of Yeh; when Mr. Gladstone, Sir James Graham, and a whole host of minor philosophes, find everything to admire, and nothing to condemn, in the public, as well as in the private, character of all Chinamen, and those of the Canton district in particular,—the public learns with horror that these models of justice and philanthropy have poisoned all the wells of Hong-Kong; that the Chinese bakers of the colony have poisoned the bread sold to the English; that the family of Sir John Bowring have drunken of the water and eaten of the bread, and are suffering extreme agony in consequence; that the life of Mr. Chisholm Anstey, formerly a member of the British Parliament, and now Attorney-General of the Colony, has been endangered by the same atrocity; and that the whole of the crew of a British postal steam-packet have been treacherously stabbed in the back and murdered by Chinese who took passage in the boat for the very purpose of the massacre. And it is while such barbarities are being recorded that the British nation is solemnly called upon to behave towards the Chinese as they would towards Russians, Frenchmen, or Americans—if we were unfortunately at war with either of those Christian nations! Surely Mr. Cobden, Lord Derby, and those who follow their guidance in this matter, ought to be ashamed of their clients when such facts as these are brought to their notice? Surely Sir James Graham, who talks of washing his hands, ought to wash his hands of the guilt of supporting and encouraging by his vote in Parliament the insolence of such cowardly and demoniacal ruffians as the Chinese of all ranks, from Yeh downwards, have shown themselves in these transactions? Fortunately, it is to be presumed that our naval and military force will have inflicted the merited chastisement upon the Cantonese long before the news of Wednesday morning's division reaches China. If they have not done so, will not bloodguiltiness lie upon the heads of those misguided Englishmen at home whose speeches and votes will have encouraged Yeh in his ferocity, and inspired him with the false and fatal notion that he could insult this great country, and murder its subjects, with impunity?

HORRIBLE ATROCITIES IN CHINA.

IN the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of the 17th of November, 1855, we engraved an original and very remarkable Sketch, which we had a few days before received direct from Canton, accompanied by an explanatory letter, which we also published, under the title of "Horrible Atrocities in China." We now reproduce the letter, that the admirers of Governor Yeh—in and out of Parliament—and those who for factious and unpatriotic purposes please to represent the Chinese as most humane and civilised in their intercourse with one another, as well as with foreigners, may see what a Correspondent of this Journal wrote of them a year and a half ago. In the Sketch itself we omitted the living and the dead personages who were portrayed in it, fearing to shock our readers and subscribers by a pictorial record of a scene so brutal, so disgusting, and so horrible. The following is the letter, which we especially recommend to Lord Derby for his attentive perusal, before he again appeals to the bench of Bishops to aid with their votes in Parliament so sanguinary a monster as Governor Yeh.

The Sketch itself we hope to be able to reproduce next week, precisely as we received it at the time.

(From a Correspondent.)

CANTON, Sept. 12th, 1855.

As you are the depicter of events passing in the nineteenth century, I send you herewith a Sketch in connection with the daily events of 1855. Between 60,000 and 70,000 heads have been struck off by the executioners, in this little space of ground, since February last. Daily, except on the 1st, 15th, and three days at the time of the Emperor's birthday, have from 150 to 800 been carried in baskets by their fellow-men, to see the mangled remains of those who have by a few minutes preceded them carried or dragged out of the way, until the ground has become for several inches deep a filthy composition of blood and mud. Nearly every day one or two are tied to the cross; the executioner, facing the poor wretches, takes a sharp knife, and, rapidly cutting them in different parts of the body, finishes by putting it into their hearts. They are then cut down, their heads, hands, and feet are cut off, their livers and hearts cut out, and, with their heads, taken to show the Mandarins. I do not know that it is likely that your insertion of these will produce any effect upon the natives; but many of your pictures ornament the boats on this river.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

WAL GEO. DICKSON, M.D.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

LORD PALMERSTON AND THE CITY OF LONDON.—On Thursday an address, soliciting Lord Palmerston to allow himself to be put in nomination for the City to the approaching election, was set on foot, and in the course of a short time received several hundred signatures.

BRITISH PORTRAIT GALLERY.—The Government has assigned apartments at 23, Great George-street, Westminster, for the present accommodation of the board, and the reception of the first portraits which they may obtain, either by donation or purchase. Mr. W. H. Carpenter has undertaken the duties of secretary pro tem., the permanent appointment not having yet been made. The trustees have already considered and adopted some general rules to govern their own proceedings. These are as follows:—The rules which the trustees desire to lay down to themselves in either making purchases or receiving presents is to look to the celebrity of the person represented, rather than to the merit of the artist. They will attempt to estimate that celebrity without any bias to any political or religious party. Nor will they consider great faults and errors, even though admitted on all sides, as any sufficient ground for excluding any portrait which may be valuable as illustrating the civil, ecclesiastical, or literary history of the country. No portrait of any person still living, or deceased less than ten years, shall be admitted by purchase, donation, or bequest, except only in the case of the reigning sovereign, and of his or her consort, unless all the trustees in the United Kingdom, and not incapacitated by illness, shall, either at a meeting or by letter, signify their approbation. No portrait shall be admitted by donation unless three-fourths at least of the trustees present at a meeting shall approve it.

FREE EMIGRATION TO THE COLONIES.—On Monday last a large meeting, consisting of several thousands of the working classes, convened by the British Working Men's Association, was held in Bethnal-green-fields, for the purpose of promoting free emigration to the British colonies, and petitioning Parliament on the subject. Mr. Bowen, a mason, was called to the chair; and a series of resolutions, moved and seconded by working men, were carried unanimously, expressive of the opinion of the meeting that the only hope for the great number of persons who are thrown out of employment by the present continuous stagnation in the building and other trades is to be found in emigration to Australia, New Zealand, or Canada; asking from Government for a free passage to one of those colonies, on condition that the cost of conveyance be repaid by persons so assisted within a certain time after their arrival. A petition embodying the resolutions was read and adopted, after which a person addressed the meeting, and a number of emigrants, who were he had twice been. He said that he was starving at home, but being sent out he in a few years earned a sum of 7500*l.* at his trade of a painter and glazier. Two Free Traders, brother, Sir F. Foster, had sent out 500 emigrants; also addressed the meeting on the advantages of emigration. Thanks were then voted to the chairman, and a large body of those present formed themselves into a procession and proceeded to the office in Clerkenwell-green, to sign the petition.

PRINTERS' PENSION SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the Printers' Pension Society took place on Monday last, at the London Tavern, Mr. Robert Besley in the chair. A very satisfactory report was read by the secretary, Mr. Hodgson, from which it appeared that the income of the society had slightly increased during the year, and that £300 had been added to the funded property, which now exceeds £6000. Seven pensioners were elected making the entire number fifty-seven, at a cost of more than £600 a year.

ST. THOMAS CHARTERHOUSE (NEW GOLDEN-LANE) SCHOOLS.—These schools, which are designed for the poorest class in one of the poorest districts of London, will be opened in the course of the present month. His Royal Highness Prince Albert has announced his intention of being present on the occasion.

THE STRANGERS' HOME, LIMEHOUSE.—In the account of this institution, in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of last week, we omitted to name the architect of the new building, Mr. E. L. Bracebridge, who, on the occasion of the recent visit of the chairmen of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, had the satisfaction to receive from the honourable chairman his expression of approbation with the edifice.

AUSTRALIAN GOLD.—Mr. J. F. Connell, of Broad-street-buildings, has just received a specimen of Australian gold quartz, stated to be the largest yet discovered: it is said to weigh between 400 and 500 pounds, and, although there is little gold visible, the quartz specimen is an interesting curiosity, apart from its intrinsic value.

THE PIRLICO CHURCH DISPUTES.—The judgment in these important cases will be delivered next week, but no specific day has yet been named. It is believed that the Right Hon. T. Pemberton Leigh will pronounce their Lordships' opinion upon the appeals.

THE ROYAL BRITISH BANK.—A numerous meeting of the creditors and depositors of the Royal British Bank was held on Monday evening, at Evans's Hotel, Covent-garden.—Dr. J. G. Waller in the chair; and, after some discussion, a motion was unanimously carried "That the following resolution be proposed as an amendment to the resolution that a compromise be concluded between the shareholders and depositors in the Royal British Bank, in the circular letter of Messrs. Linklater, of the 26th inst.:—'That this meeting is of opinion that it is not expedient to accept any offer of a composition from the shareholders of the Royal British Bank until an official statement has been laid before the depositors of their actual pecuniary resources, and the shareholders, nor without receiving the most ample and satisfactory security for the payment of any composition, should any offer from the shareholders to that effect be accepted by this meeting.'" A numerous meeting was held in the Sussex-hall, Freemasons' Tavern, on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of considering the proposed compromise with the shareholders. The proceedings, which were of a very turbulent character, ended in the passing of a resolution in favour of the compromise by an overwhelming majority.

REDUCTION IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—Another reduction in the price of bread was made by a large number of the bakers in the metropolis on Monday. What is termed "good wheaten bread" is now selling at 6*d.* the 4 lb. loaf, and "best wheaten bread" at 7*d.* the 4 lb. loaf, in the densely-populated districts chiefly inhabited by the poor; and in some parts, where strong competition exists, the first-mentioned description of bread is even selling as low as 5½*d.* the 4 lb. loaf. The high-priced bakers, who sell bread of a better quality and give credit, are charging 8*d.* and 9*d.* the 4 lb. loaf.

METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.—An adjourned special meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works was held on Tuesday at Guildhall, for the purpose of further considering the financial statement, and to assess moneys on the several parts of the metropolis, for defraying the expenses of the board in the execution of the Metropolis Local Management Act. The total rateable value of the several districts was fixed at 11,283,863*l.* A resolution was then passed approving an apportionment of the outstanding loan of 140,000*l.* for main intercepting drainage works. A resolution was passed approving the total estimated liabilities of the different districts at 412,262*l.* 12*s.* The following is the amount in the pound which will be required from the several parishes: City of London, 1½*d.*; Marylebone, 1½*d.*; St. Pancras, 1½*d.*; Lambeth, 2½*d.*; Islington, 2*d.*; Shoreditch, 1½*d.*; Hampstead, 1½*d.*; Bethnal-green, 0; Newington, Surrey, 3½*d.*; Camberwell, 3½*d.*; St. James's, Westminster, 1½*d.*; Clerkenwell, 0; Chelsea, 2½*d.*; Kennington, 2½*d.*; Hackney, 1½*d.*; St. Giles's, 1½*d.*; Holborn, 1½*d.*; Wandsworth, 2½*d.*; Fulham, 10½*d.*; Limehouse, 1½*d.*; Poplar, 1½*d.*; St. Saviour, 3½*d.*; Plumstead, 7½*d.*; Lewisham, 1½*d.*; St. Luke's, Middlesex, 0; St. George's, Southwark, 3½*d.*; Bermondsey, 3½*d.*; St. George's-in-the-East, 1½*d.*; St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, 1½*d.*; Hamlet of Mile end Old-town, 1 1-10*d.*; Woolwich, 1½*d.*; Rotherhithe, 2½*d.*; Hampstead, 1½*d.*; Whitechapel, 1*d.*; Westminster, 1½*d.*; Greenwich, 11*d.*; Wandsworth, 2½*d.*; St. Olave's, 3½*d.*; Collegiate Church of St. Peter, 1½*d.*; Charterhouse, 1½*d.*; Inner Temple, 1½*d.*; Middle Temple, 1½*d.*; Lincoln's-inn, 1½*d.*; Gray's-inn, 2½*d.*; Staple-inn, 1½*d.*; Furnival's-inn, 1½*d.* A resolution to assess the sum specified was carried.

HEALTH OF LONDON.—The deaths registered in London, in the week that ended last Saturday, were 1216. In the ten years 1847-56 the average number of deaths in the weeks corresponding with the last week was 1148. But the deaths now returned occurred in an increased population, and for comparison with the average the latter should be raised proportionally to the increase, which case it will become 1251. The result of the comparison is a difference of forty-seven, showing that the rate of mortality last week was rather below the average. Births in the week: Males, 1?.., females, ...; total, 18..1.

PREVENTION OF PITTING IN SMALLPOX.—Mr. Startin, the senior surgeon to the Gurney Hospital for Diseases of the Skin, has communicated to the Medical Times a very important plan, which he has adopted during the last few years, for preventing pitting in smallpox, and which, he states, has always proved successful. The plan consists in applying the acetum cantharidis or any vesicating fluid, by means of a camel-hair brush, to the apex of each spot or pustule of the disease, on all the exposed surfaces of the body, until blistering is evidenced by the whiteness of the skin in the parts subjected to the application, when the fluid produced is to be washed off with water or thin arrowroot gruel. The pain attending the application of the vesicating fluid is very slight and transient.

THE MINT.—By a return just published of the sums advanced in each year from the Consolidated Fund for the purchase of bullion for coinage, and of the sums paid in each year to the account of her Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank of England, in repayment thereof, it appears that the sum total of the amount advanced from 1837 to December 31, 1856, is £8,318,029 19*s.* 8*d.*; and of the sums paid into the Bank in repayment, £8,220,000.

An Irish paper states that a letter has been received from John Sadleir, written on the banks of the Tennessee, U. S.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

The suicide of Lord Derby's Parliament is, of course, the only topic of the hour. It has taken the public by surprise, for, although it was believed that on the preceding Friday the united factions had secured a majority—and Mr. Disraeli's regret that a division was not then taken may be supposed to be quite as sincere as any Parliamentary declaration he has made the delay of four days was thought to have brought to the Ministerial side fresh faces, and fresh sense to some of the Opposition. But faction was strong, and the division gave 263 to 247; a majority of sixteen deciding that the British flag is to be humiliated by any savages who choose to pluck it down, and that the faithful servants of the country, if they seek to defend it, are to be denounced by Parliament. Such is the dictum of Lord Derby's House of Commons: and the sentiment is so akin to that which inspired his Lordship's Administration during its brief tenure of office that the House, in its last act of importance, shows itself worthy of the leaders who originally convoked it. In May we shall most probably see an English assembly discussing the affairs of the nation, and protecting its honour. The country may have its complaints against the Premier for some shortcomings, but the country is not made of Cobdens, and has a generous recollection of the services of a friend. The War Minister did his duty too well to be abandoned simply because he has brought us from war to peace.

Another war is off our hands. Peace is signed with Persia, and substantial advantages are thereby secured to England, not the least of which will be the opening of the new route to her Eastern possessions, viâ "the fourth river, which is Euphrates." Lord Palmerston's spirited conduct in this affair will be better appreciated a few years hence, when it will be seen what we have gained and what we might have lost had an Austrian's tool or a Russian's admiree held the Foreign-office at this moment. The Court of St. Petersburg is understood to consider that it has received as important, if not so manifest, a check in the Persian business as in any repulse that its diplomacy has sustained for years.

The news from Canton is not decisive; but the protegés of Messrs. Gladstone, Cobden, and Disraeli were poisoning wells, poisoning bread, and committing other atrocities in evidence of their claim to be considered civilised people. Prices were being set upon the heads of Englishmen; and, should any of the claimants get into a dispute with their Government touching the pay, the Manchester men will probably move for a committee to inquire into the best mode of securing payment of the decapitation claims. Meantime Admiral Seymour was strengthening his position, and, although the demonstrations of the enemy were important, it seemed likely that the small force at his disposal would enable him to hold them at bay until the reinforcements on their way from India could arrive, when he would commence operations in earnest. Shot and shell and men to use them went out from England some weeks since. The mail which leaves on Wednesday next may cross a despatch stating that "Kwang tung fuit."

Lord Campbell has obtained a Select Committee of the Lords to inquire whether the law of reporting, as laid down by himself, may not advantageously be altered, so as to protect a newspaper from the consequence of a bonâ fide report of the proceedings at a public meeting. The Lord Chief Justice is by no means clear that the editors of newspapers are to be trusted with entire discretion in such matters, and thinks that, if a man got up a meeting for the sale of vituperating somebody else, the press would give his scurrility to the world. He would limit their enquiry to cases of reports of Convocation (where, indeed, the celestial fire does sometimes go very near libel) and county and borough meetings. It is fit that the law should be altered; but, if the English newspaper press has not long ago laid down for itself certain rules of conduct which make restraining rules of law utterly needless, it would not be now holding the position which it occupies in the estimation of good citizens. The press needs no law, but protection from lawyers.

The Chancellor's lame Divorce Bill has been read a second time by twenty-five to ten. Lord Derby, sore from the failure of his appeal to the Episcopal bench to vote against Ministers on the China question, assailed the Bishops in a very different tone on the divorce debate, taunting them with the fact that whereas twenty-three "fathers of the Church" could come down to vote on a political question, only two were present at the attempted solution of this social problem. The two would have done better to have stayed away, for, instead of endeavouring to amend the bill, they assailed it upon the superstitious ground taken by Rome touching the indissolubility of the marriage contract. Lord St. Leonards took a far worthier course, and suggested amendments, among which were the abolition of the disgusting action for damages, and the making imprisonment, and not fine, the punishment of the seducer. He also objected to the refusal to allow a woman to be heard in her own defence in a matter which involved consequences to her compared to which the interests of the other parties were trivial. The bill is now doomed, owing to other circumstances, and Lord Cranworth, who can legally have nothing to do with elections (though, if we recollect aright, he did once plead that the war had prevented his sitting down to attend to his law bills), cannot do better than give the forty days of the general election to the rendering this Divorce Bill worthy the consideration of Lord Palmerston's Parliament. While on the subject we may note that a bill for preventing divorce in Prussia, where the facility for such a purpose is more in accordance with the habits of society than with public morals, has been rejected, the Government being defeated.

Little or nothing will now be talked of for a quarter of a year except the conflict of politics. Yet much is going on in the quiet world outside the battle-field. The astronomers are watching for the comet which is terrifying the Parisians by its approach, although they have been assured that the odds against its striking the earth are enormous, and that if it should strike it can do no harm. The grape vintage alone will feel it, and with advantage. Dr. Faraday last week drew round him a brilliant audience (of which the Prince Consort was the centre) to hear him expound his own theory of the Conservation of Forces as opposed to the ordinary theory of Gravitation, and it is at this problem that the scientific world is now labouring. "No force," said Dr. Paraday, "once exerted is ever destroyed." Like Tennyson's "echoes," it "lives for ever and for ever." Like all grand ideas, the conception is in itself poetry. But what is poetry or philosophy now where's the list of registered electors?

---

Deaths from Snake-bites in India.—The number of deaths arising from snake-bites in the various zillahs and towns subordinate to this presidency has led to the offer of a reward for their destruction. The people, encouraged by the rewards offered, are occupying themselves most actively in destroying these reptiles. In Bellary nearly 600 dead snakes were brought in. Mr Bettington saw an immense number of every description. The most common of all is one called the Tonsa. The civil surgeon of Ruttnagherry knows no remedy for the poison of this deadly reptile. Ammonia and other stimulants, if applied in time, are effective antidotes to the poison of the cobra and some other snakes, but are of no avail against the poison of the foorsa. The poison does not act on the nervous system, like that of the cobra, but on the blood alone, which becomes corrupted in a peculiar manner.—Bombay Courier.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Derby was unexpectedly marked by the defeat of Greenwich Fair by Mr. T. Parr's 100-guinea Rawcliffe yearling, York. This stable is always very dangerous to a favourite, and seems in unwonted force. Its owner declares he shall win the Two-Thousand with Apathy, which we beg to doubt. The horse was got very forward and fit early in the season in order to help M. D. in the Derby betting, which he has done to a certain extent. Fisherman (after having been written about all the winter) carried the pace and white triumphantly at Liverpool; and the Steeplechase was an easy win for Emigrant, who took a line to himself, and led from end to end. Old Weathercock, who refused once, was a fair second, and the average weight carried by the three first horses was 9 st. 3 lb! Out of the twenty-eight which started only one that we can hear of was seriously injured; but a goodly number were, "like the Spanish fleet," not in sight at the finish.

Racing may be said to be about to begin in earnest next week, and horses generally are very forward in their work. Doncaster Spring is fixed for Tuesday and Wednesday. There are five events on each day: and on the first the Hopeful Stakes, with 83 entries, including Heroine and Soothsayer, will furnish some 21 starters; while the Handicap has not many acceptors of a very high stamp. The Steeplechase is once more in the Wednesday's programme; and, as the handicapper did not put out his weights till Liverpool was over, there is some chance of a good field at last. Thursday and Friday will be devoted to racing at Salisbury, where the Ring would not a little like a peep at Arsenal or Martinet. The latter and another have left Harlock's for Findon. It is said that Mr. Craufurd's horses, Zuyder Zee and Co., are coming to Newmarket to be trained for their spring engagements. Sir Colin is likely to be a great Northampton Handicap favourite; but Adamas (a good horse, or we are much mistaken) must be carefully watched for that event. Steeplechases are coming very thick, as, besides the Doncaster one, we have two at Narberth, on Wednesday; others at Market Rasen and Hereford, on Thursday; and at Driffield and Bellcek, on Friday.

Lord Stamford's hounds had capital sport on Friday, which made up for the bad day with Mr. Tailby's on Thursday, at Rolleston. Old Tom Day is doing wonders with the latter pack, considering they were gathered from all quarters, and riding well up to them as of yore. There was a rumour among hunting men in town on Tuesday that Will Goodall had broken his leg, but no mention is made of it in our Melton letter, and hence we sincerely trust that it is incorrect. On Monday Lord Stamford's had a first-rate forty-five minutes from Welby cover-beds with an afternoon fox. Lord Wilton, Lord Grey de Wilton, Captain Lloyd, and Mr. Grosvenor, in front all the way, the second named on a horse his noble father has ridden for eleven seasons; and on Tuesday the Cottesmore had two quick short things, one from Tilton, and the other from Launde Wood. On Wednesday the Duke's made little out, bad foxes and a tender scent. Will Boxall, who is poorly mounted, is having capital sport with the Craven; and Will Danby showed one of the old-fashioned sort of runs with the Hurworth, about a fortnight since. The find was at Wilbury, and they killed at Thornaby, near South Stockton, after a five-and-twenty-mile burst, which was done in about two hours and a half. The distance from point to point was about eighteen miles. This is even a greater run than Tom Sebright's from Hunt's Closes in 1837, when the field thought they were going to ride to London. We observe from the Sporting Review that Will Long, late of the Badminton, is tired of inaction, and would like a three days a week or five days a fortnight place. We trust that we shall soon hear of this celebrated field and kennel huntsman once more in the saddle. It is rare nowadays to find a huntsman of his experience able to ride 11 st. 4 lb. across country. Tom Ball has had a tremendous run with "the Baron's." The stag was one they had hunted twelve times and lost. However, they heard of his locale, and killed him near Oxford. He had full revenge, as Tom's horse, The Saddler, died shortly after; and we hear that two or three more are in a doubtful way. Captain Thompson will, it is said, hunt the Fife next season; and there has been some little rumour of Mr. Henley Greaves going back to the Badsworth, from which he bought some of the choicest blood ten couples, at fifty guineas per couple. when he went with Will Butler to the Cottesmore in 1847.

The very admirably-drawn adjudication of the "Master of Foxhounds Committee" seems to have brought the "Cheshire difficulty" to an end, and we find that they confirm us in one statement we made from the first,—that the present master is warned off "in the best part of the country," although the latter maintained it was "a very small corner of the county, and not sufficiently important to interfere with sport even in that small corner."

Foxhunting has not been a successful experiment in Norfolk, where even the glories of Swaffham have departed, and partridges are the lords of all, and hence Lord Suffield's mastership is at an end for the present, at least, and on Monday two dozen of the horses come to "The Corner," as well as a pack of beagles of Mr. Honeywood's blood. The West Kent foxhounds (whose master, Mr. Colleton, has had but little encouragement to show sport) are also in the market, as well as the South Union harriers. Hunting blood in the latter county has received no slight accession by the recent purchase of Mortimer by Alarm out of the best low, lengthy, and short-legged stamp of animals for the purpose that we have seen. Old Manco only fetched 41 guineas lately at Tattersall's, and Black Doctor is still in the market.

The Waterloo Cup was a very unexpected victory for King Lear, who beat Profest, the winner of 1856, in his last course but one. Old Judge did not enter the lists, and the winner was not among the twenty-four which were mentioned in the betting on the preceding evening. The meetings for the ensuing week are Boreatton and Belsay, on Monday; Belleek, on Wednesday and Thursday; Caledonian, on Thursday, &c.; and Pilning (O), "Cound and Longner," and "Tunstall and Bainesse," on Thursday and Friday.

---

LIVERPOOL SPRING MEETING. TUESDAY.

Trial Stakes. Fisherman, 1. Special Licence, 2.
Lyro Stakes.—Polly Peachum, 1. Dispute, 2.
Liverpool Spring Cup. Bashi Bazouk, 1. Mary, 2.
Optional Selling Stakes. Lanky Bet, 1. Miss Janet Queen, 2.
Aintree Plate. Sir Humphrey, 1. Our Sal, 2.

WEDNESDAY

Handicap Plate of 50 sovs.—Lady Hervale, 1 Admiral Lyons, 2
Grand National Steeplechase.—Emigrant, 1. Weathercock, 2.
Sefton Handicap.—Sir Humphrey, 1. Special Licence, 2.
All-aged Selling Stakes. T. P. Cooke, 1. Village Cock, 2.

---

The Austrian Empress and Count Radetzky.—The Empress has won golden opinions in Italy. Even the high-born dames who kept aloof from the Court felt a strong sympathy for her, and several of them acknowledged that they went to the theatre chiefly to see her Majesty to Count Radetzky was always so extremely kind that the old gentleman could sometimes find no other way of expressing his gratitude than by kissing her hand. Whenever he dined at Court the Marshal was comfortably installed in his arm-chair by the Empress, who never failed to see whether it was at a convenient distance from the table. If the chair appeared to be too far off it was pushed into its proper place by her Majesty, who seemed to think she could never pay sufficient attention to the man who had lived four score years and ten, and passed seventy-two of them in the service of the Imperial family.—Letter from Vienna.

The Russian Railways.—There are some agents of the Russian Government now here actively occupied in engaging mechanics and handicraftsmen to immigrate into Russia, and settle there. Not a little much preferred whose avocations are connected with the construction of railways. It is understood that small plots of land will be given to them along the line of the Petersburg and Moscow Railway, and that about 100 persons have already availed themselves of the offers. A German engineer, in the service of the Russian Government of the name of Brammuhl, is also expected to arrive very shortly in Munich, for the purpose of engaging mechanics for the construction of a railway at Libau.—Letter from Berlin.

The Clever Speculator.—Count de Morny is now engaged with Prince Gortschakoff in remodelling a treaty of commerce, and he will not return to France until that has been completed. The Countess Walewska is to be treated by the Emperor Alexander with particular attention. His Majesty has taken him with him several times on hunting excursions, in one of which they killed a very large bear, which stood twelve shots before it fell. His Majesty presented the animal to the Ambassador, begging him to preserve it as a souvenir of the pleasant day which they had passed together.—Letter from St. Petersburg.

RAILWAYS IN RUSSIA.

The public are now so familiar with railway enterprise—destined, sooner or later, to spread its trunk lines and branches over the entire surface of the civilised world—that the introduction of the system into Russia on a very extended scale would not call for any special notice, were not the general policy of that empire altogether exceptional. The aggressive spirit of its Government, and the ambition of the Czars to exercise universal dominion, compel us to regard the proposed formation of iron roads as a military contrivance rather than a commercial necessity. Within the last sixty or seventy years the Russian frontier has been projected towards Berlin, Dresden, Munich, and Paris, about 700 miles; towards Constantinople, 500; towards Stockholm, 600; and towards Teheran, about 1000 miles; and, by the Treaty of Goolistan, signed in 1814, with Persia, Russia obtained the exclusive right of maintaining ships of war on the Caspian Sea, which annihilated one of the strongest defences of the Shah, who has also surrendered to the Muscovite an extent of territory equal to the whole area of England. Experience should teach wisdom to Western Europe; and the capitalists of Europe, in the eager pursuit of gain, should pause before they strengthen the arm already too formidable to rational liberty and the progress of civilisation.

It is known that the railway from St. Petersburg to Moscow leaves no profit on the capital invested, and yet its termini are the two capitals of the empire. It merely yielded one per cent beyond the outlay in the year of the coronation, when both the passenger and the goods traffic were unprecedented in amount. Is it not fair, then, to presume that the gigantic scheme now matured has a military object in view, not a commercial one? Facilities of transit or locomotion do not call out trade, but it is trade that calls out those facilities. Russia is the land of serfdom, and whatever the capabilities of the country may be they can never be developed under slavery. Without liberty production withers; for all industrial processes, to be progressive and permanent, must be voluntary, not coerced. If, then, the railways were really of a commercial character the emancipation of the people ought to precede their construction.

The Lord of Brussels, the official organ of the Czars, published the Imperial statutes under which the Russian railway has been organised on the 19th inst. The contracting parties are among the most eminent bankers of St. Petersburg, Berlin, London, Paris, Amsterdam, and Warsaw. To complete the works 375,000,000 of silver roubles will be required, equal in English money to £44,000,000 sterling. The concession is granted for eighty-five years, and the entire lines are to be completed within ten years from the date of the concession; but the Russian Government reserves to itself the right of purchasing the whole of the lines at the expiration of twenty years from the date fixed for completing them; and no competing lines are to be permitted for twenty years. The sections are to be divided into the following lines:—

1. St. Petersburg to Vilna or Kovno.
2. Kovno to Warsaw.
3. Moscow to Koursk.
4. Koursk to Theodosia.
5. Koursk to Oel or Dunaburg.
6. Dunaburg to Libau.
7. Moscow to Nijni-Novogorod.

The contracting parties have subscribed for the first series of 600,000 shares, of 125 roubles each, or £20, making the total £12,000,000 sterling out of £44,000,000. Five per cent, or £600,000, is to be paid as caution money; five per cent on the capital of the remaining series actually paid up within a month of the calls being made is a further stipulation; and the sum of £480,000 is to remain with the Russian Government until the completion of the whole of the works. The £12,000,000 sterling taken up in the first series is distributed among the following firms:—

| | |
|---|---|
| Stieglitz and Co., of St. Petersburg, and S. A. Frankel, of Warsaw, 225,000 shares .. .. | £4,500,000 |
| Baring (Brothers, London, 170,000 shares .. .. | 3,400,000 |
| Ditto, for Messrs. Hope, of Amsterdam, 70,000 shares.. | 1,400,000 |
| Mendelssohn and Co., Berlin, 10,000 shares .. .. | 200,000 |
| Hottinguer and Co., Paris, 25,000 shares .. .. | 500,000 |
| Various Paris bankers, 100,000 shares .. .. | 2,000,000 |
| Making the total 600,000 shares .. .. | £12,000,000 |

It has been stated that the St. Petersburg and Moscow line does not pay; how, then, can it be expected that the lines contemplated should prove remunerative? Of all the governments into which Europe is divided, that of Moscow is the most industrial and the most populous; nevertheless, it only contains forty-eight inhabitants to the square verst. It is the centre of Russian power. By adding together the fourteen governments grouped round the old capital, it is ascertained that 17,000,000 souls are constantly on a space of about 600,000 square versts, equal in area to France, Belgium, and the Netherlands; so that, compared with territory or the distances to be traversed, the population of those central governments may be deemed scanty in reference to the supply of passengers and products to railways. But when we pass into European Russia, where the area comprises 5,000,000 square versts, or eight times more territory than Russia Major, the population is only about 50,000,000. Comparing then the inhabitants with the territory, considering how little of the surface is under culture, the fewness of the towns and the rarity of villages, and that the lines will have mainly to run through immense solitudes, it appears certain that these railways cannot, for many years to come, defray even the working expenses. Therefore the capitalists can only receive interest on their loans through a Government tax, so that the entire speculation, instead of being a profit to Russia, must prove a burden. It is only justice to say that the Czars have always kept faith with their foreign creditors, and doubtless they will do so in reference to this loan of £44,000,000; but the fact remains that this network of railways is not designed for commercial but for military purposes. Under this view it may be lamented that the capitalists of England, France, and Holland have subscribed to the loan: and it is noticeable that the name of Rothschild does not appear on the list.

---

A Letter-Stamping Machine.—M. Salles, arquebusier to the Emperor Napoleon, has invented a post office automaton which takes up every letter as it is thrown into the box, places it under the stamp, when it receives the postmark and date, and throws it out again for delivery to the destination. The process indicates the number of letters thus stamped. It is said that no less than 200 letters may be stamped by this machine in one minute. The General Post-office has made a trial of the invention, which has turned out satisfactory, and it is now in treaty with M. Salles for machines to be furnished to all the principal post-offices throughout France. The illegibility of postmarks, so often complained of, will, it is said, be completely obviated by the use of the automaton.

---

Metropolitan Central Junction.—Mr. H. Yeatman has just issued a pamphlet on uniting the metropolitan railways in an economical manner, and without any disturbance of the gas, water, and other underground works. It divides the lines into northern and southern, and connects them outside of the town, instead of within, as heretofore proposed. The northern sections being brought into the Great Northern, and the southern into the South-Western, these two lines may be connected by less than three miles of line, and having their terminii in Lincoln's-inn-fields. This position is described as offering the greatest inducement both as a central point and as a large unoccupied area, and, by clearing away the houses between Lincoln's-inn-fields and Holborn, a very large site will be obtained at no great cost, and two new streets thence to the Strand will give free access to all parts of the town. The plan shows the manner of connecting the railways and the division most convenient with reference to engineering, and with regard to the traffic, giving to the northern leader the Great Northern, London and North-Western, and Eastern Counties; and the southern leader the South-Western, Great Western, South Eastern, Brighton, and North Kent. By the construction of two branches from the North London, of half a mile in length, the connection of the northern lines may be completed. The southern requires a branch three miles in length in the direction of the Grand Surrey Canal, which will connect the South-Eastern, the Brighton, and the North Kent. A loop or junction of a mile from the Brentford, now in course of construction will connect the Great Western. A bridge over the Thames is the only real work in the undertaking. The central station being used only for passengers, mails, and parcels. The present railway termini will serve for goods and local passengers, but, if four lines of rails are laid through, out goods may also be conveyed to the central station. "This important work accomplished," remarks Mr. Yeatman, "perhaps the General Post-office may be established at the central station for it will appear, on all grounds, to be essential to bring the Post-office to the railways than to take the railways to the Post-office."

---

An ingenious rogue has recently been making imitations of ancient flint arrowheads and stone hammers, and disposing of them as veritable antiques to several persons in the east of England.

"THE COVEY." PAINTED BY J. WOLF.

FROM THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

We this week engrave Mr. Wolf's very painstaking and original picture. The word "covey," as used by the artist, although it is chiefly applied to partridges, is taken to mean an assemblage of birds before the pairing season (which, for partridges, is about the third week of February), and not simply a brood or hatch of young birds under the protection of their parents. We have, therefore, goldfinches as well as partridges in the picture. A covey is sometimes formed even after the pairing season, when very severe weather, such as we have here represented, sets in unusually late, and the birds are then said to pack.

It may be remarked in the picture that the partridges look like all objects seen in snow, somewhat larger than the natural size; and as the painter has, moreover, represented them seeking warmth and shelter under a low bush of Scotch fir; and as, also, their legs are lost in the snow, they might, were it not for the plumpness of their form, and the difference—which is, however, not very considerable—in the colour of their plumage, be taken by persons not very familiar with the appearance of grouse, for a female bird with her brood of this (to the sportsman) more exciting and important species of game.

The winter compact among partridges is broken up, if the season be mild, about the beginning of January. We do not know, in our capricious climate, if the weather Mr. Wolf has so well depicted comes within the four months allowed by law for partridge-shooting (from the 1st of September to the end of January); or, as some interpret the law, as including the 1st of February)—we cannot say, therefore, if the springing of the covey before us is a legitimate object of la chasse au fusil. But, even if it is, the watchfully-open or half-closed and peering eyes of the birds seem to intimate that they would be scarcely approachable, unless, indeed, the shooter adopt the method for getting within gunshot occasionally practised upon grouse, when snow happens to cover the mountains before the expiration of the shooting season. The sportsman places a shirt over his clothes, covers himself with a sheet, or assumes any other disguise giving him an appearance or colour assimilating with the snow. No dog is required; the pack of grouse is seen at a considerable distance; but the shooter must not make a direct approach, or the birds would take wing; he therefore appears in no hurry, seems to be engaged in anything rather than a desire to get near them; he moves semicircuitously or zigzag, according to the nature of the ground, and thus accomplishes his object. Our birds will not, however, from the probability of their impending fate, suggest to the gourmet, at least this season, what a very nice roti their more plump than handsome forms would make.

Mr. Wolf has very properly represented the partridges as having run to their shelter (mark the impressions left by their feet in the snow), and as nestling under a detached bush, for we need not say they always avoid thick coverts, fearing polecats and stoats, but seek aftermath, potatoes, turnips, and stubbles. On the breast of the fine fellow standing at full length in the picture, is a chestnut mark, in the form of a horseshoe; this is wanting in the female for the two first years.

There is much evidence of an eye watchful of nature, in the representation of the goldfinches. These birds are nearly always roving on the wing. At almost every season of the year you may either see their bright wings glance in the air or hear their cheerful and musical "twit, twit," in the earliest morning, at noontide, or in latest evening. The goldfinch has in this way obtained the reputed character of being a very fickle bird, seeking endless changes, always gaily and freely frolicking, or lightly and blithely singing. Our artist, even in the bitter weather in the picture, has shown that these hardy and lithe little birds have not entirely lost their playfulness. They are not huddling up together like the partridges; but each is separately and busily engaged—hopping from spray to spray, balancing on a limber swaying twig, or preparing still to pursue its apparently livelong task of flitting hither and thither unceasingly. We may say with Grahame:—

> Mark the pretty bird himself! how light
> And quick is every motion, every note!
> How beautiful his plumes! his red-tinged head;
> His breast of brown; and see him stretch his wing;
> A fairy fan of golden spokes it seems.
> Oft on the thistle's tuft he, nibbling, sits,
> Light as the down; then, 'mid a flight of downs,
> He wings his way, piping his shrillest call.

He shakes no down loose now, however, with the flutter of his wings, nor chases it in sport; nor can he feed among the thistle's down, or pluck the groundsel's feathered seed. All that the trees bear now are snow and icicles, and with his restless wing he only disengages a few snow-crystals. And so we may say with all things in this world; even the most desirable, liberty itself, has its sorrows, privations, and trials.

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE.

TURNER'S WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS.

We are quite sure that the high reputation of Turner, which has been so solidly sustained by the recent concentration of the principal oil works of Turner in Marlborough House, will suffer in no way by the public examination of his sketches and coloured drawings. We may boldly say that we know of nothing by the professed water-coloured draughtsmen that equal these productions. If Martin was the greatest English master of linear perspective, Turner was beyond all compare the very greatest in aerial perspective. The subjects presented in this department are not numerous—being confined to a few on screens, placed at right angles with the windows of a couple of rooms for want of the space which we hope, at no distant date, to see accorded to this truly national collection—but they are of the rarest excellence; and we may say that generally we prefer the sepia drawings to those in body colour.

"THE COVEY."—PAINTED BY J. WOLF.—FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

There are three very large coloured drawings hung on the wall, the best of which appears to us to be "Edinburgh from the Calton Hill." We regret that the dates are not given either on the drawings themselves or in the printed catalogue. But it is evident that this is in Turner's early manner—probably during the latter years of the French war the outer rock of the Calton Hill being uncrowned by the gaol; and there are other indications of Turner having painted rather "Auld Reekie" than the "Modern Athens." The water-cart with spokeless wheels tells a tale of the non-existence of efficient water companies at that early period of the century. The selection of the point of view is very fine: in the distance the elongated profile of the Castle is given, with a warm atmospheric envelope, finely relieved by the disposition of masses of black rock in shadow, and a boldly-pronounced foreground. The other large drawing of the same size is the "Battle of Fort Bard, in the Valley of Aosta;" parts of which are done with very extraordinary merit; the subject being a deep ravine, animated by the hot conflict of contending armies, and the flash of artillery mingling with the thundercloud. It cannot be denied but that none but a very considerable artist could undertake such a subject as this. It is full of life and movement; and there are glimpses of the mountain scenery that are most suggestive of our alpine recollections; but the general effect does not appear to us to be successful. The attention of the spectator is too divided by parts; and one of the grand elements of success, unity and concentration of effect, is here lost. The mountains, the clouds, and the smoke are all so mingled that it requires an exertion of the attention to extricate them, and therefore the effect is inconsistent with sound art. The third drawing of this size, the "Funeral of Sir Thomas Lawrence," is hung too high to enable us to judge of it; but it appears to be inferior to the others.

The smaller coloured drawings next the windows, principally views in Italy and Switzerland are masterpieces in their way. Take, for instance, the "Bridge of St. Maurice," where the stork forms the foreground, and at once creates a middle distance which would otherwise be lost to the eye. In another small drawing, close to it, of the "Hospice of the Great St. Bernard," we find a perfect senzure of the wintry look of this dreary locality—the dull grey of the frozen lake, and the figures and dogs indicated by the slightest scratches.

The sepia drawings gave us uncommon pleasure, for here Turner's extraordinary power in the treatment of light shows itself pure and without alloy. In "Bonneville, Savoy" the basis appears to have been struck out by simple pen and ink; and, we make bold to say, is worthy of the study of every artist, from the striking result with so small an expenditure of labour. For instance, in the sculpture of the mountains, by slight zigzags of the pen not a single stroke is thrown away; every one denotes a seam, a furrow, or a gullet, graduated in depth, and showing how skill is the great economist of manual labour. The revelation of what we presume to be Mont Blanc in the distance at once gives a tone to the whole piece by its pure high light carried off by that on the towers below. "A Peat Bog in Scotland," if not so pleasing in result, is still more difficult and masterly in execution. We see the black, skelping ran descending on the black peat bog, but before their meeting we can see through the distance the luminous play of noon upon the bold profiles of the mountains at the end of the vista. To such feats as these Turner had no equal either in modern or ancient art. Of a still more agitated character is a "Storm on the Coast of Yorkshire." The scene is white, with natural spray. It is the height of the tempest, and yet, with slight touches of the pen, the whole drawing bears an impress of human activity contending with it. Here, again, we see Turner's wonderful art of establishing his distance by objects of the immediate foreground, which are in this case the sea-fowl on the wing. Of a much more calm character is that charming piece, "Bridge in the Middle Distance"—evidently a composition in the manner of Claude; small, to be sure, in compass, but a wide and glorious revelation of nature, with the sun set in the heavens. No description of ours can give an idea of such a piece as this, which we deal with very briefly by the simple advice to our readers to lose no time in paying a visit to Marlborough House.

HER MAJESTY ENTHRONED.—JOHN GIBSON, R.A., SCULPTOR.

THIS beautiful group has just been placed in the Prince's Chamber, House of Lords, and was inspected by her Majesty on the 10th ult., when also the Queen inspected the four highly characteristic basreliefs, by Mr Theed, which have also recently been placed in the same chamber. The Royal Group is thus described by Mr. Gibson:—

"In the Prince's Chamber is represented, in marble, her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, sitting upon her throne, holding her sceptre and a laurel crown; that is, governing and rewarding: the laurel crown may be considered an emblem of the honour conferred upon intellect and valour.

"The back of the throne is surmounted by lions, expressive of British strength and courage; and the footstool is adorned by sea-horses, to signify dominion upon the ocean: the horse is an emblem of war.

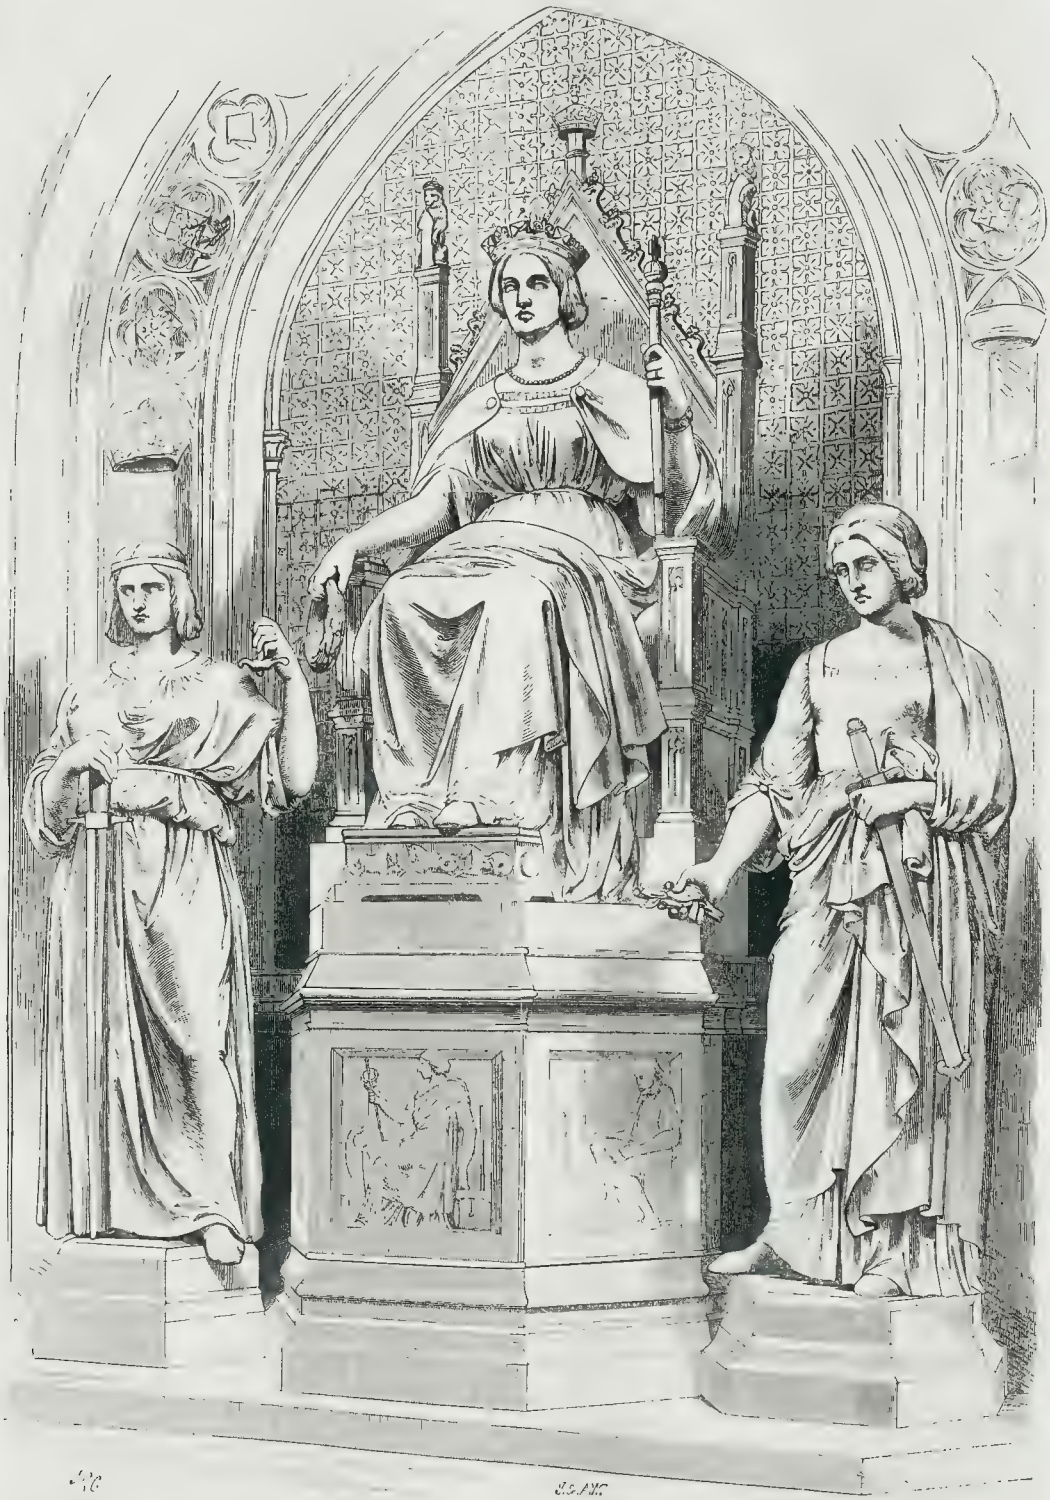
"On the right of the Sovereign stands Justice: on the left, Clemency. The former holds the sword and balance; round her neck is suspended the image of Truth. The expression of Justice is inflexible, while that of Clemency is full of sympathy and sadness—sad for the constant sins which come to her knowledge; but, with lenity, she keeps her sword sheathed, and offers the olive branch, the sign of peace.

"Upon the front of the pedestal is a bas-relief of Commerce. Upon the right side is Science, designated by a youth pondering over geometry; and upon the left a figure denoting the useful arts; in the background are represented the steam-engine, the telegraph wires, and other useful objects.

"Plato says, 'All-seeing Justice; the eye of Justice penetrates into the darkness which conceals the truth.' In Egypt the Judge, when pronouncing sentence of death, put on his neck a small image of Truth: it was of gold. Clemency must have the power of punishment, therefore she is represented with a sword."

The figures are colossal, that of her Majesty being eight feet high, and those of the attendant ones above seven. A very fine view of this group may be had from the further end of the Royal Gallery advancing from the Robing-room. It is there seen as if in a frame. The background of the arch, under which the group is placed, is richly diapered and highly gilded. This decoration has had the effect of reducing the proportions of the figures, which at one time threatened to appear too large for the room. It also warms up the archway, and blends nicely with a touch or two of gilding upon the crown and back of the state chair.

MARBLE GROUP IN THE PRINCE'S CHAMBER, HOUSE OF LORDS.



HER MAJESTY QUEEN VICTORIA, SUPPORTED BY JUSTICE AND CLEMENCY.
JOHN GIBSON, R.A., SCULPTOR.

TOWN AND TABLE TALK ON LITERATURE, ART, &c.

THE new Stanhope trustee for the formation of a gallery of portraits of persons eminent in British history is in many respects a judicious appointment. Mr. Thomas Carlyle of the English and French revolutions has been gazetted to succeed the Earl of Ellesmere. We shall have no canvas "shams," and we shall see "hero-worship" in portraiture carried out legitimately. Mr. Carlyle cannot, we suspect, distinguish a Hilliard from a Holbein, or a Mytens from a Janssen, inasmuch as he has not given his attention to that particular study; nor do we, indeed, see any one person on the committee who is conversant with English portraits out of the print line (in which Mr. William Smith and Mr. Carpenter are so learned), or who has made the manuscripts of Vertue and the collections of Walpole a kind of textbook; and who has, at the same time, gone so deep into the subject, that he has dug up English painters in England of the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King James I. of whom Walpole and Waagen had never heard, and at the same time found important examples of their art in English portraiture with which no one on the committee is at all acquainted. Mr. Carlyle's appointment has our entire approbation.

The squabble at the Literary Fund has at least led to this improvement: for the first time since the formation of the Fund the members have been individually informed of the annual general meeting. This year the meeting is fixed for March the 11th, at two o'clock. Whether the battle of the booksellers and authors will be renewed in Great Russell-street on that day we are not at liberty to tell. We hope, at least, that there will be a large attendance on the 11th; and, what all members must have at heart, accomplishing the greatest amount of good at the lowest cost will not be lost sight of at the general meeting. The committee must have found by this time (they have had a year to look about them) another author of note to keep our friend, Mr. Robert Bell, in countenance. Last year he stood alone—a solitary author in a Paternoster-row and Amen-corner of publishers, booksellers, printers, typefounders, bookbinders, and stitchers.

Grisi is in Manchester, and, it is said, to try her voice privately in the Art-Treasures Building. We can hear her rich notes ring from side to aisle to aisle and vault to vault of the Manchester Temple of the Fine Arts.

There is another person in Manchester this week, with a real treasure, wherein modern art is made by its setting to render full justice to ancient art. Who has not heard of the famous Devonshire gems? We have seen them in Devonshire House in two frames over a chimney-piece. These gems the Duke of Chatsworth, Chiswick, and Hardwick has given to his niece, the Countess Granville; and Mr. Hancock, of Bruton-street, has set the best of them with infinite taste and skill, in a coronet, necklace, bracelets, and other personal ornaments, fit for tournaments, coronations, birthdays, and drawing-rooms. The Countess carried them to the recent coronation at Moscow, and marvellously well, we are told and believe, they became her Ladyship on that occasion. They form, in every respect, a dainty sight to set before a Queen—and the fairest.

The Royal Irish Academy, in spite of its annual grant from Parliament of a fair round sum to support the Academy in its supposed endeavours to teach a love for antiquity, has not (in its last vote) imitated the example set by London societies without annual grants, for the Royal Irish Academy has refused to lend a single example of its treasures to the Manchester Exhibition. Now, the Royal Society—founded by King Charles II., and allowed a few small rooms by King George III.—has lent to Manchester whatever Manchester asked for. The Society of Antiquaries of England, established in the reign of George II., and allowed a few very small rooms by King George III., has done what the Royal Society has done quite as promptly and quite as liberally: the Royal Academy of Arts (always thought, at least, as exclusive as the Royal Irish Academy) has given to Manchester what Manchester asked for; and yet the Royal Irish Academy will not give a single article thanks to Lord Talbot de Malahide, and Dr. Petrie, of the Round Towers. The reason assigned was a fear that their treasures might be lost in the seaway from Dublin to Holyhead. Have they my fear that their next annual grant may be lost in passing in specie between Holyhead and Dublin? At all events, we believe and trust that the Royal Dublin Society, in the coming Battle of the Brooches, will not imitate the bad example of the Royal Irish Academy.

The ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of the monument to the memory of the late Marquis of Londonderry took place on Saturday, in Derry. The monument is to be a quadrangular tower, rising 130 feet. There will be a guard chamber, and a winding stair will conduct to the battlements, which are to be at a height of 95 feet from the base. At the east corner of the square a round tower will form a conspicuous landmark visible to a great distance at sea. The spot chosen is the summit of a hill of the Scrabo range, near Newtownards.

TESTIMONIAL.—To the Rev. W. Tilson Marsh, M.A., from his congregation and friends at Ryde, Isle of Wight, on his accepting an incumbency at Lewisham, a superb ewer&oir, beautifully carved in mahogany and walnut wood, with an open Bible, an inscription in scroll-work, and the rev. gentleman's crest carved upon it, accompanied by an address signed by some hundreds of his friends.

EAST INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH, VIA THE RED SEA.—A complete charts and soundings have been taken of the whole of the Red Sea and along the coast of Arabia the whole way to Kurrachee, so that all the necessary information is known and recorded for the immediate carrying out of this line; added to which those who are best acquainted with these seas state, that in the Red Sea ten months in the year are available for the purpose of laying the wires. The wire, once laid, needs no further protection, and the cost of maintenance is small. Mr. T. Gisborne has just returned from Constantinople with the concessions necessary to complete the continuation of the line from Alexandria to India; among the principal of which are protection to wires and stations, and "through" messages to be expressly exempt from all control and supervision on the part of the Ottoman and Egyptian Governments.

GLYCERINE.—A correspondent in Guatemala says glycerine is invaluable for a tropical traveller: a little of it applied to a mosquito-bite instantly relieves; "no scratching and sores on the legs as before; it is perfectly marvellous, and I would not travel on these coasts without it now."

PASSENGERS FOR HONG-KONG.—Amongst the passengers who left Southampton on Wednesday last for Hong-Kong in the India and China mail-steamer Indus were Mr. J. C. Bowring and Miss Bowring, a son and daughter of Sir John Bowring. The Indus took out about 100 passengers in the whole. There was put on board of her also the largest Hong-Kong mail ever known.

CANADIAN DEMAND FOR LABOUR.—It appears from the report of Mr Buchanan, Chief Government Emigration Agent at Quebec, to the Governor-General of Canada, dated December 31, 1856, that the prospects of emigrants during the ensuing season will be favourable. Mr. Buchanan says:—"The demand for labour in West Canada throughout the season has been considerably in advance of the supply; continued applications were received from almost every section of the province, complaining of the scarcity of labour and the difficulty of procuring domestic servants, and requesting that emigrants might be directed to them."

A THEATRICAL ROW.—About ten days since there was a "row" in the theatre at Pavia. An opera, composed by a native of Bergamo, was not to the taste of the audience, and they insisted on an act of "La Traviata" being given instead. The civil authorities attempted to make the people understand that the thing was impossible, but the clamour increased instead of diminishing, and the end of the matter was that the house was cleared by the troops.—Letter from Vienna.

MUSIC.

OUR distinguished composer and pianist Mr. BRINLEY RICHARDS had a concert on Monday evening at Exeter Hall, on a large scale, and of great excellence. There was a complete and powerful instrumental band composed of the members of the Orchestral Union. The singers were Madame Endersohn, Madame Weiss, Miss Vinning, Madame Anna Thillon, Mr. Sims Reeves, and Mr. Weiss. Mr. Richards' chief performance consisted of Mendelssohn's magnificent concerto in G minor, with full orchestral accompaniments. It was executed by him in a most masterly manner, and justified his title to be placed in the first rank of English pianists. He also performed two solos, both composed by himself: the one entitled "Souvenir de Bellini" was a fantasia on the melody "A te, o cara;" and the other was on the subject of the fine air "The Bluebells of Scotland." Both are elegant pieces in the modern style of the instrument; they were played with much grace and delicacy, and loudly encored. A very pretty vocal duet, "How beautiful is night," composed by Mr. Richards, was sung by Mr. and Mrs. Weiss, and received with much applause. Mr. Sims Reeves sang a great deal: he was quite recovered from his recent indisposition, and in superb voice. His "Death of Nelson" was a display of vocal power and rhetorical energy which reminded us of Braham in his most palmy days. It excited enthusiasm; and, notwithstanding its length, was sung a second time. Indeed, everything that he sang was encored. One of them was the song written for him by Balfe, "Come into the garden, Maud," which he is making more popular than it deserves to be. We cannot enumerate the contents of a programme so ample; but we must mention that Miss Louisa Vinning was encored in Verdi's "Tacea la notte placida;" and Mr. Weiss in his own admirable song, "The Village Blacksmith." Picco, the Sardinian Minstrel, was encored in Paganini's "Carneval de Venise," a marvellous piece of execution, considering the very limited powers of his tiny instrument. There was an overflowing audience, between two and three thousand persons being present.

MR. ELLA has commenced a series of evening concerts at Willis's Rooms in connection with the Musical Union, and similar to the regular matinées of that society, which, as usual, will begin after Easter. The first of these evening concerts was given on Tuesday. The "executants" (as Ella calls them) were—violins, Messrs. Sainton and Goffrie; tenor, Mr. H. Blagrove; violoncello, Signor Piatti; and pianoforte, Herr Derffel. This gentleman is a pianist from Vienna, newly arrived in England. He played (with Sainton and Piatti) Beethoven's trio in B flat, Op. 70, and showed himself to be an excellent performer, but more remarkable, we think, for strength and energy than for delicacy of tone or finish of execution. Two stringed-instrument quartets the one by Haydn and the other by Spohr—were played with exquisite beauty, and delighted the audience. A new feature at these concerts was a chamber-choir of male and female voices, under the direction of Mr. Land, who sang several part-songs and madrigals. The room was well filled.

ON Wednesday evening the REUNION DES ARTS had their first soirée of the season at their rooms in Harley-street. There was an excellent concert of vocal and instrumental music. Spohr's quartet in E, Op. 43, was played by Messrs. Sainton, Baselli, Goffrie, and Paque; in Mendelssohn's pianoforte quartet in B minor the principal part was performed in a most masterly manner by M. Billet. A young vocalist, Mdlle. Sophie Roeckel, who made her first appearance in London, sang several German songs with much grace and feeling; and Miss Dolby delighted the audience with Luders' pathetic song, "L'Emigré Irlandais." The rooms were filled with elegant company.

HERR REICHARDT, the distinguished tenor, is expected here in a few days from Paris, where he has been singing with remarkable success. His concert at the Salons d'Erard, last week, was crowded with the élite of the Parisian fashionable and musical society, and his reception was flattering in the highest degree. The journals are unanimous in the opinion of his talents which has long since been entertained in England.

ERNST returns to town next week. This most exquisite violinist has been for some months at Brighton, laying in (we trust) a stock of health and strength for his arduous labours during the season.

ITALIAN OPERA IN MANCHESTER.—Mr. Beale's operatic troupe are now performing nightly at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, and have achieved the most unequivocal success. The "Trovatore" and "Don Pasquale" have been played to enthusiastic audiences. The chief novelties in these performances has been the first appearance of Formes as Don Pasquale, a character which, it seems, he has embodied according to a conception of his own, avoiding the conventionalities usually observed by representatives of the part; and, "though deficient, perhaps, in breadth of humour," exhibiting, on the whole, "an excellent piece of natural comedy." Mdme. Gassier, as the heroine of this little opera, is alluded to as having "fairly ruvelled in the sparkling music in which the part abounds;" and Mons. Gassier and Mr. Tennant (Ernesto and Malatesta) both merited and received a large share of applause.

IT is now announced that the great Handel Festival at the Crystal Palace is to be held on the 13th, 17th, and 19th of June, when the "Messiah," "Judas Maccabeus," and "Israel in Egypt" will be performed. The Queen and Prince Albert have intimated their intention to be present.

MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

SONGS, the Poetry and Music by CHARLES MACKAY:—The Christmas Queen, The White Dove, I'll Never Cease Loving Thee, The Breath of Morn, Johnnie Grey, the Doorstep of the Morning. Published in Davidson's "Musical Treasury."

It would be superfluous for us at this time of day to dwell largely upon Charles Mackay's literary character, or the qualities of his genius, which have made him so pre-eminently the Poet of the People. His title to be so regarded is fully recognised in the ever-increasing popularity. A daily contemporary has lately called him the English Béranger, and the name is not misapplied; but it appears to us that he might still better be called the English Burns, though the parallel would present contrasts as well as resemblances. The strength of both, we think, lies in their lyrics, and it is chiefly as song-writers that their names will descend to posterity. Love, of course, is the favourite theme of both. But love with Burns is a passion, ardent, impetuous, and engrossing; with Mackay it is a gentler feeling, more subdued. Love with Mackay is rather an affection, tender and glowing, but always pure, holy, and associated with images of domestic happiness. It is, moreover, unselfish and expansive, and sheds its genial rays on every object around. Its character is expressed in one phrase of one of his songs—

I love my love in the days of spring,
And, for her sake, each living thing.

The two poets have this in common, that they are both animated by the spirit of independence, by manly hatred of social abuses and by warm aspirations for the progress and welfare of mankind. Mackay has an advantage as a song-writer in which he also has among his contemporaries—the thought is always expressed in words that possess the nature has made him a musician, and the gift has been superadded by art that he is able to give vocal expression to his thoughts in characteristic melodies, which are often both original and beautiful.

The songs above named, which have just appeared in the well-known miscellany entitled "The Musical Treasury," are worthy of his name. They will be found to be stamped with all the marks of his genius, his healthy cheerfulness of tone, his kindly, loving spirit, and his graceful simplicity of language. The melodies are flowing, elegant, and perfectly appropriate; and the accompaniments, without any superfluous elaboration, are pure and correct, with no small richness and variety.

THE THEATRES, &c.

DRURY LANE.—Mr. C. Mathews continues to shine as the star of this establishment; and on Monday Mr. Morton's comedy of "A Cure for the Heartache" was revived in order to give that finished actor the opportunity of appearing as Young Rapid. Mr. Keeley, as Old Rapid, stood in humorous contrast with his volatile, go-ahead, unreflecting son. Vortex, too, had an efficient representative in Mr. Tilbury, who was as pompously important as the part required. But the gem of the performance is Mrs. Keeley's Freak Outlands. Never was the boy and the rustic more naturally impersonated—a conception of the character due to the actress for its perfect originality and truthfulness.

LYCEUM.—"Don Cæsar de Bazan" was revived on Monday, the hero being supported by Mr. Charles Dillon. On this gentleman's performance of this character we have already written at large, and have only on the present occasion to record the fact, and his continued success. After the revival, another new piece, founded on Madame Girardin's "Une Femme qui Déteste son Mari," was produced. It has been adapted by Mr. Stirling Coyne, who suffers the action still to take place on the French ground; but the incidents, by abstracting the husband's complicity from the plot, and providing him with a fit of jealousy when he finds the act of divorce prepared. More prominence is thus given to the part of the hero, who is performed by Mr. Dillon with much force and passion. Mrs. Dillon charmingly personates the distressed and ingenious wife, whose admirable reticence saved her noble partner from mortal danger in the days of revolutionary terror.

PRINCESS'.—Mr. Henry Russell, the celebrated vocalist, has, we are informed, taken this theatre during Passion Week, for the performance of his popular entertainment, "The Far West; or, the Emigrant's Progress."

STRAND.—This little theatre has been the scene of much excitement, in consequence of the engagement of the Howard family from the United States, whose representation of "The Death of Eva" has again brought Uncle Tom into theatrical prominence. The piece Eva is not only touchingly impersonated by Miss Howard, but the character of Topsy receives an original interpretation from her mother, who is all the wildness and wickedness of the oppressed negro most instructively. We see throughout the natural reaction against social wrong, and recognise the portrait as true to the life. We regard the performance as admirable. A new piece was mounted for the family on Monday: the preponderance of the action, nevertheless, rests with the entire company. It is entitled "Fashion and Famine; or, the Strawberry Girl." Miss Howard represents the little heroine, who takes to selling strawberries and flowers in the streets for the support of her grand-parents. The play is in three acts, and abounds in melodramatic business. The materials are old, but interesting; and, like most of the pieces imported from the United States, it bears evidence of having been previously exported. They are, in fact, adaptations from the Parisian stage; but the mystifications of the dialogue are numerous, and lend a thoroughly American air to the manners, which, if no longer novel, are still amusing. The house was well attended.

EDINBURGH.—Mr. and Miss Vandenhoff have lately been fulfilling a most successful engagement at the Queen's Theatre, and have taken their benefit in the tragedy of "Coriolanus." Mr. Vandenhoff's performance of the Roman patrician is certainly one of the finest on the modern stage, and is praised in the highest terms by the local journals. In an address after the performance Mr. Vandenhoff made some allusion to the subject of his early retirement. It is his intention to make another appearance either in the autumn of the present year or the spring of the next. "By next August," said the veteran tragedian, "I shall have completed a jubilee in the service of the public; and prudence tells me that, however hale I may be, and whatever strength I still possess by the blessing of Providence, however gently time has laid his hand upon me, I cannot conceal from myself that the pressure will be felt, and I should not like to remain upon the stage a mere shadow of the past." Mr. Vandenhoff will take with him into his retirement, whenever this may happen, the good wishes of a great number of intelligent admirers, who regard him as "the last of the Romans."

W. S. WOODIN'S "OLIO OF ODDITIES."—At this particular period, when the "Lenten entertainments," that the players literally have, naturally direct attention to those providers of public amusement, that without presenting theatrical pieces furnish within themselves the means of legitimately "eating" the anguish of a torturing hour, it will be rendering a service to our readers to remind them of the ample feast of decorous mirth that has been furnished by Mr. W. S. Woodin within his Polygraphic Hall. Although too long and too securely established in his position of a metropolitan celebrity to need any lengthy eulogy of his peculiar abilities, the constant flow of novelty that is apparent in his apparently inexhaustible "Olio of Oddities" claims special recognition. Every night he presents us with some new phase of the ever-varying character of society; and, if there be any truth in Shelley's memorable line, "nought shall endure but mutability," Mr. Woodin's existence will become as remarkable as his entertainment for longevity. His lingual faculty seems as highly distinguished by its complete adaptation to other countries as his bodily presentment to other faces and forms. He is a walking Polyglot as well as a talking Proteus. Irish, Scotch, French, Germany, American, Ethiopian, German, French, and Italian languages and dialects trip off his tongue with a perfect purity of accent, and with as much facility as if he could change his nation with the same ease as he does his features. Even when he has intentionally to aid us by multiplicity of tongues and his infinite variety of full-lengths, half-lengths, and sometimes as in the case of his celebrated young lady, Miss Clara Chattaway—by a total abnegation of identity that seems capable of going to any length, he astounds us by the development of a new and unexpected talent, bursting upon us in the light of a Spanish dancer of the most fantastic and grotesque school. His imitation of Manuel Perez, as the "Doctor in Love," which now forms the closing feature of his programme, is as perfect in its pliancy of limb as in its fidelity of costume. The polygraphic portion of his art was of itself a never-failing source of amusement and wonderment to his auditors, but that he should have added to this what may be called polypodal powers shows that he has vexed Terpsichore as successfully as any of the other muses. Besides having endowed his entertainment with novel and attractive features on the occasion of its being re-presented to the world of London a phrase which may be considered as a synonym for his audience—he has established his hall in a manner that makes it unique as a place of elegant entertainment and refined resort. The interior has undergone an entire renovation, with a marked combination of taste and richness in the appointments; and the walls are lined with lookingglass in a manner that multiplies the forms around him to a number almost equalling the multiplication of his own. The style of the whole entertainment needs no recommendation from these columns, for every visitor to Mr. Woodin goes forth again to the public as the very best advertisement that Mr. Woodin could desire to have.

CHELTENHAM LITERARY AND PHILOSOPHICAL INSTITUTION.—A lecture announced under the original title—"A Lay Sermon on a Text from Shakspeare: Apemantus or Self" was delivered, on Tuesday evening last, by G. Douglas Thompson, Esq., at the above-named institution. The text prefixed to this novel discourse was from the grace of Apemantus at the table of Lord Timon:

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;
I pray for no one but myself.

Mr. Thompson then proceeded to show very pointedly that self overpampered is the cause of most of our troubles, political and domestic. He spoke of self as assuming every disguise—love, friendship, religion, &c. He first displayed him in the persons of two of our Kings, Henry VII. and Henry VIII., and the subject gave him good scope for passing from grave to gay. One of the most amusing impersonations was that of self, in the person of Mr. Thomas Ticket-of-leave. We had this gentleman under three aspects:—First, as he appeared when sitting in his cell a hardened wretch; then as he appeared when the chaplain was with him, full of pretended penitence for the purpose of obtaining a ticket; and, lastly, we had his exultation at having blinded the chaplain. The changes of voice and countenance were quick and true to nature, and drew down much applause. Mr. Thompson made some very telling remarks on those who exhibit Mr. Self in the pulpit by jesting and joking on scriptural texts, and said that sincerity and an irreverent manner of treating solemn subjects could not co-exist. He spoke of Palmer and the once notorious Wainwright (also a forger and poisoner), the Gabriel Varney of Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton's "Lucretia," and corrected a misstatement with regard to the capture of the latter, reading a letter from the officer who took him in proof of his version of the story. He was taken, said Mr. Thompson, not in an hotel in Covent-garden, after being in London two hours, as stated in the memoirs of Charles Lamb, but in Howland-street, Fitzroy-square, after treating at home and out at supper and bed by Van Holst in Lord Northwick's gallery was painted from the party by whom he was traced. At the conclusion of the lecture the Rev. Dr. Hepworth proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Thompson, which was heartily and unanimously responded to by a numerous audience.

THE rebuilding of Covent Garden Theatre has at length been determined on. The Duke of Bedford has granted to Mr. Gye a lease of the site of the late theatre and some additional ground for the term of ninety years. The edifice is to be of enlarged dimensions; and, in addition to the theatre, there is to be a magnificent concert-hall.

MARRIAGE IN THE ROTHSCHILD FAMILY.

GUNNERSBURY PARK, MIDDLESEX.

THE marriage, by Hebrew ceremonial, of the Baron Alphonse de Rothschild to his cousin Leonora, the beautiful daughter of the Baron and Baroness Lionel de Rothschild, the popular head of the family in this country, is an alliance which may not inaptly be said to have an European interest.

In preparation for this event extensive arrangements have been for some time in progress at Gunnersbury. The main feature of these has been the extension of the magnificent dining-room, so as to accommodate the numerous guests bidden to the festival. This temporary expansion of the mansion—full thirty-five feet beyond its already large dimensions—and receding into sweeping recesses walled with mirrors framed with trellis and artificial flower work, was lined in every disposable form with the choicest exotics in all the bloom and perfume of Oriental nature. Draperies of white and blush-rose colour radiated from forty compartments, into which the ceiling was made to subdivide—every decoration being of the most tasteful character, and the whole most amply illuminated with costly chandeliers and numerous candelabra. The general decorations of the house are of pure white and gold. It is furnished throughout in the most elaborate manner, and is replete with articles of virtù, paintings of the highest order of art, bronzes of the rarest kind, and all of costly luxury that the most sumptuous taste can desire.

The invitations included several members of the corps diplomatique, a large portion of the aristocracy, some distinguished foreigners, and the various members of the illustrious house of Rothschild. Among the earliest to arrive we remarked:—His Excellency the Ambassador of France, the Duchess of Bedford, his Excellency the Hanoverian Minister, the Duchess of Wellington, his Excellency the Belgian Minister and Madame Van de Weyer, Baron and Baroness Nathaniel Rothschild, Baron and Baroness Mayer de Rothschild, Sir Anthony and Lady de Rothschild, Lord and Lady John Russell, Lord John Hay, the Earl and Countess of Airlie, Lord and Lady Lyndhurst, Lord James and Lady Rachel Butler, Lady O'Donnell, Lady Hilton, Lady Caroline Maxse, Mr. Joseph Montefiore, Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Rothschild, Major the Hon. G. F. Boyle, Dr. Quin, Mr. Alfred Seymour, Hon. Charles Villiers, Mr. P. Soloman, Mr. Henry Fleming, Mr. John Abel Smith, M.P., Miss Barnett, Dr. Kalisch, Mr. Benjamin Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Montefiore, Mr. Lucas, Mr. Roth, Mr. and Mrs. de Symons, Alderman Solomons, Mr. John Wagg, Mr. Lionel Hulbert, Mr. Crscraft, Mr. Tafforin, Mr. Monckton Milnes, M.P., General Ashburnham, Mr. Grenfell and Miss Grenfell, Lady Molesworth, Viscountess Melgund, the Right Hon. Benjamin Disraeli, M.P., and Mrs Disraeli, Mr. De Lane, Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Dillon, Mr. St. Pierre, the Right Hon. Henry Pitzroy, M.P., and Mrs. Pitzroy, Mr. Bernal Osborne, M.P., Mr. de Sausse, Lady Adelaide Cadogan, &c.

The assembled company presented a coup-d'œil the most brilliant in beauty and costume that can be conceived, and among the fairest the sixteen bridemaids held a proud pre-eminence. During the interval which occurred between the arrival of the company and the ceremonial of the marriage, the guests occupied themselves with promenading through the beautiful saloons of the mansion. As the appointed hour for the solemn rites approached, the observer could not fail to note in every significant detail the symbolic evidences of a superstitious and imaginative race. Of these tokens, among the most expressive may be mentioned the bridal canopy, suggestive of the great attributes of Jehovah—Truth, Space, and the Providential Eye. This canopy was supported at each corner by Barons Nathaniel and Alfred Rothschild, brothers of the bride; and Barons Ferdinand and James Rothschild, the bridegroom's brothers, officiating as groomsmen. A portion of the solemnity, at which both the contracting parties and their immediate relatives were present, had already taken place in an upper apartment of the mansion, when at half-past four o'clock the flutter of expectation which had pervaded the brilliant assemblage was checked by the entrance of the Chief Rabbi, the Rev. Dr. Adler, robed in canonical garments, and attended by his assistant priests, the Rev. Samuel Asher, the Rev. A. A. Greene, and the Rev. Samuel Lyons. The Chief Rabbi having taken his position in front of the canopy, the nuptial procession entered the saloon. The bridegroom, a handsome young man with a fine countenance, entered first, supported by his father and father-in-law: and then came the bride, between her mother and mother-in-law, the betrothal pair first meeting under the canopy. The fair bevy of bridemaids included the following ladies:—

| | |
|---|---|
| Miss Evelina Rothschild. | Miss Hannah L. Rothschild. |
| Miss Adèle Rothschild. | Miss Constance Rothschild. |
| Miss Emma Rothschild. | Miss Annie Rothschild. |
| Miss Theresa Rothschild. | Miss Hannah Rothschild. |
| Lady Boyle. | Lady Louisa Boyle. |
| Hon. Miss Copley. | Miss O'Hara. |
| Miss Ashworth. | Miss Maxse. |
| Miss Probyn. | Mdlle. De la Grenée. |

The first in the list—Miss Evelina Rothschild—is the beautiful sister of the bride. The Misses Adele, Emma, Theresa, and Hannah Louisa Rothschild are the daughters of Baron Charles de Rothschild, of Frankfort, whence they came to attend their fair cousin. Miss Constance and Miss Annie Rothschild are the daughters of Sir Anthony de Rothschild; and Miss Hannah Rothschild, of Baron Mayer de Rothschild. Of the other eight, the Ladies Maria and Louisa Boyle are the sisters of the Earl of Cork, the Hon Miss Copley is the youngest daughter of Lord Lyndhurst; Miss Ashworth and Miss O'Hara are the two celebrated beauties, and on the occasion they found worthy companions in Miss Probyn, Miss Maxse, and Mdle. De la Grenée.

The costume of the bride was a chef d'œuvre in taste and appointments. The robe was of white satin, covered with real Brussels point of a very rare description, trimmed with marabouts, and decorated with bunquets of orange blossom and lilies of the valley. The headdress, admirably adapted to Oriental beauty, was composed of massive braids of hair falling low upon the neck, and bound with rouleaux of royal-blue velvet, producing a charming effect. The bridal chaplet was formed of orange blossoms, the asphaniotis, and lilies of the valley, with pendants of jessamine and mayflower. Attached to the back of the head was a veil of the costliest Brussels lace which swept the ground; and superadded to this was the distinguishing veil of the Hebrew bride the voile de virginité. Literally it should have been a mark of fine linen concealing the features; but on this occasion it was represented by the more elegant and appropriate tulle illusion, a most aerial fabric, entirely enveloping the face without concealing it.

The dresses of the sixteen bridemaids were of white tulle, trimmed with blue ribbons, and velvets over very full slips of white glacé. They wore wreaths and bouquets of white roses and lilies of the valley, and on blue velvet and tulle veils.

The Chief Rabbi opened the ceremonial by an appropriate address to the bride and bridegroom, delivered in English, in the course of which he paid a high compliment to the Rothschild family, and especially to the father and mother of the bride, whose example he enjoined the young couple to emulate as the best mode of ensuring a happy existence here and attaining a blissful hereafter.

A solemn prayer and blessing in Hebrew followed.

The bridal pair now partook of a wine-cup handed to them by their respective parents, after which the bridegroom placed the ring on the finger of his bride pronouncing audibly in Hebrew that which may be thus rendered:

Behold: thou art wedded to me with this ring according to the law of Moses and Israel.

The marriage contract, the burden of which enforces the mutual duties of husband and wife, was next read, after which the Chief Rabbi presented another wine-cup, and invoked on the wedded pair seven blessings.

The Chief Rabbi then congratulated the pair, and offered up a supplication for the poor of the Land of Promise. The wine-cup (symbol of joy and sorrow in blended union) was here taken by the bridegroom, who, after tasting the contents, threw the cup on the ground, which shivered it into a thousand pieces, thus denoting the precarious nature of life and joy, and commemorating also that great sorrow still held sacred by the Jew—the destruction of the Temple.

The whole of the service, with the exception of the introductory address, was performed in Hebrew, by Dr. Adler and the Rev Simon Asher.

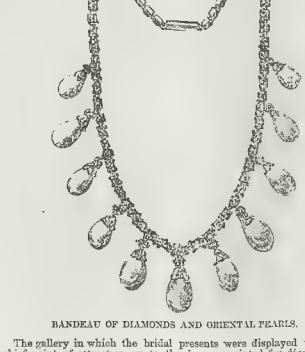
The ceremony concluded, the bridegroom removed the veil from his bride and saluted her. The young Baroness was also saluted by her parents, and by the fair sisterhood in attendance upon her.

The ordinary legal formalities of the marriage having been presently completed, the bride and bridegroom received the congratulations of the assembled guests.

The band of the 1st Life Guards was stationed in the conservatory, and as soon as the marriage ceremony was completed they commenced playing a selection of favourite music.

FRINGE OF DIAMONDS.

After the ceremony, the bride wore a gorgeous suite of diamonds, consisting of a diadem or necklace; two fringes for the dress in diamonds; and a diamond chain with eleven fine oriental pearl drops for a bandeau; the value of the whole exceeding £5000. The design, which is perfectly novel, was furnished by the mother of the bride, the Baroness Lionel de Rothschild, and the execution was intrusted to Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, of Bond-street.



BANDEAU OF DIAMONDS AND ORIENTAL PEARLS.

The gallery in which the bridal presents were displayed was the chief point of attraction up to the hour appointed for dinner. It would be impossible, otherwise than by a catalogue of great minuteness, to enumerate the costly and jewels rivalling the wealth of the Indies, to give an idea of the splendour and number of the gifts collectively displayed in this gallery, or to enumerate the donors. One set of jewels alone, the gift of the bridegroom's father, was said to be worth £30,000.

The banquet was all that can be imagined where wealth and taste combine to spread the liberal board, and a generous hospitality unites with a happy occasion to welcome friendly guests. The disposition of the tables was such as an artist must have admired; the least trifle such as an epicure would not forget.

The bride and bridegroom sat together at the head of the principal table. On the right of the bride sat Baron James Rothschild, Baroness Lionel de Rothschild, Count Persigny, the Duchess of Bedford, the Belgian Minister, Baroness Nathaniel de Rothschild, Lord John Russell, and Lady Anthony de Rothschild. On the left of the bridegroom were Baroness James Rothschild, Baron Lionel de Rothschild, the Duchess of Wellington, Count Richmansegge, and the Hon. Mrs. Fitzroy. The scene when the guests were seated was extremely brilliant.

After the banquet the Rev. A. A. Greene chanted in Hebrew grace after meat. When this had concluded,

The French Ambassador rose and spoke as follows:—"Si je suis heureux d'avoir à complimenter la jeune Mariée, comme ami de sa famille, j'avoue que, comme Ambassadeur de France, j'éprouve quelque embarras. C'est qu'en effet, Représentant d'un pays attaché à l'alliance anglaise, je ne devrais rien faire qui puisse être désagréable à nos alliés et cependant voilà que j'encourage de ma présence, et même de ma parole, l'enlèvement, un profit de mon pays, d'une des plus brillantes perles de cette écrin où belles jeunes filles d'Angleterre est si fière d'heriter. Cependant, malgré ma responsabilité officielle, l'exemple peut devenir contagieux. Ce n'est pas impunément que nos femmes compatriotes verront arriver à Paris une des plus charmantes produits de cette éducation anglaise qui sait allier d'une manière si admirable le naturel et la simplicité à l'instruction la plus brillante. Il y a, peut-être, un moyen de tout concilier; c'est que l'heureux époux, qui va donner à mes compatriotes un exemple si séduisant, promette de ramener sa jeune femme le plus souvent possible au milieu de ses amis d'Angleterre. Maintenant je voudrais adresser mes vœux à la jeune mariée; mais que souhaiter à une jeune femme tout à la fois née et mariée dans une famille qui a retrouvé à Jamais merveilleuse des "Mille et une Nuits?" Car avec cette puissance magique, quels désirs, quels caprices même, ses parens et son mari ne pourront ils pas satisfaire? Et si le cœur de la jeune femme reste, comme j'en suis convaincu, au milieu des plaisirs du monde, toujours bon et compatissant pour l'infortune, qu'ai je besoin encore de faire un souhait? Est ce que ses deux excellentes mères ne lui ont pas déjà appris, comment, quand il s'agit de faire le bien, la plus petite main peut s'enlarger assez pour puiser dans ces coffres inépuisables?" (Cheers.) Mais puisque je ne peux faire aucun vœu que le talisman d'Aladin ne tienne superflu, je ne vois forcé d'en emprunter un au monde des chimères; mais il n'est pas moins naturel et réalisable—c'est que le roman de la jeune fille se continue comme finissent les Contes de Fées. Je m'arrête: je ne veux pas retarder plus long temps le moment pour les convives de saluer la jeune mariée, et je me hâte de porter le toast impatiemment attendu."—A Madame la Baronne Alphonse de Rothschild." His Excellency was loudly cheered on resuming his seat.

The Bridegroom, in responding to the toast, said on such an occasion he might be excused the want of words to express the cordial thanks of himself and his wife for such kind wishes for their happiness. He hoped and he trusted that God would bless their union (Cheers.. He knew that his beloved wife could not but feel the loss of her parents; but to ensure her welfare would be the great object and tender care of his future life, which he devoted to her (Cheers). To her parents he hoped his gratitude for having given him so great a blessing would be shown in his conduct to her. To his dear friends now present—grateful as he was that they had honoured him on this occasion—he should feel still more grateful if they would come to see him at his own home (Hear, hear). He could say no more, but, in conclusion, would invoke the solemn blessing of Providence on that day (Cheers).

The Right Hon. B. Disraeli, in eloquent terms, proposed The health of the Baron and Baroness James Rothschild."

Baron James Rothschild expressed his acknowledgments in a few concise words, and said he should be very happy to welcome all his kind friends at his own home in Paris

Lord John Russell proposed the health of the Baron and Baroness Lionel de Rothschild, to whose public and private virtues he paid a well-merited compliment, which was received with much enthusiasm.

Baron Lionel de Rothschild, in a speech replete with great feeling, expressed that, much as he felt the parting with a beloved child, he did so with sure confidence in the happiness that was in store for her (Cheers).

Mr. Bernal Osborne, in a humorous speech, proposed "the health of the Bridemaids," with three times three.

Baron Alfred Rothschild responded for the bridemaids in an amusing speech, and immediately afterwards the guests rose and retired into the ball-room.

The bride appeared with her husband for a short period among the company, but presently retired, and at ten o'clock the happy pair left Gunnersbury for the Willesden station of the London and North-Western Railway, where a special engine and carriage awaited to convey them to Cheddington, en route for Mentmore, the newly-erected mansion of Baron Meyer de Rothschild, under the Chilterns, in the county of Bucks.

The ball was kept up with unflagging gaiety until after two o'clock, and even at that hour many lingered, unwilling to leave the fascinating scene.

Amid the hospitalities of the day the host and hostess had not forgotten their humbler and poorer friends, who were generously feasted, and the feeling of the neighbourhood was shown in the numerous flags hung out at the houses along the road, and the festive appearance assumed by the whole vicinity.

The superb trousseau of the bride, admirable for its exquisite taste, as well as its extensiveness, had engaged the entire skill, and almost exhausted the elegant fancy, of Madame Roger, of Paris, dressmaker to the Empress. The corbeille costumes of the bridemaids, appropriately adapted to enhance each character of beauty in the fair wearers, were designed and made by Mrs. James, of Somerset-street, Portman-square.

Of other appendages to this unique bridal it is impossible to write in detail; but, among the universal perfection of design and effect, we cannot help adverting to the fact—viz., that the head-dresses of the bridemaids with but two or three exceptions were evidences of the taste in his elegant art of M. Alex. Regnier, who, on this occasion, showed how much of effect and grace may be added to perfectness of costume and figure by a graceful adaptation of the coiffure to the requirements of both.

The bouquet of the bride—an almost priceless selection of floral gems—was presented by the bridegroom on the eventful morning. It was composed and arranged by the celebrated florist, Mr. Harding, of Clifford-street.

The temporary room, so highly admired, was the work of Messrs. Collman and Davis, of Upper George-street, who, on this occasion, eclipsed the triumph of their celebrated effort of a similar character on the grand occasion of the Royal visit to the Turkish Embassy.

The other decorative arrangements of the mansion were under the able superintendence of Messrs Davidson and Clark, of Mount street.

The bridecake was a triumph of Gunter's art, who assisted in the proper order and disposition of the tables.

The bonbons and lighter graces of confectionery were supplied by Mr. Tauer, of South Audley street

Next week we shall give an engraving of the marriage ceremony.

MR. OTTLEY'S LECTURE ON PAINTING.

ART-EDUCATION is progressing amongst us. On Wednesday evening Mr. Ottley delivered a lecture at the Marylebone Literary and Scientific Institution, under the title of "An Hour with the Old Masters." The lecturer, after a brief reference to the achievements in art under the Assyrians, Egyptians, and Greeks, and the conquest of Greece, which led to the dispersion of art throughout the Roman Empire, came to the period which gave occasion for some remarks from the lecturer upon a pseudo similar movement now going on amongst us. Without wishing to disparage living art, he invited the judicious observer to compare the works of the old masters of the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth centuries with those of the pre-Raphaelite school of the present day, having regard to their essential characteristics and obvious tendencies and to judge for themselves how far the two movements were parallel, and likely to lead to a similar result. A recent writer on art-history had remarked, as a distinctive characteristic of the Florentine and Roman schools of this early period, that they arranged their groups of figures so as to make complete compositions, without the intervention of drapery, and afterwards clothed them without interfering with the first arrangement; whilst in later times the drapery became an essential part of the composition, commanding attention by the opportunities it afforded for the display of splendour, colour, and charm-power. The same fatal mistake still prevailed, and we had frequent occasion to admire very elaborate fancy costumes, resting entirely upon their own independent pretensions, without a hint of fleshly influences to sustain them. Another striking feature in the artists of this period was their entire freedom from affectation and conceit. they learned and laboured truly to do justice to the subject in hand by the best means at their disposal, without indulging their own fancies, or attempting to show off their own cleverness, merely for purposes of display. The lecturer showed how these old pre-Raphaelites had been indeed, the precursors of Michael Angelo and Raphael himself there being scarcely a point of excellence seen in them, but in its nature, not certainly in degree, had been already foreshadowed in the works of one or other of these earnest labourers. He described in pointed and happy terms the distinguishing features of Michael Angelo, Raphael, Correggio, Titian, Giorgione, and other principal masters; and then, after a glance at the rapid decline which followed them, spoke of the Bolognese school, under the Carracci, which, with all its errors of fanciful theory, did much for art, if in this alone, that it combined beauty of colour and characters with excellence in design.

The general tendency of the lecturer's remarks was to show that the Fine Arts, to be great and productive, must be free, and accepted by the people as a national requirement;—how that, whilst under the Imperial patronage of the Cæsars they languished hopelessly, it was in the free republics of Venice, Pisa, Florence, and amongst the commercial communities on the Rhine and in Flanders, they revived in all the grandeur of creative power. Nor did the illustration of the pleasing theme end here. In our own country art, which, in the midst of State intrigue and turmoil, had languished to the extreme of dejection when dependent solely upon the chances of courtly patronage, now, in times of peace and commercial prosperity, found in the cotton lords of Lancashire, the woollen lords of Leeds, and the merchant princes of London and Liverpool, munificent and discriminating patrons. In America, also, art was making energetic and noteworthy efforts, from the spontaneous action of free intelligence. He insisted, therefore, that the dogmas of art were not to be considered as esoteric mystery; that artist and public should both understand a common language; and that art-education, widely diffused, would be the best promoter of art as of the civilisation of communities.

The lecture, which lasted upwards of an hour and a half, was illustrated by a large number of copies and fine engravings after the principal masters; in addition to which was a very fine photograph, fully five feet wide, after "The Last Supper" of Leonardo da Vinci, which, having arrived from Milan the previous day, was lent for the occasion by Messrs. Colnaghi. Mr. Ottley was listened to throughout with great attention by a very numerous audience, who frequently testified their interest in the subject by hearty bursts of applause.

SWISS SHAKSPEAREANA.—The Courrier Franco-Italien says:—"Shakspearian discoveries, it appears, are not confined to England, as some important ones have just been made in Switzerland. It seems that an inhabitant of that country, who long resided in England under the reign of Elizabeth and James I., and who afterwards returned to Switzerland and died either at Basil or Zurich, left behind him a library of English books, amongst which are 'Romeo and Juliet' in 4to, 1609; 'Hamlet' 4to, 1611; 'King John,' extremely rare, in quarto, 4to, 1591; 'Volpone,' by Ben Jonson, 4to. 1607; and many other pieces, among which is the now very scarce anonymous comedy of 'How a Good Wife is to be Distinguished from a Bad.' We have as yet received but very brief information of these discoveries, and we wait with great anxiety for further particulars; but we can, at the present time, mention the existence in the library of a volume which is scarcely to be found elsewhere. It is well known that the 'Pericles of Shakspeare was only printed for the first time in 1609. The volume to which we allude was published one year sooner, in 1608, and is nothing less than a recital composed of the very incidents of the drama of 'Pericles.' Only one copy of this work is known in England, under the title of 'The Sad Adventures of Pericles, Prince of Tyre.' Mr. Payne Collier printed a few years ago about fifty copies of a short analysis of it, and the extracts which he quotes show their very close affinity with Shakspeare's drama."

OPENING OF THE BARNSLEY BRANCH RAILWAY: THE PROCESSION ENTERING THE REGENT-STREET STATION

OPENING OF THE BARNSLEY BRANCH OF THE MANCHESTER SHEFFIELD AND LINCOLNSHIRE RAILWAY

THIS branch railway was formally opened for public traffic on Thursday, the 12th inst. with great éclat.

The distance of the line from Dodworth to Barnsley is two miles and three-quarters; and from Penistone to Barnsley nearly seven miles and a half. The entrance from Dodworth the first point worthy of remark is the crossing of the road leading to Higham, by a bridge. It is remarkable for its very flat pitch and great skew, the span being 25ft. 11in. 45ft. 6in. skew with bridges. Between this point and the Summer-lane station the line was opened on the 1st November, 1855. After crossing Summer-lane by a lofty viaduct of two great arches, the most difficult work in the execution is the cutting through the south side of the town which is 1,320 yards long and 47ft. deep. Two stone bridges are erected in this cutting, one of the largest part comprising three arches, each built upon pointed Victoria bridge over which the Crawshaw-road passes; and the other a single arch 30ft. span having a carriage roadway of 20ft. leading from Cockerham-street to Doncaster. The bridge was built by Mr. Wilson, and the stone used from the greater portion of which was got from the cutting. The cutting, which has yielded upwards of 200,000 cubic yards of rock, contains 200,000 cubic yards, deposited in large spoil-banks at each end. The whole of the works from Summer-lane station to the terminus have been laid for a double line.

Immediately on leaving this cutting the line crosses the Old Mill-lane by a cast-iron girder-bridge, similar to that of Summer-lane. At this point the branch and the other entering a spacious station yard, branching out into a number of sidings, capable of holding 200 coal wagons.

The contractors for the whole are Messrs. Lapish, Nelson, and Cameron. The works were commenced and partially completed under Mr. James Potter, engineer to the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway, but have been continued since June last by Mr. R. Rawcliffe. Mr. Thomas Marsh acted on behalf of the company as inspector of works. The cost of this portion of the railway will be about £80,000.

The opening ceremony consisted of a procession of the workmen employed in the construction of the line, which paraded the principal streets of Barnsley, headed by the Barnsley brass band, the musicians being seated in a waggon drawn by seven very powerful horses. A procession of workmen followed on foot, who were succeeded by another waggon, drawn by four horses, in which was the Barnsley drum and fife band.

The starting point was from the Summer-lane station, the platform of which was covered the entire length with canvas, and relieved by numerous arches tastefully decorated with evergreens. At the entrance to the platform in Summer-lane a bolts arch was erected surmounted by union-jacks and a large banner. The fullest arrangements were under the superintendence of Mr. John Carrington, the clerk in charge.

The managing directors and shareholders of the line and their friends left Penistone at half-past seven o'clock by special train, arriving at Summer-lane station at five minutes past twelve, where they were joined by the principal inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood. Having taken their seats in the carriages the engine, named the Idle, then left the station and proceeded at a slow rate to the junction of the South Yorkshire Railway. Along the route several banners were suspended across the line.

On the train reaching the terminus it was loudly cheered, and the directors and other gentlemen alighted and entered the marquee prepared for the occasion, wherein took place the ceremony of proclaiming the through opening of the line. T. R. Barker, Esq., of Sheffield, one of the directors, took the chair. On the platform, amongst others, were—Joseph Locke, Esq., M.P.; S. Lees, Esq., of Manchester; W. Button, Esq., of Gainsborough; G. Gamble, Esq., of London, directors of the line; John Chapman, Esq., chairman of the Anglo-French Coal Company; and Mr. Watkin, manager to the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company.

The Chairman, in his address to the meeting, hoped that the extension of the line would be attended with advantages both to the town of Barnsley and to the shareholders also. And, as it would supply an outlet for the shipment of the mineral produce of the neighbourhood, he trusted the company would be supported by the coal merchants and manufacturers of the district. They had not extended the line to Barnsley with the intention of acting in a hostile spirit to the two companies already established there, but, in keeping in the best of terms with them, they would greatly benefit the town and each of the three companies as well. He might say that they were already partly on terms of alliance with the Lancashire and Yorkshire Company, and were also endeavouring to enter into arrangements with the South Yorkshire Company. The Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company had made the branch line to Barnsley at considerable expense, and it now rested with the manufacturers and coal-merchants to give them their support. He then declared the branch line to be formally opened.

Several other gentlemen addressed the meeting, and the proceedings terminated.

In the evening the event was celebrated by an elegant dinner at the King's Head Hotel—J. T. Barker, Esq., in the chair. Several appropriate toasts were drunk, including "The Anglo-French Steam-ship Company," "Success to the Coal Trade," "The health of Mr. Watkin" (the manager), "The Contractors," &c.

In the course of the afternoon Mr. Locke was called out, and addressed a very large assembly of workmen in front of the hotel, where the hon. gentleman was frequently applauded.

The workpeople and their friends were regaled at the Lord Nelson Inn, where 267 sat down to dinner, and in the evening seventy-three persons connected with the various manufactories in Barnsley sat down to supper.

THE LUND HILL COLLIERY EXPLOSION—MOUTH OF THE DOWNCAST SHAFT.

COLLIERY EXPLOSION NEAR BARNSLEY.

IN our last week's report of this melancholy catastrophe we stated that the shafts of the colliery were being closely covered up so as to prevent any current of air through the pit; and that the committee of management, acting under the advice of the following eminent colliery engineers—Mr. Nicholas Wood (of Durham), Mr. Elliot (of Monkwearmouth), Mr. Woodhouse (of Derby), and Mr. Holt (of Wakefield), were relying upon the entire exclusion of air and the accumulation of the water in the workings to put out the fire still smouldering in the pit.

The following is a brief résumé of the proceedings which have since taken place:—The engineers above named, with Mr. Morton, the Government inspector, again met for consultation on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 25th ult. The engineers, deeply impressed with the necessity of recovering the bodies of the sufferers as expeditiously as possible, and being satisfied of the impossibility of any of them being still alive, determined to rely no longer upon the mere exclusion of air, but to flood the pit with water to such an extent as would fill the workings where the fire was. This they considered the most expeditious and the surest method of accomplishing their object, having satisfied from the fact of the temperature at the bottom of the downcast shaft being about the same as that of the upcast shaft, that the natural temperature was not in any large mass of burning matter in the pit; and that an attempt to descend the pit before that was done would be attended with extreme danger. It was generally supposed that would occur in the vicinity of the bottom of the more extensive of the workings upon which thirty feet of water were placed, fourteen weeks elapsed before the pit could be descended. He had no reason to suppose that there was less fire in this case than in the one instanced. Hence the unanimous opinion of the engineers that a vast saving of time, coupled with increased safety, would result from flooding the mine.

To expedite that operation it was determined on Wednesday evening to carry into it the water of a brook running near the colliery. The diversion was completed about mid-day on Thursday, and the water has since accumulated in the mine at the rate of nearly a ton gallons per minute. On Thursday evening it was ascertained that the water had reached the level of the ventilating shaft, and on Friday and Saturday it was found to be rising somewhat rapidly, but was still some distance from reaching the fire, while the temperature, which a week ago was at 126 degree twenty yards from the top of the ventilating shaft, had on Friday last declined to sixty-five degrees. On Saturday several experiments were made, showing a further reduction of temperature near the top of the ventilating shaft, while at the bottom of the same shaft it was still about thirty degrees above the natural heat of the temperature of the water at the bottom of the shaft was eighty degrees. The managing engineers, with the Government inspector, again met for consultation on Saturday and, after a deliberation extending over several hours, Mr. Wood made the following communication to the representatives of the press :—"When we (the engineers) last met it was arranged that the pit should be filled with water to a certain extent. We are still pursuing that system. Nothing more can be done until the water has risen to such a height as to extinguish the burning matter. We have ascertained to-day that the water in the mine is considerably higher in temperature than the water which is being poured into it, a fact which shows that there is still a considerable amount of burning matter in the pit, and, we think, justifies us in the steps we have taken. We propose on Monday morning to commence lowering the downcast shafts and preparing them for getting the water out in as short a time as possible after the extinction of the fire is accomplished." The Government inspector said he fully concurred in the propriety of these measures.

It was expected that the water would have risen to the requisite height in the course of a few days, and preparations are being actively made for emptying the mine as soon as the proper time has arrived. That process will occupy some considerable time, and it is feared that the bodies will not be recovered in less than a fortnight from the present time. Trapnet, of Barnsley, actively made ready for the ventilation of the mine as soon as descent is practicable.

The most general sympathy is manifested for the bereaved. On Thursday evening a public meeting was held at Barnsley to promote the raising of funds for their benefit, and subscriptions were announced to the amount of about £1000. An appeal on behalf of the bereaved has been put forth in Sheffield by the Mayor (Mr. J. W. Fye Smith), the Vicar (Dr. Sale), and other principal officials of the town; and a private meeting was held on Monday for the organization of plans to carry out the object. A similar course is announced in other towns, and sermons were preached and collections made at many places of worship last Sunday.

The illustration represents the entrance to the downcast shaft, after the mouth had been closed. The iron basket in which the miners made their descent is suspended immediately over it, and a jet of steam is being forced through a pipe connected with the boiler into the pit, for the purpose of extinguishing the fire. The brick tank in the foreground of the sketch was filled with charcoal, preparatory to making carbonic acid gas, for the same purpose; but these means being considered inadequate, the water from a neighbouring stream is now being turned into the pit. Some days will elapse before it can be pumped out and any of the bodies be recovered.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. R. W., Newry.—There must always be a square at least between the two Kings—consequently, in the position sent, the White King cannot take the Black Kt.

J. H.—You will never learn the answer by asking. Any one who is satisfied with the rudiments of the game will trace you more in an hour than you will acquire in six months by asking.

P. Swift.—Your solution of 678 is the true one, but came too late for insertion in the week's list.

W. Wilson.—We know of no club in the town named.

A. B.—The solution of the Indian Problem is as follows.—1. B to Q B sq; 2. K moves; 3. Kt to Q Kt 3rd, checkmate. Black's move against the Problem is incorrect.

D. W. Stewart.—Large West-street, Dundee.

Newcastle.—Your communication has been forwarded to the other King William-street, Charing-cross.

A. M. Philo.—The statement is correct, and the solution is as you have given it.

Invalids.—Your solution of the Problem by Mr. Bledow is correct, and the only one we have yet received.

Juvenis.—We cannot, therefore, undertake to say which is the best of the games you have sent us.

J. A. Hurst.—Your Solution of the beautiful Enigma by Mr. Bledow is perfectly correct, and the only one we have yet received.

Sheffield Problem.—We cannot undertake to say which is the best of the games you have sent us.

Solutions of Problem No. 680, received from Mr. Whitton, J. B. Pritchard, Rev. T. S. Brentwood, D. D. T. F. S., Bewley, L. Mayoral Forest of Dean, D. G. Holdsall, Taunton, D. D. T. F. S., Bewley, Argyle, Emsworth, Richard H. Blunden, D. D. T. F. S., Russell, Leo Officers, Cambridge, Wood and Ivy, Stockport, Rev. W. J. H. Nicholl, Grimsan Medallist, F. F., Journal, Northern Bells, Winfield, L. Q. Omega, Medical Practice, are correct.

PROBLEM No. 681.

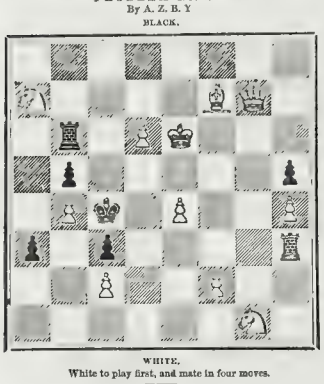
By A. Z. B. Y.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play first, and mate in four moves.

CHESS IN MANCHESTER.

An elegant little Game recently played by Messrs. KIPPING and PINDAR, the leading players of the Manchester Chess Club.

(Evans' Gambit.)

| WHITE (Mr. K.) | BLACK (Mr. P.) | WHITE (Mr. K.) | BLACK (Mr. P.) |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. P to K 4th | P to K 4th | 18. Q to Q R 2nd | P to K Kt 4th |
| 2. K Kt to K B 3rd | Q Kt to Q B 3rd | 19. R Kt to K B 3rd | P to Q B 3rd |
| 3. B to Q B 4th | B Kt to Q B 4th | 20. Q Kt to Q 2nd | P to Q R 3rd |
| 4. P to Q Kt 4th | K B takes Kt P | 21. Q Kt to R 4th | K B to Q R 2nd |
| 5. P to Q B 3rd | K B to Q R 4th | 22. P takes Q P | P takes P |
| 6. Q to Q Kt 3rd | Q to K 2nd (a) | 23. B to Q 3rd | P to Q B 4th |
| 7. Q B to Q R 3rd | P to Q 3rd | 24. Q R to Q B sq | P to Q Kt 3rd (e) |
| 8. P to Q 4th | P takes P | 25. Kt takes Q P (c) | P takes Kt |
| 9. Castles | K Kt to B 3rd | 26. B takes Q B 4th | P takes B |
| 10. P to K 5th | Kt to K 5th | 27. P takes P (disch) | R to Kt 2nd |
| 11. K R to K sq (b) | K Kt to Q B 4th | 28. P takes R (Queens) | K takes Q |
| 12. Q B takes K P | P takes B | and gives ch. | |
| 13. P to K 6th (c) | P to K B 3rd | 29. Kt takes K B P | Q to K B 2nd |
| 14. K Kt to K 4th | P to K Kt 3rd | 30. R to K 8th (ch) | K to Kt 2nd |
| 15. P to K B 4th | Castles | 31. Kt to K 8th (ch) | Q takes Kt |
| 16. P to Q 4th | B to Q Kt 3rd | 32. Q to K 4th (ch) | K to B 3rd |
| 17. P to K B 5th | Kt to Q R 4th | White mates in two moves. | |

(a) It is usually better in this and in any analogous position for the second player to move his Q to K B 2nd.

(b) Very well played.

(c) The remains of Black's game is pitiable. His moves seem to have no means of extrication without some ruinous sacrifice, and to be only wasting until his opponent has sufficiently matured his attack to go in and administer the coup de grace.

(e) The termination is capitally played by Mr. Kipping.

PRESENTATION.—At a meeting of about forty gentlemen, friends of Dr. Lyschinski, of Edinburgh, held there on the 19th February, Alexander J. Scott, Esq., Principal of Owens College, Manchester, having been called to the chair, presented to him, in name of those present and above sixty other subscribers, an elegant silver tea and coffee service and claret jug, bearing the following inscription :—"Presented to Adam Lyschinski, M.D., Edinburgh, by a number of his friends, in recognition of those sterling qualities, tested by the experience of years, which have won for him, in this city of his adoption, such high esteem as is due to an upright, generous, and kindly man; a laborious, skilful, and conscientious physician.—Edinburgh, 19th Feb., 1857."

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

LORD DERBY AND THE "PRESS" NEWSPAPER.—LORD DERBY. My Lords, it is not my usual practice to notice any misstatement or misrepresentation that appears in the newspapers with regard to my public character; but without departing in the slightest degree from that rule on the present occasion, I think I should be wanting in respect and duty to myself, but to your Lordships, were I to allow a report which I heard read at a meeting which is said to have taken place on Friday last at my house, and which did not take place, but not at all events in the manner stated in the proceedings at which, although undoubtedly I have on the list of attendants of having been furnished by some person who was either present or had heard what had passed, I am represented as having been grossly misinformed, and in which report I am represented as only to assent, what I did not say. But exactly the reverse of what I did say. I am not going, my Lords, to enter into any explanation with respect to what passed there, but I refer to it now in order that it may not be supposed that that report is correct; and, if necessary for reference is ever made to it at any time, and the opportunity is permitted to avail myself of the protest which I have now made with regard to the accuracy of this report.

THE WAR IN CHINA.

Earl GRANVILLE, in reply to Earl Grey, said that it appeared from the intelligence recently received from China that no further operations had taken place, except those necessitated by self-defence; but that the Chinese had offered rewards for the perpetration of assassination and incendiarism against British subjects in Canton. It was impossible at the present time to say that there was any prospect of any alteration in the state of affairs that now existed. At the same time there was no interruption whatever to our commercial relations with the other four ports. Under these circumstances it was impossible to say that there was any change in our position. It was absolutely necessary, not only for our interests, but for those of foreigners or other nations, that we should not appear to be at Canton in a humiliated position. Reinforcements had been sent there, but in the four other ports, where our relations are satisfactory. With regard to reinforcements, one regiment had been sent to Hong-Kong three weeks ago.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

NEW MEMBERS.—Captain Bernard took his seat for Bandon, and Mr. Carter for Downpatrick.

MR. BLACK presented a petition from Edinburgh, praying that some reward might be given for the services of Sir J. M'Neill and Colonel Tulloch, on the commission of inquiry into the state of things in the Crimea.

Petitions were also presented by Mr. Hardy, from Tunstall, Staffordshire, in favour of extending the Tippling Act to the sale of beer; by Mr. H. Ingram, from the General Baptist congregation of Boston, Lincolnshire, against the recent hostilities in China; by Mr. Cowan, from 742 inhabitants of Dalkeith and neighbourhood, praying for a County Registration of Voters Bill similar in its object to the Burgh Registration of Voters Bill of last Session, and for the enfranchisement of the class of proprietors in Scotland corresponding to the 40s. freeholders in England.

THE BUDGET.

Mr. HADFIELD presented a petition from Manchester against the Paper-duty.

Admiral WALCOTT presented a petition from Bath against the financial plan of the Government as regards tea and sugar.

Mr. DENISON presented a similar petition.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER gave notice that, although he had not so originally intended, yet, on account of the convenience of the trade, he should move his resolutions as to tea and sugar before the resolution as to the income-tax.

Mr. GLADSTONE gave notice that on the motion for going into Committee of Supply he should move, "That it is the opinion of the House that, in order to relieve the country that will result from taxation while it justly expects, it is expedient and necessary to revise and further to reduce our expenditure." (Hear, hear). The right hon. gentleman then gave notice that to-morrow he should ask the questions of the Secretary of the Board of Control as to the papers which had been laid on the table respecting the war with Persia, viz.:—Whether the "financial year" in the letter of the 9th of December has the same meaning as the "existing financial year" in the letter of the 1st of December and the 23rd of December, and if not by what authority the change of expression was adopted; and whether the estimate of the expenses of the Persian war, the charge of which has been transferred to the East India Company, will not have to be conveniently, and if so on what authority and by what means? Whether the Supplementary Estimates for the prosecution of the war the property of the Crown) have been sent from the country or from any British possession in aid of the expedition against Persia?

ADJOURNED DEBATE ON CHINA.

The debate on Mr. Cobden's resolution condemnatory of the war with China was resumed by

Mr. R. PHILLIMORE, who supported the resolution, and contended that the war was unjust, and ought not to be sanctioned by this House, as it was disgraceful to the honour of the country, and contrary to the interests of the English. He contended that, if wrong had been done, the English authorities ought to have resorted to reprisals, and not to war; and he regretted the Bishop had forgotten their mission of peace to support an unjust war; and concluded by pronouncing the war to be unjust in its origin, and in its continuance unblest

Sir GREY, in opposing the motion, entered into an energetic vindication of the British representatives in China. He described the services and bore testimony to the talents displayed in their several departments by Consul Parkes, Admiral Seymour, and Sir J. Bowring. Adverting in detail to the late proceedings at Canton, he vindicated the course adopted by the authorities on the spot, declaring that the Home Government, upon a deliberate review of the circumstances, and in consideration of all the important interests which might have been compromised by any symptom of weakness or indecision, had given their cordial approbation to the acts of the Commissioner at Hong-Kong and his colleagues, and were ready to assume the full responsibility for the consequences that had ensued. In defence of the conduct of Sir John Bowring, the Home Secretary showed, by many references to the published dispatches, that every transaction accomplished during the late disturbance had been undertaken by common consent of all the functionaries on the spot, and after frequent conferences with Mr. Parkes and Sir Michael Seymour. The most effective portion of the right hon. Baronet's speech was that in which he exposed the garbling of a letter from an American gentleman, quoted by Mr. Cobden on the first night of the debate. In order to throw discredit upon our traders in the Chinese waters, the member for the West Riding referred to a communication he had received from a Mr. Cook, a gentleman who had resided at Whampoa for four years, in the important position of "United States Marshal"—in which Mr Cook was said to have spoken of the mercantile proceedings going on in China under the English flag. And then the hon. gentleman proceeded to read to the House the communication which he had received, and which it had been permitted him to use (ironical cheers). Mr. Cook was a great authority, and he astonished the hon. gentleman with the most horrible details of the illicit traffic carried on under the British flag. And then the hon. gentleman went on to state Mr. Cook had declared that in this affair of the Arrow the British Government "has not a leg to stand upon;" and that such proceedings as ours would "never be allowed under the American stars and stripes." However, the hon. member went on to say he was always looked with suspicion upon extracts and ironical cheers from the Ministerial benches). Perhaps, too, there were other hon. gentlemen who looked with suspicion upon extracts and amongst them was Mr. Cook himself (Laughter and cheers). For Mr. Cook, having seen what the hon. member had said of him, was not easy under what he conceived to be a misrepresentation of his opinions. Accordingly he wrote as follows to the public journals:—"In Mr. Cobden's speech——" (Cries of "Order, order!.) Well, he would alter the statement so as to make no allusion to what had taken place in that House. Mr. Cook wrote:

"Mr Cobden makes reference to a letter from me, and in answer to one from him, giving part of its contents and I beg to inclose a copy of the said letter, which please publish, to prevent any liability to the charge of misstatement among those who perfectly understand my views on the matters in question, to which, of course, the hon. member can have no objection. In regard to the office of United States' Marshal, which he refers to, it is entirely a subordinate one, and the orders from Government were, not to allow the use of the flag, except by vessels regularly registered."

So far that letter was of importance, as showing that the English and American practice, with regard to registration, was identical (Hear, hear). But he now came to a part of the letter of which the hon. member had said nothing

Mr. CORDEN: I beg the right hon. gentleman's pardon; I did say a great deal about it; I said as much of Mr. Cook's opinion about the Chinese as says in the letter—indeed, I rather said more.

Sir G. GREY: Perhaps the hon. member said as much about Mr. Cook's opinion of the Chinese as suited his purpose (Loud Ministerial cheers). He stated, no doubt, that Mr. Cook was very "anti-Chinese;" but whether he made plain the whole of that gentleman's letter he should leave it to the House to judge. Mr. Cook, fearing that the impression left upon the public mind by the speech of the hon gentleman would subject him to the charge of inconsistency, begged to be allowed to publish his letter to the hon. gentleman through the ordinary channels of information. And so, in that part of his communication which had been suppressed by the hon. member, Mr. Cook went on :—

"But as regards the present troubles, to prevent any misunderstanding of my views, I wish to express my opinion that the duty of the Home Government to support the servants of the Crown engaged in China to the fullest extent should not be called in question for a moment (Cheers), or until a satisfactory termination of the present difficulties at least; for in case of a suspension of hostilities by the Government it would be an impossibility for Europeans to live in the vicinity of Canton, and no amount of negotiations could alter it for the better. Any one who has lived among the Chinese can testify to the continued insults and injuries heaped upon foreigners whenever an opportunity offers (Renewed cheers), and the studied contempt shown on all occasions, superinduced by feelings of superiority entertained by the Cantonese in contradistinction to all the other ports in China, all of which has been brought about by the previous settlement made with them; or, in other words, the want of an application of physical power to convince them of their position; and, although we are pecuniary sufferers to a very great extent in consequence of these troubles, we should prefer to suffer still more than see any settlement which did not involve the necessity of the Chinese realising their position and a sufficient guarantee for the liberty and safety of foreign residents while among them. My particular reasons for these views have been acquired by a long and very close intimacy with them, and, of course, cannot be condensed in a note of this kind" (Loud cheers).

Well, with that letter before him, he could not agree with the statement just now made, that, in declaring Mr. Cook was "anti-Chinese at bottom," the hon. member for the West Riding had said all that Mr. Cook had said; or that he had conveyed, with regard to those transactions, his full opinions, founded as those opinions were on his long experience (Renewed cheering). With regard to the vote before the House, Sir George Grey forebore to inquire into the political change it might inaugurate, or the political combinations that were said to have been formed in its support, but invited the Legislature to concur in the opinion at which the Ministry had arrived, and give their cordial support to public officers who had faithfully discharged their duty and defended British interests in a moment of extreme emergency

Mr ROEBUCK having long resided in China, expressed his conviction that the question had led to the origin of the war in the Arrow was altogether trivial and. He proceed to give illustrations of the cruelty, barbarism and murderous character of the Chinese. He said, should be decided upon no party motive, but with regard to the heavy peril which, if we now drew back, would beset our whole position and commerce in China.

Sir J. PAKINGTON contended that the members of the Government who had spoken in the course of the debate had evaded the real question at issue. The defence offered for Sir J. Bowring had, in his opinion, altogether failed. His investigation of the circumstances had led him to the conclusion that the case founded on the alleged insult to the lorcha Arrow was untenable, and the subsequent proceedings wholly unwarrantable. The British Government had been sanctioned in the effusion of blood upon doubtful grounds. They ought, in his opinion, to have recalled Sir J. Bowring and Consul Parkes upon first receiving intelligence of their proceedings.

Mr. COLLIER reiterated a variety of legal arguments antagonistic to the resolution.

Mr. HEYWOOD, adopting a contrary view, also traversed a wide range of legal technicalities, adducing many considerations to prove that the act upon which Sir J. Bowring had fastened the quarrel did not, in strict justice, give him any ground of complaint.

Sir W. I. WILLIAMS, from experience gathered during a long course of service in the East, was convinced that all treaties concluded with Oriental nations must be framed on stricter principles and maintained with a more jealous vigilance than the conventions between two European communities. The inhabitants of those countries had separated themselves from the rest of the world, and it was their own fault if more civilised races treated them as inferiors. Believing that, in the case before the House, the Chinese had perpetrated an intentional and premeditated insult, which it would have been unwise to overlook, he intended to vote against the resolution.

Mr. S. HERBERT believed that the particular vessel which furnished the ground of dispute had no right to British protection, and that the general trade for which colonial licenses were issued at Hong-Kong partook of smuggling. If not of piracy, and prostituted the English flag under whose shelter it was carried on. The allegations of Chinese barbarism and insolence were unproved; whilst there was reason to infer that Sir J. Bowring had long entertained the intention of opening the controversy upon which he came home. Which he had only for a favourable moment to begin. That opportunity was afforded last year, when peace was restored in Europe, and a large fleet happened to be present in the China seas for a long as the Government could conscientiously back their wrongs it was generous to do so—it was just to do so (Cheers). But we were to be no limit to this generosity? Let the House see what the views of the Government had been. They received the account of this miserable affair of the lorcha. He was not one of those who fell in with the idea that you were to treat Orientals in all things as you treated Europeans, but he must find fault with the line you must adopt when you have force to back your demands. You must no doubt show them that you have force to back you, but you must also show that you have truth on your side (Cheers). You must show that you are in the right (Cheers). He would say that the Government ought to support their servants, even when they were in the wrong, if the errors were of a mere venial character; but there must be some limit that British Consuls could do no wrong (Hear, hear). You could not admit that a man 15,000 miles away, having command of a large force, was to be allowed to carry on hostilities with impunity simply that forces in hostile operations, and plunge the country into war (Hear, hear). He should look with suspicion upon such a doctrine, even in reference to high officials in this country. The inferior officers of Ministers was shown in nothing more strikingly than in their selection of men for subordinate offices, and he might refer to the appointment of numerous Consulships as a confirmation of this statement. Were they, then, to be told that a Consul 15,000 miles away was to be permitted to exercise unquestioned a power which was here exercised by the Crown only, and which was only exercised with the greatest jealousy, and which occasioned night after night questionings of the Ministers? It had been said that Canton had not been bombarded, and that it was all a mistake to suppose that such an occurrence had taken place. Why, Admiral Seymour, in one of his despatches, talked of "shelling the city," and in another stated that he was dropping shot into it at moderate intervals, which certainly was one species of moderation (Laughter). The Chinese were stated to be a rascally set; and some hon. gentleman had asserted that barbarians and Orientals were not to be treated in the same manner as European nations, and therefore that the Government ought to defend their servants. Admitting all these things, still there had occurred this fearful case that on a miserable quarrel which could have been settled by reprisals—which if not satisfied with one ship might have been satisfied with fifty—shot and shell had been pitched into the city just, as had been said, to disperse the crowd; shot and shell that made no distinction of age or sex (Hear, hear). He did not wish to say a word which might be hurtful to the feelings of hon. gentlemen who conscientiously differed with him on the subject. He knew the different conclusions at which the human intellect arrived on the same facts. He would not, therefore, allude to the motives which ought to actuate the House in cases like the one under consideration. But these barbarians might ask, "Are these the precepts which you teach your followers and Admirals when they come in contact with our people?" And it was not impossible that some of the constituencies in the empire might ask their representatives the same question (Hear, hear). But he would not press that point. He knew there were men holding opposite opinions who were incapable of acting on any but the highest and most religious motives. But he could not help feeling that the language of the hon. member for Manchester (Mr. Bright) was calculated to lead the country into fraudulent hostilities with China. Hong-Kong to be considered British subjects, and consequently the lorcha must be considered a British vessel (Cries of "Divide").

Lord PALMERSTON: Sir, I shall endeavour to move the adjournment of the debate, which was met by loud cries of "No, no" and cal for a "Division."

The SPEAKER put the question, and as it was negatived by some members he was forced to declare a division. A scene of great confusion ensued. The House was nearly half empty at the time about half-past eleven, members not expecting the division; and those friends of Mr. Cobden who had left the House were not allowed for the arrival of members from the lobbies they had not half arrived. The question being again put, some members again resisted; but they were met by loud cries of "Agreed, agreed."

Mr. Disraeli rose to speak, but was met by a cry "To order!" as it was irregular to speak when the House was cleared for a division. Eventually the motion for the adjournment of the debate was about to be agreed to, when Lord PALMERSTON rose and expressed a hope that hon. members who had motions on the paper for next day would withdraw them to allow the debate to be continued.

Mr. DISRAELI said: As the debate has assumed such a character, I should be sorry to oppose the adjournment of it; but, as "another place" has been so often and so irregularly alluded to, I may be allowed to say that, when a motion for the adjournment of the debate was made in that "other place," the First Minister of the Crown there objected to the adjournment (Hear, hear). This debate has been adjourned from Friday and I hope there will be an understanding to conclude it to-morrow (Hear, hear).

Several hon. members having notices for Tuesday then withdrew them, and the debate was adjourned to the next day.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

THE DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL BILL.

The LORD CHANCELLOR moved the second reading of the Divorce and Matrimonial Bill, which, he said, was substantially the same as the measure which was passed by their Lordships last Session, and which was based on the recommendation of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the subject, who agreed that a Court should be constituted with the power of granting divorces a vinculo matrimonii as well as a mensâ et thoro. The bill of last Session proposed the creation of such a tribunal, to be composed of the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and the Judge of the Court of Probate; to these high dignitaries the present bill proposed to add the Dean of the Arches, and, with one or two trifling exceptions, that was the only addition that had been made to the bill of last Session. That bill, after having been referred to a Select Committee, in which a proviso was inserted that the adulterer should not be allowed to marry the adultress, was sent down to the Lower House, and ultimately withdrawn. He now reintroduced the bill, omitting the proviso referred to, and inserting a clause by which separation deeds were legalised by positive enactment. Having thus given an outline of the bill, and specified the particulars in which it differed from that brought forward last Session, he begged to move that it be read a second time.

Lord LANDSDOWNE, who supported the bill, said there were many persons who objected to the relief afforded by the present measure, and wished to retain the old system; but they seemed to forget that under the present system divorce was limited to a small class; for few were able to bear the expense of the process which was to afford them relief. Passing on to the bill itself, he wished to add a fifth cause for divorce to the four which it contained—this was, for wilful desertion of a wife by a husband. Finally, he objected to the new clause which was to give to voluntary separations the force and power of a law. Against such separations the highest judicial authorities had invariably set their faces. They were opposed to the principle of law, and the Lord Chancellor, in introducing this clause, was not maintaining, but altering and violating, the law, to the great peril of public policy.

The Bishop of EXETER moved the postponement of the bill for three months, in order to give the Lord Chancellor time to amend it. As it now stood, with its centralisation and expense, and the remarkable measure that it contained no clause to abolish the disgraceful action for crim. con. damages; but the strongest argument he had heard both for and against the bill had been such as to convince him that it contained in its present shape many most objectionable features; and, though he should adhere to his intention of voting for the second reading, he should only do so on the understanding that it was to receive the maturest reconsideration in the Committee.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE and Lord REDESDALE having also addressed the House, Lord WESTBURY replied.

Their Lordships then divided, when the numbers were—For the second reading, 31; majority, 15.

The bill was accordingly read a second time.

For Tuesday's Proceedings in the Commons, see Second Supplement of this Week's ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The House met at twelve o'clock.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS BILL.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved the second reading of the Industrial Schools Bill.—The motion was opposed by Mr. ALCOCK, who considered the measure intrusive and superfluous. The present system, which was found to be believed, worked well, would be damaged by the establishment of a rival, for whose maintenance, also, large contributions must eventually be levied upon the ratepayers. He moved as an amendment that the bill should be read a second time that day six months.—Mr. HADFIELD seconded the amendment, objecting to any measure which incorporated the compulsory system of education.—Mr. BAINES, Mr. HENLEY, and Mr. Newdegate supported the bill, and expressed an entire approval of the principle on which it was founded. Mr. Baxter, Lord Stanley, and Mr. Gordon supported the measure, which was opposed by Mr. Newdegate and Mr. Bowyer. After further discussion of a miscellaneous character, in which many hon. members briefly spoke, the amendment was withdrawn, and the bill read a second time.

Sir J. PAKINGTON postponed the second reading of the Education (Borough Rates) Bill until Wednesday next.

The Court of Chancery Amendment (Titles of Purchasers) Bill was read a second time on the motion of Mr. WHITESIDE.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

AFFAIRS IN CHINA.—In reply to questions from the Earl of Hardwicke and the Earl of Ellenborough, the Earl of CLARENDON stated that he had not been lately received from Canton, stating, amongst other things, that the British authorities had destroyed a portion of the forts of Canton, and that some casualties had occurred, which would be published in the Gazette to-morrow.

DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT.—Earl GRANVILLE made an announcement in respect to the intentions of the Government consequent upon the adverse vote of the House of Commons, to the same effect as that which Lord Palmerston made in the House of Commons.—Earl GREY thought it no other noble Lord moved for the recall of Sir John Bowring he would certainly do so.

The following bills were read a third time and passed, viz., the Chief Constables Bill, the Public Health Supplemental Bill (1857), and the Lunatic Subjects Commission Bill.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

MINISTERIAL STATEMENT.

Lord PALMERSTON entered the House at twenty minutes to five, and was received with loud cheers. In a few minutes afterwards his Lordship rose and said: In order, Sir, to regularise that which I am about to say, and to put it in the power of any hon. member to make any remarks upon the subject, I intend to conclude the statement I am about to make by a motion that this House do now adjourn. The House must naturally expect that, after what happened on Tuesday night, I should state to the House the course which, upon due consideration, her Majesty's Government intend to pursue. Under ordinary circumstances, after a vote by which the House by a majority, whatever the amount of it might be, affirmed that which many considered to be a vote of censure upon the Government—under ordinary circumstances, I say, there would hardly be an alternative for the Government. The alternative would be that they should tender to their Sovereign the resignation of their offices; and leave to those who had obtained the majority the task of maintaining the affairs of the country (Hear). But the present is a peculiar time for Majesty's Government had not deemed it their duty to submit to their Sovereign a resignation which they (Hear, hear). There was another course which the Government, in such circumstances, might constitutionally adopt, and that is the course which we feel it to be our duty to pursue. We have deemed it our duty to advise the Crown, at the earliest period at which the ordinary public business in this House will permit, to appeal upon the constituencies of the country to exercise that action which the Constitution places in their hands (Cheers). Sir, I say the circumstances are peculiar, because, while on the one hand, looking simply to the result of the division, we had lost the confidence of the House, yet on the other hand, looking to the division which took place previously on very important portions of our policy, a very opposite result took place. And also I feel myself free to say that some of those who concurred in the vote of Monday did make it understood that that vote was not to be considered a result on their part of the confidence which they had hitherto placed in her Majesty's present Government. But it is in vain to deny that that vote would render it very difficult, if not very unseemly, on the part of a Government with regard to whom it was passed to undertake the business of the country during the rest of the Session. And, moreover, the state of parties which that vote indicates also appears to me to prove that it would be extremely difficult for any Government now to be formed, or which at present exists, however efficient it might be, to carry on public business. And, without saying anything that may be construed into taunts, but merely stating facts, I say it would be very difficult for the present Government, or that one which might be formed out of a combination of the parties by which we have been defeated, to carry on the business of the country through the Session in the state in which this House happens to be. I will not allude to the differences which have prevailed between the two Houses upon the question of Tuesday last. I do not think that that would be sufficient reason for the course we are taking, but it would still be sufficient to show what various opinions exist with regard to the present Administration, as compared with those who might be our successors (Hear, hear). This Parliament is now in its fifth Session. Measuring its duration by that of many which have preceded it, it is a very old one. It has seen more things of importance than many which have preceded it. It has seen three Administrations. It has seen transitions from a state of profound peace to a state of European war,—from a state of European war to a European peace. Therefore, this Parliament, whatever it may have done in the way of events, has seen as much as could be supposed to fall to the lot of any Parliament that could be called together. If the state of business in the House had admitted it there would have been an immediate return to our constituencies; and I think that that perhaps would have been the proper course; but the state of public business does not admit of that course. We have not yet voted anything on the estimates for the public service—we have not arranged anything about the loan, some of which are to be remodelled; and we have not passed the Mutiny Act, which will expire before the new Parliament can assemble. That which I humbly beg to propose to this House is, that we should do that upon the present occasion which has been done on former similar occasions—that which was done by Lord Derby's Government when a dissolution of Parliament was announced, namely, that the House should content itself with passing any temporary measures which are necessary for the public service until a new Parliament can assemble. The Government have proposed certain taxes for three years; we now propose to terminate them in the ensuing year. There are certain taxes with regard to which there would be a great embarrassment to commerce if settled at too short a period; and I also think that Parliament should be called upon to determine them for a longer period than its duration. At the same time we should propose to vote sums on estimates for a portion of the year, and to pass the Mutiny Act also for a portion of the year, leaving it to the new Parliament, which will assemble about the end of May, free to deal with those measures as it pleases (Hear, hear). I hope that the House will see that the course which we are proposing is one in accordance with the Constitution, and therefore that hon. gentlemen will not place any obstructions in the way of our arriving at the time when the various elections may with propriety take place. There are many gentlemen who have strong opinions on many subjects which they would like to bring under the notice of the House; but I am sure that they will feel that no great measures can be dealt with in the state in which this Parliament will hereafter be (Hear, hear). I therefore hope that the same honourable forbearance which has been shown by all Parliaments under similar circumstances will be shown by this. There is this to be said, that in the approaching elections the country will have a fair chance of choosing between two Administrations—a choice which, without meaning to say anything uncivil to any party in this House, could not in the same degree have been afforded until that combination of parties took place which led to the position in which her Majesty's Government now finds itself. I am now stating without casting an imputation upon any person or party; but this I say, that it may be deemed an advantage to the country that they should be able to make a choice between two different and efficient Administrations—a circumstance which, I think, justifies us in throwing upon the country the responsibility of saying what Administration they will have to conduct their affairs. I move, as a matter of form, that the House do now adjourn (Loud cheers).

Mr. DISRAELI admitted that the noble Lord had spoken temperately with the House, and he thought that the Government had taken the best course they could under the circumstances. As far as it appeared to the country the Government stood with no majority in Parliament, and they might express a hope that the answer to that appeal would put them in power an Administration with some definite policy. Mr. Disraeli then referred to the speech of the noble Lord (Lord John Russell), carrying on the business with a view to the dissolution upon which he had determined.

Mr. COBDEN said there was an omission in the noble Lord's speech. On Tuesday night the House came to a solemn vote, affecting the lives of a vast number of human beings far distant from our shores, and that vote had been entirely overlooked in the speech of the noble Lord. He had no objection to the dissolution, but he thought that if the noble Lord went to the country upon this question he would do eminent service to his opponents. He would go to the country upon the question of peace or war. He would form a third party. He wanted to know what the noble Lord intended to do in consequence of the vote of Tuesday night. If the right hon. gentleman should be at once sent out to preside at the existing Council, and then Sir C. WOOD said it was not the intention of the Government to reopen a debate which closed on Tuesday night. The hon. gentleman seemed to be afraid that the vote which the House had come to would be productive of serious results to the lives and interests of the British residents in China, and he was sorry he could not think so; but, even if he had to assure the House that such would be the result, a fear would arise at the Canton river without delay to act.

Sir J. PAKINGTON said he did not see the Government intended to adopt with regard to the private business before the House?

Sir C. WOOD said that resolution would be passed placing bills in a similar position in the next Parliament to that they held in the present.

Mr. S. HERBERT put a question relative to the continuance of Sir John Bowring.

Sir G. GREY said the Government would take every step consistently with their duty for the protection of British interests and British honour. They believed that to shrink from their demands would be a violation of British honour. The Government must act on their own authority, use those means which they thought for the benefit of the country.

Lord J. Russell, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Roebuck, and Mr. Milnes Gaskell addressed the House, arguing upon the Government necessity of promptly stating what was to be done in regard to the affairs of China during the interval that must elapse between the present time and the assembling of the Parliament.

Mr. GLADSTONE said that he would oppose the granting of the Supplies until the Government gave some exposition of their future foreign policy.

Mr. I. DUNCOMBE defended the course proposed to be taken by Lord Palmerston.

Sir J. GRAHAM asked the noble Lord at the head of the Government to afford the House some explanation in regard to the financial measures of the Government.

Sir J. PAKINGTON hoped that the Government would give the House a clear notion of what was to be their policy in regard to China. It was of the utmost importance that the management of our affairs in Canton should be taken from those unable and incompetent hands which had already involved the country in such difficulties.

Mr. W. J. FOX justified the vote he had given on Tuesday night, and denied that he or his friends had conducted the late party political party in that House for the overthrow of the Government.

Sir F. BARING said he had never given a vote with greater pain, or after more mature consideration, than the vote he had given on Tuesday night. He thought that the noble Lord should distinctly declare whether it was his intention to recall Sir John Bowring. Neither the House nor the country would be satisfied unless that functionary was removed.

Lord PALMERSTON said that the Chancellor of the Exchequer would on to-morrow evening make a statement to the House in respect to the financial measures of the Government. The policy of the Government in regard to China would continue to be what it always had been—a policy for the protection and promotion of British interests. With regard to the dissolution, the question as to his being continued our Plenipotentiary at Hong-Kong was one which had been gravely considered by the Cabinet, and, he might say, was still under their consideration.

After some further conversation the motion for the adjournment of the House was withdrawn. Soon afterwards the House was counted out.

RAILWAYS IN PORTUGAL.—After visiting Algeria, Sir Morton Peto will proceed to Portugal. Negotiations have been for some time pending with the Portuguese Government, and the construction of a large extent of railway has now been determined on, it being proposed that the interest on the capital expended shall be secured in the first instance on the revenues derived from tobacco and salt. Sir John Rennie, who possesses the entire confidence of the Portuguese Cabinet, will act as their engineer. The plans of the lines both in Algeria and Portugal have been in a great measure matured, and the amount of the contracts is expected to be about £5,000,000. Sir Morton Peto, who is accompanied by Mr. Fowler, C.E., will be altogether absent from England about six weeks.

THE COURT

Her Majesty and his Royal Highness the Prince left Buckingham Palace on Tuesday for Windsor Castle. The Queen and Prince Albert were accompanied by the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, Prince Arthur, Prince Leopold, and the Princesses Alice, Helena, and Louisa, and were attended by Lady Churchill, Lady Caroline Barrington, Hon. Eleanor Stanley, Hon. Louisa Gordon, Lord De Tabley, Colonel the Hon. C. B. Phipps, Sir Edward Bowater, Mr. R. Ormsby Gore, Lord Charles Fitzroy, and Captain the Hon. D. De Ros. The Royal party left the Palace at twenty-five minutes before four o'clock, in six carriages, escorted by a detachment of light dragoons, for the Paddington terminus of the Great Railway, over which they travelled to Windsor, arriving at the Castle at twenty minutes before five o'clock.

On Wednesday the Queen and Prince walked in the Home Park, and visited her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent at Frogmore. The Prince of Wales went out hunting. Previously to leaving London her Majesty took daily carriage airings. The Adelphi and Haymarket Theatres have each been honoured with Royal visits during the week; and, in addition to his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the following members of the aristocracy have been honoured with invitations to the Royal dinnertable:—The Duke and Duchess of Bedford, the Sardinian Minister, the United States' Minister, and Mr. Dallas, Lord and Lady John Russell, the Earl of Harrowby, the Marquis and Marchioness of Breadalbane, the Earl and Countess of Clanwilliam, Lord and Lady Burghley, the Bishop of Oxford, Lord Broughton, the Right Hon. and Mrs. Vernon Smith, and Mr. Frederick Peel.

The Countess de Neuilly visited her Majesty at Buckingham Palace on Monday evening.

On Wednesday evening the Queen gave an audience to Viscount Palmerston at Windsor Castle.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert visited her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, at Gloucester House, on Monday afternoon.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent continues to reside at Frogmore. The Duchess has taken her usual airings in the vicinity of the Great Park during the week. Her Royal Highness is in the enjoyment of her accustomed good health.

The Earl and Countess Vane left town a few days since for their seat in Wales.

Viscountess Palmerston has issued cards for an assembly this (Saturday) evening.

NEW SAVINGS-BANKS BILL.—The Government have introduced a bill, to afford security to depositors of money in savings-banks against losses sustained through the insufficiency of the actual laws. The bill empowers the National Debt Commissioners to establish savings-banks where they may think it expedient so to do, and to receive deposits of the small savings of the industrious classes of her Majesty's subjects. All the depositors in these new banks will enjoy the security of the Government for the full repayment of their moneys and the interest thereon. After the 20th of May next £100 will be the maximum of legal deposits in savings banks. Existing banks may obtain Government security for their deposits on complying with the conditions laid down by the National Debt Commissioners.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Owing to the Ministerial defeat in the House of Commons on the China question, we have had rather a heavy Consol Market this week, and prices have fallen about three-eighths per cent. The sales of money stock, however, have been trifling, but the transactions in other respects have been tolerably numerous. Even the Bulls have shown no alarm at the decline, and the general tone in the City is that of confidence.

Although the 4th of the month was productive of rather an active inquiry for money, the demand, compared with many previous weeks, has been quite limited. In the rates of discount no change has taken place, the lowest quotation in Lombard-street for short paper being 5½ per cent. Large sums have been lent in the Stock Exchange on Stock at 6 per cent.

There has been very little inquiry for gold on Continental account, the total exports having fallen short of £100,000. From the fact that the demand for gold in the Bank of France is on the increase, it is presumed that the shipments for some time will be on a limited scale. It has been alleged this week by the East India Company having large advances out of the amount lately paid in by the Great Indian Peninsular Railway, at 5½ per cent.

The new Loan discussed has continued flat, at 8s. 1½d. per ounce for bars. Fresh parcels of Dollars have been about £50,000 from New York, £34,000 from Australia, £20,000 from the West Indies, and £50,000 to £60,000 from the Continent. The gold from America has been sent to Paris, but Mexican silver remains for sale.

Some further particulars have been received of the concession of the National Bank of Turkey having come to hand. The Bank, we are informed, is to be allowed to issue £7,500,000 in notes, and the capital is to consist of £10,000,000. One-third of the former will always be represented by gold. The entire management is to be intrusted to a London board, and the Government will have the right to be placed in their hands. The Bank will receive 6 per cent for redemption of the notes at present in circulation in Turkey.

The Irish Bank returns show an increase in the circulation of £36,298; but a decline in the coin held of £71,420, compared with the previous month.

No material change took place in the value of National Stocks on Monday, and the market generally ruled steady. Bank Stock was done at 215. The Three per Cents Reduced marked 93¾, Consols for Money, 93¾; Ditto for Account, 93¾; New Three per Cents, 94 to 94⅛; New Three and a Half per Cents, 98½; New Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 77; Exchequer Bonds, 1858, 100; Ditto, 1859, 99; Long Annuities, 1885, 18 7-16; India Bonds, 4s. dis. to par; Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 4s. dis.; Ditto, Bonds, 4s. dis.; Ditto, Small, 4s. dis.; Ditto, Long Bonds, 4s. dis.; India Stock, 260 to 262 for both sens. On Tuesday the business doing was limited as follows:—Bank Stock, 215; Three per Cents Reduced, 93⅝ to 94; Consols, for Transfer, 93⅝; New Three per Cents, 94; Long Annuities, 1885, 18 11-16; India Bonds, par to 4s. dis.; Consols for Account, 93¾; Exchequer Bills, 2s. to 4s. dis.; Ditto Bonds, 99½. The dealings on Wednesday were limited, and prices were drooping. Bank Stock was done at 215; India Stock, 262. The Reduced Three per Cents were 93⅞; Consols for Money, 93⅞; Ditto for Account, 93¾; New Three per Cents, 94; Five per Cent Annuities, 107; Consols for Account, 93⅞; Long Annuities, 1885, 18 11-16; India Bonds, 4s. to par; Exchequer Bills, 4s. to 6s. dis.; Ditto Bonds, 98. On Thursday the market was far from active, yet towards the close of business prices showed a tendency to improve. The accounts were easily arranged, although a trifle was charged for continuation rates were high:—Rates for Money, 5 to 5½, and for April, 6; The New Three per Cents marked 93¾ to 94, and the Reduced, 93⅝; Bank Stock, 215; Exchequer Bills, 2s. dis. to 2s. prem.; the Bonds, 98½. The Indian Bonds are now closing for the dividends.

In the early part of the week the Foreign House was extremely firm, and prices were somewhat on the advance. Since then, however, there has been only a limited business doing:—Brazilian Five per Cents have realised the following prices:—Buenos Ayres, 6 per Cents, 86; Granada Deferred, 6; Mexican Three per Cents, 22½; Peruvian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 80 ex div.; Portuguese Three per Cents, 45¼; Russian Five per Cents, 107½ ex div.; Spanish Deferred Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 9; Sardinian Five per Cents, 91; Spanish Three per Cents, 40½; Ditto, New Deferred, 24½; Ditto, Committee's Certificate of Coupon, 6¾ per cent; Turkish Four per Cents, 101½; Turkish Six per Cents, 1858, 97; Venezuela Four-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 87½; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 65¾; Dutch Four per Cents, 9.

Joint-Stock Bank Shares have continued very firm, as follows:—Chartered of India, Australia, and China, 5½; Commercial of London, 23¾; London and Provincial, 22. London Joint-Stock, 32; London and Westminster, 45¼; National Provincial of England, 20. Oriental, 39¾; Ottoman, 12; Union of Australia, 93½; Union of London, 30.

There has been a moderate demand for Miscellaneous Securities, at very full prices:—London Docks, 87; Ditto, New, 84; Kattiawar, 99; Victoria, 10¾; Australian Agricultural, 25; Canada Government Six per Cents, 110¾; Crystal Palace, 24; Electric Telegraph, 89¾; London Discount, 4¾; London Omnibus, 4¾; Mexican and South American, 2¾; New South Wales Government Debentures, 99; North of Europe Steam, 13¾; Oriental Gas, 14; Peel River Land and Mineral, 2¾; Peninsular and Oriental Steam, 87½; Ditto New, 14¾; Rhymney Iron, 24; Royal Mail Steam, 65½; Birmingham Canal, 93; Grand Junction, 44; Leeds and Liverpool, 480; Regent's, 16; Warwick and Birmingham, 22. Berlin Waterworks, 5; East London, 73; Grand Junction, 73; Kent, 81. Lambeth, —; and West Middlesex, 98.

The Railway Share Market has been in a healthy state, and prices generally have continued firm. The "Returns" for this month amount to £485,975. The following are the official closing prices on Thursday:—

ORDINARY SHARES AND STOCKS.—Ambergate, Nottingham, and Boston, 44 ex div.; Bristol and Exeter, 82 ex div.; Caledonian, 79½; East Anglian, 18½; Eastern Counties, 11; East Lancashire, 92½; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 57 ex div.; Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, 37½; Great Northern, 97½; Ditto, A Stock, 86; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 111½; Great Western, 69¾ ex div.; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 102½; London and Blackwall, 6¾ ex div. and ex new, London and Brighton, 109½; London and North-Western, 106¾ ex div., London and South-

Western, 105¾; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 38¾; Midland, 83¾ ex div. and ex new; Newport, Abergavenny, and Hereford, 14¾; Norfolk, 59; North British, 47½; North-Eastern, Berwick, 87¼ ex div.; Ditto, Leeds, 40¾; Ditto, York, 63¾ ex div.; North Staffordshire, 12¾; North-Western, 7½ ex div.; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 31¾; Scottish North-Eastern, 28¾; South-Eastern, 70¾ ex div.; Stockton and Darlington, 98 ex div.

LINES LEASED AT FIXED RENTALS. Gloucester and Dean Forest, 27; London and Greenwich, 12½; London, Tilbury, and Southend, 107¾.

PREFERENCE SHARES.—Eastern Counties Extension, No. 2, 4 prem.; Ditto, New Six per Cent Stock, 15¾; Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, 104½; Great Northern, Five per Cents, 117; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 42; Ditto, Three-and-a Quarter per Cents, 59¾; North-Western, and Wolverhampton, 111; South-Eastern, Four-and-a-Half per Cent, 104¾.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.—Ceylon B Shares, 2¾; East Indian, Ditto, C Shares, 17¾; Grand Trunk of Canada, 51¾; Ditto, Six per Cent Debentures, 81¾; Great Indian Peninsular, 21¾; Great Western of Canada, 26½; Ditto, New, 11¾.

FOREIGN.—Eastern of France, 33¾; Great Luxembourg, 6¾; Lyons and Geneva, 21¾; Northern of France, 59¾; Paris and Lyons, 85¾; Royal Swedish, 14¾; Sambre and Meuse, 8¾.

The Mining Share Market has been steady. On Thursday Alfred Consols were 23¾; Great Wheal Alfred, 10; Wheal Buller, 310; Sortridge Mining Company, 1¾; St. John del Rey, 20¾; United Mexican, 4¾.

Friday Afternoon

The business doing in most securities to-day is but moderate; prices, however, ruled tolerably firm. The Three per Cents for Transfer are 93¾; for the Account, 94 to 94¼. The New Three per Cents have been 94¾. In the Unfunded Debt very little is passing. Foreign Bonds and Railway Shares continue firm.

THE MARKETS.

CORN-EXCHANGE (Friday).—To-day's market was very scantily supplied with English wheat fresh up, constwise and by land-carriage. Only a few prime samples on offer sold steadily, at full prices. Out of doors, the demand was in a sluggish state, at Monday's currency. The sorts of foreign wheat that work are only 2020 quarters; but the supply here this morning was rather extensive. The business doing was a hobby in retail, at late rates. Fine malting barley moved off steadily, at Monday's advance, but grinding and distilling sorts were less active. There was a moderate inquiry for malt, at unaltered currencies. We were only moderately supplied with oats, nevertheless the oat trade was inactive, at late rates. Beans, peas, and flour moved off slowly, at Monday's quotations

Arrivals this week: English—wheat, 3640 quarters; barley, 1550; malt, 6820; oats, 160; flour, 1330. Irish—oats, 9100; Scotch—wheat, 300; barley, 600; oats, 1100; flour, 400 sacks.

Wheat—Kent and Essex, white, 42s to 45s; ditto, mixed, 39s to 42s; ditto, red, 38s to 42s; Suffolk and Norfolk, white, 42s to 45s; ditto, mixed, 39s to 42s; ditto, red, 38s to 42s; Lincolnshire and Yorkshire, red, 38s to 42s; ditto, white, 42s to 45s; Scotch and Northumberland, white, 42s to 45s; ditto, red, 38s to 42s; foreign, red, 37s to 39s; ditto, white, 42s to 45s; rye, 30s to 32s; grinding barley, 24s to 26s; distilling ditto, 26s to 28s; malting ditto, 30s to 34s; malt, Suffolk, 63s to 70s; ditto, Norfolk, 60s to 70s; brown oats, 23s to 25s; potato ditto, 24s to 27s; Lincolnshire feed oats, 24s to 25s; potato ditto, 26s to 28s; Poland ditto, 25s to 26s; ditto, white, 26s to 28s; Dutch ditto, 25s to 27s; Harlingen beans, 38s to 40s; Pigeon ditto, 37s to 39s; maple, 38s to 40s; white, 37s to 39s; Lincoln and Norfolk, 37s to 39s; Essex and Kent, 37s to 39s; Suffolk, 39s to 41s; Scotch and Yorkshire, 41s to 43s; Dutch, 38s to 40s; French, 38s to 40s; flour, 38s to 40s per sack.

Seeds—Clover seed of an improved request, and rather dearer. English qualities have sold at from 56s to 58s per cwt. Other agricultural seeds command full prices. Linseed cake is in good request, as sellers are firm, and rather dearer purchase.

Linseed, English crushing, 71s to 72s.; Mediterranean and Odessa, 70s to 72s.; Rapeseed, 42s to 44s per quarter. Coriander, 15s to 20s per cwt. Brown mustard seed, 10s to 22s.; ditto, white, 12s to 14s. Tares, 5s to 6s per bushel. English rapeseed, 36s to 38s per quarter. Linseed cakes, English, £10 10s to £11 0s; ditto, Foreign, £9 10s to £10 0s; rape cakes, £5 5s to £5 10s. Hay, from January 6th to 7th per quarter

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 8½d to 9d. of household ditto, 7d to 8d per 4lb. loaf.

Liverpool Weekly Averages.—Wheat, 38s. 8d.; barley, 4s. 4d.; oats, 2s. 8d.; rye, 30s. 1d.; beans, 38s. 11d.; peas, 39s. 3d.

The New World's Averages.—Wheat, 36s. 10d.; barley, 4s. 7d.; oats, 2s. 4d.; rye, 30s. 1d.; beans, 38s. 8d.; peas, 38s. 9d.

Scottish Grain sold last week.—Wheat, 138,895; barley, 68,417; oats, 12,761; beans, 1,611; peas, 1,000 bolls.

Tea.—The news from China, to the effect that the shipments of tea to the end of August, 18 000,000 lb., has been preventive of any demand as prices have further advanced; common sound congou having realised 1½d per lb.

Sugar.—Good and bright as notes of raw sugar have changed hands, and for about previous quotations; but refined and standard parcels have moved off slowly, at a decline in value of 6d per cwt. The market closed with an inactive appearance, at from 4½ to 4¾ per cwt. for low to fine grocery lump.

Coffee.—Our market has ruled very firm, and, in some cases, prices have had an upward tendency. Good ord. native Ceylon was sold at 58s 6d per cwt.

Rice.—Scarcely all descriptions have been in good request, at very full prices. Good Bullam, 10s 9d to 11s. per cwt. The stock consists of 1,000 tierces.

Provisions.—We have to report a dull sale for most kinds of Irish butter, the easier terms in Ireland by which they are offered encouraged free purchases. English commanded very little attention. Of Dutch and foreign but little doing.

Tallow.—The demand is rather heavy, and P.Y.C. is nominally 4s per cwt. lower. Town-melted, on the spot, is offered at 44s 6d per cwt.

Oils.—Linseed oil on the spot moves off slowly, at 32s 6d per cwt. Rape is dull at barely late rates. Olive is drearily dull. Palm is offered at 39s (1) 0d per cwt. Cocoa-nut, £40 10s to £41 0s. Turpentine moves off slowly, at 32s to 32s 6d per cwt. for spirits.

Spirits.—The market for all kinds of rum is heavy, and prices are barely supported.

Metals.—Quicksilver is dull, at £7 10s per bottle. Spelter is rather dearer. Pig iron, Scotch, 47s 6d per ton; ditto, Welsh, 45s per ton. Bar iron, Welsh, £5 10s per ton; ditto, Swedish, £8 per ton. Lead, Spanish, £19 10s per ton; ditto, English, £20 per ton. Tin, Straits, £93 per ton; ditto, English, £97 per ton. Copper, Chili bars, £87 per ton; ditto, tile, £88 per ton.

Coals.—Hetton, 17s 6d; Hawes', 17s 6d; Hetton's, 17s 6d; Lambton, 17s 6d; Stewart's, 17s 6d; Russell's, 17s 6d; Adelaide, 16s 6d; Adelaide's, 16s 6d; Wylam, 16s 6d; Tanfield Moor, 13s; Tanfield, 15s; Tanfield Moor, 13s;

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Now ready at all the Libraries, in three volumes,
THE DAYS of MY LIFE.
By the Author of "Margaret Maitland."
"Full of touching passages and well-wrought scenes."—Examiner
"The story has the merit of perfect originality. It is extremely attractive."—The Press
MARRIED for LOVE. By the Author of "Cousin Geoffrey, &c." Three volumes
The SECOND WIFE. Three volumes
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street

DR. DORAN'S NEW WORK
Now ready, in 2 vols. post 8vo, with Portraits, 21s; post-free.
MONARCHS RETIRED from BUSINESS.
By Dr DORAN, Author of "Lives of the Queens of England," &c.
There is scarcely a class of readers whom this book will not please. With information to recommend it to the studious, its dashing liveliness of style will not fail to attract the desultory reader. The former will enjoy very gratifying amusement, the latter will gain much very acceptable information in a very pleasurable way. It is a very charming book, and it sets off a bright career."—Gentleman's Magazine.
London: RICHARD BENTLEY, Publisher in Ordinary to her Majesty.

"I TOO;" and OTHER POEMS. By
BEELZEBUB. Cheap Edition. Fcap 8vo cloth, 1s. 9d. Free by post on receipt of the amount in postage-stamps.
London: KENNILE and SON, 407, Oxford-street, and all Booksellers.

Cr. 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 10d.; with Map, 6d extra,
LONDON AS IT IS TO-DAY; WHERE TO GO AND WHAT TO SEE; with Two Hundred Engravings.
London: M. S. CLARKE and Co., 13, Strand.

Worth Notice.—What has always been wanted is now published.
Sixteenth thousand. Price 4s., free by post.
THE DICTIONARY APPENDIX, with upwards of 7000 Words not found in the Dictionary, comprising the Participles of the Verbs, which perplex all writers. No person that writes a letter should be without this work
J. F. SHAW, 36, Paternoster-row.

USEFUL BOOKS, INDISPENSABLE TO ALL.
Eighth Thousand, twice 8s. 6d., cloth, by post.
INDISPENSABLE.—LIVE and LEARN. A Guide for all who wish to speak and write correctly. "Live and Learn" is an excellent book. We look upon it as really indispensable. We advise our readers to imitate our example, procure the book, and set it not at any price."—Educational Gazette.
The NEWSPAPER and GENERAL READER'S POCKET COMPANION: being a Familiar DICTIONARY of Words, Classical and foreign words, phrases, and quotations, of constant recurrence in the various journals, periodicals, and publications of the day. By the Author of "Live and Learn." Price 3s. 6d., cloth, post-free.
MISTAKES of EVERY-DAY OCCURRENCE in Speaking, Writing, and Pronunciation Corrected. Old and young, educated and uneducated, may consult this small work with advantage. Selling by thousands. Price 6d.; by post, 7d.
HINTS FOR LEARNERS.—Price 1s., cloth, free by post.
The RIGHT WAY of LEARNING FRENCH CORRECTLY; pointing out the difficulties which puzzle the Beginner and the Scholar. Twelfth thousand, revised, and the enlarged
THE RIGHT WORD in the RIGHT PLACE.—No lady correspondent, no public speaker, no teacher of youth, nor man of business, should study correctness this indispensable work by fallacious writing and speaking. Price 6d.; by post, 7d.
London: J. F. SHAW, Southampton-row and Paternoster-row.

This day is published, price One Shilling,
THE NEW PALACES of ADMINISTRATION. By a CAMBRIDGE MAN
Cambridge MACMILLAN and Co. London Bell and Daldy, 186, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 7s. 6d.,
AUSTRALIAN ESSAYS on Subjects Political, Moral, and Religious. By JAMES NORTON, Esq., Sen., of Lane, in the county of Cumberland, New South Wales. Member of the Legislat ve Council of New South Wales
London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, LONGMANS, and ROBERTS.

Price 6d each, post-free, to be had everywhere.
FRENCH in a FORTNIGHT WITHOUT a MASTER. "Will accomplish more than it professes."—Illustrated Magazine
FIVE HUNDRED FRENCH PHRASES, for all who aspire to speak French. GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row, London

FLOWER-PAINTING in 12 LESSONS.—A Course of Instruction, in which the whole art of Painting Flowers in WATER-COLOURS, from the simple outline through every subsequent stage of progress, is both Described and Illustrated. The Instructions in each progressive advance are given on the right page, and so simplified as not to perplex the Student with that needless quantity of reading usually found in Drawing-books. The Illustrations or Models consist of Popular Flowers, drawn and highly coloured from Nature, which the Instructions will enable the Student to imitate with the greatest accuracy, and so lead the way to draw from Nature Price 21s.
London: PAUL, JERRARD, 170, Fleet-street.

BRICK-MAKING.—A Pamphlet containing Two Papers in which the Society of Arts awarded their Silver Medal forwarded on receipt of 14 postage-stamps HUMPHREY CHAMBERLAIN, Kempsey, near Worcester.

Just published, Thirteenth Edition, 8vo, bound, price 16s., post-free, HOMŒOPATHY: Its Principles and Practice. By J. LAURIE, M.D. Devoid of all technicality. No medicine is prescribed without the indications for its selection and the exact dose to be administered. An excellent work for families, emigrants, and missionaries. A Medicine Chest for this work, price 5s.
SUPPLEMENT of the ABOVE. Price 5s. A Guide to those commencing the treatise at an early practice. A Medicine Chest for this Work price 3 s. Free on receipt of Post-office order
New 5 brass enraved Specimens bound in cloth, free by post.
HOMŒOPATHIC FAMILY GUIDE: directions for treatment of ordinary ailments. A Chest of Medicines for this Work, 24s
JAMES LEATH, 5, St. Paul's Churchyard, and 9, Vere-street, Oxford-street

8s. 6d., Post-office order, or 45 postage-stamps, Second Edition,
CORPULENCY and its NEW SELF-DETAILS CURE. A Pamphlet, by A. W. MOORE, M.R.C.S. Brief and Intelligible. Sold and sent by Mr. WILLIAM BOLWELL, 41, Tenbroek-street, Pimlico, S W

A TREATISE on ACACIA CHARCOAL (prepared by Electricity), and the Antiseptic Laws.—Great results from simple means in Cancer, Lupus, Scrofula, and Consumption: Ulcers, Diarrhœa, Spermatorrhœa, Skin Diseases, Indigestion, and many four complaints. Sent free on receipt of P. WARMINGTON EVANS, 18, Berners-street, Primrose-hill, London

Second Edition, 6d post-free.
PAINLESS TOOTH EXTRACTION without CHLOROFORM, by CONGELATION. By J. WHITFIELD WEBB, L.S.A., Thornton Dentist, 31, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square. Operations from 10 to 4

50,000 BIBLES, Prayer-books, Church Services, and elegantly-bound Books for Presents, at FIELD'S GREAT BIBLE WAREHOUSE, 65, Paternoster-row (corner of Air-street), the largest, cheapest, and best bound Stock in the world; and the only House for the celebrated Guinea Family Bible and Half-Guinea Service. Catalogues gratis. The Clergy supplied

THE DAILY NEWS,
LONDON MORNING PAPER.—Price 4d.
Liberal and Independent.—Indicates Markets, Shipping, and Commercial Intelligence
Office, 19, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.—To be ordered from all Booksellers.—Supplied by Evening mail to Country Clients same postage-free, at 15s. 6d. per quarter.

FREE TRADE in all BOOKS, Music, &c.; 2d discount in the 1s. of all Catalogue prices, and proportionate discounts, quarterly reviews almanacks, pocket-books, election maps, prints, &c. The rate of postage is 2d. for each half-pound; the discount in the 1s. off music, post-free. Buyers of the above, and all other articles in common use, even after paying the postage or carriage, a 25 order sent carriage-free to all parts of the United Kingdom. Town orders, 2s. and upwards, sent free. Exporters and private buyers are respectfully informed that detailed prospectuses will be sent post free to all applicants.—S. and T. GILBERT, 4, Copthall-buildings, back of the Bank of England, E. C.

1857.—ENORMOUS REDUCTION from the old Monopoly Prices—The FOREIGN NEWS AGENCY Sen-buildings NEW YORK, have much pleasure in offering with the compliments of the "new year" a most remarkable Reduction in the Retail and Subscription Rates of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS (12) cents., Punch (8 cts.), Illustrated Times (6 cts.); Weekly Times, Lloyd's, News of the World, and Reynolds's Paper, each 6 cts.; Dispatch, 12½ cts.; Bell's Life, 12½ cts. All the London Penny Journals, heretofore retailed at 4 cts., will be placed at 3 cents. Yearly and half-yearly subscription at a proportionate reduction. Price-lists free.—Established 1809.

REEVES' WATER COLOURS, in Cakes, and Moist Water Colours, in Tubes and Pans.
113, Cheapside, London, E. C.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

HENRI LAURENT'S MARGUERITE POLKA, superbly illustrated in colours, price 3s. "The principal subject is joyously frank and sedonous."—Musical World
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

HENRI LAURENT'S NEW RUSSIAN WALTZ, Illustrated with a Portrait of the Emperor. The Alexandra Romanoff Valse, price 4s; performed with immense success at the Argyll Rooms
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

HENRI LAURENT'S ARGYLL GALOP superbly illustrated in colours, price 3s. "One of the best galop tunes we have heard for a very long time."—Musical World
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

HENRI LAURENT'S MALAKOFF POLKA, played by the Orchestra of Union. Third edition, price 2s. 6d., illustrated
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street

MISS DOLBY'S NEW SONG, "The Green Trees whispered low and wild." The poetry by LONGFELLOW, the music by BALFE
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MISS LOUISA VINNING'S NEW SONGS, sung at the Crystal Palace with immense success. 1. "The Spirit of the Bell," by Alfred Melton. 2 "The Gentle Gale," by Frank Mori Price 2s 6d each
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

SIMS REEVES'S NEW SONG, "Come into the Garden, Maud." The poetry by ALFRED TENNYSON, the music by M. W BALFE. Price 3s
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S "Annie Laurie," brilliant Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street

MADAME OURY'S "La Mia Letizia," brilliant Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 4s. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

ARGYLL GALOP, By HENRI LAURENT. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S TROVATORE.—Fantasie brilliante, published this day, uniform with her celebrated fantaisie on La Traviata, price 4s
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

BALFE'S SERENADE QUADRILLE, on the celebrated Song by Longstaffe and Balfe Dedicated to Sims Reeves, with Portrait. Price 3s
BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

BOOSEY and SONS' MUSICAL LIBRARY. 100,000 works are in circulation, including above vast Operas, in every style of music. Subscription, one guinea. Full particulars gratis from Boosey and Sons, 28, Holles-street.

D'ALBERT'S ALBUM for 1857. Third Edition! The sale of this very popular work, which is beautifully illustrated by Brandard, has far surpassed any of its predecessors. It contains a greater variety of new Waltzes now executed in the drawing-room, &c. &c.; is splendidly bound, and forms the most attractive Musical Gift-book ever published. Price 21s., post-free.
CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S COURT of ST. JAMES' QUADRILLE, elegantly illustrated by BRANDARD, in Colours. Price 4s.; post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S BOBBING AROUND.—Quadrille, in which is introduced the most popular airs of the day. Price 3s. nett, 4s. stamp, post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S QUEEN'S WALTZ, beautifully illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s., post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S ST. PETERSBURG, New Quadrille on Russian Airs, illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s., post-free —CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CZARINA SCHOTTISCHE. Illustrated. Price 3s., post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S SOLDIERS' POLKA. With a Portrait of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, by Brandard, in Colours. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S EMPEROR'S GALOP, beautifully Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s., Solo or Duet, Post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CORONATION POLKA, beautifully illustrated by Brandard Price 3s., Solo or Duet, Post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond street.

CRIMSON ROSES. Ballad by Signor PAHAVICINI Composed for and sung with great success by Miss Dolby. Price 3s., post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S YOUNG PUPIL, in 24 Nos., containing the following popular Airs of the day, arranged for the Youngest Performers on the Pianoforte. Price 1s. each, postfree, also as Duets. 1s 6d. each.

No. 1. D'Albert's Fair Star Valse.
2. Do Dew-drop Valse.
3. The Irish Emigrant
4. Iud White, and Blue
5. D'Albert's Sir Ian's Polka.
6. Do. Gems Quadrille.
7. Nelly Bly
8. The Campbells are Coming.
9 Ye Banks and Brae s
10. D'Albert's Fairest Valse
11 Do Kings Polka Polka
12 Annie Laurie.
13. D'Albert's Palermo Quadrille.
14. Low Back d Car.
15. The Original Varsovlana.
16 D'Albert s Margarita Valse.
17. Home, Sweet Home
18. Partant pour la Syrie.
19. Last Rose of Summer.
20. Bonnie Dundee
21. Caller Herring.
22 Bohemian Air
23 Ben Bod
24 D Albert s Queen of Roses Valse.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CAST BREAD UPON THE WATERS. New Sacred Song, written by J. E. C., and composed by J RHODES. Price 3s., post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

GUARDO O CARO.—Waltz for Voice and Pianoforte, composed expressly for Madame Rudersdorff. By A. RANDEGGER. Price 4s., post-free This is the most successful vocal composition lately published; it has been always rapturously encored. By the same popular composer.—Round the corner, 1s. 6d.; Yesterday and To-morrow, 1s.; Be sure you call, 1s.; The Meadow Gate, 1s. Sent post-free.
J. J. EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London.

VARENNA.—Valse brillante pour le Piano, Par ERNST PAUER. Price 1s. 6d Sent post-free. Published by EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London

MENDELSSOHN'S THREE MARCHES. Pilgrims' March, from the 4th Sinfonia; War March of the Priests, from "Athalie" (copyrighted, and Wedding March, from the "Midsummer Night's Dream" (original edition). Price each, for Pianoforte Solo, 1s; Duet, 1s 6d. Post-free. EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London, publishers of all Mendelssohn's Works Catalogues gratis

MOZART'S DON GIOVANNI and FIGARO, arranged for the pianoforte, as Solos and Duets, with ad. lib. Accs. for Flute, Violin, and Violon, by W. BUTCHINS CALLCOTT. Each Opera in three Books containing all the favourite Airs, Duets, &c.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

MISS P. HORTON.—The New SONGS in Mr. and Mrs. Reed's (late Miss P Horton) amusing Entertainment—viz "Gather me and try," "Love makes the Home," and "The Traveller's Lay," are published by CRAMER, BEALE, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

NOVELLO'S CENTENARY EDITIONS of the ORATORIOS (complete). The WHOLE SERIES NOW REDUCED to 1s. 6d. or 2s. each. Messiah, Creation, Judas Israel in Egypt, Samson, Solomon, Jephtha, Joshua, Hezekiah, Sault, Alexander's Feast, all 2s. each Dettingen and Zadock (in one), Acis, and Otho 2s. Or in 4 Vols., 5s 6d each. Messiah 3s. Or in 2 Vols., 2s. Hymn of Praise, 2s. 6d Psalm 95, 1s. Mozart's Twelfth and Requiem Mass, Haydn's Third Mass (with E Holmes' Critical Essays), Beethoven's Mass in C, 2s each. Beethoven's Grand Mass in C (Novello's), Spohr's Last Judgment, Mozart's Twelfth and Requiem Mass, Haydn's Third Mass (with E Holmes' Critical Essays), each. All in Vocal Score, with Accompaniment by VINCENT NOVELLO Or above Works may be had bound in cloth, from 3s. to 4s. each. Prospectuses on application, post-paid
J. A NOVELLO 69, Dean street, Soho, London, W.

HAIL the MIGHTY WARRIORS BRAVE! New Song, written and composed by Mrs. MACKENZIE WILSON. 3s. 6d.
"This song abounds with excellent points. The melody is rich and flowing, and affords a full expression of the heroic tone pitched with deep pathos in the words We heartily recommend it."
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., for Majesty's Music-publishers, New Burlington-street, W.

NEW SONG. SPRING BLOSSOMS, Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER. Price 3s. 6d., postage-free. This song is published in the same keys as "Sparkling Roses," "Annie Laurie," and "Winter Evergreens," completes the series—a series unsurpassed for the beauty of words music, and certainly not to be surpassed in any "will, if possible, take the lead, as it is most graceful and plessing
London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street

NEW SONG.—The LANGUAGE of the EYE, as sung with the most distinguished success by Miss Poole, commencing "Is sweet to hear a gentle voice." Composed by C. HODGSON. Price 3s., postage-free. Also, CHARLEY, This is the only edition sung by Miss Poole
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—THINE FOR EVER. By the Author of "Will you love them as now?" "Dearest, then, I'll love you more," &c. Price 2s., postage-free. This beautiful ballad possesses all the charms, both with regard to words and music, that secured for its predecessors that immense popularity which they deservedly obtained.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

HUMOROUS SONG for the LADIES, I WISH HE WOULD MAKE UP HIS MIND. Also Charley's Aunt, commencing NOW LAKES and SPARKLING SPRAY; the celebrated fantasias upon HAPPY LAND and ROBIN ADAIR, and the most brilliant variations upon the SATATCHER'S DAUGHTER, are published by ADDISON and Co., London.

QUEEN OF THE MAY—Song, by Mrs. ARKWRIGHT. 2s. 6d., the same, for Pianoforte, by Mme. Oury, 3s. Sacred Duet, Two Voices, 3s. 6d. Sacred Trio, 4s. Sacred Quartett, 5s. Cramer, Beale, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

CHEAPEST MUSICAL REPOSITORY in ENGLAND All NEW MUSIC HALF-PRICE, Solled Music at One Fourth and a Third. Country Orders executed. Catalogues, one stamp. D'ALBERT, 244, Hatton-garden, Oxford-street.

MUSICAL BOX REPOSITORY, 32, Ludgate-street (near St. Paul's).—WALES and MCCULLOCH are direct importers of Nicole Freres's Celebrated MUSICAL BOXES, playing Fashionable Airs, Popular, Operatic, and Classical Music. Large Size, four Airs, £4 4s.; 5s. 6s.; Eight, £8; Twelve Airs £12 12s. Snuff-boxes, Two Tunes, 14s. 6d. and 18s.; Three, 20s.; Four, 25s. Catalogue of Tunes, gratis, and post-free, on application.

ALL MUSIC HALF-PRICE, including all the newest and fashionable music of the day, with the exception of the cheap music and books, published at EVANS and CO.'S, 77, Baker-street, Portman-square. Country orders punctually executed.

CASE'S FOUR-GUINEA CONCERTINA, with Forty-eight Keys, in mahogany frame and mahogany case The cheapest musical instrument manufactured Just published, 100 Melodies for the Concertina Arranged by George Case Price 3s And Third Edition of Instruction Book for the Concertina, 2s 6d Manufactory of Case's Patent Concertinas
BOOSEY and SONS, 24 and 28, Holles-street, London

R. S. PRATTEN'S PERFECTED FLUTES, on the old system of fingering, possessing a greater amount and finer quality of tone than can be obtained on any other flutes. Price from 4 guinea each, manufactures by Rudall and Rose, 24, Flolles-street, London Under the personal direction of R. S. PRATTEN, who is in constant attendance for the purpose of displaying the superior qualities of these instruments to purchasers.

THE FLUTE.—CLINTON and CO.'S improved and beautifully-made Eight-keyed FLUTES, silver-keys, 3 guineas; Eight-keyed Flutes, with C sharp, 4 guineas; splendid-toned Instrument.—Manufactory, 35, Percy-street, Bedford-square.

PIANOFORTES EXTRAORDINARY.—At MOORE and MOORE'S, 104, Bishopsgate-street, Within There are first-class Pianos, of rare excellence, possessing equisite improvements, recently introduced, which effect a great saving, and beautiful quality of tone that stands unrivalled. Price, from 21 Guineas. First-class Pianos for hire, with easy terms of purchase.

HARMONIUMS.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO are agents for ALEXANDRE'S NEW PATENT MODEL HARMONIUMS.

PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. have a great variety by all Makers, New and Second-hand, for SALE or HIRE.—201, Regent-street

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price Fifty Guineas This instrument has fourteen octaves, and is the most perfect model of the best Continental Pianofortes. It is strengthened by every possible means to secure the greatest amount of wear, and to stand perfectly in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description in the case is rosewood, full, and rich, and the power equal to that of a Broadwood. The ease is of the most elegant construction, in rosewood, with ebonised mouldings, and the repetition very rapid. Every possible precaution has been taken to ensure its standing well in time. Chappell and Co. may here call the attention of the nobility, gentry, professors, and merchants to the Foreign Model, feeling assured that no Pianoforte, in all respects of quality, has hitherto been made in England at the same price. Every instrument will be warranted, and, if destroyed exchanged within twelve months of the purchase.—50, New Bond-street, London.

THE ALEXANDRE HARMONIUM AT SIX GUINEAS.
ALEXANDRE and SON have made this Harmonium at the lowest price possible, to bring the instrument within the means of all classes. It is in an Oak Case, with Four Octaves, is also calculated for Private Houses and Small Churches.
INDISPENSABLE TO THE SCHOOL-ROOM.
The Six-Guinea Harmonium will be taken in exchange for any of the more expensive descriptions, without loss or diminution.
ALEXANDRE and SON obtained the Gold Medal of Honour at the Great Exhibition at Paris, 1855. This is the only Medal ever awarded for the best by Rossini, Auber, Adam, Thalberg, Lizst, &c., and by the Professors of the Conservatoire de Paris
The more expensive Harmoniums range from 10 to 55 guineas. These are brought to the greatest perfection, and are equally adapted to the CHURCH OR DRAWING-ROOM.
AT AN
ACCOMPANIMENT TO THE VOICE OR PIANOFORTE.
Messrs. Chappell have just received a number of Alexandre's celebrated HARMONIUM PIANOFORTES, which combine the excellence of both instruments. The two can be used in combination, or on the same performer, or each instrument is perfect in itself. Price from 40 to 150 guineas.
An Immense Stock of
PIANOFORTES BY THE BEST MAKERS,
from Twenty Guineas upwards, which can be thoroughly recommended and warranted
Messrs. Chappell and Co. have just opened a number of NEW MODEL PIANOFORTES, enabling the purchaser to select a Pianoforte or Harmonium from the Establishment in London, and have the exchange of the instrument made side by side.
Full descriptive Lists of Harmoniums and of Pianofortes will be sent on application to
CHAPPELL AND CO.,
50, NEW BOND-STREET, AND 15, GEORGE-STREET, HANOVER-SQUARE

TOLKIEN'S 25-GUINEA ROYAL MINUTO PIANOFORTES, 6½ octaves.—H. T., the original Maker of a Twenty-Guinea Pianoforte, has, by the introduction of all the new branches of the manufacture, obtained the highest reputation throughout the universe for the following instruments, unequalled in durability and delicacy of touch, more especially for their excellence in standing in any climate, the various climates of our colonies. In elegant walnut, rosewood, and mahogany cases, packed abroad for £3 10s. extra. H. TOLKIEN'S Manufactory, 27, 28, and 29, King-William-street, London-bridge.—PIANOFORTES FOR HIRE.

PIANOFORTES.—EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS Some splendid Rosewood and Walnut-tree Cottages and Piccolos, 6½ octaves, with all the latest improvements, have only been used a few months.—At TOLKIEN'S Old-established Pianoforte Warehouse, 27, 28, and 29, King William-street, London-bridge. PIANOFORTES FOR HIRE.

CHARLES PACKER (late Antoni Forrer), ARTIST in HAIR to the QUEEN, by Appointment.
Half Jewellery Department, 105, Regent-street.
Hair Devices and Fancy Gifts, 79, Regent-street.
Jet and Mourning ditto, 76, Regent-street.

ANTONI FORRER, ARTIST in HAIR and JEWELLERY to the QUEEN, by Appointment,
24, Baker-street, Portman-square,
(Opposite the Bazaar).
N.B. Antoni Forrer has no connexion whatever with his late establishment at 136, Regent-street.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—Artist in Hair.—DEWDNEY begs to inform Ladies or Gentlemen resident in town or any part of the Kingdom, that he beautifully makes, and elegantly mounts, in gold, HAIR BRACELETS, Chains, Brooches, Rings, Pins, Studs, &c.; and forwards the same carefully packed in boxes, at about one-half the usual charges. A beautiful collection of specimens, handsomely mounted, kept for inspection. An illustrated book sent free.—Dewdney, 173, Fenchurch-street.

BEFORE YOU HAVE YOUR LIKENESS TAKEN send for DEWLEY'S PATTERNS of BROOCHES, Lockets, Bracelets, &c., which are sent free on receipt of two postage-stamps. Registered Revolving Brooches in Solid Gold, to show either Likeness or hair at pleasure of wearer, from 63s. each. A Gold Plated Brooch or Locket sent free to any part of the Kingdom for 10s. 6d.—Dewdney, Artist, Manufacturing Goldsmith and Jeweller, 173, Fenchurch-street, City, London

A GUINEA GOLD WEDDING-RING and Hall-marked KEEPER, sent in a morocco box, to any part of the kingdom, on receipt of P.O. order or Post-office order. GEORGE DEWDNEY, Goldsmith and Jeweller, 173, Fenchurch-street, London.

FISHER'S NEW SHOW ROOMS For PORTMANTEAUS and TRAVELLING BAGS are now completed, 188, Strand
Catalogues post-free.

ALLEN'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Patent Portmanteaus, Despatch Boxes, Dressing Cases, and Travelling Bags, with square opening, by post, for twostamps.—J. W. and T. ALLEN, Manufacturers, 18 and 22, Strand. W.C.

FRANGIPANNI.—PIESSE and LUBIN, Perfumery Factors, 2, New Bond-street, London, are the only makers of the genuine Frangipanni Bouquet, pronounced by connoisseurs to be the most fragrant and lasting odour made.

VIOLETS.—BRIEDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET SCENT presents a bunch of violets fresh from the fields, in every respect. Sold by all perfumers, and obtain the handkerchiefs. Price 2s. 6d.—127, New Bond-street (facing Redmayne's).

JONES'S FLESH SOAP, Is per packet, allays irritation, and produces a soft and healthy skin. To be had through any Italian Warehouseman and Chemist—Jones and Sons, near the Turnpike, Islington, London.

THE BELMONT GLYCERINE SOAP consists Pure Glycerine, distilled, by their patent process, from Palm Oil. It is recommended for washing infants and shaving: it softens the skin, and is a most agreeable toilet soap for general use PRICE'S CANDLES, which will not drop grease when carried. These, used as chamber candles, prevent damage to dresses and carpets. The wicks are so burnt in the candlesticks made especially for them in imitation bronze, with cotton-branch stems, and palmleaf nest having perforated round the edge, "Price's Patent Candle Company, Limited." All the above may now be had retail through any Chemist, Perfumer, or Oilman and Grocer.
The Soap, in English Ornamental Boxes, price 8d., 1s., and 1s. 6d. each; the Candles, 1s. and 2s.; Candlesticks, 2s. 6d. each.
And wholesale at
BELMONT, VAUXHALL, LONDON.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, Used in the Royal Laundry,
And pronounced by Her Majesty's Laundress to be
The finest Starch she ever used
Sold by all Chandlers, Grocers, &c., &c.

BENZINE COLLAS CLEANS
Gloves, Cloth,
Silks, Carpets, &c. &c.
In Bottles, 1s. 6d., of all Oilmen and Perfumers.

LESSEY'S MARKING-INK—the Blackest and Best ever made—has now withstood the test of twenty years' experience in every clime and of the globe.—Soul, wholesale and retail, by J. LESSEY (late Winckworth), 37, High-street, Marylebone.

DINNER, DESSERT, and TEA SERVICES. A large variety of New and good Patterns. Best quality, superior taste, and very moderate prices. Also, every description of Cut Table Glass, equally advantageous
THOMAS PEARCE and SON, 33, Ludgate-hill, E C.

THE BEST BED for CHILD is one of TRELOAR'S METALLIC COTS, 4 feet long, 2 feet wide, with movable sides and pillars, castors, and brass vases, price 21s.; including a wire-wove mattress. Packed and delivered at any railway station in the kingdom for 24s.—T TRELOAR, Iron Bedstead Manufacturer, 43, Ludgate-hill, London, E. C.

PAPERHANGINGS and DECORATIONS. AT CROSS'S, 77, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street, the Public and the Trade are supplied with the largest and cheapest stock in the Kingdom, commencing at twelve yards for Sixpence. N B. Estimates given for House Painting, Decorating, &c

FOR REMOVING FURNITURE, GLASS, &c., in Town or Country, by Road or Railway, without the expense of packing, apply to the Proprietor, J. TAYLOR, Carman to her Majesty, 67, Upper Berkeley-street, Portman-square. FURNITURE WAGGONS ready.

CHUBB'S FIRE-PROOF SAFES are constructed of strong Wrought Iron, and the Detector Locks which secure them are gunpowder-proof. Detector Locks for every purpose; Street-door Latches, Cash and Deed Boxes. Full illustrated price-lists sent on application.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard

PANKLIBANON FURNISHING IRONMONGERY.—These Show Rooms and Galleries are the largest in London, and contain the best-selected and most extensive stock of elegant and rich Electro-Plated Goods, Moderator Lamps, Chandeliers, Tea Trays, Urns, Kettles, Stoves, Fenders, Fire-irons, Ranges, and General Ironmongery Goods of the best manufacture, with the prices marked in plain figures, which will be found one fourth less than any other house in the trade. Furnishers, strong and wellmade, to suit every family change for cash. 6d. in the best Cakes Oil, 4s. 6d. per gallon.—55, 56, and Bazaar, Baker-street

KITCHEN RANGES.—THE LEAMINGTON PRIZE KITCHENER combines a large hot-plate with roasting and baking oven, and with a good boiler; effects a great saving in fuel, and does not smoke For price-lists, &c., apply to C. S. LOWNDES, Emscote Foundry, Leamington; or to Messrs. H. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, where one may be seen in operation.

SLACK'S FENDER, Table Cutlery, Kitchen Furniture, and General Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouse, is the most extensive assortment with good quality Iron fenders, 5s. 6d.; bronzed ditto, 8s. 6d., with standards, superior drawing-room ditto, 12s. 6d.; rich ditto, 18s. 6d. to 30s. 6d.; patent dish-covers, 18s.; set of six. Orders above £2 cart carriage-free. Catalogues gratis, or post-free.—Richard and John Slack, 336, Strand

D. HULETT and CO., Manufacturers of GAS GAS STOVES, Hall Lanterns, Glass Lustres, and every description of Gas Fittings. A large assortment of the Newest Designs always on hand. Every article marked in plain figures Patentees of the Self-acting Regulator.—55 and 56, High Holborn.

MODERATOR LAMPS.—The simplicity, safety, and beautiful finish of the mechanism of HOPE'S and SON'S LAMPS render them less liable to derangement than any other kind, and have gained for them as general a preference The patterns are equally unexceptionable, and (with great originality) combine every style that is beautiful, and pure in taste —Thomas Pearce and Son, 33, Ludgate-hill, E. C., Direct Importers of only the finest Oil

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the BEST.—The Moderator Lamps, from 5s. 6d. each. All who require a really good and cheap Lamp, should inspect Gardners' vast and recherché collection, which will be found unequalled, consisting of several thousand patterns. The show-rooms, the largest in London, extend the entire length of Trafalgar-square, opening into Duncannon-street.—Gardners (by appointment to her Majesty), 453 and 63, Strand, Charing-cross, and 3 and 4, Duncannon-street. Established 161 years.

BARLOW'S POTATO-STEAMER. — By all means use his admirable and perfect action explained. Price 5s., 7s., and 8s. each.—James Barlow, Inventor, 14, King William-street, Maiden Lane. Electroplage gratis, or send post-free.

QUINTIN METSYS,* THE BLACKSMITH OF ANTWERP.

THE PORTRAIT.

QUINTIN AT THE FORGE.

In a large low workshop, in one of the narrow streets of the quarter of Antwerp occupied by the various guilds of workers in iron, apprentices and companions were busy on a summer afternoon of 1486. The forge fires winked in the sunlight, which fell in broad rays athwart the dusty air, from the wide unglazed windows. At a bench immediately under one of these windows sat the worshipful Jacques Van Isendycke, free master of the Smiths' Guild, crayon in hand, designing an elaborate pattern of interlaced ironwork, such as we may still admire in every petty town of the Low Countries, but the simplest of which is beyond the skill of our best modern hammermen. So absorbed was he in his delicate task, that the roar of the bellows, the merry music of the hammers, and the grating of the files, which half-a-dozen vigorous arms were plying about the place, fell unmarked upon his ear. The workmen seemed little restrained by their master's presence, but laughed and bandied rough jests, and every now and then joined in lusty chorus to one of the popular refrains of the time, with which one of their fellows, a lithe, long-limbed, large-browed young man of some twenty-two years of age, timed their labour. There was as much mastery as strength in the way he wielded his hammer, and wrought into fantastic leafage and graceful spirals the rough bar of glowing metal on which he was at work. It was but a lunge after all, and yet what fancy and invention he put into the stubborn iron!

"Too much flourishing for five groschen, Quintin," said a grizzled companion, as the youngster plunged the hissing metal into the trough that stood by his anvil.

"Let it go as a good work, Liévin; 'tis for the gate of the poor Clares grille: mayhap it may spare thee a year of purgatory; besides Master Isendycke ever preaches that an ounce of art is worth a pound of metal, and invention costs nothing."

"Nothing to thee, may be, King Quintin; but look at the master yonder, racking his brains over yon pattern for the well-cover that the Guild gives in honour of Our Lady, and tell me not invention costs nothing."

Quintin Metsys laughed, and, putting down his hammer, walked from the anvil to the table at which Master Isendycke still sat poring over his design. The young man removed his cap respectfully, as he came near the old smith.

"Worshipful master!" he said, at last, seeing the old man still too absorbed to notice his approach.

Jacques Isendycke looked up loweringly, but his brow cleared at sight of the frank, bright face of his young companion.

"Well, Quintin," he said, "what wouldst?"

"Next month, you know, I am to be received a free master of the guild, and must deliver my proof-piece before admission

The old man nodded.

"I have a boon to ask. Intrust me with the well-cover. It will be a brave chance, and I would fain show I have profited by my apprenticeship under Master Isendycke."

The old man was tickled.

"By St. Eloy," he said, after a pause, "I believe thou wilt make as good a hand on't as ever a hammerman in Antwerp, Quintin. And, to speak sooth, my designing wits are not what they were. Here 's but a poor thing, methinks, for a morning's devising." He pushed over his design as he spoke. "Take the crayon, and see how thou canst turn it, lad."

Quintin waited no second bidding, but, drawing a stool to the table took a fair sheet of vellum from a number that lay scattered about, and, after a few loose, light touches of the crayon, began to draw rapidly and firmly, his face flushing and his eye kindling as the pencil moved under his fingers.

The old man smiled approvingly, as he followed the growing design—a plain, ogee canopy first, supported by four clustered columns, and now from the capital spring interlacing curves, with downward points that link the pillars into a bower of iron branchwork more curves still, the points turned upward, to balance the lower coupdings, and now the iron tree is throwing out leafage—sharp and spiry, as befits the material—and from the corner pillars and the cusps of the ogee canopy are shooting up slender pinnacles all iron-leaved, and every terminal is wreathing into free and fantastic luxuriance; and, what is this, towering in the midst, above the foliated spires? the armed effigy of the legendary giant of the city, Druon, in the act of flinging down his gage to all gainsayers. It was pleasant to see the unjealous delight with which the old man marked the rapid conception and sure hand of his favourite.

QUINTIN METSYS.

"Look at that, you rogues!" he shouted to the apprentices and companions who had radually drawn to the table. "How long mightst thou ply hammer and pincers, Liévin Crasbeke, or thou, Griel Swinters, ere such fancies bred in either of your dull heads?"

Liévin shrugged his shoulders. "I can strike a forward stroke with the best here, Master Isendycke, and I'll hold my own for evendown hammerwork with ever a man in the guild, always saving a passed master; but I am no match for Quintin in such toys—I know that, without telling; but look, here be customers." And nothing loth he turned from the table, as a grave, elderly citizen, in a long robe of brown cloth, furred with minever, entered the workshop, with a graceful girl upon his arm.

"A fair day to you, Master Von Twylt, and to you, Mistress Alyt," said the old smith, hurrying to meet the pair. "My poor workshop is honoured in this visit."

Quintin Metsys had looked up as he heard the name, with a flush first, and then a sudden paleness. But whatever his emotion he mastered it quickly, and seemed again absorbed in his design.

"I am here for a turn of thy craft, Master Isendycke. My wilful Alyt will have iron clasps to the missal that Martin Vander Goes hath illuminated for her. I would have given her golden ones, for the book deserves them."

Alyt, without speaking, took the velvet-covered missal from the damask pouch that hung at her side.

"The preciousness is in the workmanship and not the metal," said the old smith, as he took the book—first crossing himself reverently and opened it warily, as if afraid lest his begrimed hands should soil the delicate vellum.

"A rare missal, fairly writ, and brightly painted; but I have a companion yonder who will fit it with clasps, were its images of Master John Van Eyck's own hand." And he nodded towards the table where Quintin sat at work.

It was now Alyt's turn to blush.

"The young man who wrought the lock on our linen-chest, Alyt, is it not?" asked Van Twylt, after a glance at Quintin.

"I think it is, father," said Alyt, in a tone she tried hard to render careless.

"Come hither, Quintin," cried the old smith, "and say if thou wilt undertake the work. An Ae will not," he continued aside to Van Twylt, "you must e'en go elsewhere in the street, for my fingers are too stiff for such filigree."

Quintin was at Alyt's side before his master had ceased speaking and as she handed him the missal their hands met, and again the flush passed over Quintin's face, and Alyt's pale cheek was rosy red too.

"I will do my best," he said, "to fit the book with clasps—worthy of the hand that will deal with them." The last words were added in a voice so low that only Alyt heard them.

"Take care it meet no harm in thy hands, young man," said Van Twylt sharply, as Quintin put the book into the bosom of his pourpoint.

"Fear not for that, Master Van Twylt," he answered; and, with one long look at Alyt, he returned to his designing.

"Bring it to my house on the quay, by the yard of the English Hanse—the sign of the Fox," the old man called after him.

"I know the house," was the reply. "Mistress Alyt shall not need to wait long for her book." The gracious girl smiled quietly, and one sudden glance from under the black lashes of her grey eyes met Quintin's look, and he smiled too, as he resumed his crayon.

Then the old man and his daughter passed out of the place; the companions and apprentices went back to their interrupted work; the old man resumed his seat by Quintin's side, and the broad sun-beams lit up his bald brow, and warmed his old blood, till he fell into a pleasant slumber. Quintin, looking up from his drawing, saw that he slept, and then he took Alyt's book from his breast, and kissed it passionately again and again and again. But for the rest of that day there was no more designing of the well-cover. Quintin had only in his brain one constant face as of an angel with grey eyes, bordered by violet lashes, and a soft rounded cheek, and hair of golden auburn, and a mouth more full of playful humour and wilful maidenhood than of heaven. And, whenever he strove to drive away that sweet fancy with his pencil, the rebel point would only interpret, and in no way resist, the image in his heart. So he resigned himself and drew angels in many attitudes, but all with the face of Alyt Van Twylt.

* This is the contemporary orthography.

II. THE FREE MASTER.

The month that was to elapse between the incident already described and the presentation of Quintin Metsys as claimant to be admitted a free master of the Smiths' Guild had passed rapidly away. Every day and all day long Quintin had laboured in Isendycke's forge at the well-cover, on which he intended to rely as his masterpiece—the work that should prove him fit to be accepted as a free master of the worshipful guild of great smiths. When the forge closed daily at the hour appointed by the statutes of the guild for leaving off labour, Quintin, on his return to the lodging he shared with his widowed mother, at the sign of the Monkey, in the street of the Tanners, had been used to read to the old woman from one of the few manuscripts which formed their library—for printed books were yet too costly to come within a craftsman's reach. Manuscripts, it is true, were still dearer; but John Metsys—Quintin's father, and, like him, a worker in iron—had been a lover of such literature as he had access to, and had, by dint of sparing, become master of a few precious volumes. There was "Reynard the Fox" (the original old Flemish "Reinaert"), with its continuation by William Van Utenhove; the Flemish version of "Floris and Blanchefleur"; that most delicate and finished of thirteenth-century romances; a rhymed chronicle or two; some of Maerlant's Compilations on Natural History; and the Golden Legend. But now was an end of these pleasant evening-readings, and the old mother must twirl her distaff in silence while Quintin worked at a small forge he had fitted up in his own chamber. If his days were given to work for honour, his evenings were devoted to work for love. He had resolved that the clasps of Alyt's missal should be finished in time to present them to their mistress the day he should be admitted a free master; and to the loving labour he put into the clasps he was adding, of his own intention, a light and preciously-wrought iron casket, destined to hold his lady's book. You may be sure he put his best skill, his most graceful fancy, into both, and both promised to be marvels of skill and triumphs of invention. Each clasp was an angel, in an intricate knot of leafage and flowers; and round the casket ran a tracery of foliage, twining in and out of an arcade of Gothic niches rich with foliated cusp and crocketed finial, that it was a marvel how such perfect finish could be given on a scale so minute in so stubborn a metal. Cellini need not have disowned the work albeit he might have sneered at the material. But it fitted the hardier Flemish nature as well as gold and silver and precious gems and brilliant enamel the luxurious Florentine. This work Quintin showed to none, not even to his mother. He hoarded it as he did his love: none knew of that but the two most concerned in it. But the progress of his well-cover was no secret—at least, in Isendycke's forge. Master, and companions, and apprentices, alike watched that with curious interest, and less of envy than might have been expected in any community differently regulated. But in those days of guild-government that fierce and feverish competition—that over-bidding of skill and underselling of price, which in our day arm craftsman against craftsman, was hardly known—at least, among members of the same guild, though among minor guilds concerned with the same manufacture there were frequent disputes and much litigation, arising from alleged infractions by each of the other's peculiar field of employment.

This seems the place for some general remarks on the guild system, as we are following Quintin Metsys in his rise from the second to the highest grade of his craft.

All art, trade, and manufacture, from the earliest revival of artistic and industrial occupation in our modern society, in all countries of Europe, are found distributed among these bodies, whether known as guilds among the Anglo-Saxons, mestiere among the Italians, métiers among the French, nahringen or ombarkten among the Flemings, crafts or mysteries (from the Italian mestiere) among ourselves, or guilds in Scotland. Our City companies furnish the last trace of these once all-powerful associations. They have broken down everywhere under the growth of trade and the increase of intercommunication between different parts of the same state, and between different states. But at the date of our story and for a century and a half later, the guild-system was in full operation. It was a deliberate and organised effort to regulate industry, to proportion supply and demand, to diminish the evils of competition and to guard against the consequences of trading vicissitudes. Of course its theory was the very antipodes of our modern political economy. "Ne laissez pas faire" was the rule of the former as "laissez faire" is the maxim of the latter. Each separate branch of trade, each description of manufacture, each form of art or craftsmanship had its guild. They were all framed on a common model, it is surprising how little even the details vary in England, Germany, France, and the Low Countries, from the days of Philip Augustus—when Etienne Boileau composed the "Livre des Métiers" of Paris—down to the date of our own commonwealth. Every guild had its head—sometimes called captain, sometimes dean, sometimes warden; its sworn council, its trade-searchers, its purse-bearer, its chaplain, and its minor officers; its hall, or place of meeting; its periodical feasts; its religious processions to the chapel of its patron saint; its book of statutes, with rules for the discipline of apprentices, for the strict regulation of their number, of the hours of work, of the modes of manufacture, and rules of trade; its provision for the relief of decayed members, widows, and orphans; its common funeral ornaments. Every guild watched over and took part in the concerns of its members, from the cradle of their children to their own graves. No doubt a time came when the restrictions of this system were found incompatible with the relations of society; when its evils were felt to be greater than its advantages. But for a long time it had obvious advantages, and all the efforts of Socialist theorisers in our own days are conscious or unconscious strivings towards its resuscitation. All trade-unions and combinations are attempts on the part of workmen to revive it. They fail, and they must fail, for the conditions of the problem are altered. At the time the guilds worked harmoniously and usefully there was no gulf between master and workmen, no great accumulations of capital in single hands, no intricate and world-wide ramifications of commerce, and comparatively little jealousy of city with city.

Flanders and Brabant were the very strongholds of the guild system. In Flanders, especially, it was the guilds of Bruges and Ghent, and Ypres that had first won, and ever struggled to maintain, the liberties of these cities against the Court. The whole reigns of Philip the Good and his son Charles the Rash—the sovereigns of Flanders and Brabant, just before the time of our story—had been one struggle with these bold, turbulent, and well-armed bodies of sturdy citizens. In Brabant they had been less politically active, but they were all the more socially important and financially flourishing.

The Smiths' Guild was one of the chief or great guilds of Antwerp, and had dependent upon it a number of minor guilds concerned with the working of metal—the Hilt-makers, the Gold-beaters, the Helmers, the Buckle-makers, the Cutlers, and many more. These were bound to attend at the great feasts and guild-feasts, to take the orders of the dean of the smiths to walk after the smiths in the trade processions, and to attend with them at the masses, funerals and other services, at the Chapel of St. Eloy, the smiths' patron.

And now to the day for Quintin's reception. The chief officers of the guild were met in their hall—the dean of guild on the dais; beside him the sworn men, or council; the finders or trade-searchers, whose business it was to inspect periodically the shops of the members, to see they obeyed the statutes and used no fraud or cozening in their work; the standard-bearer, who bore the guild banner, emblazoned with the guild arms; the trumpeters, the sub-dean, and the guild jester.

Many halls of these corporations still survive in the Low Countries. We may easily help of them, imagine the large and lofty room into which Quintin Metsys was ushered with a quickened pulse: its timbered roof, springing from the carved bosses of its side-pillars; the windows, with their emblazoned achievements; the wide open fireplace, with its richly-sculptured mantel, and oaken front, carved with some legendary or Bible history; the dean's state on the dais; the long heavy oaken tables and forms; the coats of arms, set out with the guild plate, hung there from a long line of departed members, gifts on wedding days, or birthdays, or funeral memorials, or commissory tributes on appointment to some honour of the craft; the hangings of stamped and gilt cordovan; and all this serving as a picturesque setting for the other richness of the livers of the officers the members crowned with such stern and massive heads as Van Eyck, and Metsys himself, and Memling, and the Holbeins and Rembrandt, and Van der Helst, have handed down to us as the type of the old-world burgher of the North.

Can we wonder that the painter's art found food and throve apace among such environment indoors, even if it had not found out of doors still more abundant and stimulating food? Quintin was called in due time, and came forward, supported by his two guild-fathers, old Isendycke, and a gossip of his, Martin Tonneel. The former testified to his admission as an apprentice, to his faithful and dutiful behaviour for the six years he had spent in that capacity at his master's house, and under his master's eye; the liggere or register of the guild proved his admission as a companion; and now all that remained for his passing as a master was his proof-piece.

"'Tis too bulky for bringing to the hall," said Isendycke, when this was solemnly demanded; "but if the worshipful dean, the jurates, and finders will come to my shop, they may see it there" "and all who like to follow," he added; "for St. Eloy he knows Quintin need not blush to show it to e'er a smith in Brabant; though I say it that taught the lad to handle a fore-hammer."

So the gowned and bearded crowd filed out, the guild officers at their head—for precedence was strictly exacted in those good days—to the shop of Jacques Van Isendycke, where Quintin's well-cover stood, bright and clean from the hammer, in all its fanciful, yet harmonious, intricacy. Loud and long were the acclamations that greeted the proud young hammerman. Dirck Van den Dale, the dean, swore by St. Eloy he had seen no better masterpiece; and his knowledge of the guild and its works ran back far into good Duke Philip's day. The "finders" tried every rivet and mortice, and pronounced the piece as solid and workmanlike as it was original in design. The jester flung up his bauble, and vowed it were a pleasure to hang oneself on so pretty a swallows. It was resolved that the guild should adopt the work in performance of their vow to Our Lady, and that it should be set up in solemn procession of the craft on the feast of the Annunciation.

Then, with banners waving and trumpets sounding, the guild went back to its hall, and there the statutes were read by the dean, and that done, standing before the dean, with one hand on the Gospels and one on the Keur, or statute-book of the guild, Quintin Metsys took the guild-oath in these words:—"In the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost—three persons and one God—this ordinance is that which our guild hath established and maintained for its government and welfare, with the grace of God, and also for the service of our noble Prince Duke of Burgundy and Mainbour of Brabant, with all our hearts, our lives, and our having, to preserve in esteem and in honour ourselves and the good city of Antwerp." And this oath taken, Quintin Metsys was a free master.

III. ALYT AT HOME.

The house of Kerwyn Van Twylt stood facing the Scheldt in the very centre of all the bustle and stir of the quays. Van Twylt was one of the most considerable members of the Merchants' Guild, which at Antwerp held the first place among the trading corporations of the city. Every year the wealth and importance of this guild was growing with the growth of the city's commerce. The rise of Antwerp kept pace with the decline of Bruges, and though it was not till some half a century after the date of our story that the sea commerce of the latter received its death-blow, and the former attained its acme of trading activity and splendour, the tide of prosperity had already set in towards the Scheldt, and away from the Schluys. The gradual silting up of the Swyn had before this rendered the port of Damme dangerous of access to ships of heavy burden; but the sand, that natural enemy of Bruges, had been less deadly to her than the turbulence and insolence of her own children, who, by their exactions, had disgusted the hansas or companies of alien merchants—through which all the foreign trade of that day was carried on—and had provoked the settled disfavour of Duke Charles. He was never so happy as when he could confer a favour on Antwerp at the expense of her Flemish rival.

Guicciardini, who visited the Low Countries in the course of the sixteenth century, has recorded the amazement and admiration with which he, an inhabitant of the most luxurious and cultivated city of Italy, beheld the industry, splendour, and wealth—the joyous, free and refined life of Antwerp.

Already at the time of our story, the Scheldt had obstructed much of the shipping from the Schluys; and, as Quintin passed along the quays on his way to the house of Van Twylt, his eye even then a painter's, was charmed by the stirring and various picture. Behind the villages and poplar groves of the opposite shore the sun was sinking slowly, and his red rays steeped in warm light the tall, cow-stepped, many-windowed gables of the high houses which lined the banks of the river.

The houses were coloured after the fancy of their occupants. From some of the windows hung rich draperies—tapestry of Arras or Ypres, or carpets from Turkey and Persia; round others climbing plants formed a frame of green leaves and bright flowers to some fair Flemish head, in its lappeted lace cap and gold ear-rings. Over most of the doors from brackets of fantastic iron-work hung suspended meanly executed signs of strange beasts and birds, and heraldic monsters, and saints. From the eaves projected paint spouts and grotesque gargoyles of stone or metal. Broad balconies of intricate patterns broke the line of the houses. Here and there a coat of arms marked the seat of some hanse Genoese, Venetian, Florentine, English, or Easterling. On the broad and placid river were anchored, tier on tier, high-stemmed, round quartered Dutch craft, sharp Genoese galleys, Spanish caravels, and Flemish sluyts; Venetian carracks and brazze, with painted sails; xebeques from Tunis and Sallee, low and dark, with lateen sails like the wings of a sea-hawk; bluff English galliots from Orewell, or Ravensburg, or Sandwich, or other of our southern and eastern ports—now silted up and shipless for ever. On board rang hoarse cries, and the rough music of sailors at hawser or windlass; the decks were crowded with life; the rigging was bright with flags; spars, yards, and cordage barred the red sunset with quaint patterns. Along the quays moved a medley of lounging shipmen, and toiling porters, and laden wains, and noisy venders of sausages or cakes, beer and brantwein, among busy cranes, and piled-up bales and boxes, presided over by grave merchants, book in hand. The whole scene formed a kaleidoscope of brilliant and shifting costumes—Armenian, Moresque, and Greek—Italian, Dutch, English—of every nation that followed the sea in that enterprising time.

No wonder Quintin felt all the artist within him stir at the sight; but he did not pause to study the picture, gay as it was: he sped along, his casket under his arm, praying that some happy chance might allow him to give it into his lady's own hands—to enjoy her admiration to feel some of her satisfaction with the work reflected upon the workman. He reached the house. In the sign of the fox over the door the artist had borrowed from the great Flemish epic the air and attitude of Reynard, as, with a profound bow, cap in hand, he enters the presence of the royal lion. Perhaps this was meant as a sly hit at his mercantile employer. The lower story of the house was devoted to business. It was full of clerks, and bales, and merchant-captains of many countries, with Kerwyn Van Twylt himself a very incarnation of importance and money-making busy in the midst.

Quintin announced himself and his errand; but was handed over summarily to an apprentice, with orders to con last him to Mistress Alyt. Fortune was propitious: he would see her alone.

Alyt was seated in a room on the first floor looking out on the river. An embroidery frame stood at her side and a lute lay at her feet, but her thoughts were otherwise employed than on silk and sendal, cendre, or escarlate and vermeil. The room was full of evidence of its master's prevailing taste. Art shared the dominion of Van Twylt's mind with money-getting. Trading transactions with Italy enabled him to gratify this taste to the full. The walls were hung with hangings of Ypres, showing the story of David wrought in colours. A rich Eastern carpet covered the centre of the room. Round the woodwork of the fireplace ran a series of pictures in panel of the school of Van Eyck, setting forth the temptations and triumphs of chaste Susannah. In a recess fitted up as an oratory stood a triptych, which, when opened, displayed an Annunciation on one wing, a Preaching of the Baptist on the other, and in the midst a Nativity—whose serene and saintly loveliness was due to no meaner a pencil than that of the blessed monk of Fiesole. From the centre panel over the fire looked down a calm and comely Virgin, from the Land of the elder Bellini, forecasting, in its glowing though somewhat rigid beauty, the full sunlight of Giorgione and Titian. On a table by Alyt's side, inlaid with Vermese impraisma, stood a shrine, with pictures from Memling's own delicate hand of the story of St. Mary of Egypt. There were other pictures, let into chests and cupboard-doors, and, indeed, ornamenting every article of furniture which afforded space for such decoration—some of Flemish, others of Italian, masters. The lute, on which Alyt had been playing, was covered with decoration of the school of Gozzoli. From the carved shelves of an oaken buffet facing the window gleamed plateaus of goldsmith's work and cups of niello, from Florence and Genoa, interspersed with tazze and fruttiere of the lustrous wares of Gubbio and Faenza, and stately goblets of the filmy glass of Murano, quaint pots of Flemish grès set in corners held rare flowering plants, whose perfume filled the room with sweetness. But Quintin scarce noted these riches of art. He had eyes only for the sweet face of the lady of this fairly-furnished bower.

As he had announced Quintin's name Alyt started to her feet, and then sat down again as suddenly. Quintin stood tumidly, with eyes down-bent, scarcely able to muster the formal phrases of courtesy he had conned as he came along. Alyt was loud in praise of the casket; but when Quintin humbly offered it as a gift to herself a cloud passed across her white forehead. Dared she accept it? What would her father think of the insolence of the young smith in offering a gift to the daughter of a merchant, a sworn man of his guild: nay, soon to be its dean, if report on the quays spoke truth?

Quintin trembled while this suspense checked the utterance he had worked up at first to Alyt's lips. But the woman got the better of the merchant's daughter, and she faltered out

"I may not say 'Nay' to so generous an offer, Sir, and indeed, when my father sees the casket, I know he will not have the heart to reprove me for taking so cunning and beautiful a work. Our Genoese and Venice captains never brought us anything more beautiful." And with a burst of girlish delight she held the box up to the light, and turned it about and about, discovering a new beauty at every fresh inspection; and Quintin looked on, and drank in every smile, every eye-flash, every musical ejaculation of pleased surprise, and was happier than ever he had been in his whole life before.

"But what a graceless girl I am," she broke out suddenly, "I have not thanked you for the gift; and you wrought this for me while you were working so hard at your proof-piece, too. I saw that to-day; how beautiful it is. Oh, I am sure you are a great craftsman!"

She thought of him, then, and his concerns. Quintin had no need of more than this.

"You have not opened the casket, yet," he said with a smile. "It has a spring: stay, I will show it you." Their hands met and thrilled as he took it from her; and as she stooped to note more closely the delicate work of the fastening, a tress of her auburn hair lightly touched Quintin's cheek, and he shook all over as with an ague-chill.

"Oh, the fair clasps! Angels a praying one and a crowded one! And what's this? a briony wreath, and ah! yes—a sprig of my favourite tree. How did you know I loved the hawthorn?" she asked, suddenly turning her bright face full on him.

"I have seen you wear a spray in your bosom at mass," stammered Quintin. How often he had envied the happy blossom its sweet white resting-place.

"I shall love this missal, now, for the sake of its lovely clasps," she said, after a blushing pause; "I hated it at first. Martin Van der Goes flatters my father on his taste for painting, that he may pay his suit to me, but he is no painter, as his uncle Hugo was, nor ever will be, if he rise to be dean of the brotherhood of St. Luke's. How say you, Master Quintin?"

So Quintin knew he had a rival—but not in Alyt's heart; and of course he agreed with Alyt that Martin Van der Goes was no painter. And, in proof, Alyt turned to the illuminations in the poor man's missal, and how she did cut them up, and run them down, with a merry humour, and a malice that was not unmaidenly, and a light silver stream of laughter that ran through her ready words like a bright rivulet through a flower-garden.

But Quintin felt mad for love, and could only listen, with a pulse in his temples that throbbed like the bell in the belfry of St. Jacques, and a fire in his heart that burned to vent it elf in passionate speech, till he almost fainted with the effort of keeping it down.

They sat together so for near an hour—looking in each other's eyes, listening to each other's voices, reading in each other's affections—before the old man came up from his bales. And when he came Martin Van der Goes was with him, and accosted Alyt with the assurance of an accepted suitor. But Quintin cared not for the painter now: he and Alyt had exchanged no word of love; but, long ere the hour was done, the magic chain had been completed; the spark had run from heart to heart; and the marvellous message, "I love you," had been flashed to and fro, in one of those mysterious pulses that need no interpreting of words.

QUINTIN MATSYS TURNED PAINTER.

Months had passed away. Alyt and Quintin had met often. Sometimes it was at mass, when Quintin would wait at the porch, and offer Alyt the holy water from the bénitier, as she entered the cathedral, or the church of St. Jacques, where the Merchants' Guild had their chapel; sometimes it was at an ommegang, or procession — and scarce a week passed without one of the guilds repairing to their chapel on the day of the patron saint; or at a chamber of rhetoric entering the city in a lewd-jewel for one of those contests of poetry and wit which these chambers used to wage with each other, city against city; or at a match of two brotherhoods of crossbow-men trooping to their shooting-ground for a trial of skill. And both in rhyme contests of the free chambers, and in the crossbow matches, Quintin more than once was a successful competitor; and those were happy days for both.

The suit of Martin Van der Goes sped merrily with Master Van Twylt, but lamely with Alyt. The grave lo pressed his advances the more she intrenched herself behind coldness, or assailed him with all the weapons of womanly caprice, and the tricks and torments of a spoiled beauty's waywardness. Martin was on the point of abandoning the siege more than once, but the charm of Alyt's face, and perhaps the attractions of her father's thorins, drew him back again.

Quintin was now, as a free master of his guild, at liberty to take two apprentices, and carry on work in a forge of his own. Orders flowed in upon him, for his well-cover had won him reputation. The canons of St. Pe . . . at Louvain, gave him a commission for . . . dais. He designed for them a creeping vine, with lizards, and beetles, and birds, disporting among its leaves and clustering grapes. This spread his reputation beyond his own city; and from Malines, and Audenarde, and Ghent, and Bruges itself, custom came to him. Nay, the master of the works of the English King, having seen specimens of his skill brought home by British captains, commissioned him to execute the finer ironwork for St. George's Chapel, at Windsor, . . . some of it may be seen to this day.

He worked with the strength of many men, for he worked under the spur of love. He toiled to win honour and wealth enough to enable him to ask his lady's hand of her father.

The Smiths' Guild was far below the Guild of Merchants, it is true; but the distinction between artist and artisan was hardly known in those days, and his hope was not based on any . . . Van Twylt himself gave Quintin many orders, for his work showed the artistic invention which the old man loved; and while executing these orders Quintin enjoyed many happy days near his beloved, when they would count up their chances of coming at last together as man and wife, and weave the brightest day-dreams.

But the excessive toil told at last even on Quintin's strength. He fell away in flesh, his sleep went from him. Every day the forehammer seemed heavier to his hand. At last his power failed him altogether, and with bitter rage he found himself nailed to his . . . by fever. His old mother nursed him tenderly. The best aid of such physic as that time could command was procured. His old master Isendycke was never weary of kindly offices, and helpful service But the fever lay heavy upon him, and he wavered for some days between life and death. One day after a long fit of delirium, he came to himself, called his mother to his side, and, in a low hoarse whisper as a dying man, told her the story of his love, and bade her carry words of farewell to Alyt. His mother wept, and went and did his bidding. Then maidenly reserve and prudence was flung aside, and Alyt came to him, and the signs of our mutual . . . both to . . . and the touch of her tender hand charmed away delirium, and her loving voice worked in him more than all medicines; and from her first visit to his sick-bed the leech began to date his recovery, with much pride in the . . . a certain potion of adders' heads and . . . gallons under the new moon, and . . . d with . . . lows taken from under the eaves of a church, to which he attributed his patient's rapid return of strength and appetite. But, in this unlucky illness, the means Quintin had stored up were dissipated, and it promised to be long before he would recover strength to wield the hammer.

A year had closed . . . new on, and the . . . had put their stages in the Place de Beer, and under the canopy . . . and played their moralities (spelen van sinne), and their merry . . . in which the Brabanters and Flemings took such . . . Rederijkers and . . . reshee dancers danced their sword-dances in the . . . house, and the contre- . . . Passionists walked in solemn procession with their banners, and shrines, and blessed candles; and Quintin lay, still weak, on his bed, and heard their music and their chantings, and cursed his stars that he could not go forth and take part in the carnival amusements as he was wont.

In the same house with Quintin and his mother dwelt an honest master of Cardmakers' Guild, whose best resource was the trade at carnival time, by little pictures printed from rude wood-blocks of saints and legendary subjects, coarsely coloured, which the different orders of Lazarists, and other charitable religious bodies, were went to distribute, during their processions, to all who would accept them.

Worthy Jacob Vilt, the cardmaker, had now more of such work on his hands than he could get through, and, seeing Quintin sick and impatient of idleness, and moreover knowing his power of design, one day bethought . . . of ask . . . id in stencilling : his pictured . . . nival-cards. Quintin was . . . and impatient thoughts, and at once complied with the cardmaker's request: and besides, he owed him a return for much kindness shown during his long sickness. But he found it more amusing to design new figures than to stencil the old-fashioned subjects which Jacob Vilt bought him. He had little to learn but the simple manipulation of the water colours, for he had long been master of figure-drawing, having been wont to design for his ironwork, saints, and angels, and children, and animals, and the strange heraldic combinations made up of all together.

It should be borne in mind that there were no paid designers in those days, distinct from the workmen for whom they designed. Every workman was a designer in his own craft. The carpenter was a wood carver, the stonemason a sculptor, the blacksmith a modeller in iron. For a smith to turn worker now would imply a total change in . . . and under life of the . . . the shifting of an . . . from one material to another

Jacob Vilt soon found eager customers for Quintin's novel and graceful designs. Indeed the demand for them quite ruined the sale of his own outworn stencil figures. The confraternity of St. Luke—the great Guild of Painters—got wind of Jacob's productions, and moved before the Echevins of the town for an injunction to restrain . . . said, were pictures, and not stencillings—which alone the cardmakers have use and privilege to deal in.

So Jacob, pleadin . . . these his . . . this news of his guild's quarrel to Van Twylt, and brought him divers of the cards: and, as may be believed, Alyt treasured them in her . . .

. . . Jacob to furnish him, secretly (for this was an undoubted invasion of the painters' vested rights), with oil colours, pencils, panels, and varnishes, fitted for oil painting. He had acquaintances among the confraternity of St. Luke, who often paid him friendly visits, on the occasion of Jacob's dispute with the Painters' Guild. From them he gathered information as to their art; and, with the rapid invention of genius, turned every hint to profit, and made each step gained a point of departure for new knowledge.

His convalescence was slow; but when at length the time came that the leeches gave him leave to resume the hammer, behold! he found it pleasanter to use the brush. All this time, too, though he had scarcely contemplated a change of craft, a secret rivalry had been urging him. He had thought, "If I could but outpaint Martin Van der Goes;—if I could but win Alyt as a painter!" Love of art and love of Alyt thus both worked together; and one day, when his lady had paid him a secret visit he showed her, tremblingly, a portrait of herself, under the likeness of a shepherdess with a white veil of the Virgin Mother, and Alyt wept for very . . . at her lover.

You may still see that picture in the Antwerp Museum. It is a gracious face, and drawn with . . . and loving hand. Nose, mouth, and chin are full of . . . The eyebrows are lightly marked, but exquisite in line; and the grey eyes look softly out from under long dark lashes. The hair is of that warm auburn which best brings out the brilliancy of a fair complexion. The face wears an expression of sly seriousness; humour peeps from the dimples about the rosy mouth, half belying the gravity of the placid brow. No Flemish master has painted a more bewitching face.

"My Quintin," said Alyt, after a long and proud survey of the picture, "you are a painter—a better painter a thousand times than Martin Van der Goes. You have wooed me as a smith; as a painter you shall win me!"

V. THE PICTURE MARKET.

Flanders and Brabant at this time were the great centres of production and traffic in pictures. The painters' guilds in the different cities had frequent litigation as to the right of each to send pictures to the other's place of sale. To the ordinary markets only the painters of the city might send pictures; but to the great fairs all the guilds might send their works.*

The "Pand," † or picture market, of Antwerp, was one of the most frequented in the Low Countries. It was even now a large and handsome arcade, though it had not attained the style and dimensions which led Guicciardini to describe it, at a later period, as a splendid edifice. The confraternity of St. Luke had existed as an associated body of painters (with minor guilds of carvers, cardmakers, illuminators, glass painters, printers, and others dependent on it) from very near the beginning of the century, and was held in high honour, both among the guilds of the city and the other confraternities of painters in Brabant and Flanders. John Van Eyck had painted a picture for the confraternity in the year 1420, which the members still showed with pride. The Pand was, in fact, the exhibition-room of this Antwerp Academy, but in the simple fashion of those times was called by the name appropriate to its real character—a market. Here pictures were bought by foreign merchants as an article of merchandise, and by the natives of the Low Countries for the decoration of houses, corporation halls, and chapels. Van Twylt was a regular attendant at the picture-shows in the Pand, and Alyt and Quintin consulted long how to get Quintin's first picture shown there. As he was not a member of the painters' fraternity he could not hang it among their works on a market day. So he was obliged to wait for the Great Fair of St. Bartholomew, when painters from all countries were allowed to exhibit.

. . . the day of the fair came he may be sure that Alyt took care . . . er should . . . Quintin's picture. The old man was struck by its beauty, though he did not detect the likeness to his daughter. He expatiated on the smoothness and brilliancy of the colour; on the firmness and delicacy of the drawing. Alyt looked on with a placid face, but with a heart beating fast for joy, and hope, and pride; and Martin Van der Goes, one of whose pictures hung near, approached, to find to his disgust that the subject of Van Twylt's admiration was not his own work, but the anonymous head by its side. Quintin, leaning against a pillar hard by, heard and saw all.

At length Van Twylt wound up his laudatory lecture on the picture . . . and . . . the . . . as to the painter's name, and a question as to the price.

The custos could furnish no information. The picture had been hung by the painter, he supposed; but no name nor price had been given to him for entry in his book.

Van Twylt was about to depart unsatisfied, when Quintin stepped forward, and announced himself as the painter.

The old man started back, incredulous. "You—Master Quintin, a free master of the smiths . . . a painter? Do you put upon me?"

. . . mutely pointed to the picture, wrought on the hem of the Virgin's veil, in characters so nine as hardly to be made out by the . . . eye. It ran—

Quinte Metsys Screef Dit.,‡ MCCCCLXXXVI.

"And for the price," added Metsys, after the old man's astonishment had subsided into simple admiration, "it is yours without price—on one condition."

The old amateur was all eagerness to know what this condition might be.

"If I may call myself a suitor for the hand of your fair daughter!"

We have no space to tell how this audacious request was at length granted; nor how Quintin, before two years were out, was the happy husband of his beloved Alyt; nor how the confraternity of St. Luke stormed and refused to allow him the name of "Schulter," or the right to show his pictures in the Pand, or indeed to paint at all, until he became first an apprentice, and then a free master of the guild. His name appears on the liggers, or roll of the guild, as free master in 1491, and from four years after that date we find the names of his pupils: Arisen, in 1495; William Meulenbroee, in 1501; Edward Portugaleys, in 1504; and Henne Hoeckmakere, in 1510.

Nor need we say much of the pictures that he painted. His masterpiece is still treasured in the Museum at Antwerp. It was painted in 1511, as an altar-piece for the chapel of the Shrineworkers' or Carpenters' Guild, and the contract for this picture still stands on the books of the guild, telling how "Daniel Goessens and Jacques Cangoore, deans, André Jacob and Goumaire Van der Beke, sworn men; Wauther Imbrecht and Luke Ver Huelt, past deans of the Shrineworkers' Guild, in their name and that of their companions, have agreed, on the 28th of Aug., 1511, to pay a yearly sum of thirty great scellings of Brabant, for ever, to the use of Quintin and Katline Metsys, lawfully born children of Quintin Metsys, painter, and Alyt Van Twylt, his wife, and have pledged as security for the said payment, all the property, movable and immovable, of the said guild."

It is this picture which still shows us how great a painter Quintin was. It is made up of a centre panel, with external wings. The panel represents the dead body of the Saviour, lacerated with scourge and thorn and spear, emaciated with suffering and sorrow, with Joseph of Arimathea lifting the torn and livid head, and Nicodemus tenderly supporting the revered body under the arms, while Mary Salome holds the left hand. Near the body the Virgin Mother, supported by his beloved disciple, wrings her hands and sobs. But the crowning figure of the picture is the Magdalene, who, with a face convulsed by grief that has drained itself dry of tears, wipes with her long, loose hair the blessed feet that brought her good tidings, and which . . . pression of what we . . . save to call the . . . ground swell . . . of agony, we know of no face equal to this Magdalene's. All the muscles and nerves . . . skin seem to quiver with grief, though no tears are flowi . . . flow. In the background you see . . . of tombs, . . . and lighted; and far away the narrow tableland of arid rock, where the three crosses rise against the sky, with the robbers still hanging on the trees of infamy; two women kneeling at the cross from which the Saviour has been taken down: one of the executioners men carrying away the ladder, and two more sitting down one eating the other shaking a pebble from . . . of the shutters . . . the triptych is the . . . of Herodias; on the other St. John the Evangelist, in the cauldron of boiling oil, before Domitian.

Besides this great work, in the same collection, are a Head of our Saviour, and the portrait of Alyt, as the Virgin, which we have already described.

Our readers all know Quintin's picture of the "Misers Weighing their Gold," at Windsor that hard and unlovely chapter from real life. Did old Kerwyn Van Twylt sit for either of these shrewd, wrinkled faces?

But enough of cataloguing. Quintin lived to be a happy husband, and a great painter. His Alyt bore him five children Peter, and James, and John (all of whom were painters), Quintin-Paul, and Katherine.

In 1508 he lost his beloved and loving wife. That he married a second Catherine Hyems need not surprise us.

His first experience of marriage had been too happy: his children stood too much in need of maternal care to allow him to remain a widower. His second wife bare him six children, and in the winter of 1530-31 he fell asleep, fuller of honours than of years. He was buried in the cemetery of the Carthusian convent, and around the stone placed over his grave was written a Flemish inscription to this effect:

The burial place of QUINTIN METSYS: in his life a smith, who afterwards became a famous painter. He died in 1523 *

A hundred years later, in an enlargement of the convent burial-ground, the coffin was disinterred, when Cornelis Van der Ghoest, a lover of the painter's works, transported his remains to a spot within a few feet of the cathedral tower. On the stone in the pavement was written:—

M. Q. M.
Obiit 1529.

In the cathedral wall opposite was a medallion of the painter; and below, with the emblems of his two callings, this inscription on a black slab:—

QUINTINO METSIS,
Incomparabili artis pictori,
Admirantium gratuque posteritas
Anno post obitum
Secundi
CIↃ IↃ C XXIX. posuit,
Connubialis amor de Mulebire fecit Apellem

This slab was afterwards removed to the Museum, where it now . . . under the head of . . . This . . . was . . . decided to preserve . . .

CHRIST ON THE BANKS OF THE JORDAN. BY MURILLO.—FROM LOUIS PHILIPPE'S GALLERY.

IF the Spanish painters are generally defici . . . quer must always be excepted, it cannot be . . . that, in intensity of religious expression, they take a very high rank. It would be superfluous on our part to say anything of the career of Murillo, or in praise of those tender and pleasing qualities which make his works greatly sought after for the most expensively-constituted collections. The peculiarity of his fame is a truthful observation of nature, but for his . . . subjects that choice truth which is revealed only to the soul.

Few subjects not of an active dramatic character are more finely suggestive to the religious painter than Christ on the Banks of the Jordan. The active portion of his earthly career was just beginning. The locality was the bank of that river which separates the barren mountainous Judea from the smiling and umbrageous lands of Gilead. The man who cried in the desert and made straight the way of the Lord is at the moment of the recognition of the "Lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world." "Repent ye," John had said to unwilling ears, "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Those who have been appointed to speak the words of truth have generally been strangers to purple and fine linen; but we think, in spite of raiment of camel's hair and the shaggy locks of the wayfarer of the desert, Murillo has seized the moral elevation of the forerunner of Jesus with all the feeling and simplicity of a great master. "Art thou Elias?" said the Levites to John. "I am not," said the harbinger. The spirit descending from Heaven like a dove, and abiding on him, was to be the signal by which John should recognise the bodily presence of him the latchets of whose shoes he declared himself not worthy to unloose.

There is no action in this picture; there are no simple Hebrews crowding on the steps of John to hear the first notes of the Song of Deliverance; no Sadducees insidiously pretending belief, in order . . . with quick recognition, as a . . . of . . . the ceremonies of the temple, and forgetful of the living God. The field of the artist is much more limited as regards action: but it is a great moment for a great master of expression, such as Murillo. "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me, for he was before me." Christ is a noble figure in pose as well as in drapery: the countenance, unfurrowed, as in the Passion, is replete with divine benignity.

This picture was purchased from a Canon of the Cathedral of Seville by the late Mr. Standish, who, in a pet, left his gallery to Louis Philippe, from a fancied misappreciation by the British Government. On the subsequent sale of these pictures in London, the subject of our Engraving was purchased by Mr. Townend, for £2000, at Messrs. Christie's.

THE GRAND ALTAR OF THE CATHEDRAL OF SEVILLE †

IN no part of Europe is ecclesiastical architecture more magnificent and picturesque than in Spain. This has arisen from the mixture of Saracenic and Gothic styles, and the vast influx of wealth from the New World after its discovery. These means, combined with the ardent and steady faith of the Spaniards in the doctrines of the Church of Rome, have had for their result a multitude of religious edifices, constructed at enormous expense, and even older constructions decorated and finished with the most grandiose profusion.

The subject of our present Engraving is the Grand Altar of the Cathedral of Seville, with its magnificent Gothic Retablo. We mean what is commonly understood by the term Gothic when applied to architecture in England, for the architecture of the Goths in Spain was Barbaric Romanesque, not dissimilar to our early Norman, with its round arch and chevron ornament. This retablo, or screen, is divided into forty-four compartments, designed in 1482 by Dancart, and finished in 1550. The carvings represent scenes from the New and Old Testament. The decorations and tabernacle of the altar itself are of a much more modern date, and, including the images that surmount them, representing the Virgin and Child St. Lucy Apostles, are of massive silver. Before the French invasion of Spain, all the steps leading up to the altar were also covered with a massive plate of silver; it, however, propitiated Marshal Soult so that the altar-piece was saved.

Under the canopy and just under the crown the spectator may perceive a cylinder surrounded by a glory: within this is the Host used for Grand Mass on the Corpus Domini and other peculiar festivals . . . Beneath . . . but . . . sander, and the Host in a tabernacle covered with jewels, is displayed, the concealed light falling from above and causing the precious stones . . . in a peculiarly brilliant manner. On the extreme left of our . . . against the magnificent reja or ornamental grating, our readers may perceive an enormous wax candle and candelabrum, twenty-five feet high. This is the pious bequest of a wealthy person, and said to be the largest in the world the revenue being sufficient for the constant renewal of the wax and, to prevent it running over, . . . has to mount up on a lofty ladder and bale out the liquid wax . . . kept for the purpose.

As is well known the Cathedral of Seville (the largest and finest in Spain) was built on the site of a mosque of the Arabs of Andalusia, and erected in the twelfth century, pulled down in the beginning of the fifteenth, rebuilt with magnificence and opened for Divine service in 1519—that is to say, half a generation after the discovery of America and the conquest of Granada. The semi-barbarous Arabs, during their first rapid conquests in the centuries that followed the Hegira employed Christian builders for their mosques. But afterwards the tables were turned; and, on the liberation of Spain from Moslem thraldom, it was the skilled Moslem workmen who were the decorators of many of the churches of the south of Spain. Hence the picturesque Saracenic character of much of the ornament of churches of the beginning of the Christian period, particularly in the patterns of inter-columniations, and cast or carved arabesque copes. The height of

* See on this subject a curious passage in the interesting work of Messrs. J. Crowe and Cavalcaselle, entitled "The Early Flemish Painters." (Murray p. 311

† This word is, probably, a corruption of the German Balm, "walk." It appears in the form "Pawn" as the name of the walk over the old Exchange.

‡ "Quinte Metsys painted this." This inscription still stands on one of the pictures or the master.

* This year, it will be seen varies from that given above on the authority of the cathedral archives.

† Painted at Seville, in 1833, by David Roberts, R.A., for Mr Frank Hall Standish, of Duxbury Hall, Lancashire

the nave of the Cathedral of Seville is a hundred and forty-five feet. The magnificent railing or gratework at the left of our print was designed by Sancho Munos, in 1518.

Previous to the French invasion the Cathedral of Seville abounded in valuable pictures, several of the best of which found their way to Marshal Soult's collection. Rare Murillos were concealed by the chapter, but soon brought to light at the mention of the name of the Provost Marshal. A visitor to the Marshal's collection in Paris, where two such Murillos were hanging, educed from the old soldier the pleasant observation that these pictures, by becoming his property, saved the lives of two estimable ecclesiastics.

The illustration we present to our readers is due to the pencil of Mr. David Roberts, the most successful of our painters of Gothic architecture, and who, when he chooses to take the trouble to finish a picture, is in his own line equalled by no artist, British or foreign, modern or ancient. The subject of our print was purchased at the sale of Louis Philippe's gallery by Messrs. Gambart, for three hundred guineas.

"LANDSCAPE AND HAWKING PARTY," BY BERGHEM.

So far back as the age of Charles I. Joachim Sandrart, the Vasari of Northern Art, remarked, during his visit to England, that the taste of the wealthy showed itself chiefly in the construction of noble palaces and the collecting, at great expense, valuable works of art. It was, in fact, at the close of the sixteenth and beginning of the seventeenth century, that England was covered with these noble Renaissance structures which are still the admiration of foreigners. Wren and his school influenced construction for a generation or two; then came a century of the vilest and baldest taste. But we appear again to have got into a nobler architectural vein, as Pall-mall and its neighbourhood testify. It is only a nobleman of colossal fortune that can erect an Italian palazzo on the costly sites facing the Parks. To such means Lord Ellesmere adds not only the refinement of taste, which has caused valuable additions to be made to the old Bridgewater Collection, but the true liberality which renders his noble collection accessible to the art-loving portion of the public.*

The subject of our Illustration from the Dutch portion of the Bridgewater Gallery is a Hawking Party, by Berghem, one of the most pleasing masters of the seventeenth century, although occasionally falling into a sickly feminine prettiness in his colour. In this picture the subject is very finely chosen—a wide flowing river; the arches of an old Roman-looking bridge; a picturesque ruined tower on a rock, with mountain scenery in the distance, and the foreground enlivened by figures, cattle, and dogs, produce at once a cheerful and exhilarating sensation in the mind of the spectator. The composition of this picture shows, in our opinion, great learning and taste: all the component parts accord with each other; and the distribution of light is particularly agreeable. Hawking was a favourite subject with Berghem, the two Bothis, Pynaker, and Wouvermans, for it enabled these painters to enliven their landscapes with the best and sleekest description of horses, and the most elegant costumes of both cavalier and dame. This pastime is almost extinct in Europe, but is still kept up in two countries, Holland and Turkey, and attempts are now being made to revive it in England by a society constituted for that purpose.

* With full admission of Mr. Barry's genius, we think the park front of Bridgewater House to be a mistake. An elevation that would have been massive and noble in a street the breadth of Pall-mall is altogether deficient in the bold relief requisite for an esplanade frontage.

GERHARD DOUW'S PORTRAIT OF HIMSELF.

GERHARD DOUW'S PORTRAIT OF HIMSELF.

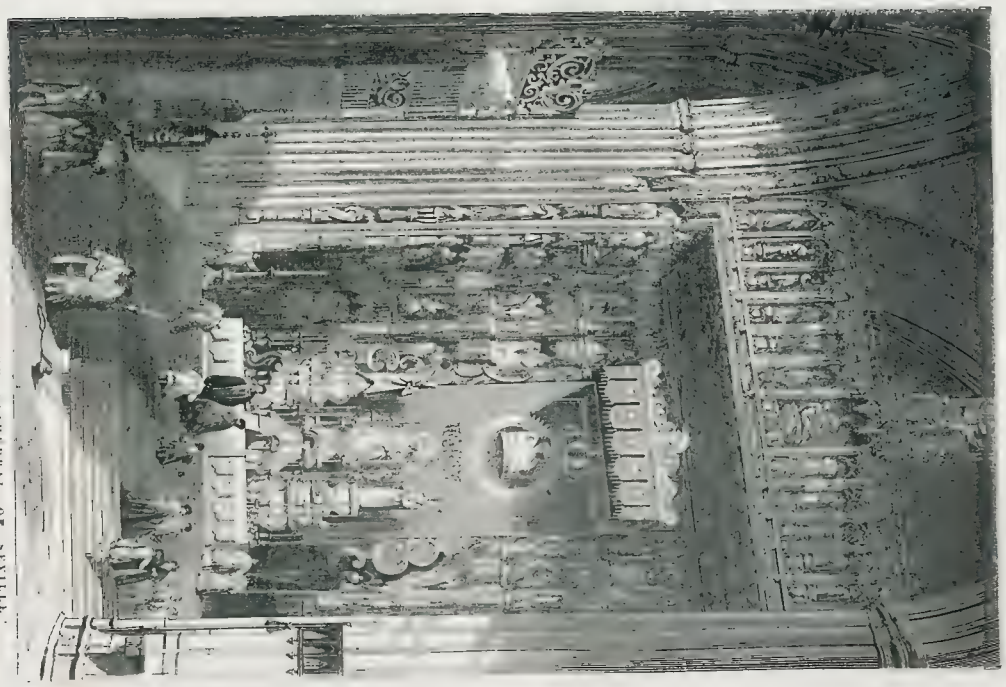
Of the various pictures transmitted to us by the Dutch of the seventeenth century, not the least interesting are their own portraits, with representations of the rooms they inhabited and the furniture and paraphernalia with which they were surrounded. The most interesting picture of this class is the celebrated one by Teniers, representing himself showing his studio to the Archduke Albert and his Archduchess. Taking a high rank in such productions, we must also notice Gerhard Douw's portrait of himself, seated in his study in full gala costume, booted and spurred—which, by-the-by, does not exactly agree with the violin in his hand and the book of black letter lore open before him. In the background hang cloak and sword, a beer-barrel and a pair of globes complete the heterogeneous collection suggestive of Gerhard's various accomplishments in music and literature, and of a want of that severe congruity which is not to be looked for in the productions of the domestic painters of Holland. They could execute admirably, but taste, or the art of congruity in selection, was often denied them. But, whatever may be said against them in this respect, they were great masters in the art of painting, and in colour, clair-obscure, and beautiful finish, Gerhard Douw is, perhaps, the first of his class. His humour, too, was without the coarseness of Jan Stein and Brower. Witness, for instance, the "School by Candlelight," one of the gems of the Amsterdam collection. Mr. Ruskin contemns all this school, as embodying no high thought, and pointing no moral; but to this writer, great as he is, we oppose a greater; for Aristotle himself has said that able imitation in the arts always gives pleasure, for human nature is so constituted. For one man who will fully appreciate a Fra Angelico, or a Francia, there are a hundred who will derive pleasure from Gerhard Douw's literal transcripts of Dutch life and manners as they existed two centuries ago.

"LANDSCAPE AND HAWKING PARTY."—PAINTED BY BERGHEM.—IN THE BRIDGEWATER GALLERY

"CHRIST ON THE BANKS OF THE JORDAN."—SEE PAGE 218.
PAINTED BY MURILLO.—FROM LORD ASHBURTON'S COLLECTION.



"THE GRAND ALTAR OF THE CATHEDRAL OF SEVILLE."
PAINTED BY DAVID ROBERTS, R.A.—SEE PAGE 217.

A WIFE AT A VENTURE.

CHAPTER I.

LET me solicit the reader to permit him or her self to be introduced into the studio of a lady, who, eschewing profit, and, regardless of fame, which makes itself audible through a very demonstrative trumpet, had for many years devoted herself to the art of painting. To portraitists Miss Daubigny had restricted the exercise of her pencil, chiefly she made it known, because she abominated nature, but rarely (let me communicate that knowledge), because even a tolerable likeness of that old dame, in any one of her infinite variety of aspects, was what she never could hit off to her own satisfaction. For, not to mention linear or interlineal, real or ideal, perspective distances that meltaway in the horizon, &c.—a landscape is nothing without some animation, brute or human, in it; and cattle at pasture, cows ruminating, sheep grazing, chickens feeding, boys fishing, students reading at waterfalls, and so on, were stubborn impossibilities to her; nay, she had never attained an old man with his old woman in a red cloak, toiling in the distance along a path leading (if it did lead) to that church—the provoking old toads!—she would have nothing to say to them.

Now, no such difficulties beset her when she sought to transfer to canvas the human countenance. All men and women have noses, mouths, and eyes; and these are all more or less alike. There are exceptions, indeed; and if one of them found his way to Miss Daubigny's studio, he was extremely welcome. Monconious men, heroes defeatured in the wars, and gentlemen born to confound the theory of nasology, were godsends to her. In the pursuit of this department of the art, then, she had provided for many a home a counterfeit presentment of the heads of the family, such as sometimes exceedingly perplexed the parents, and created the astonishment, or excited the harmless mirth, of the younger branches, who, when their turn came, had some difficulty in identifying themselves or each other.

At the moment that we are observing Miss Daubigny, she is in a state of irritable impatience, evidently in momentary expectation of the arrival of a young gentleman, a little behind his time, whose half-finished portrait she is getting at with a hunt brow, which, to the stranger, might have betokened malevolence, but which is, in reality, a manifestation of hyperartistic scrutiny; and now she begins, first with a pointed, and then with a circuitously waving brush, to tax the original in his representative with a shameful want of punctuality, and with a callous indifference to the convenience of others, whose precious time is thus frittered away. But the entrance, at this instant, of the young gentleman dispelled Miss Daubigny's rising ill-humour; and, with a smile of welcome and a hasty shake of the hand—intimating, thereby, that art must forthwith be attended to—she directed him to an elevated chair

"I must beg your pardon, my dear aunt, for detaining you so long," said Singleton, arranging his hair in a form that, a few days previously, had been assigned for it by Miss Daubigny, "but I have been detained in the City, on very particular business."

"Raising money, I suppose, at an exorbitant interest?" observed Miss Daubigny, mixing her colours.

"No—not quite brought to that, yet," returned the nephew, smiling. "But how came you to know that such transactions were usually managed east of Temple-bar?"

"Your uncle, the Colonel," replied the artist, "has often told us of what he called the struggles of his early days. He was a remarkably fine young man (that likeness of him by Lawrence is very faulty, by-the-by, in many points)—but he was one of that class of insects who exist upon paper. He had the name for them, but I forget it; and used to say, that if his signatures to acceptances had been placed in a continuous line, they would have reached from the Queen's Bench to the Fleet Prison."

"He needed no such track to find his way from one to the other," believed, remarked Singleton.

"He did not; constantly intramural, as he called it, till he married my sister, who brought him a little fortune, the small remains of which have descended to you. They need no track, I suspect, to find their way after the rest."

"I wish from my heart," said Singleton, earnestly, "there were no such medium of exchange in the world as money. The sooner I get rid of mine, I think, the better."

"That you may begin upon mine, I suppose?" observed Miss Daubigny, briskly. "No," she continued, labouring with painful minuteness at an eye, "never shall that light upon a farthing of mine. Husks for the prodigal; beans and bacon, ducks and green peas for the penitent. Why what on earth would you do without money?"

"I want something on which to expend and to expand my energies," replied Singleton; "I want to earn money."

"Well, go and do it, then. What hinders?"

"The cursed money I have. No, no; I will say with old Lear, 'Off, off, ye lendings! I will struggle to wrestle with the world.'"

"I'll tell you what, Mr. Edward Singleton," observed his aunt, facing about, and with folded arms constructing a sentence at once laconic and impressive, "you will soon bring yourself, Sir, to this extremity; you will be compelled either to sue a rich heiress or the parish authorities."

"The latter were preferable," returned Singleton, laughing. "What! marry for money! Turn the Rotunda of the Bank of England into the Temple of Hymen! Ask the clergyman to complete what the stockbroker had begun! Not to be thought of. Why, I couldn't look a shilling in the face that had been got by such means. One might almost expect the lions, Scotch and English, on the reverse side of the coin, to spring out of it and ear to tatters such a pecuniary Pyramus."

"And the Irish harp to raise a dirge over the grave of sentiment. Very fine, Edward, very fine. Then you mean to marry for love?"

"I mean to marry a girl, if I can win her, who will love me. You know how I hate the absurd—nay, worse—the soul-degrading conventionalities of society. I'll have nothing to do with 'em. I long to be really independent—to be an active member of society. Toil is healthful; labour is sweet; and I can conceive no greater reward of it than the approving smile of a pretty woman who loves you; and such a woman, whatever her station in life may be, shall be my wife."

Miss Daubigny was somewhat flighty in a few particulars, but she was generally esteemed a woman of good sense, and she had seen a great deal of what constituted her world. She could not help thinking, that her nephew had been uttering a great deal of folly in a few words.

"I'll lay Vandyke to a Sir Peter Lely," she said suddenly, darting an inquisitive glance at him, "that you have fallen head over ears in love with some penniless, handsome girl, who has imbued you with those noisy-tasty notions. Oh! you may shake your head, and that heightened colour would be useful to me, were it permanent. Well, it's no concern of mine. I hope it's not some low-born person? If so—But it may have no regard for the honour of your family, why should I trouble myself, who am only related to you as having been the sister-in-law of your uncle?"

"Just so, my dear madam; and as my etymological tree has many gnats upon it, and sons that have strange ideas, I don't know why I should be one of them."

"It is mine," declaimed Miss Daubigny (this was a favourite theme of hers), "has borne no fruit that even eagles dare peck at. My genealogical tree has been fenced round with ancestral spears; and while I am its proprietress, none of the vulgar herd shall approach to browse upon its leaves;—and—and—what shall I say?—to nibble the bark off. But you may go now; I have done with you to-day. Come on Thursday. Adieu!"

By no means sorry to be released, Singleton descended from his chair, as red his face should seem, and went on his way, marvelling how such a passion as pride of birth should possess people otherwise of good understanding. "A strange infatuation!" he concluded.

On her part, Miss Daubigny stood before the portrait of her nephew for some minutes in a state of deep abstraction. Her lips moved; she was making comments to herself. At length she lifted it from the [illegible] wall. "Now, said she, "I'll give the finishing touch to the old Doctor."

CHAPTER II.

HARDLY without the boundaries of the city of London, and even within the City itself, there are many arched openings, scarcely if at all, larger than a doorway, that lead to courts—to the right or left, as the case may be—which contain cottages on either side, with miniature gardens in front, chiefly devoted to the growth of the red daisy, the wall-flower, the nasturtium, and the scarlet bean. In one of these courts, and in one of such cottages, not far from Upper Whitecross-street, dwelt a widow and her daughter.

Mrs Lorkin had been the mother of several children, who had died in their infancy; and, when she lost her husband, little Anne was the only one remaining to her. The child had never been an occasion of much expense to the widow. Very pretty, and, though gentle, with a frank and confiding animation in her manner, she had been taken under the protection of two ladies in succession, who had first been attracted by her appearance, and next interested by her amiable ingenuousness. By the former of these ladies she had been sent to a daily school, and had been treated with all the kindness that affection and benevolence could suggest; but, from the latter, who was a much older woman, of greater experience, and of far higher acquirements, she received that wise instruction and moral counsel which fitted her for the station in life she was in all probability to occupy: from her likewise, insensibly to both, she derived a certain formality of speech and precision of manner which sometimes enhance the charm of a beauty, but never so much so, perhaps, as when we see an innate gaiety of disposition lurking beneath them.

It had been averred by Mrs. Roberts, while Anne was yet very young, that the girl was as genteel as one of her own children. And that it would be a sad pity that such well-shaped and delicate hands should be spoiled. She thought, accordingly, that it would never do that she should be sent into the world as a maid-servant. The more sedate Mrs. Selwyn was of the same opinion, but for very different reasons. She feared that Anne was not fran ed to bear up against any serious and repeated trials of her sensibility, if she had not enough pride; and that her experience of unconcern might not, in the meantime, do her any great service. She would, therefore, recommend, and should be happy to assist in, her being taught a little of everything, which would be good lady thought there was no harm to be refuted or realised during her lifetime; and Mrs Lorkin was left to her own devices, which were to bearing in due remembrance all that had been dissuaded and recommended by her two patronesses—that her girl should do as her mother had done before her, get her livelihood as well as she could, in the best path of life her parents could assign to her. Ann, Lorkin, then, was put apprentice to a dressmaker, that being a calling not quite so objectionable, very little spoiling the hands, and not more fraught with temptation than any other with which Mrs. Lorkin was acquainted. "Besides," as she said, "she had confidence in her Anne;" "it was as girls were inclined, and people must take their chance."

Let not this poor woman be hastily censured. She solved the knotty points of casuistry as well as she could. It was her opinion which necessity and experience had confirmed—that this is not a world to think in, but to work in; and that if men and women were constantly employed, they would neither do nor come to any harm. She was a good mother, as she best knew how to be one, and would have broken her heart had any evil befallen her daughter.

To say that Anne was the pride of the court in which she and her mother resided, would be to pay a compliment to human nature which my respect for truth forbids me to bestow. Some were now about twenty, and possessed no ordinary share of beauty—a qualification which the mass portion of that rough community will know how to appreciate—accompanied, as it was, by a modest civility and gentle obligingness. But these were accessories which some of the fair inhabitants of the court set their faces against as innovations on the old-established order of things—as affected airs to set off a pretty face; whilst others especially commended Anne as a well-behaved young woman, but ignored her pretty face altogether. By none was she accounted perfection. Venus, with her creaking sandals, is an old story, of which we are frequently reminded

One evening, when Anne returned from her work, she did not, as she was accustomed to do, throw her bonnet on a chair and her shawl on the back of it, and forthwith sit down to the supper which was always in readiness for her, but she went to her drawers which stood in the room, opened one of them, and took out her second best gown, while she very particularly inspected in all manner of lights its communicable by a very little additional care.

"What in the world is the girl fiddling about?" demanded Mrs. Lorkin impatiently. "Come to your supper, do."

"Mother," said Anne, in the clearest and most measured tone imaginable, but blushed exceedingly as she spoke, "a young gentleman is coming to see me to-night."

"A young gentleman! what is the girl dreaming about? A young man, you mean. Young gentleman, indeed! I didn't know you were keeping company with any one. You ought to have told me."

"Yes—and so I intended; but——However, you will see him presently; I expect him in a quarter of an hour. Well, you may look in that way, mother, but I'm sure he'll come. Do let me get my dress on;" and Anne hastened up the stairs, which had their commencement in a back corner of the room.

"Young gentleman, indeed! a young gentleman him, if he means any harm to my girl," muttered Mrs Lorkin, hastily returning the supper to a cupboard, shaking the green baize of the little round table, sweeping the hearth, and taking down two bright brass candlesticks which ornamented the chimney-piece, and putting two "long sixes" into them. "Well, but it looks like the fair in the young man, to call upon Anne at her own home, where, I dare to say, he knows before this there's a mother to look sharp after him."

When the daughter re-appeared, flushed with almost tremulous excitement, and as neat as wax in her dress, starting at every sound in the court, the old lady could not help thinking that she was no wonder; any young fellow, gentle or simple, should think a vacancy to such a pretty creature. But her natural pride soon gave place to an apprehension which grew out of it: she could not help thinking, likewise, that Anne was a little farther upon than was desirable.

A tap at the door with the knuckles, followed by a raising of the latch, caused Mrs. Lorkin suddenly to drop her hands into her lap, and to stare straight before her with all the demure might of which she was capable; and Anne sprang forward, and placing her two hands in the right hand of the stranger, welcomed him with a word, being too bashful to introduce him to her mother; he would think she did it so artificially."

Mrs Lorkin, seeing this position of affairs, arose, and dropping a short curtsey, said, "Pray, Sir, be seated." The gentleman was well; bade him take a seat, and asked him what might his name be?

"My name is Edward Singleton, Ma'am, and, having met your daughter several times——"

"Five times," faltered Anne.

"Five times—you are perfectly right—I have come, not by invitation, certainly, but at my own entreaty, to see her at her own home. You are very kind. Thank you. I will do myself the pleasure of coming frequently. I would much rather see her here than elsewhere."

This was satisfactory enough, so far as it went—I was speaking up somewhat like a man; and the old lady [illegible]. She could now really assent to the remark that it had been quite a fine day for the time of year; that the days were drawing out; that the court did look quite countried in the summer time. These topics being soon exhausted, no more others immediately presenting themselves, Mrs Lorkin responded to a significant summons from her daughter, and withdrew with her to a washhouse hardly larger than the copper it contained, in which a brief consultation took place.

"It mustn't be, girl, mother; it mustn't, indeed," [illegible] "brandy's the least we can offer him."

"Brandy! why, it's like drinking gold, child," remonstrated Mrs. Lorkin. A compromise was at length effected: rum, with a lemon, and a few lumps, would answer the purpose exceedingly well. As Singleton stood with his left hand between his fingers, while Anne passed under the low doorway, he thought he had never in his life seen a more graceful bend of the neck; and, as he watched her through the obscurity, sorely no [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] feelings with a spontaneousness seldom approved by polite society. Singleton could never have been made a wise man; nay, he has never encouraged habits of ordinary reflection. He had imagined to himself the triumph of surmounting poverty by the exercise of vigorous energies, but he had never pictured the sordid struggles, the soul-vexing cares and disquietudes that must be made and suffered before independence may be achieved. This was his mistake; but he never meditated a greater into which a man of more understanding might have fallen—he never seriously thought that, by qualifying a woman for a higher station than she is born to, we unfit her for returning to it.

And now the accomplishments must be looked after, and professors of them were soon found. Curious and interesting to the young husband was it to watch the ardour with which Anne entered upon her studies, and to observe the resolute perseverance with which she pursued them. The progress she made appeared in his eyes marvellous. It almost seemed to him as though at some former period she had learned French and been taught music—that it was an effort of memory to recall, not of the mind to acquire. Sometimes he took her to a play to the races, or to other recreations, where, if he met a friend, a nod of recognition would suffice; but he himself mixed with society as heretofore, and, perhaps, had he been taxed with being a married man, he would have denied it. But no insinuation ever reached his ear of that kind, or of another, which might more naturally have been anticipated. Thoughtless though he was, he was not trifeling; and had he known that the beautiful girl who sat by his side in public places was accounted one of those by whom forms and ceremonies are held in slight estimation, he would have felt that he had done small honour to the woman he loved, by making her his wife on such terms. But what he did not see was at length shown him.

One day, about two years after his marriage, he brought home, unexpectedly, a young gentleman to dine with him, whom he introduced to Anne as Mr. Bourchier, his schoolfellow at Harrow, and his intimate friend at the University. This young gentleman was of very soft and gentle manners, and was highly accomplished, having resided for a time in almost every capital of Europe. There was something at once deferential and confiding in the tone of Mr. Bourchier's conversation, which was chiefly of a sentimental character, although it was couched in terms, and bore reference to feelings which, or rather the evil actions of which, Anne could not quite comprehend. She soon began to take a liking to him (for he now came frequently), and to feel a pity for him; thinking the young and interesting gentleman was deeply attached to some lady who was unable to require his love—which, to judge from his interpretation of the passion, was of a singularly refined and world-renouncing nature. At length he ventured to bring some French novels containing, as he said, an exposition of the spiritual instincts and impulses which impel the soul to seek happiness in congenial natures. An attentive perusal of these performances, he averred, would silence or satisfy certain objections which Anne, in all simplicity, had urged. The prejudices of custom and education, with these helps to their dissolution, would melt away in Mrs. Singleton's pure intellect, and free exercise would be given to her ardent sensibilities.

Never was young and accomplished gentleman, who had seen all the courts of Europe, and assayed his vows in each, and found them genuine and current, more mistaken in his life. The doctrines here propounded, Anne did not follow to their consequences: it was enough for her to see that restraints and ordinances which she had been taught to reverence, were ridiculed as futile, or stigmatised as tyrannous; and that what was at one time represented as so stationary, that she needed no lies, and at another, as so fugacious, that none could bind her. Surely, Mr. Bourchier had been making an unwarrantable experiment upon her sense and [illegible]

"I could be almost inclined to scold you for leaving these volumes with me," said she, as she returned them to him, "but that I believe you intended to pay me a compliment, which, however," with a gentle smile, "is by no means a happy one. But such pictures, repulsive as they are, serve to show that the worst would willingly retain a character for virtue, even while they fulfil none of the conditions prescribed by it."

"You are quite right," replied Bourchier, with a bland sneer, "there are such people, Mrs. Singleton," laying a strong emphasis on the name; and he proceeded in the most delicate manner imaginable to insinuate that the lady with whom he had the pleasure of conversing might, by some plain spoken people, be instanced as a case in point. The sentimental young gentleman was gone, and the heartless and insolent profligate stood confest. It was impossible to mistake the unmanly insult. Anne flew to the door, which she flung open.

"I heard your step upon the stairs, Edward; you are come in time. You will see Mr. Bourchier to the door."

"What is the matter?" began Singleton; but the glowing face of his wife, and the white and unpourtrayable aspect of his friend, told him enough for the present. It was now [illegible] time before he returned to the room.

"You have given me, Anne," he said, "but I am never going myself to [illegible] am compelled to accept the fellow's apology, which I strongly advised me to convey to you. He is confined to bed, and left here to arrange his affairs at home. He would not have insulted you but for the [illegible] you were my wife."

This was a [illegible] pride; the more that it was totally unexpected.

"Where, Mr. Bourchier no more?" she quitted.

"Of course. These mistakes are excessively unpleasant and annoying."

"——And degrading," thought Anne; but she pursued the subject no further. For was not the kind, the good-natured, the generous fellow—her own Edward—already enough vexed and irritated, and all on her account; and had he not, ever since their marriage, sought to render her presentable to his friends, to whom he would one day introduce her, if he had the means, which one or two recent hints from him had prepared her to doubt.

"We will never speak of this again—will we?" she said, and kissed him. "It will be different by-and-by, won't it?" and she went to her music, and remembered the song she had sung on the night of his first visit to the court, when her mother had preceded her to bed, and left her to arrange her hair for the night, by the glass in the little parlour. And she recalled her dreams on that night—dreams which the morning's sun had derided, by flinging the image of the diamond pance on the floor before her—bright, but chequered. It was no such thing. Her dreams, until now, had been fulfilled. Her married life had not been chequered.

What was Singleton's thoughts on this occasion? "By Jove," said he—recovering himself, after awhile, "this girl makes me feel extremely humble to myself when we have filled ourselves with the liquid, almost to the dropsical point of repletion, when the stream has been diffused, when the patient shall have determined, then—then, indeed"—and Mr. Twigg made it apparent by remarkably felicitous action that—"then, and then only, the whole world might come with their buckets, and carry away as much as they pleased."

"I don't particularly know Twigg, except by reputation," observed Scaglola, as the two stood in Cornhill, about to separate; "but he is reckoned a first rate man. A mere child as to knowledge of the world, though—but he's right this time. I can't tell what he'll do with all his money when he gets it."

Neither did Singleton precisely know what he should do with his own a like contingency; but he debated that matter in his mind as he walked home, building castles in the air (without bricks), and in all manner of styles of atmospheric architecture. A few days after wards, having turned the thing over in his mind till it had become smooth from the friction, he decided on parting with his remaining hundreds, and did so, receiving the congratulations and best wishes of Scaglola, whom he met on the street after leaving Mr. Twigg (who, by-the-by, was at this moment vaulting over his desk, and performing other unphilosophical gambols). Scaglola, however, bade him recollect (and it was indeed a fact), that he had never recommended him to enter upon this venture, but he thought his friend had made a very safe and in all probability, a highly profitable investment of his money.

From this day forth, Singleton paid frequent visits to the City, to learn what progress the great discovery was making. The replies were highly satisfactory and encouraging when he could light upon Mr. Twigg; but that gentleman was at last so often at the Isle of Dogs superintending the works, and it was uncertain, at other times, whether he would be at the office that day, that Singleton had many opportunities of making familiar to his memory the mournful faces that are always to be seen on 'Change between eleven and two, and of realising it. fact that nowhere are steaks and chops cooked in such perfection as within sound of the chimes.

At length the denouement was no longer to be delayed. Calling one morning at the office, Singleton found the boy-clerk, who had had nothing to do for some time past, but perfect himself in love-letter writing, picking his teeth with straws drawn from his stool, and in trying how many times in an hour he could pitch an old Directory into the letter-box. He found that young man in a state of high excitement—having to his "eleven times seven makes seventy-seven"—had 25 lbs. taken due to him. Making further and fearful inquries of the ugliest youth, he elicited that Mr. Twigg had been hotly called for by other gentlemen besides Mr. Singleton; that tradesmen from Low Layton, and the livery-stable keeper from Bishopsgate-street had been there, up to noon; and that, "Please, Sir, Mr. Daniel Forrester is arter him, but is not yet got hold on him."

This was so dismal an announcement, that Singleton may be pardoned for not having entered into the feelings of the boy, which, to say the truth, were not to be assuaged by sympathy (although he had not obtained a grain of it from the recent inquirers at the office), but by contributions towards the reduction of the "eleven times seven"—a financial operation he was particularly anxious to compass, but was now hopeless of effecting. Singleton hurried to a tavern, and did not return home till a late hour.

"Well, Anne, my dear, totally ruined, by Jove!" said he abruptly, as he entered the room. "Ay, you may stare, as I did when the boy told me; but the sight to stare at now would be the image of Mr. Twigg." And with unnatural levity he proceeded to unfold all that he had picked up in relation to the absconding of that person.

Anne had grievously feared all along that her husband would lose his money, not because she doubted Twigg's integrity, but because she was one of the large majority who put small faith in new inventions or discoveries. Accordingly, while she exhorted him to be calm, she could see him an example of calmness, although the excitement of his manner at once alarmed and affected her.

"The thing that must be done now—ha! ha!" cried Singleton [illegible]pantly,—"Bourche—no—let's be acute and wide awake as Twigg is [illegible]cute," he continued sententiously. "That gamaforte must be walked off—that harp must be 'shouldered,' as Miss Danbigny would say. Ha! the copper days are coming, my excellent spinster—at last we must find its way to the melting-pot. You don't approve that, Anne?"

Anne shook her head, but sobbed bitterly.

"Then, if you do, why are you crying?"

"Because you talk so strangely. You know I don't care a pin bout that."

"That's a dear. Now, listen to me. Why are these things to be sold? I'll tell you. If there's an animal in creation an Englishman knows more about than all the world beside, it's a horse; and a gentleman is as knowing about him as anybody. I'll buy a horse, and he shall have a cab behind him, and I'll be at the back of it. Tek! tek! that's the way to urge in the fin," and he brushed up his imaginary horse with all the dexterity of a practised whip.

"That you shall never do—shall never do," excisimed Anne, dashing the tears from her cheeks, and looking almost reproachfully into the simpering face of her husband, while language she would have used two years since arose unbidden to her tongue. "I'll go out charing or washing—I'll scrub my fingers to the bone—I'll set up at work all night first. I'll do anything to keep you—from that!—to keep you like a gentleman," was on her lips, and to act was all she meant. It was Anne's pride (particularly as otherwise), that she had married a gentleman. What would her mother think who was so proud of Edward? Women ascend more easily in the social scale than men, and having risen, they sink with reluctance; but they return to the old familiar ground with a better grace, and maintain themselves on it with a stouter heart.

"Then your don't much like the idea of living over a stable?" asked Singleton, with a foolish laugh, "where very red and very little flower-pots are placed on very white and very little window-sills, and a string is tied across from gallery to gallery, to hang the clothes on? Pleasant, at all in one of those galleries and smoke one's pipe."

There was no reasoning with "poor dear Edward" just then; so Anne got some vinegar-and-water and well soaked his head, while he lay on her shoulder; and drawing, if not bright, at least snug and pleasant pictures of the future, she at length coaxed him to bed, out of which to arose the next morning a very different man.

Before the superfluous and ornamental furniture was sold, and the less expensive lodgings were taken, Singleton received a letter from Scaglola, in which he heartily sympathised with his friend in his misfortunes, and denounced Mr. Twigg's baseness in terms of severe reprobation. He was sorry that he himself was about to quit London unexpectedly for the Continent; but he hoped soon to see his dear friends again. Meanwhile he inclosed a brief, but highly serviceable, treatise on fingering, for Mrs. Singleton's use at the pianoforte, and regretted that the Italian lessons must, for a term, be suspended.

Even English lessons in adversity were now about to commence. The money raised on the plate, pianoforte, and harp, got them through one year. It would have sufficed for two, but Anne Leon permitted the disposition of it; but she had not the heart to restrain Edward in all his luxuries at once; and he still clung to expectations from his aunt, who at present revelled with all the delight of a prophetic fiend over his fallen fortunes.

"As sure, dear Anne" (put down that work—now do—and attend to me), he would sometimes say—"as sure as the next generation of brokers' shops will teem with genuine, undounted Daubigny, thrown in with the last lot at an auction as a joke for the non-bidders, so sure am I that this maker of grim and rooster-eyed licenses of the human face will come down with something handsome before long."

Moreover, he was down on the list of a great man, who had the ear of the Government, and who had given him hopes of procuring a public appointment for him. But Mrs Daubigny still continued obdurate; and the Session went on, and the chance of a strong Opposition seceded to their places; and present existence, attainable by the shortest means, became at length the main object.

And now Singleton's heart was filled with anxiety, grief, and remorse. Improvident, foolish, and weak minded, he was far too honourable a farrier to borrow money from his few friends (whom he had long sought to avoid) without a prospect of repaying them; and he was far too proud to solicit anything at their hands. That they should know him to be poor was no pleasing thought; but that they should know his poverty in all its details, and pity, and seek to relieve, would have driven him distracted. Even for her he could not consent to this. And he had brought the women whom he now almost adored to this wretchedness! Was ever wretch so fated as he? Could the lot of mortal man be worse?

Yes, although it was never his. He never knew the misery, the despair, the fearful degradation, to which he might, and in all probability would, have been brought, but for that wife, whom he so pitied, and on whom his eyes of love and gratitude were so often mournfully and tenderly fixed. To her he owed it that his nerves were preserved from prostration, and his brain from madness, or worse (if anything in this earth can be worse), that the limbs of his pride had not been broken by the iron flail of Want, to fit him thereafter for an abject and a callous crawler.

Anne, too, had her pride, but it was not the pride of Singleton. She could not borrow without a prospect of repaying money; but, more than this, she could not borrow at all. She had been taught to regard debt as so nearly allied to disgrace, that no wonder one was so often mistaken for the other, they were so much alike. Now, poverty was a fearful fact—one of those things which are most easily mended by those who have not made them. The great object now was, that they should be able to live, and pay their way, and go on doing so; and that her husband, the while, should look like a gentleman, be a gentleman, and be accounted a gentleman. And so she returned to her work as a dressmaker; got together some pupils, to whom she taught the rudiments of music and French; and, although a portion of her time had been devoted to her mother in her long illness and on her death-bed, they managed to struggle through the second year unscathed by debt. Meanwhile Edward was, and was ever to be, her, "dearest fellow in the world;" and the good and dutiful daughter was the good, affectionate, and cheerful wife; and poor Singleton at last saw, or thought he saw, in all Anne said, and in all she did, the immediate working of God in one of His creatures, and he was at once proud and humbled.

CHAPTER V.

ONE morning, Singleton arose in unusually high spirits. He had had a dream, he said, and had now arrived at a final determination.

"By Jove! Anne, I'll call upon Miss Daubigny this very morning, and see what can be done with her. It shall go hard but I'll screw a hundred or two out of her, to take us to Australia. In that extraordinary country, you know, everything in nature is the very opposite of what we see it here, and to consummate the strangeness, English gentlemen are the labourers, and English labourers the gentlemen."

"And there," said Anne, delighted at the notion, "even my poor acquirements might be made a source of profit."

"And what if our child be born in Australia, eh, Anne? Should it be a boy, I'll name him El Dorado; if a girl, Aurelia."

"But," suggested Anne, showing a little of the wisdom of the serpent, "be very careful how you speak to your aunt. Should she refuse at first, don't fly in a passion—don't get out of temper, or impatient."

"Am I ever so? am I not the best-tempered fellow in the world? Ha! you dear girl," and he plumped his fingers through her hair, and flung it back from her forehead, which he kissed. "Ah well! this adversity

CHAP. II.—ANNE LORKING PREPARING TO MELT HER LOVER

tries a fellow in more ways than one, by Jove, it does! I'll never be so again—I won't indeed." And in half an hour afterwards he was on his way to his aunt. He had scarcely walked into the parlour to await Miss Daubigny's leisure, when a folding-door opened, and that lady entered hastily with——

"What, half an hour before your time! Well my dear Baron, this is kind and gallant. I'm astonished——Edward Singleton! But sit down, I'm glad to see you. How is that child of simplicity and nature, your wife, who derives no extraneous charm from pedigree?"

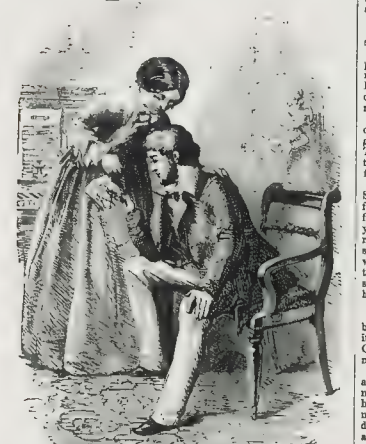
"The Baron! Another rueful wretch" thought Singleton, "doomed to lug away to his castle in the Black Forest, an exaggerated double, such as would unbend the muscles of the Wild Huntsman himself, if it came under his scrutiny." But Miss Daubigny appeared to be in such an unusually amiable mood, that he took heart, and at once entered upon his business.

The lady listened attentively, and with seeming interest to the recital of her nephew's project; and, on its conclusion, said:—

"Well, I don't know but I may do what you require. I think I will. Yes, it will be best. These mesalliances are extremely awkward and provoking. You shall have the money. But, Edward, Ned—I have something to tell you"——

"Permit me first, my dear Aunt, to express my gratitude—to——"

"That'll do. Ned"—and Miss Daubigny measured her handkerchief,



CHAP. III.—MISS DAUBIGNY'S ARTISTIC IDEA OF SINGLETON'S "WEDDED BLISS."

inch by inch, and puckered up her face into the silliest and most childish form imaginable—"I am about to change my condition."

"To change your condition—to marry?"

"Yes;" stealing her eyes from the floor, languishing them at her nephew, and then letting them drop again. "I am about to marry the CHAP. IV.—MR. TWIGG'S PROFOUND MEDITATIONS.

Baron Von Nuremberg—a German, but wedded to this country and its noble institutions. He speaks the English language beautifully. In birth, in rank, in person, he is all that can be wished: bless you, the most accomplished gentleman in Europe! But, come, you shall see; there is yet time before he arrives. I am painting his portrait. Look at him—there! Did you ever now—see—a—more Ha, that's right; get out your glass."

Singleton did so, and stepped forward, placing it to his eye. There was the portrait, staring with such an unmistakeable "Don't-you-know-me" expression, that he started back in amazement.

"Scagliola, as I'm a living man!"

"What an odd comparison! A strange piece of criticism, upon my word!" said Miss Daubigny. "What, then, do you think that the mode of treatment has anything trivial or tawdry in it? Or, is it the diversified tints that"——

"My dear aunt," said he, "I am sorry to be compelled to tell you what I am nevertheless rejoiced that I shall not tell you too late. That man, whose portrait you have executed with such happy fidelity, is no more the Baron Von Nuremberg than I am the Duke of Cumberland."

"Who is he, then?" asked Miss Daubigny, in a hollow whisper.

"Are you prepared for the truth? Don't be alarmed or agitated, and you shall hear. The rascal's name is Scagliola, and an accomplished rascal he is. His father, some fifty years ago, sold little busts of Shakspeare, Bonaparte, Pitt, Fox, and Lord Nelson about the streets; and his mother, a washerwoman in the Seven-dials, died in the workhouse."

Away went Singleton to one end of the room, and Miss Daubigny to the other.

"It can't be—it shan't be!" she cried out; and her visage was frightful to look upon; "and it is not the truth you have been telling me. You are making a fool of me; eh, Edward? No? Then I'll:" —— Here with a backward fling of her hand she dealt such a blow upon the mouth of the portrait as, had it been on that of the original, would have rendered a visit to the dentist expedient. "Ay, grovel in the dust, do!" and she stamped upon the picture. "Thus, when I meet him, will I treat the wretch who—— Hark! there's his knock at the door"—crouching in a corner—"go to him, for mercy's sake. Tell him to leave me for ever. Buy him off at any price. Only he must swear to be silent—silent, mind! silent!"

Singleton hastened down stairs to the parlour, where he confronted Mr. Scagliola, who was just turning from the glass, where he had been arranging his hair.

"Well, Sir."

The other was rather taken aback; but immediately recovered himself.

"Ha! Mr. Singleton; I am surprised but happy to see you. How is the most charming woman in England, whom I have never ceased to think of with the most respectful regard?"

"These idle compliments are offensive, Scagliola," returned Singleton. "How is your friend Mr. Twigg, whom I have never ceased to think of in connection with the felons' dock in Newgate?"

"The scoundrel!" exclaimed Scagliola, "do not call him my friend. I was no party to his fraud, I give you my honour. Beyond a small percentage which I received on the very day you deposited the money, I had nothing whatever to do with the transaction. He got his deserts, however, shortly afterwards, I was happy to hear."

"How?"

"Lynched," said Scagliola, briefly; "and the wretch deserved it. Acquit me, Singleton, I entreat. On my honour as a man, I had nothing to do with the affair."

Singleton almost believed him; at all events, he felt that he could not bring his complicity home to him. "But as to this very serious matter in relation to my aunt?" demanded he, "you see I know all."

A long—and, on Singleton's side, an angry—colloquy now ensued. Scaglola represented, with great earnestness, that he should never have passed himself off as the Baron Von Nuremberg, but that he knew Miss Daubigny's foolish prejudices on the score of birth; which, he remarked with some simplicity, richly deserved punishment.

The conversation ended with a promise, on Singleton's part, that he would meet the other on the following evening, at the Duke of York's Column; when the terms of a compromise should be arranged.

On Singleton's return to the studio, he found his aunt stretched on the floor, in a state of insensibility.

Greatly alarmed, her nephew summoned the assistance of the servants; Miss Daubigny was laid on the couch, and such restoratives as were nearest at hand hastily applied. It was some time before she was sufficiently recovered to enable her to recall the circumstances that had led to her present condition; but when she did so, she at once ordered the servants out of the studio, and gave vent to a violent fit of weeping—the relief of outraged pride (who knows? possibly of wounded affection).

Singleton was not a little distressed; for he could now truly and heartily feel for the affliction of others, proceeding from whatever cause. "Shall I fetch my Anne?" he insinuated. "She, I know, will nurse you with the tenderest care."

"His aunt seemed to assent; but presently went off into such incoherent talk about the Germanic Confederation; St. George's, Hanover-square; Albert Durer, and his tyrannical wife; and the difficulty of hitching off the snub-nosed pot-boy, that Singleton had her at once taken to bed, called in a doctor, and hastened for his wife.

And Anne tended the poor, almost pride-broken woman through a long and dangerous brain fever, and was at first tolerated and afterwards looked for, and at last loved, by the patient, to whom her almost constant presence became indispensable. Miss Daubigny had existed a great deal too long without sympathy. She "had lived too much in her art," she said.

Meanwhile, Singleton made the best terms he could with Scagliola. What they were I do not care to tell.

"What was Anne's maiden name, Edward?" asked Miss Daubigny, a month or two afterwards.

"Lorkin."

"Lorkin! Lorkin!" and the artist scratched her cheek "Can't we turn it into a Norman name? What do you think? With the elision, thus—and she wrote it down—L'Orquine? No; hardly do, will it?"

"Suppose," suggested Singleton, falling in with her humour, "suppose we resort to the New World. Lorkin, the original Lorkin—or, at any rate, the highly-respectable Lorkin—one of the Pilgrim Fathers who settled in New England. Miss Lorkin, of Massachusetts."

"Admirable!" And thenceforth it circulated amongst Miss Daubigny's friends that her nephew and heir, Edward Singleton, Esq., had married the amiable and lovely Miss Lorkin, of Massachusetts, whose ancestor, the Pilgrim Father, had descended from the Lorkins of Cornwall—the family now extinct in that county, but who had been seated there for no one knew how many generations. C. W.

CHAP. V.—"SCAGLIOLA, AS I AM A LIVING MAN!" SAID SINGLETON.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, MARCH 7, 1857.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

SECOND SUPPLEMENT.

VOL. XXX.] MARCH 7, 1857. [GRATIS.

THE CHINESE DEBATES.

IN this country, where thought and its expression are alike free, no one can reasonably take offence at the opinions to which Mr. Cobden has given utterance with reference to the Chinese quarrel. In all questions of war Mr. Cobden has earned for himself the reputation of a man with one idea. He is possessed of a monomania, or a monomania possesses him. Many estimable and philanthropic persons agree with him in this particular, and look up to him as the apostle of a new philosophy, or a new religion. These people are quite reasonable on all subjects but that of war, and go about the business of their every day life with the clearest ideas. They are mathematically right on all subjects affecting their own interests, and perform all the duties of private, and even of public, life with the most exemplary correctness. But, as Sir Percie Shafton in the novel could only be stirred from his usual propriety and equanimity by one word, and that word "bodkin," so Mr. Cobden and his disciples cannot be stirred from the even pathway of their daily duties but by one word. That word is WAR. No sooner do they hear it than their habitual mildness forsakes them; and England, which they love, and which they would serve if they knew how, becomes to their excited minds a very fiend among the nations. So it happened in the war against Russia. So it happens again in the dispute with China. The Czar was a great monarch; the Russians a vigorous and highly civilised people; and the Turks, whom England defended, a miserable race, destined in the fulness of time to be driven out of Europe and to make way for better men. In like manner the Chinese, to their imaginations, because England has found it necessary to chastise them, are a quiet, inoffensive, highly civilised people. Governor Yeh, though he has decreed from time to time the slaughter of 70,000 Chinese within his own city of Canton, and converted a back alley into a human shambles, is an upright, able, and beneficent magistrate. Though he has set a price upon the heads of Englishmen, though his amiable subjects first torture missionaries and then roast and eat their hearts, and though the mingled cunning and ferocity of the Chinese are notorious to all the world, and more especially to those who have any dealings with them, Yeh and the Chinese cannot have done wrong in any misunderstanding that may have arisen with England. England and her functionaries are grasping, selfish, brutal, and wicked. China, her Emperor, her Mandarins, and people, are lambs exposed to the rapacity of English wolves—if indeed they be not angels assaulted by devils in the shape of such arch fiends as Sir John Bowring and Consul Parkes, and the inferior spirits of evil, who obey their behests and make war against the righteous.

Such sentiments are intelligible, as coming from Mr. Cobden. Everybody knows what they mean, and makes allowances for them. The British Parliament would not be a Parliament unless there were a few members in it who abjured Patriotism as vehemently as Mr. Spooner does Popery, or Mr. Bowyer the doctrines of Luther and Calvin. But, that for the ignoble objects of place and power, the large party led by Lord Derby and Mr. Disraeli, and reinforced for the occasion by Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Sidney Herbert, should rally around Mr. Cobden on a question like this is indeed deplorable. Does any sensible Englishman believe that if Lord Derby and Mr. Disraeli had been in office when the dispute about the Arrow took place in the waters of Canton the very same things would not have happened as have happened now?—or that the Government, apprised of the misunderstanding and of the successive steps by which it had reached so large a development as to render necessary, in the judgment of the civil and military authorities on the spot, a bombardment of the Governor's palace, would not have justified their acts as Lord Palmerston has done, and maintained, in their persons, the authority and the dignity of their country? We will not do Lord Derby and Mr. Disraeli the injustice to suppose that they would have acted otherwise than Lord Palmerston has done, for we believe those eminent individuals to be statesmen, and able, with the consent of Parliament, to govern this great country on the principles of common sense, and with a due regard to its honour, and its status in the great family of civilisation.

Thanks to the lengthened debates which have taken place in both Houses, the public is so fully informed of all the facts that it is unnecessary to recapitulate them. Such a dispute could not have occurred with any country except China, and in no country except in England, and in no place except in the British Parliament, could such differences of opinion have arisen respecting it. Faction for its own purposes, aided by the honest monomania of Mr. Cobden, may strive to prove that the men to whom is intrusted in those distant regions the honour and the authority of England ought to act towards the Chinese as they would towards the French, or the Americans, or any other Christian and civilised nation. The answer is, that it is impossible to do so. With French or Americans, or Russians, or any people under the sun, such a difficulty could not have arisen. The dispute about the Arrow might have been settled in five minutes had not the Chinese been crafty, treacherous, and malignant; had they not predetermined to insult and to defy England; and had they not wrongfully, maliciously, and systematically set at nought the stipulations of a solemn treaty to which they were bound to conform. For a series of years they have heaped injury and contumely upon the heads of the British population, until the accumulated exasperation—not to be any longer contained—broke loose upon a comparatively slight occasion. Statesmen must take the world as they find it. If in the present temper of the Oriental mind—and with the existing intelligence, character, and civilisation of Oriental nations, great or small—they should attempt to carry on an intercourse with them on exactly the same terms as with the independent and enlightened States of Europe, this country might soon bid farewell to its Indian empire and its intercourse with some of the richest countries in the world. Mr. Cobden may wish to convert England into a little Japan, or an insular China; may think it desirable never to look abroad into the great world, or do anything else but spin and sell cotton goods; but the statesmanship of England is made of nobler stuff, even although for the sake of a party triumph a large and influential section of politicians may deem it not unwise to decry and oppose in others a policy which, had they been themselves in power, they would have been compelled by necessity to adopt.

The feeling of the country is wholesomer and sounder than that of Parliament on this as on all other questions. Out of doors the Chinese question has been weighed and judged on its merits; and, if opinion have not been altogether unanimous in support of the acts of our officials in Canton and Hong-Kong, it has been unmistakably preponderant in their favour. In the House of Commons the factious view has been but too obviously the only one. With few and honourable exceptions—and from the exception we do not exclude Mr. Cobden, whose honesty we admit, though we are forced to deny his wisdom—a man's opinion, or his vote, upon this question might have been safely predicated from a knowledge of the club to which he belonged, or of the political leadership to which he had been accustomed to yield his allegiance. On small occasions such fidelity to party, if not commended, need not be very severely condemned; but on a vital question, affecting not remotely the safety of our Indian empire, and affecting directly and intimately the honour of the British name, and the inviolability and invincibility of its flag, considerations far higher than those of party ought to have guided the deliberations of men who aspire to lead their countrymen

THE DIVISION ON TUESDAY NIGHT.

The following is the result of the division in the House of Commons on Mr. Cobden's resolution on the War with China:—

| | |
|---|---|
| For the resolution . . . . . | 263 |
| Against it . . . . . | 247 |
| Majority against the Government . . | 16 |

THE DEBATE IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS ON THE CHINA QUESTION.—THE OPPOSITION TELLERS (MR. COBDEN AND MR. MILNER GIBSON) READING THE RESULT OF THE DIVISION

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

(Continued from page 212.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

THE WAR IN CHINA. ADJOURNED DEBATE.

The adjourned debate was resumed by Mr. R. PALMER, who said, it being by no means difficult to justify a vote in support of the resolution proposed by Mr. Cobden, that the Chinese had given us no ground of complaint. It was indeed contended that the Government should justify the beginning of hostilities by showing that the Chinese had been guilty of a violation of their duty towards Great Britain. It had been admitted that the British flag by [illegible] was not holy irrelevant to the question as to the [illegible]quality of the [illegible] it must be shown that by the treaty she was an English merchant vessel, and if this were not done there was no justification whatever for the hostilities. A British lorcha without a British register was not a British vessel; for he denied the position of the Attorney-General, that the vessel was British because the owner was resident at Hong-kong. If this were true, by a parity of reasoning an Englishman residing at Canton or Shanghai might impart a Chinese character to his ship, a doctrine which, as he argued at some length, would lead to abused consequences. Then, were there any other grounds beside ownership? The British character could be impressed upon the vessel only by the colonial ordinance, and, assuming that ordinance to be legal, the register granted under it had expired, and he maintained that the expiry of the register was absolutely fatal to the case. There could be no mistake; Sir J. Bowring must have understood the matter; he knew and confessed that the protection under the register was gone. Upon the general question much, he observed, had been said of the crimes of the Chinese, the vexations suffered by Englishmen in China, and the vices of the Chinese Government; but for the true bearing of those remarks, in his opinion, was, not that we should persevere in the course we had taken, but if we dealt with a people who were misgoverned, imperfectly civilised, and easily provoked to outrageous violence, that we should be more careful to exhibit an example of humanity and moderation in our conduct towards them, instead of asserting our power, and, after obtaining reasonable reparation, insisting upon further demands.

Colonel HERBERT contrasted the sentiments expressed by the Government respecting public servants employed at a distance with the treatment experienced by the late Lord Elgin.

Mr. KENDALL could not follow his party in voting for this resolution, as he thought nothing could be more unjust, ungenerous, and dangerous than hastily to condemn the gallant admiral. He did not say he approved of everything Sir John Bowring had said or done; but, where there was a matter of doubt, he thought our own servants ought to be supported, otherwise he was sure no Englishman's life in China would be safe for a moment. He objected to the resolution on other grounds. A man must be blind indeed if he did not see that this question was made a mere disguise for new political combinations. If the present Government were removed, their successors must be composed, among others, of Lord John Russell, Sir James Graham, Mr. Gladstone, and Mr. Sidney Herbert. Now, he would not say anything against those parties except this, that he could not forget who brought us into the last war, and who mismanaged it for us when they brought us into it. Nor could he forget either that the noble Lord at the head of the Government brought us out of the difficulty, and that in spite of a pressure which few but himself could have resisted. Turning to his own side of the House, he scolded them for cheering Mr. Cobden, and still more for cheering Sir James Graham when he boasted of having spared Odessa—the very thing which the Conservatives blamed him for at the time—and was another matter. He feared that the Peelites were working heaven and earth to thrust the Church into extremes. For his part, he would rather sacrifice his Conservative principles than see those men in power.

Mr M. GIBSON would not presume to go into the Church controversies which had been introduced, he knew not why, by the last speaker (Cheers). He rose on Thursday last to second the motion of the hon. member for the West Riding, on which he did not then think it necessary to make any observations, after the able and comprehensive speech of his hon. friend. He felt, however, that he should not be discharging his duty if he did not ask the House to hear a few remarks before the debate closed. The hon. member who spoke last, like many other gentlemen who had addressed the House, seemed not quite to comprehend the position in which they were placed. Why was it necessary that Parliament should pronounce an opinion in the matter in question? In the speech from the throne her Majesty announced that hostilities had commenced with China, and the Government laid on the tables of both Houses papers conveying full information as to the grounds of those hostilities. The object undoubtedly was to invite the opinion of Parliament, for there must be an answer when papers were laid on the table by command of her Majesty. If those papers had been considered satisfactory the acquiescence of Parliament would have been immediately assumed (Hear, hear). Therefore, when it was said that it would be wrong to express any opinion by vote upon the question of the war with China while hostilities were going on, it was at least quite wrong for the Government to lay the information before the House, which was tantamount to saying, "You, the House of Commons, can give a conscientious opinion upon the proceedings of your Executive Government without any injury to the public interests" (Hear, hear). What was the resolution of the hon member for the West Riding? It had been erroneously called an abstract resolution. There was nothing abstract about it; on the contrary, it was a practical reply to the invitation of the Government for an expression of their opinion. His hon. friend said that, having heard the case which the Government had laid before that House, he was of opinion that the papers failed to establish sufficient grounds for the violent measures adopted at Canton in the affair of the Arrow. Could the Government be said to have proved, either by their own or the other papers, that the bombardment of Canton was an act of positive necessity? If they entertained a doubt whether these acts of violence which had taken place were necessary, they ought to vote with the hon. member for the West Riding; for, by negativing his motion, the House would volunteer to share in the responsibility, now solely resting on the Government, of all the proceedings in China (Hear, hear). The right hon. gentleman the Home Secretary had stated that, if the House carried the resolution, the most disastrous consequences would happen in China, and that every English resident would feel that his life was unsafe from day to day. He (the news arrived there. Surely it was not meant that protection for British life and property would be withdrawn if the resolution passed; or that if it were negatived the Chinese would not do all in their power against British life and property after the bombardment of Canton? He imagined that that statement of the Home Secretary was inconsiderate—that it fell from him, perhaps, in the excitement of the delivery of what had been the character of a purely party speech. The House had been told that the merchants were in favour of the course which had been pursued, and they must know what was right. But what it intended to be maintained that the mercantile body of England was in favour of the policy pursued in China? The British merchants at Canton were some hundreds in number, and their opinions could not be taken as an indication of the views of the great mercantile body of the United Kingdom. He had the honour to represent a most important city of manufacturers and consumers, and he had received no communication from his constituents in favour of the policy pursued in China. The only intimation which reached him was a petition proceeding from a public meeting of the inhabitants of Manchester, and he had presented that petition at that meeting to the Home Secretary in order that he might lay it before her Majesty. Through the medium of that memorial the inhabitants of Manchester, in public meeting assembled, conveyed to her Majesty the feelings of shame and indignation with which they had viewed the scenes of the destruction by the British forces of innocent life and property, and their belief, founded on the published evidence, that the hostile acts committed by Admiral Seymour, with the concurrence of Sir J. Bowring and Mr. Parkes, could not be justified on the plea of necessity, and were worthy of the heaviest censure. They observed that her Majesty's prerogative to declare war had been usurped by the beforementioned servants of the Crown, and they implored that they might be recalled, in order that a searching inquiry should be made into their conduct. It therefore appeared to him that it was not correct to identify the opinion of a small limited body of gentlemen connected with the opium and tea trade in China with the opinion of the general mercantile community of England (Hear, hear). Let the House not forget that there might be such a thing as immediate interests biassing opinion. It was said that the stock of tea was never so large as at present, and he could easily conceive that the individuals connected with the tea trade might imagine that their immediate interests would be served by anything which would have the temporary effect of giving increased value to their stock. When complained, during the recent war, that the blockade of the ports of the Baltic was not sufficiently rigorous? They were declared to be owners of large stocks of Baltic produce, who wanted to keep out competition (Hear, hear). Therefore, without charging against this body of gentlemen, who had been referred to as supporting the proceedings in China, that they were all actuated by interested motives, yet, as a man of common sense, he was bound to take into consideration circumstances affecting their interests. And not those who consulted on a chain of tea were considered in this matter? (Hear, hear.) The impression among those with whom he had conversed was, that the only way to extend the English trade with China was by increasing the consumption of tea in this country, and that could only be done by lowering the duties on tea, and not by raising them as proposed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Hear, hear). Increasing the consumption of tea would do more to extend the trade with China than would ever be accomplished by the bombardment of a commercial town or by any measures of hostility (Cheers). It was urged that it might be very well to support the member for the West Riding from the conviction that he was right, but that the state of parties must be looked to. Now, he would make what might seem a peculiar remark, but nothing gave him so much confidence that it was right to support the present motion as the fact that the great body of the Conservative party were about to support it. Why did he say that? Because the Conservative party as a rule supported the Crown during wars and hostilities. This was not a question which involved distinctive principles between the Liberal party. It was called, and the Conservative party. This was a question which had been brought among all the members of that House, and upon which every member, without any reference to his political opinions, was entitled to pronounce a deliberate opinion. The Conservative party generally supported the Government on the day of foreign complications, and especially when actual hostilities had commenced. The case must then be strong indeed when gentlemen on the Opposition side of the House of Commons could be conducted at all to rally and as free from party ties as any other gentleman in the House were willing to pass a disapproving vote as to the policy of the Government with reference to the hostilities at Canton. Instead, then, of the support which the Conservative party had given to the motion being an argument against it, he believed that it was rather a proof of its propriety and justice. When the noble Lord at the head of the Government was in any difficulty he made no scruple of accepting the votes of the Conservative against the Liberal party (Hear, hear). When it was necessary to put down the hon. member for the Tower Hamlets on his question of the ballot, or the hon. member for Bristol on the Ballot, or the hon. member for Surrey on the extension of the franchise—all of which questions lay before the House—the noble Lord at the head of the Liberal party—he noble Lord at the head of the Government was not squeamish about accepting the support of the Conservative party (Cheers). Well, then, when the hon. member for the West Riding brought forward a motion consistent with all the views which he had entertained and professed in his public life, was he to be deterred from asking the support of his friends because members of the Government on his question of ballot would support it? He (Mr. M Gibson) had been told that there was a meeting of the Liberal party lately at the house of the noble Lord. He read the report in the public newspapers—he was not aware of any such meeting—he publish in the journals reports of these private political meetings (Hear, hear). That meeting was remarkable more for the absence of certain distinguished men than for the presence of any who attended it. He read over the names, and he must say it was the first time he ever collected a meeting of the Liberal party being held without the name of Lord J. Russell appearing among those who attended it (Hear, hear). There were other distinguished names which were not to be found in the list of those present at the meeting. He should like to know what the noble Lord at the head of the Government said in the course of the evening he attended the meeting? (Laughter.) What pledges were given, what inducements were held out? Was it that sufficient inducements were held out on such occasions many a member, for the support of a Ministry in danger, gave a vote that was not exactly according to his convictions (Hear, hear). That meeting was remarkable also for the absence of certain distinguished men that were among the members of the Government. He read over the names, and he must say it was the first time he ever collected a meeting of the Liberal party being held without the name of Lord J. Russell appearing among those who attended it (Hear, hear). There were other distinguished names which were not to be found in the list of those present at the meeting. He should like to know what the noble Lord at the head of the Government said in the course of the evening he attended the meeting? (Laughter.) What pledges were given, what inducements were held out? Was it that sufficient inducements were held out on such occasions many a member, for the support of a Ministry in danger, gave a vote that was not exactly according to his convictions (Hear, hear). That meeting was remarkable more

Lord Clarendon was acquainted with both, and therefore he agreed to the appointment (Hear, hear). Now, as the name of Sir John Bowring is unfortunately recorded, from time to time, through the whole of the discussion, let me state, so far as I am concerned, that I entirely disclaim and repudiate the description that has been made by the hon. and learned member of the issue we are now trying. He says it is a judicial issue, and the case that you are trying is the individual case of Sir John Bowring; and if a single doubt hangs upon that case it is your duty to acquit Sir John Bowring. Why, I protest against thus making Sir J. Bowring a stalking-horse (Cheers) to divert the attention from the real matters that are at issue. I approach the subject of the name of Sir John Bowring in this discussion; but we are not trying Sir John Bowring. It is our duty to be just and equitable towards him; but our paramount duty is to consider the interests of humanity and the honour of the country (Hear, hear). Sir John Bowring has been led by his zeal into proceedings in themselves unwarrantable; but I am bound to express my candid conviction that the policy which Sir John Bowring has chosen on this occasion to carry into effect was a policy not unknown to her Majesty's Government, nor disapproved by them. I found myself in that statement upon a letter which has been quoted from Lord Clarendon, from which it appears to be distinctly established that that which had been in former years wisely prohibited by successive Secretaries of State had now in principle been permitted; and it was understood by Sir John Bowring and his official superiors that he was bound to use the best of his judgment in making choice of his occasion, yet he was to consider himself at liberty to prosecute his design of making an entry into Canton. This is not a pleasant part of the discussion, and I shall not dwell upon it, but I must remind the House that there has been no answer to the statement of my right hon. friend the member for Wiltshire last night, who gave you a letter from Sir John Bowring to Sir Michael Seymour, in which undoubtedly the communication from the Minister at home was stated in such a form as to show that they must have misled his judgment, and have communicated to him an erroneous impression as to the views and wishes of Government. The Secretary for the Home Department lamented that long intervals and constant labours in the public service were not sufficient to restrain men from acrimonious attacks. I am quite sure the allusion I am about to refer to fell from him unintentionally; but my right hon. friend had gone the noble Lord the member for London credit for that honesty of purpose and depth of conviction which he knew had actuated him all his life, and that he wished he could say as much for the right hon. the member for Carlisle. I suggest that from that these were words which hardly represented the feeling of my right hon. friend, but if they did they were words incompatible with the relations which ought to subsist between a member of this House and another. I pass from these considerations to express the satisfaction with which I heard, towards the close of the speech of the Secretary of State, his manly declaration that this was a question in which every man was bound to give his vote, irrespective of party and political considerations. I have had the means of knowing the minds of many members with regard to this question, and I can truly say there is not one of them, at least to my knowledge, who is about to support the question of my hon. friend through party and political considerations (Loud cheers). It was the more honourable to call on us to apply this criterion, because, not presuming to judge the secret motives of men not standing on overt acts and plain declarations, I do not hesitate to say that the negative of the resolution will not stand the application of that test as well; because we have heard the speeches of the hon. member for Norfolk and the member for Cornwall. And here let me say that, with regard to the charge of anti-Protestantism, of Democracy, and of slaying of armies, and everything base and false which it seems to be the pleasure of the member for Norfolk to bring, I am far too sensible of the importance of this debate to think of defending myself from such charges. But on the votes of the hon. member for Norfolk and of the hon. member for Cornwall I may comment as a member of Parliament. They know that no inconsiderable portion of Canton has been in flames; that the troops which have been defending the country from the ravages of the rebels had been perforce detained at Canton, and that in consequence the rebels had carried destruction to a small and great extent. These things are known, and these two honourable members think that they discharge their duty as members of the British House of Commons when they frankly express their opinion that the whole proceeding is utterly condemns to me. There are some matters raised in this discussion that have been substantially abandoned or disproved. It is very well to talk of the opinions of British merchants; but it has not been the practice to allow, when dealing with questions in which particular classes of the community had a personal interest, to adduce its own functions, and to register its judgment according to the opinions of that class. The proceedings of Parliament would have taken a very different colour if they had done that. We certainly did not consider the opinions of the bondowners when we passed the measure for the emancipation of the slave-trade we did not take as a paramount authority the views of the hon. members for Liverpool (Cheers). If, in 1833, the sentiments of the West India planters, and what they called their principle of the negro character, had been allowed to predominate, do you think the emancipation of the blacks would ever have been carried? (Cheers.) This question is not to be settled by the opinions of merchants in this case; but it does not in the slightest degree remove the responsibility which devolves upon you of sitting as judges and giving your decision according to the opinion in which you may arrive (Hear, hear). Now, it seems to have excited hon. gentlemen against these unfortunate Chinese, because they had shown a disposition to prefer those authorities who are supposed to be unfavourable to foreigners, and to remove such as had shown themselves kindly disposed towards them. Well, but, Sir, China is not the only country in the world in which I have been present at proceedings unseemly to the last degree. I have seen a Prime Minister was dismissed because he was deemed to be too favourable to foreigners, and another Mandarin (Laughter) was appointed, whose particular title to popular credit has undoubtedly been based on the opinion that he entertained as determined hostility to barbarian policy (Laughter). Sir, there is not much room for discussion left with regard to the question at issue, "Insults in China," about which my right hon. friend (Sir G. Grey) that the title of the Blue-book, which does convey a misrepresentation of the nature of the book itself, was entirely traceable to the terms in which the communications of the last seventeen years ago, when we were discussing Chinese matters, had occasion very frequently to mention the name of a Mr. Jardine. So well known was that gentleman in China, that the natives used to call him by a nickname which certainly conveyed a compliment to his [illegible] agacity, for the interpretation of that nickname was "The Iron-headed Old Devil" (Laughter). Now, Mr. Jardine had, on the occasion of a meeting of his fellow-countrymen to record, as an old resident, his strong conviction that, although the Chinese character was unsocial or, if you please, unamiable; and although they were a people not conversant with the people, yet that their general rule of treatment of the Englishman was a general rule of kindness and justice. And that, Sir, is the impression which the Blue-book will leave upon the mind of any man who for the last seven years you have recorded just six cases of insult from Chinamen to British subjects, or from Englishmen to Chinamen (Hear, hear). Is that a case of things to show that you had treated the Chinese with long standing in China, ready at a moment to break forth? Does it not rather show that you have made considerable progress in conciliating the people of China, in securing confidence, and in the establishment of peace? Of these six cases were cases in which the aggressors were Englishmen; and in all the others the Chinese authorities exerted themselves, so as fully to satisfy the English authorities, to punish the offenders. [illegible] Yes! — On the 6th of October, only two days before the affair of the lorcha, they put an end to a case in which a British missionary had, as it appears to me, grossly violated the law of nations, and had given the Chinese authorities a right to demand that he should be punished. They demanded, however, no such thing. A number of merchants became pecuniarily responsible for him to a large amount; and on the 6th of October Mr. Parkes reported, "The Imperial commissioner has shown a commendable moderation in not calling upon me to take a more stringent notice of this infraction of the treaty" (Cheers). Sir, my hon. friend (Mr. Cobden) has complained of, because he has dwelt too much on the one hand upon technicalities, and on the other upon generalities: for if you show that the Government has not the slightest color of law, you are accused of technicalities; and if you talk of the peace and amity which bind nations together, then you are charged with riding off on generalities; and thus alternating between the two, the defence of what is just would still remain to be discussed (Hear, hear). Now, Sir, if you are not able to defend your case on technical grounds, you give up the whole matter; but if you are successful in that respect, you have only [illegible] a foundation for your defence. If you were about to hang a man, and it was suggested to you that there was a flaw in the proceedings, should you not, if you nevertheless proceeded to hang the man, offend against the first principles of justice, and be tending to undermine the first principles upon which society is founded? Yet if you were right as to the law, the main question of whether or not the conduct of Yeh was just would still remain to be discussed (Hear). Before you can justify going to war you must prove the substantial justice of your quarrel as well as the technical correctness of your case (Cheers). Now, let me remind the House that no notice whatever has been taken of the question raised by the learned civilian (Dr. Phillimore), who said, upon the authority of your own Queen's Advocate, that if a wrong has been committed the proper remedy is that so distinctly pointed out by the principles of the law of nations, by reprisals, and by reprisals only (Hear, hear). I take it that this case is arguable upon three grounds—upon municipal law, upon international law, and upon what is the strongest of all, the principles of natural justice. I never in my life heard a gentleman, learned or unlearned, do so much execution as was done in the course of a single sentence by my hon. and learned friend the Attorney-General. My learned friend said, "Do not expect me to answer specifically that which has been advanced in this House. What I will do is this. I will answer that which has been advanced elsewhere; and in so doing I shall answer everybody in this House." My learned friend in that remark chastised the vanity of the whole House of Commons and of half the House of Lords (Laughter). It is good for us, no doubt, to have our vanity rebuked, and as far as I am concerned I tender him my acknowledgments. My hon. friend said it would be ludicrous to notice the arguments which had been advanced in this House after the debate in the House of Lords. Now, half the House of Lords had argued in favour of a position analagous to that of my hon. friend, and half of it, including my learned friend the chief the Lord Chancellor, had voted against it. When, therefore, my learned friend proposed to answer what had been said in the House of Lords in favour of the motion, he pretty nearly undertook to start right with the Attorney-General. My learned friend declined, then, to dwell upon any argument derived from the municipal law, either imperial or colonial. He said, the only document we must look to is the treaty. Now I must remark in passing, how curiously it happens with nations and governments that they will throw over one year arguments on which they entirely relied the year before. Last year we had a question of international law, but did he quote the authorities of courts familiar with international law? On the contrary, he brought forward the dictum of a municipal tribunal dealing at home with questions purely municipal (Hear, hear). Even that dictum had been clearly shown by the learned civilian (Dr. Phillimore, by the learned gentleman opposite, and more clearly still by the same member Sir Fitzroy Kelly) to have been overborne by the practice for the purpose (Hear, hear). The case in question was a judgment in a British Court to the effect that when a British subject had become an American subject under a particular treaty, he might be entitled to the rights and privileges of an American subject. But is this such a case as that? The Chinese owner of the lorcha does not claim under a particular treaty: he has not been naturalized; he has not taken the oath of allegiance, he is not even a lessee of land at Hong-Kong (Cheers). Now, what is the doctrine of my learned friend? It is that the whole construction of the 17th article of the treaty [illegible] But what is a [illegible] It [illegible] them from arriving at reason or truth (Cheers). But how stands the case at the bar of natural justice? Sir, that ground is higher of all upon which the subject can be discussed. My right hon. friend (Sir J. Graham) was forbidden to appeal to the principles of Christianity, and I grant that it is painful to have principles brought into discussion upon this subject, although at the same time a man may feel deeply the bearing of Christian principles upon the position in which he may be placed (Hear, hear). But, Sir, as it gives offence, I will not appeal to those principles. I will appeal to that which is older than Christianity, for it was in the world before—to that which is broader than Christianity, for it is where Christianity is not—to that which is more fundamental, upon the highest

Lord PALMERSTON on present[illegible] himself at the table was received with loud cheering. He said: Considering the position of a gentleman possessing the talent and experience of the hon member for the West Riding of Yorkshire—a gentleman whose private and personal character stands so high in the estimation of all those who know him—I should not have expected such a motion as he has made, and such a speech as that in which he proposed it. The motion has been explained by my right hon friend the Secretary for the Colonies to be merely declaratory in itself—[illegible] in falling short of the object that which it is well understood to have been directed. It is a motion calling on the House in the first place, to abstain from inquiring into the grounds upon which the Chinese have given us cause of complaint, and yet it turns out to be a resolution condemning the measures which we have taken to repress the wrongs which they have committed. The hon. gentleman talked of the logic of the Chinese before the time of Aristotle. I think, Sir, if he had studied either the logic of the Chinese or of Aristotle, he would have been able to have framed a better resolution. He has also commended the morals of the Chinese. I think he would have done more honour to his own morals if he had abstained from that. There was a contrast which he put between Sir J. Bowring and Commissioner Yeh, Sir J. Bowring, he said, was his intimate friend of twenty years' standing. We know that he was associated with the hon member in that career of public usefulness for which the name of the hon. member will go down to posterity for having laboured to inaugurate a reform in our commercial system. What has happened since then between the hon. gentleman and Sir J. Bowring? (Hear, hear.) As far as those of his speech the hon gentleman said he disclaimed any vindictive feeling against Sir J. Bowring, and that he was not anxious to accuse him. What injury can Sir John Bowring done the hon gentleman that he should forget all those ties that formerly bound them in the intimacy of friendship? (Cheers.) My notion of a friend of twenty years' standing is that we view his course with indulgence, and if we think he has fallen into error we endeavour to conceal it, instead of being eager to mark for censure the first false step which we may think he has made. Who is Sir John Bowring, and how came he to the appointments which he has held? Did he owe his situation to aristocratic influence, which we have been told is the law of promotion in the public service? Is he a member of the aristocracy, which some wish to banish from all employment under the State? Sir John Bowring was [illegible] a man of the people; he raised himself by his talents, and his industry, and his public services. He was appointed to his first situation as our Consul to China when I was Secretary for Foreign Affairs. I allude to the choice because I had had opportunity of being acquainted with his previous career. He was engaged in commercial negotiations; he had in all his life been more conversant with commercial matters—he was a commercial man. He was a man of great attainments, and, I think, a man singularly fitted for the duties of such an appointment. Then came the vacancy of the office of Plenipotentiary and Chief Superintendent of Trade at Hong Kong. My noble friend Lord Clarendon promoted him from being a Consul to that appointment. He did it simply on his own authority. My noble friend undoubtedly did consult me as having had more opportunity of observing him. But he had been associated with my noble friend in his negotiations at Paris My noble friend did, however, consult the head of the Government; and, although the right hon. gentleman who spoke last may endeavour to throw off from Lord Aberdeen any responsibility, if there be any responsibility, in that selection, I hold a letter which shows that Lord Aberdeen did consent to the appointment. The letter was dated Sept. 9, and said that the noble Lord was not very well acquainted with Sir J. Bowring He had never had anything to do with him officially—he believed him to have had a knowledge of China—such a knowledge of the Chinese as gave him great advantages; and the Earl of Aberdeen concluded a letter with these words

"I do not think it is possible you can find a better man." (Cheers). Well, then, it is said by the right hon. gentleman the member for the University of Oxford that, as regards the appointment of Sir J. Bowring, the Aberdeen Cabinet is not responsible. But I hold that it is responsible (Hear, hear), and, what is more, I think, under the circumstances, the Earl of Aberdeen and the Earl of Clarendon showed more discretion in appointing Sir J. Bowring. Well, Sir, and who is this other man who is brought into comparison favourable comparison with a faithful British public servant—who "this Yeh—what is his character? Why, Sir, he is one of the most savage barbarians that ever disgraced a savage nation; he is a creature who is guilty of vices that are a disgrace to human nature. Is it possible that a composite character can be drawn of the two men, and that partiality can be ever shown for such a person, even against our own subjects? Sir J. Bowring has been accused of a love of meddling with the [illegible], and with ambitious views. Sir J. Bowring was a member of the Peace Society ("Hear, hear" and laughter), and, what is more, he was distinguished for his amiable qualities and for his kind disposition; and if there be any man in a foreign country Civis Romanus sum Certainly, if the hon. gentleman had written over it the Roman phrase, as meaning to convey that he was a British subject, that description would be felt to be untrue in spirit and in fact ("Hear, hear," and loud cheers). The hon gentleman said the Government of England were bullies to the weak and cowards to the strong, and this he said at the close of a war with Russia (Hear, hear)—one of the greatest Powers in the world. That war was undertaken in maintenance of principles of justice and of right—that war was carried on in spite of every difficulty with a courage which would have done honour to any nation on the face of the earth. But the hon. gentleman said, "What have you done in the case of the United States?" He said we proved cowards with the United States And this is a member of a Peace Society ("Hear," and great cheering). What, Sir! the hon. gentleman, a member of a Peace Society, taunts us with having made friendly arrangements with a kindred people arrangements honourable to us, and which have been received in a cordial manner by them and yet the hon. gentleman accuses us of not having rushed into hostilities with that nation, and accuses us of cowardice for not having done so? Thus much, Sir, for the hon. gentleman and the Peace Society. But the illustration which the hon. gentleman attempted to furnish his argument with from the case of America was singularly unfortunate. "How different," said the hon. gentleman, "was your conduct to the United States from that which you pursued at China. In the United States case, South Carolina had passed a law by which coloured subjects of any State, when they came to the port of Charleston, were put in prison until the vessel in which they came sailed again." This treatment was adopted towards British subjects, and the hon. gentleman said that a gross outrage had been committed upon the British nation, which affected to be sometimes so sensitive. But what was the fact, Sir, in reference to the complaint made by our Minister at Washington—our Minister applied to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and, as it was explained that it was not in the power of the Federal Government to give redress, recourse was not had to arms. If we had in China, as in America, the case of referring through an official source, even to a local authority, probably these disasters would not have occurred—if we could have referred through a proper diplomatic source to the Court of Pekin, there is very probability that they would not have occurred (Hear, hear). Why, Sir, the hon. gentleman has only proved the very conclusion he sought to avoid. (Hear, hear). In all probability, had the same means of communicating with the central or even local authorities existed in China as in the United States, matters would have been brought to an amicable accommodation (Hear). But, then, let us inquire a little into what gave rise to these unfortunate occurrences. I will not go into the legal argument, about which so much has been said. Whether the Arrow was or was not a British vessel would have been very appropriate if the question had [illegible] Judicial Committee of the Privy Council upon the question whether the ship had been captured from the enemy—whether one of the parties was English or China—whether the lorcha was or was not a legal prize, and liable, therefore, to be condemned But I hold that however interesting that dissertation may have been, and however valuable and important that such legal knowledge should be brought to our Parliament, still I hold that that question does not lie at the bottom of the matter (Hear, hear). We have a treaty with China. That treaty says that British vessels shall not be entered and boarded, or men taken out of them, without previous application to the British Consul The question is not as to mere technicalities. The real question is what did the Chinese believe the lorcha Arrow to be? (Hear, hear.) Did they consider her a British vessel or not? I say they did ("Hear, hear," and cheers)—and I am sure the hon. gentleman whose motion upon that point (Hear, hear—and when it is said that it was a flagitious falsehood on our part, in saying that when we did that the Chinese Government did not know that the license of the vessel had expired, I say that was the real gist of the whole case; and instead of its having been flagitious, or Sir J. Bowring having entered upon the imposition, he stated the real question at issue between the British authorities and China. If the Chinese authorities, knowing or believing, whether rightly or wrongly, that this vessel was regarded as a British vessel I say it [illegible] immaterial to the question whether, through legal technicalities, it had ceased so long as she was at sea, was meant as long as she was engaged in the voyage which took her from her port The [illegible] distinction between her being at sea and in a river is one which I never expected to hear (Hear, hear). What is the opinion of this lorcha Arrow? She possessed a register, a good register—and she takes in her cargo at Macao and conveys a portion of that cargo to Canton. What does she do at Canton?—what should she have done at Canton? She did that which the regulation required she deposited her register with the British Consul His was the duty to obtain permission for the landing of the cargo. The cargo, consisting of rice, was landed. There was no pretence that it was contraband Arrow was stationed opposite the town, and it was utterly impossible that it could have been landed without the cognisance of the authorities there. It cannot, then, that the Chinese authorities knew that this vessel had been lying for five or six days opposite the town, was a British vessel that it was engaged in no illegal trade; that it had not violated the Chinese laws—and that it was entitled to the protection which the ninth article of the treaty had afforded. Notwithstanding all this, however, in violation of that treaty and at the moment when she was about to sail, they boarded her and carried off her crew. And with regard to the question whether the British vessels we have the evidence of Kennedy, the master of the Arrow, to have the register of the deposited in the master of the Dart who both, being on board the latter named vessel, and only fifty yards from the Arrow, saw the British ensign hauled down by the Mandarin, and also saw what upon—the blue-peter hauled up (Hear, hear). The point is important, because it is in itself an answer to one of the arguments of Yeh, who maintained that there was no British ensign flying, because no vessel was allowed to hoist the British colours from the moment she first anchor until she was about to leave port. The master was preparing to go on board of her, and would most probably have been under way within a few minutes of the time the crew were taken from her. Then another excuse was that there was no fire or gunner on board, and that Yeh, therefore, did not believe she was a British vessel, and he concluded she must have been Chinese True, there was no firelighter on board at the time those Chinese officials entered the vessel, but they were seen to enter it by the master, who was on board, accompanied by the other British subject, before the Chinese boats had left the ship. He was on board immediately after the Chinese, and upon this point they could not have the slightest doubt upon their minds, for he knew enough Chinese to communicate with them in their own language. He did [illegible] and was thus enabled to know that the Chinese had taken away the whole of the vessel's papers, and that the vessel was then free and [illegible] And nevertheless the Chinese have expressed what was advanced at their trial, that they had no reason to suppose the vessel was a British vessel when they boarded the lorcha at the time the men were taken out of her. Well, what was the [illegible] upon made in favour of the course that were pursuing; the allegation upon which the Chinese Government rested the justification of the proceeding? That there was on board the lorcha a person of the name of Thomas, a man who went by the name of the Priest, and that this man was supposed to be the [illegible] of a pirate who was somewhere else (Hear, hear). Upon that ground they seized the men on board as [illegible] Now, Sir, I think that proceeding was equally unjustifiable as if they had seized the men on board a vessel in the Thames, because they had reason to suppose that a murderer was on board of her. Then, Sir, I think that the proceedings of the Chinese authorities were unjustifiable, and that the master of the Arrow was perfectly justified in refusing to give up the men. Then, Sir, I think that the proceedings of the Chinese authorities were unjustifiable, and that the master of the Arrow was perfectly justified in refusing to give up the men. Then Yeh will find himself in the wrong. Then comes the possession of the vessel—the seizure of the vessel—and that unfortunate affair which I don't like to call a battle, but which I think I may call a massacre. We have had a statement of the transaction, although I think the [illegible] is somewhat exaggerated. It is [illegible] the truth, but was not that forbearance and moderation which [illegible] would have expected from a British officer. [illegible] certain [illegible] having some months after attacked a British vessel, he [illegible] and published was that [illegible] to the [illegible] and that [illegible] that he had not a trace teeth. As regards the red nose, that was whether in that part of the world it was [illegible] a [illegible] as to [illegible] such a thing. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] future. I have gained a practical victory over these foreigners, and it is [illegible] what they have got—much the worse for them" (Cheers). Then it has been said that these measures of coercion were attended with such slaughter. Have hon. gentlemen read the account of the capture of the strongest of these forts? It is said that a feeble resistance was made, which entailed some loss upon our people; and when they entered the fort they found that the Mandarins had escaped in boats which were provided for them, and the garrison rushed into the water. Was this the conduct of our troops on this occasion? Did they fire into the water upon the retreating Chinese? No; they rescued them from destruction, and sent them to their own boats at their own request. Was that a measure of treachery? Were our people not actuated by a principle of humanity? (Hear, hear.) Well, Sir, these measures of coercion were taken, and were concerted, no doubt, with Sir George Bowring; and it is sufficient for the present purpose to observe that Sir John Bowring was at Hong Kong, and Admiral Seymour at Canton, and that the execution of orders rested principally with the Admiral. If the Admiral had said, "We have done enough"—if that had been the opinion of the Admiral, of course Sir John Bowring would have desisted. He had no authority whatever to go further. (Hear, hear). Well, then, sir, our Admiral, when he found the Chinese Commissioner was proceeding to push matters to extremities, assented to the suggestions of our Plenipotentiary, and said he must now have additional concessions, namely, an official communication with the city. That is the course which all our operations have taken. If our demands in themselves were moderate, to have complied with them at first would have been easy; but, of course, our demands increased with the progress of our operations. But then it was said that the demands made were at variance with those letters which I wrote, and which were written by my successors, to the British representatives at Hong-Kong. But those demands were the demands successively said ought not then to be pressed were demands for the general and unqualified admission of all British subjects into Canton to live there and have their houses of business there. (Hear, hear.) Was that the demand made by Sir Bowring? Quite the contrary (Hear, hear). His demand was for a personal communication between himself and the Chinese authorities at Canton, and certainly that official position should have, when occasion required it, a somewhat similar privilege accorded to them. Was that an inconsistent demand, or one which it was not highly desirable to obtain, or one which, upon the arrangement of accidents attendant upon a war. I need scarcely say that our hearty wish is, that these disputes may speedily be decided in a satisfactory manner (Cheers). We have no wish to push our success beyond the amount of [illegible] does not follow that, by a more free and unfettered intercourse with this country, her independence would be in any way affected (Cheers). Are the Brazilians sufferers because Brazil opened other nations than it now possesses (Cheers). If these unfortunate affairs had not happened, we, in connection with France, and probably with the concurrence of the United States, were about to send an Ambassador to the Court of Pekin, extending our diplomatic relations with that country. Of course, this project is now suspended; but, had it been carried out, the result would, no doubt, have been a most important addition to the field for commerce in countries (Hear, hear). When first the ports of China were opened, in consequence of the Treaty of Nankin, unbounded were the expectations that British commercial interests would lead to commerce to be derived therefrom from a free intercourse with China, with her 350,000,000 souls. We have been dreadfully disappointed; because, by the internal regulations of the Chinese, and the obstructions they have opposed to British commerce in general, the supply, I believe, of British manufactures to China has been limited to a narrow strip of land, not extending widely from the coast, and, by a provision of the treaty—a provision which the French and the Americans are entitled to by the treaty, together with ourselves, as the most favoured nation—if, I say, a revision of the treaty was made by which we was afforded of more intercourse with China, more free communication between European nations and China, there would be a large augmentation of commerce, and the result would be greatly for the benefit of China, but still more so for China herself. The restrictions on trade are one cause of that trade in opium which has been so much commented on. The quantities of British manufactures imported into China, in exchange for the produce which we yearly bring over. In the article of tea alone, in the period which has elapsed since 1842, the importation has risen from forty to eighty millions of pounds, and the importation of silk has also largely increased; and, if we succeeded in obtaining a larger field for commerce with China than we already possessed, increased benefit would ensue not only to our own merchants, but also to China. Hear, hear. The question then is, what, in this state of things, are we to do? The hon. member for the West Riding, not choosing to allow things to develope themselves, rushes upon a conclusion, and in the sense of the hon. gentleman opposite (Mr. Bernal) for which I defy the ingenuity of man to determine whether it is a censure upon the officers of her Majesty in China, or upon her Majesty's Government in this country. The right honourable gentleman the member for Buckinghamshire, in the few words which he addressed to the House the other evening on the question of the adjournment of the House, adopted the same conclusion, and said that it was a censure on the Government (Hear, hear). Much of the arguments which have been used in the course of the debate would tend to the same conclusion, because we have been told we ought, in consequence of the acts of our officers in China, to have at once censured those officers, and recalled them; and not having done so, but having supported our officers, believing that they had acted to the best of their judgment and ability, it was upon us, as the right hon. gentleman the member for Oxford said, that the vote of the evening must fall (Hear, hear). There are some things in the course of this debate which have been painful to me. Nothing can be more respectable than appeals to the highest considerations and feeling, when those appeals are made upon adequate grounds. When an appeal is made to the great principles of truth, of justice, of humanity, on such an occasion, I say that that appeal is a prostitution of those sacred principles in defence of flagitious falsehood (Cheers), of base perfidy (Cheers), of cruel inhumanity, of atrocious crime—I say that it is an abuse of those gifts of eloquence with which Providence has blessed hon. members, and which should be devoted to higher and better purposes (Cheers). They have employed those powers to break down all the moral feelings of our nature, and to justify crimes of the worst character (Cheers). I ask, then, what is the object of the motion? The hon gentleman who moved it seemed to level it at his friend Dr Bowring. There is an old verse which describes the manner in which friends ought to deal with each other :—

> Be to their virtues very kind,
> And to their faults a little blind,
> And put a padlock on the mind.

(Laughter and cheers.) Whether the hon. gentleman has acted upon these principles towards his friend I leave the House to determine (Hear, hear, cheers). I will venture to say that no man who heard the hon. gentleman will be more surprised at the enmity of an old friend, undeserved and unexpected, than Sir John Bowring himself when he reads these charges. What is it we are asked to do? Were we to send out to China to say, "Tell Yeh that he is right (Loud cheers). Tell him that certain lawyers have determined, after mastering a great mass of technicalities, that the lorcha Arrow was really not a British ship according to the Imperial law; therefore he was right in what he did, and he may do the same again (Loud cheers) with any British ship he may think fit to do the same proceedings on his part." I would ask the House what would be the consequences? Our trade between Hong-Kong and Canton would be as insecure as if pirates covered the water. There would be no security for British property either in Canton or elsewhere. And what would Yeh say? He would say, "These cowardly English are afraid of me. I have been told that they are a great Power that they have money and are barbarians; it would be a public manifesto to the whole world that you are not prepared to defend by force those whom you had induced to place themselves and their property in those distant parts. I say it would be disgraceful on our part (Loud cheers)—it would be most dangerous to those whom you are called upon to protect. The right hon. member for the University of Oxford, in the conclusion of his speech, discoursed in very eloquent terms upon the view which foreign States may take of the decision of this House. I say that the view which they will take will be far different from that of the right hon. gentleman. They will say, "Here is a Power which has been triumphant for many ages, whose armies have gained victories, whose fleets have commanded every part of the globe. They are governed by a deliberative assembly, powerful and responsible for their acts. A change is come over the spirit of their dream. It has hitherto been a powerful and bold nation, which has deemed it its duty to protect its fellow-subjects wherever they are placed. This hitherto great and powerful people have now shrunk from encountering Commissioner Yeh; they who have maintained a long and not unsuccessful struggle with Russia, one of the greatest nations in the world—long may it be before we have any other contest with that nation than what the French would call a contest of generosity—these people, they would say, have abandoned it by the love of gain (Cheers); they fear the destruction of efforts which may be necessary to protect their countrymen (Cheers); and they abandon a large community of British subjects at the extreme end of the globe; they abandon them to a set of barbarians, to a set of kidnappers, to murderers, to poisoners" (Cheers); and they will feel that the British nation has descended from that high station which for ages it has maintained (Loud cheers). But they will say, "What has brought on about this change?" Those who look not merely to results but investigate their causes will answer, "Do not believe that the British nation is a party to this new state of things (Loud cheers). Do not imagine that clearly define the object they had in view (Loud cheers). They have shrunk from moving an address to the Crown to remove Ministers, whose places they desire to occupy (Loud cheers). They know that that Government is not so much for its own merits as for the demerits of those who might replace it (Loud cheers)—they know that that Government did possess the approval of the country (Loud cheers); and that if the question were fairly put, yes or nay, 'Will you have the present Government, or the Coalition Government which we are prepared to offer?'—they knew perfectly well what the answer of the country would be" (Loud cheering). Therefore, I say, shrouding themselves in the mysterious veil of a vague resolution, and imposing upon the conscientious feelings of honourable and conscientious men of men who, in the spirit of love of solution, do not stop to inquire whether the war is just or necessary, and are prepared on every occasion to say that no force is legitimate, I say that such a coalition, relying upon the good feelings of these persons, and uniting themselves with those from whom they have been long and widely separated, if it obtains a favourable vote, the vote will be very different from what it would have been if they had manfully and boldly stated their true object (Loud cheering). You would think, Sir, if you read the speeches of those advocates of every quibble, and who endeavour to make excuses for the most atrocious crimes, who take part with every foreigner against every Englishman, and who almost repudiate their country, that these events were a combination of unjustifiable circumstances. Again, Sir, I call upon the members of this House—I don't say I call upon them, as the member for Carlisle did, who said that every member would be accountable for his vote on this question, not only to his constituents, his conscience, and his countrymen, but even at that last day when all human actions will be scanned (I don't go so far as that (Loud laughter)—but what I do say is, that this House has now to determine a question that may, in no long lapse of time, affect not only the interests and the property but the lives of numbers of our estimable fellow countrymen (Hear, hear). We have to decide a question that affects our honour and our reputation (Cheers,—expressions which my noble friend the member for London preferred, and rightly preferred, to the former expression of pretige (Cheers). I say that is a sacred deposit, a holy trust, and gentlemen ought to weigh in their minds the manner in which that trust will be performed; and when they think they are only expressing disapprobation at throwing shells into a particular fortress or other public building in Canton, they may think they are only according their opinions that less stringent measures would have been sufficient, or they may think they are only expressing an opinion that an official demand for redress would have been more desirable. Well, Sir, these considerations are highly honourable, and we must all entertain that respect. I would not wish any man not to give them due weight, but I say there are greater interests at stake with regard to the vote to be given this night (Hear, hear). I say you have to determine a question of the most importance, from which great and important issues may accrue. You have not merely the interests of your country, not merely the property of your countrymen, to protect—but I venture to say there the lives of your countrymen to defend (Hear, hear, and those who are averse to the laws which defend that property and those lives will pause before they give a vote which may be pregnant with the destruction of their countrymen. S r, I feel I have trespassed too long on the patience of the House (Cheers). I do trust that hon. members will not allow themselves to be led away by the eloquence of declamation which forms no part in this debate; but, looking to the matter as bearing upon the great interests of the country, I am satisfied that impartial men, not members of any party, and there are in this House at least a few of them, and men who act independently—will prove. I trust, that the decision of this night will be such as to maintain the honour and dignity and greatness of this empire (Loud cheers, which lasted for some minutes.

MR GLADSTONE wished to offer one word of explanation. He understood that, during his absence, the noble Viscount stated that he defended the acts of retaliation of the Chinese. He (Mr Gladstone) was sorry to say that he used the same expression as the noble Viscount himself, and characterised that retaliation as detestable acts.

LORD PALMERSTON: What I said was, that the right hon. gentleman had done his best to characterise what had taken place as a wanton attack by the strong upon the weak (Hear, hear.

MR. DISRAELI, who was received on rising with loud cries for a division, said: I shall briefly call attention to the issue upon which we are now going to vote. The adjournment has already taken a great deal of details which I had hoped, in the course of our discussion, had been exhausted. The noble Lord made some observations against the right hon. member for the University of Oxford which appear to me to refer to a speech delivered many years past. The noble Lord found fault with the resolution upon which we are now called to vote, and he says it is one to which no man can assign any different meaning to what I called it—a vote of censure. The expression, "a vote of censure," was not given to the resolution by me, but by the Lord Advocate. As the Government are disposed to accept that resolution as a vote of censure, I am by no means disposed to quarrel with them on that point. I take it to be a vote of censure, and not upon an individual. I think it right to the character of the House that the question should be considered in the light of a censure on the Government. I can assure the House I am not going to enter into the legal arguments of the case. Even if the ship was a British ship, built at Blackwall, with a British crew and commander, I don't think that would justify the course which the Government have pursued. The first, then, is not a question of policy, and it is upon that we are really going to decide; and I hope the House will not be diverted from the real merits of the question by the tone which the noble Lord adopted towards the conclusion of his speech. If they came to consider the real question before them, they would find that Sir John Bowring has been unjustly treated by every speaker who had as yet addressed the House, for his conduct, which was sanctioned, ratified, and approved by Government, was no longer to be impugned by Parliament (Hear, hear). The case, however, was much stronger than that. He knew Sir John Bowring as a man of high character; but about three years ago, when he returned from his Consulate to prepare for his superior appointment at Hong-Kong, he called on several members of the House of Commons to look into and approve the case, his conduct was no longer open to Parliamentary criticism; as Government had not only approved of what he had done, but it was their own foreign policy. It had been said by the hon. gentleman the member for Liverpool and the member for Hastings that it was desirable to increase our commercial interests in the East; and in that he (Mr. Disraeli) entirely agreed; and he was glad to hear it intimated by the noble Lord (Lord Palmerston) that any future treaty which might be made with the Chinese would be to secure that object; but he could not recognise the possibility of it with the course which they had thought proper to pursue. The idea was prevalent that we had only to act with energy towards China, as we had done towards India, and we would secure the same result. Fifty years ago the Marquis of Hastings offered to the East India Company to conquer China for them if they supplied him with 20,000 men; but since the days of the Clives and Hastingses, who founded our great Indian empire, the American Republic and the empire of Russia had grown up into importance; and, if they were not cautious in their conduct to China, they would not only get into unfriendly relations with the people of that country, but would also excite the commercial jealousies of foreign countries, and would, perhaps, have to engage in hostilities with some Power not inferior to themselves. We had lately involved ourselves in war with two powerful Asiatic nations—with Persia and with China. He did hope we might soon have peace with Persia probably accepting the terms they had the other day refused. Should they succeed in securing that peace, they would have given the ascendancy in Persia to Russia, in the same way as they had now in China given the ascendancy to the United States. They should, therefore, dismiss from their minds the idea that barbarous States were to be treated on a different footing to other States, and they must henceforth endeavour to extend to China the same rules of diplomatic intercourse they did to any other country. We had already made great advances in that direction, in which he hoped that the noble Lord at the head of the Government that to which the hon. gentlemen the member for Liverpool and the member for Hastings looked forward. After alluding to the antiquity of the Chinese nation, the hon. gentleman went on to deny that there was any coalition or combination other than a fortuitous one among the supporters of the motion. He and his friends did not usually act with Mr. Cobden, and could not, therefore, have concerted measures with him. Neither was it likely that they had taken counsel with Lord John Russell and his party; and if certain right hon. gentlemen who had at one time acted in concert with the Conservative party wished to renew that connection, he did not see how it could be considered an unholy coalition, especially by the noble Lord, who was himself the archetype of coalition without avowed principle; who would, however, act only with those among whom he had been born and bred in politics ("Hear, hear," and laughter). That ancient Hercules had, of course, come out of the cradle a Whig. The noble Lord has raised his supporters to meet the noble House this night from giving an adverse vote. He fears a majority of the House of Commons—in which will certainly be some of the most eminent men in the House, and many of whom had been in office, who although not do not approve of his China policy, which commenced in fraud, and will end in ruin (Cheers). Now, has the noble Lord said down a single principle upon which the decision of this question could depend?—for without it he might to guide us through the perils and perplexities which surround us? On the contrary, he has discovered a weak and rambling case; and he says he is the victim of a conspiracy (Hear, hear). He is the old story. How often has a criminal at the bar discovered, when he has had no defence, that he was the victim of a conspiracy? (Cheers.) The noble Lord has alluded to many distinguished men now in opposition, who disagree on many topics, all agree against the noble Lord's policy. The noble Lord has been accustomed to majorities, without the assertion of a single principle—which, no doubt, has been the consequence of a "sensitive position"—and without any guide whatever, but from the influence or the opinion of the nation, the noble Lord finds that a time is come when every statesman must have a policy (Hear, hear). Let the noble Lord not say he complains of being the victim of a conspiracy (Hear, hear), but let him appeal to the country (Loud cheers on one side). I hope my constituents will return me; but, if they do not, I shall be happy to meet the noble Lord at the hustings of Tiverton (Cheers). I should like to see what the programme of the noble Lord will be. No Reform Bill, but new taxes from a statesman who appeals to progress and civilisation. I hope the House will not be influenced by the languid menace of the noble Lord, but feel to night that it has a duty to perform which will be remembered long after this Parliament and the noble Lord have ceased to exist—that at this moment it not be terrified by the menace of a Minister's power, but vindicate the course of justice, and lay down principles that shall never be questioned (Cheers).

MR. GLADSTONE said he would only detain the House a very few minutes; but, as he had been personally referred to during the four nights' debate, not in the most courteous manner, he trusted the House would allow him time to make some remarks. The noble Lord, at the opening of his speech, made some personal comments against him respecting the statements which he made of Sir J. Bowring. He had mentioned that he had been for twenty years an acquaintance of his (Mr. Cobden's). Now, all that he said was, that the document he referred to was the most flagitious public document he had ever seen. The noble Lord, with reference to him, went on to say that he was a friend of foreigners, and opposed to his countrymen—that he was anti-English ("Hear, hear," and ironical cheers). He hoped that very small knot of gentlemen sitting in the corner (pointing to the seat behind the Ministerial bench) would cease to proclaim the nakedness of the land by interrupting him, because those very feeble cheers had not much heart in them (Hear, hear). The noble Lord not only said he was anti-English, but in the same breath he said he (Mr. Cobden, was a man whom posterity would regard with some degree of consideration for having done some good for his country (Hear, hear). But if the noble Lord thought that, why did he attribute motives of action so opposed to it? He (Mr. Cobden) would declare that his whole object was to promote the just interests of the country, and he considered the just interests of the country in harmony with the just interests of the whole world (Cheers). With regard to his statements respecting the merchants, he denied that he attributed to them unqualified and unscrupulous piracy. He had said nothing against the merchants as a body ("Oh, oh"), but he had spoken against the merchants of Liverpool represented by Charles Turner, as chairman of the East India and China Association of that town. He had not, however, included therein all the merchants of Liverpool—but the document put forth by the association referred to denounced (Hear, hear). The noble Lord at the head of the Government told them that the reason why we had not sent more of our manufactures to China was that there were commercial duties enacted at the extortion. But he thought there were other obstacles in the way, and he would ask whether the bombardment of Canton was not an obstacle? (Hear, hear.) He had also been told that if the House came to a vote adverse to the Government the lives of the English residents at Canton would be at the mercy of the hostile Chinese. But we had no residents at Canton, for they had withdrawn from it. Was it His mischief that could be done had been done already by our burning down factories and other residences, and levelling the suburbs of Canton to the ground. With regard to the opium trade, it had been asserted that they were framed by a combination of parties. He stated emphatically that the only person who had seen or heard of the resolutions in question was his right hon. friend the member for Manchester (Mr. M. Gibson). He, therefore, could not be charged with having entered into a conspiracy to oust the noble Lord from office. In his opinion, if they had a change of Government either the right hon. gentleman opposite (Mr. Disraeli), or the right hon. gentleman near him (Mr. Gladstone), would become Chancellor of the Exchequer; and what would be the effect? They would withdraw the £2,000,000 which they condemned, and no doubt they would give the country the benefit of £2,000,000 diminution in the estimates ("Hear, hear," and laughter). The noble Lord would have a few new enemies in that House as any one, and Mr. Cobden certainly could not be ranked amongst them (Hear, hear). Yet he would tell the noble Lord candidly, that he thought he should make a most excellent bargain for the country if he disposed of the noble Lord for that £2,000,000 of reduction (Laughter). In all sincerity he wished this motion to be taken without any other consequence than that of doing justice to the character of the case.

After a few words from MR. KINNAIRD, who stated that he had attended the opium meeting over which the hon. and learned gentleman the member for Hertford had presided, and that he had consciously caused the traffic in that commodity on the ground that, although the bombardment of Canton might have caused a loss of life to hundreds, the traffic in opium, had slain thousands.

The House divided, when the numbers were—

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| For the resolution | ... | ... | ... | 283 |
| Against it | ... | ... | ... | 247 |
| Majority against the Government | | | ... | 16 |

The announcement of the numbers was received with great cheering. The House then adjourned, at half-past two o'clock.

PRINCE ALFRED AND THE GRAND DUCHESS.—Prince Alfred of England has been residing at Geneva since the beginning of the winter. The Grand Duchess has received from the best masters, and gives them great satisfaction. Prince Alfred has distinguished himself on the ice above all the youths of the country. The Prince occupies the first floor of the Hôtel des Bergers. The second floor is occupied by the Grand Duchess Hélène de Leuchtenberg, sister of the Empress of Russia, with her suite. Lately the Grand Duchess of Russia asked the Prince to show her some portraits and sketches he possesses, and among them were some engravings representing scenes of the Crimean war. On coming to a particular one the Prince appeared greatly embarrassed, and endeavoured to prevent it unobserved. This movement of her young friend was seen by the Grand Duchess, who laughed, and, taking up the engraving, said to him, "No, no; let me also look at this one." She replied, it represented what the taking of Russian colours by English soldiers."—Letter from Geneva.

INDIAN FINANCES.—The accounts relating to the territorial revenue and disbursements of the East India Company for the year 1854-55, have been published in a very comprehensive form. The gross receipts of that year were £27,312,000; and the expenditure £29,010,000; showing a deficit on the year of £1,707,000. In 1853-54 the estimated income was £27,892,000; and the expenditure, £29,754,000; or an excess of the latter over the former of upwards of two millions.

BRIGANDS IN TURKEY.—A letter from Salonica in the Journal de Constantinople states that Ahmet Pacha, the governor, had lately visited the different districts of the province, and adopted several measures for the suppression of brigandage. A band of robbers having been fallen in with by the troops sent in search of them, were first called on to surrender, but having replied to the summons by musket-shots, the fire was returned, and four of them killed and five made prisoners. This expedition had had the effect of clearing the country of the brigands by whom it had been infested.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

The complaint of the torpidity of Parliament which was prevalent a couple of weeks ago has been vigorously redressed by the members of both Houses. It is universally acknowledged that the debates on the Chinese question have elicited speeches worthy of the best days of Parliament. To be sure there is nothing like a Government in difficulties for producing good debates: it is only when Ministers are prosperous and measures unimpeachable that speech-making grows tepid.

In the House of Lords an adjourned debate, prolonged into the small hours of two nights, gave opportunities for a divergence from the usual mode of conducting discussions in that House, which partakes so much of the nature of eclogues, the chiefs on either side generally contriving, with a "quoniam convenimus" air, to talk alternately before the Woolsack till the chartered hour of adjournment arrives. On this occasion new or less-known Peers broke the monotony; and besides the Earl of Ellenborough and the Bishop of Oxford infused, by their elocutionary displays, a vigour into the debate which, in the Hereditary Chamber, seldom outlives the closing of Lord Derby's speeches. But their Lordships always seem to become pemitential when they have been guilty of the political dissipation of sitting late on two nights in a week; and so they swept their order-book of all notices for Monday, and hurried over a quarter of an hour's sitting in a delinquent and apologetic manner.

In the Lower House there have been revivals and new appearances which are worthy of observation. Even in the case of Mr. Cobden a great speech is now a comparative novelty; and let it be said that, while his tongue and his brain have not lost their ancient power and skill, there is a marked advance in his adaptability to the peculiar tone of the House of Commons. His opening speech was, like all set speeches of an able and experienced man, as effective in matter and delivery as it could well be; but it was more; for the very boldness with which some of its dangerous flights (in the House of Commons' sense) were launched saved him from the peril in which a less adventurous and less adroit speaker would inevitably have involved himself. But perhaps he never was so successful as in his short reply at the close of the debate on Tuesday night; that collection of sharp-telling sentences which went straight to influence the division, because they were delivered with a genuine air of good humour, so genuine, indeed, that he was perhaps hardly aware that it was caused by a latent consciousness that, as he had won in the debate, he was about to triumph on the vote.

Those who remember Sir George Grey some fifteen or twenty years ago, when he was one of Lord Melbourne's readiest and smartest oratorical skirmishers, were, perhaps, not so much surprised as those who have only listened to him of late in his not over lucid and overwhelmingly rapid statements on Government measures, to find that he has still great powers of debate left in him, and that, with all his kindliness of nature, he is yet open to the temptation of availing himself of an opportunity for castigating an ex friend and colleague. It was, perhaps, that part of Sir George's display which made Mr. Sidney Herbert so eager in his effort to catch the Speaker's eye when the House Secretary sat down on Monday night, and which induced him to wait, perhaps not exactly patiently, till ten o'clock for a clear field for the delivery of one of those "clinquante" speeches in which he is almost unrivalled in Parliament. The ease, the fluency, and the neat though slightly curt style, and especially the mode of evolving a touch of humour, are somehow exceedingly suggestive of Mr. Charles Mathews' best acting. This finished debater contrasted not a little with a singular success, which was most characteristic of the House of Commons, in the case of Mr. Robertson, the member for Hastings, who spoke for the first time, and who, with no greater pretensions to elocution than, say, Lord Campbell (those who heard the honourable member will see the reason of the comparison) in his least effective days, was listened to, cheered, and smiled to, because he could talk personal experience of China. Another "début" is less pleasant to record, and it may suffice to say that Sir Fenwick Williams of Kars, whatever else he has proved himself to be, failed to show that he was "no end of a man" in his place in Parliament.

All Tuesday evening the House was crowded; and the unsparing character of the "whip," which every one knew was in operation on all sides and among all parties, was visibly to be detected in the number of unaccustomed faces among members that peered over the galleries and peeped through the various doors. It was a question often asked whether Mr. Gladstone meant to speak on the Chinese motion, because he wandered restlessly about the House all Monday evening, scarcely appearing to take note of what was going on, after he had paid his friend Mr. Robert Phillimore the merited compliment of listening to and applauding his graceful, and on the whole powerful, address. But on Tuesday the right honourable gentleman gave unequivocal evidences of his intention to take part in the debate, by the assiduity he displayed in his attendance in his place, and the watchfulness with which he was plainly seeking the right moment to rise. After all, the time chosen was not, perhaps, the best, because Mr. Roebuck had interposed his stinging philippic between Mr. Gladstone and the last supporter of the Government. It might have been supposed that he would have chosen to follow the best man the Government had been able to put up that night, Mr. Bernal Osborne, who broke a silence of nearly two years—which they say has been, in point of fact, an enforced one, since the delivery of a speech two years ago which the official monitors of the Government said was not the thing at all. Perhaps, however, Mr. Gladstone did not think the Secretary to the Admiralty a "foeman worthy of his blade;" and so he waited until ten o'clock on the last night of the debate had arrived, and then he was obliged to rise without the immediate provocation afforded by antagonism to the previous speaker. His speech was less sustained, as a whole, than that on the Budget; the great bursts of eloquence were perhaps never surpassed in any of his former efforts; but the level parts showed symptoms of a physical exhaustion unusual with Mr. Gladstone, and his voice grew husky and subdued towards the close of his speech, unrelieved by the, for him, unaccustomed recourse to the refreshment of oranges.

Lord Palmerston walked into the House on Monday evening, supporting himself on two sticks; but, no one could say that on Tuesday his speech smacked of that gout which produced his physical halting. In the face of an array of speeches against him, each rivalling the other for power and effect, and standing almost alone as the capable vindicator of the Government at a moment of undoubted peril, he exhibited that marvellous tact which make his speeches, plain almost to homeliness as they are, models of the machinery by which Parliament is influenced. He spoke long, but not too long; well, but not too well; and if there was, perhaps, a little less of a tone of conciliation in what he said than some men in his situation would have adopted, it did him no harm in the eyes of even his most determined opponents.

It is not too much to say that Mr. Disraeli, looking at all the circumstances of the case, made the best speech he has ever delivered in Parliament. He had been driven up to a quarter past one o'clock, and he had, when he began, to encounter an unaccustomed opposition to his speaking at all, owing to the impatience of the House for a division. Wisely, therefore, he only just glanced at the real topic of debate; flung aside any preparedness which he might have had about him; and, fastening on the salient points of Lord Palmerston's appeal to the prejudices of members, made a ringing, and evidently offhand, reply, and brought his address into the compass of twenty-five minutes. Nothing could have been better or more effective; and he, too, added his part to the justification of those who assert that the debate on the Chinese question has been, on the whole, the best which has occurred for years.

It is always an anxious and exciting moment when the space below the bar becomes gradually crowded with members coming in from the lobby to the right, in which the "Ayes" vote; but on Tuesday night, or rather Wednesday morning, the expectation was intense when the two tellers for the "Ayes" forced their way through the crowd to the table and delivered in the numbers, because, as the tellers for the "Noes" had already come in, it was clear that the numbers were against the Government, who of course were the "Noes." But it was not till Mr. Cobden took his place on the extreme right of the four tellers as they ranged themselves before the table—thus assuming the post of the winner—that the cheers burst out. The stillness which succeeded was positively painful, until the loud, clear, but calm and unimpassioned voice of the Speaker uttered those oracular six numerals which told Lord Palmerston that he had at length met the fate so many of his predecessors who have had to listen to that pithy form of declaring that the sceptre of the House of Commons had passed from their grasps.

WAR WITH CHINA.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Tuesday, March 3.

DIVISION.

Order read, for resuming Adjourned Debate on Question 26th of February), "That this House has heard with concern of the conflicts which have occurred between the British and Chinese authorities in the Canton river; and, without expressing an opinion as to the extent to which the Government of China may have afforded this country cause of complaint respecting the non-fulfilment of the Treaty of 1842, this House considers that the papers which have been laid upon the table fail to establish satisfactory grounds for the violent measures resorted to at Canton in the late affair of the Arrow."—Mr. Cobden. Question again proposed. Debate resumed. The House divided—Ayes, 263; Noes, 247

MAJORITY—AYE.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Adderley, C B | Du Pre, C G | Kennedy, T | Pilkington, J |
| Alcock, T | East, Sir J B | Kerrison, Sir E C | Portal, M |
| Amcotts, Colonel | Ebrington, Viscount | King, Hon P J L | Pugh, D |
| Arbuthnott, Hon Gen | Evelyn, W J | Knatchbull, W F | Repton, G W J |
| Bagge, W | Farnham, R B | Knight, F W | Rhodes, John L |
| Bailey, Sir J | Fellowes, E | Knox, Colonel | Rochdale, J A |
| Baines, [illegible] | Ferguson, Sir J | Knox, Hon W S | Russell, Lord John |
| [illegible], H F | Fitzgerald, W R S | Lascelles, G | Russell, J |
| Barrow, A E H | Fitzroy, H | Laslett, W | Sanders, G |
| Bass, M T | Follett, B S | Langston, W G | Scobell, Captain |
| Bathurst, Hon Sir P T | Fox, W J | Lascelles, W | Scott, Hon F |
| Baring, T | Foley, A E | Layard, A H | Seymer, Henry Kerr |
| Barrington, Viscount | Fuller, A E | Leaman, Lord A F | Shirley, E P |
| Barrow, W H | Galway, Viscount | Leaman, Lord H G | Shrimpton, Major |
| Beaumont, Wentworth | Gaskell, C Milnes | Leslie, C P | Smith, John Benjamin |
| Bentinck, Lord G | Gibson, Colonel | Lindsay, Hon Colonel | Smith, Wm Masters |
| Bentinck, Lord H | Gladstone, Rt Hon W | Lindsay, W S | Smith, Abel |
| Berkeley, Hon Captain | Glyn, G C | Locke, J | Somerset, Colonel |
| Berkeley, Lord H | Godrich, Viscount | Lockhart, A E | Spooner, R |
| Bernard, Hon W | Goold, W A | Lovaine, Lord | Stafford, Augustus |
| Bignold, Sir S | Graham, Rt Hon Sir J | Lowther, Captain | Stanhope, J B |
| Bolders, Col | Granville, Lord H W | Lyttelton, Hon G E L | Stanley, Lord, |
| Bond, J W M'G | Greenall, G | Macartney, G | Stanley, Lord, |
| Bowyer, G | Greene, J | MacEvoy, E | Stirling, W |
| Brassington, T W | Greene, T | MacGregor, J | Strutt, Hon H |
| Bright, Rt Hon J | Gregson, S | M'Mahon, P | Stewart, Sir M R S |
| Brise, Henry Austin | Grenfell, Colonel | Maddock, Sir H | Stuart, Captain |
| Buck, Col | Grosvenor, Lord | Malins, R | Stuart, C N |
| Bunbury, W B M C | Guinness, R S | Mangles, Lord G | Stuart, H G |
| Burghley, Lord | Gwyn, H | Manners, Lord J | Sullivan, M |
| Burroughes, H N | Hadfield, G | Marsh, Earl of | Sutton, J H M |
| Butt, G M | Hadfield, G | Maxwell, T P | Swift, R |
| Cabbell, B B | Hall, Sir B | Maxwell, Hon Colonel | Taylor, Colonel |
| Calvert, H M'G | Hall, A W | Meagher, T | Tennent, Sir J |
| Cardwell, Right Hon E | Hall, Lieutenant | Meux, Sir H | Thompson, G |
| Carnac, Sir J R | Hamilton, Lord C | Miall, E | Tipp, W |
| Cave, Lord H | Hamilton, G A | Mills, W | Trelawny, Sir H |
| Chandos, Marquis of | Hamilton, J H | Milnes, R O | Trollope, Rt Hon Sir J |
| Hanbury, Viscount | Hamilton, Rt Hon R | Mowbray, J R | Tyler, Sir G |
| Child, S | V C | Mundy, W | Vane, Lord H |
| Christy, S | Hanbury, Hon C S | Murrough, J P | Vernon, Lord H |
| Clinton, Lord R | Handcock, Hn Col E | Naas, Lord | Vernon, G J |
| Clive, Hon R W | Harcourt, Colonel | Napier, Right Hon J | Vyse, Colonel |
| Cobbett, J C | Hardy, J | Neeld, J | Waddington, H |
| Cobden, R | Hayes, Sir E | Newdegate, C N | Waddington, H S |
| Cochrane, A R D | Headlam, Rt Hon W | Newport, Viscount | Walcott, Admiral |
| Cole, Hon H A | Henniker, Lord | Nisbet, H | Walpole, Hon S H |
| Colebrooke, Sir T E | Heseltine, J W | Noel, Hon C J | Walsh, Sir J B |
| Colman, H C | Heurtley, C | North, Colonel | Warner, E |
| Conolly, T | Hodgson, Right Hon R | Northcote, Sir S H | Watkin, L |
| Corry, Right Hon H L | Herbert, Sir T | Norton, J B P | Watkins, Colonel E |
| Corry, Hon W H S | Herbert, Hon P E | Osmaston, Lord | Whitbread, J |
| Crook, J | Hervey, Lord A | Ossory, A J | Whitmore, H |
| Dalkeith, Earl of | Heyworth, L | Packe, C W | Wigram, L T |
| Dalrymple, D A S | Hildyard, R C | Palkington, Rt Hn Sir J | Williams, W |
| Davison, R | Hill, Lord A E | Palk, L | Willoughby, Sir H |
| Dawes, W | Hill, Lord M | Palmer, Robert | Wood, C |
| Dawson, Right Hon R | Holford, R S | Palmer, Roundell | Wyndham, General |
| Deedes, W | Holford, J P | Parker, T T | Wyndham, H |
| Dent, J S W E | Hume, W F | Pearce, C W | Wynn, Lieut Colonel |
| Dodsworth, Sir J T B | Hutchinson, Lord | Pechell, Sir G B | Wynn, Sir W W |
| Duncombe, Hon A | Johnstone, James | Peel, General | Wynn, Lieut Colonel |
| Duncombe, Hon Col | Johnstone, John J H | Pellatt, A | Yorke, Hon E T |
| Duncombe, Hon W B | Johnstone, Sir John | Pennant, Hon Colonel | |
| Dundas, G | Jolliffe, Sir W G H | Perry, Sir T E | TELLERS. |
| Dunlop, A M | Jolliffe, H | Phillimore, John G | Cobden, R |
| Dunne, Colonel | | Phillimore, Robert J | Gibson, T M |

MINORITY—NOES

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aston, J | Duff, G S | Kingscote, R N F | Hamilton, Sir J W |
| Adair, Colonel | Duke, Sir J | Kinnaird, Hon A F | Bayntun, Viscount |
| Agnew, Sir A | Duncan, Viscount | Kirk, W | Rebow, J G |
| Anderson, Sir J | Duncan, G | Labouchere, Rt Hon H | Reed, Major J H |
| Ansruther, E | Dundas, F | Laffan, R M | Ricardo, O |
| Bagshaw, J | Dundas, F | Langston, J H | Richards, R |
| Baines, J | Dunne, M | Langton, H G | Russell, Lord A |
| Baines, Right Hon M T | Egerton, F C | Layard, G | Russell, J |
| Bass, M T | Elliot, Right Hon E | Lewis, Rt Hon Sir G C | Russell, Lord W |
| Baxter, W E | Ellice, E | Lewis, Right Hon R | Sandon, Viscount |
| Beamont, W B | Ellice, Major | Lucy, T | Sawle, C B G |
| Beckett, W | Ellis, J | Mackinnon, W A | Scholefield, W |
| Bentinck, G W P | Ellis, Sir J W | M'Taggart, Sir J | Seymour, G F |
| Berkeley, Sir R | Elphinstone, H | Magan, W H | Seymour, H D |
| Berkeley, Hon H F | Fabian, Major | Mangles, R D | Seymour, W D |
| Berkeley, P W F | Fenwick, H | Marjoribanks, D C | Shafto, J |
| Bethell, Sir R | Fergus, J | Marshall, W | Shaw, W |
| Biddulph, R M | Ferguson, Colonel | Martin, J | Smith, J |
| Biggs, J | Ferguson, Sir R | Martin, P W | Smith, J V |
| Black, A | Ferrand, W | Martin, C W | Sotheron, T H |
| Blair, Sir D H | Fitzgerald, Sir J | Massey, W N | Speirs, A |
| Blair, Captain | Fitzmaurice, Hn Hon J D | Matheson, Sir J | Stanley, W Jas |
| Bouverie, Rt Hon E P | Fitzroy, Right Hon H | Matheson, A | Stanley, John A |
| Boyle, Hon W G | Flavell, Hon G W | Milligan, R | Stein, R Parker |
| Brand, Hon H | Flavell, Lieut | Mills, T | Smith, Rt Hon R V |
| Brocklehurst, J | Forster, G | Milnes, R M | Smyth, Colonel |
| Brockman, E D | Forster, J | Milton, Viscount | Stafford, Marquis of |
| Brown, H | Parnell, C S | Mitchell, W | Stanley, Hon Wm G |
| Bruce, Lord E | Frewen, C | Mitchell, T A | Stock, J |
| Buckley, General | Frewen, C H | Moffatt, G | Strickland, Sir G |
| Butler, G S | Gard, Earl of | Monck, Viscount | Tancred, A Y |
| Butt, I | Gibson, Right Hon T M | Monsell, Rt Hon W | Thornely, T |
| Byng, Hon G H C | Gilpin, C | Moody, C A | Thornhill, W P |
| Cairnes, Viscount | Gregson, S | Morris, D | Tollemache, J |
| Cavendish, Hon C C | Grenfell, C W | Mostyn, Hon T E M L | Trelawny, J S |
| Cavendish, Hon G | Greville, Colonel P | Mowatt, F | Trelawny, J S |
| Cayley, E S | Grey, Rt Hon Sir G | Muntz, G F | Tufnell, H |
| Challis, Mr Alderman | Grey, H W | Murphy, F S | Turner, C J K |
| Chambers, M | Gurney, J H | Napier, Sir C | Tyrell, Sir J |
| Chambers, T | Hall, Right Hon Sir B | Norreys, Sir D J | Vane, Lord H |
| Chaplin, T | Hamilton, J | North, F | Villiers, Rt Hon C P |
| Cholmondeley, Lord H | Harcourt, G G | O'Brien, P | Villiers, H |
| Clay, J | Hastie, A | O'Brien, Sir T | Walmsley, Sir J |
| Clay, Sir W | Hastie, Archibald | O'Connell, Capt T | Walker, J |
| Clifford, H M | Headlam, T E | O'Flaherty, A | Watkins, Colonel L |
| Clive, G | Heard, J | Ogilvie, D | Wegg-Prosser, R |
| Cobbett, J M | Heneage, G F | Osborne, R | Wells, W |
| Codrington, General | Herbert, H A | Owen, Sir J | Whatman, J |
| Coffin, W | Higgins, Colonel G | Paget, C | Whitbread, S |
| Cogan, W H F | Higgins, Colonel O | Paget, F | Wicken, H W |
| Cook, Sir G H | Hindley, C | Paget, Lord A | Williams, W A |
| Cowan, C | Hogg, J M | Paget, Lord G | Willcox, B M G |
| Cowper, Rt Hon W F | Horsfall, T B | Palmerston, Viscount | Williams, Sir W |
| Crawford, R H J | Howard, Hon C W G | Pechell, Sir G B | Wilson, J |
| Crossley, F | Howard, Lord E | Peel, Sir R | Wood, Rt Hon Sir C |
| Currie, H | Hughes, H G | Peel, F | Wortley, Rt Hon J S |
| Dashwood, Sir G H | Hull, W | Phillips, J H | Wrightson, W B |
| Denison, E | Ingham, R | Pigott, F | Wyndham, W |
| Denison, J E | Ingram, H | Pinney, Colonel | |
| Dent, J D | Jackson, W | Pollard-Urquhart, W | TELLERS. |
| Dewyrg, L L | Keating, R | Ponsonby, Hon A G J | Hayter, Right Hon G |
| Direch, W | Kendall, N | Portman, Hon W H B | Mulgrave, Earl of | | Drummond, H | Ker, R | Pritchard, J | |

PAIRS

| FOR. | AGAINST. | FOR. | AGAINST. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Mr. Blackburne | Mr Tancred | Mr Lloyd Davies | Mr Atherton |
| Mr Vansittart | Mr Wyvill | Colonel Lowther | Mr Colville |
| Mr Frankfield | Mr J Duff | Mr Lushington | Mr Collier |
| Mr Buck | Mr Hamond | Mr Francis Baring | Mr H Baring |
| Sir G Booth | Sir J Matheson | Sir P Egerton | Lord Grosvenor |
| Captain Archdall | Mr Bland | Mr Montgomery | Mr Prench |
| Mr Percy | Mr Hornby | Mr George | Mr Serjeant O Brien |
| Mr Goddard | Mr Esmonde | Sir W Verner | Sir T Aniand |
| Sir G Forster | Mr Deasy | Mr T P Williams | Sir R Bulkeley |
| Mr Baird | Mr Bowmish | Mr Wilson Patten | Mr Foley |
| Mr Long | Mr Blackmore | Mr Barrowes | Mr De Vere |
| Colonel Forester | Sir H F Davie | Sir C Burrell | Mr Heywood |

ANALYSIS OF THE DIVISION.

| MAJORITY (Tellers included). | | MINORITY (Tellers included). | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Conservatives | 148 | Liberals | 224 |
| Liberals | 35 | Conservatives | 21 |
| Peelites | 22 | | |
| Irish | 18 | | |
| | 263 | | 245 |

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury have appointed Thomas Carlyle, Esq., to be a Trustee for the formation of a Gallery of the Portraits of Persons eminent in British History, in the room of the Earl of Ellesmere, K.G., deceased.

M. Winterhalter has finished the portrait of the Prince Imperial, which will appear at the next Exhibition.

On Sunday last the French Emperor received Baron de Hubner (the Austrian Ambassador), who delivered a letter, in which the Emperor of Austria notifies the death of the Archduchess Maria Elizabeth, widow of the Archduke Rainer. The French Court went into mourning for four days.

The Queen of Spain has conferred the order of the Golden Fleece on the eldest son of the Emperor of Russia, and the Cordon of Maria Louisa on the Empress of Russia.

The Milan Gazette of the 25th ult. gives a minute account of the Emperor and Empress's visits to the churches and public establishments of Milan.

Sir John Fiennes Crampton, K.C.B., late her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States of America, has been appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the King of Hanover.

Queen Christina has sold to the French Emperor the hotel she had since 1841 in the Rue de Courcelles, and which for the last four years has been let to the Princess Mathilde. At the same time she has purchased a palace in Rome, where it appears she intends to pass the winter with her daughter the Princess del Drago.

Sir Morton Peto has received an invitation from the Emperor of the French to proceed to Algeria with the view to the construction of a railway in that colony. Sir Morton left Suffolk on Saturday last.

The Duke and Duchess of Montpensier are expected in Paris about the 14th or 15th inst., and in the beginning of April will embark either at Santander or Corunna for England, to pass the summer with the Duke's respected mother.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Edward Maud, Esq., of Leeds, to be a Commissioner to administer oaths in the High Court of Chancery in England.

The Oesterreichische Zeitung positively asserts that the Emperor of Russia will go to Paris in the spring.

Accounts from Genoa speak of great gaiety prevailing there of late. Amongst the grand balls given in honour of the Carnival were that of the Marquis Durazzo, where the Duchess d'Orleans and the Count de Paris were present; and that of the Marquis Serra, to which all the Russians in the city were invited.

M. de Boutenieff, the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople, gave a magnificent entertainment recently, at which all the Turkish Ministers, the Diplomatic Corps, and the élite of the European residents attended.

The Princess Baryatinska, the wife of the Russian Commander in the Caucasus, has embraced the Roman Catholic faith at Rome.

The Grand Duke Constantine arrived at Turin the 28th ult. from Geneva. He was received at the Susa Railway Station by Prince Carignano, and by King Victor Emmanuel at the Royal Palace. In the evening there was a special representation at the Royal Theatre, which was illuminated a giorno, and crowded in every part.

The Princess Hélène and her husband embarked at Marseilles last Saturday, on board the Russian frigate Orloff, for Nice.

The funeral of General Berryer, brother of the distinguished barrister, took place on Sunday last. The funeral service was performed in the Church of the Trinity, Chaussée d'Antin.

Mehemet Bey, who served in the war of insurrection in Hungary has set out for Circassia, where he has been invited to act as Generalissimo. Great agitation prevails in the Caucasus, and preparations are in progress against a Russian invasion, which is said to be imminent.

Mr. Owen, formerly Assistant High Commissioner of the Cape of Good Hope, has been elected Chief Constable for Oxfordshire.

M. Levis, chief of the French missionaries in China, has arrived in Paris, in order to give to the Emperor full information with respect to the position of the Catholics in the Celestial Empire.

The delicate health of Mdlle. Rachel leading to the apprehension that she will not for some time be able to perform the duties of her place of Professor of Declamation at the Conservatoire, Mdlle. Augustine Brohan has been appointed her substitute.

The Edinburgh Weekly Review states that Alexander Smith's new poem is likely to appear in May.

Advices from Havannah report that Dr. Kane, the celebrated Arctic traveller, was on the point of death.

The favourite singer at St. Petersburg seems to be the tenor Bettini, whose benefit on a late occasion produced 15,396 fr. The Emperor presented him with a ring valued at 4000 fr.

M. Lardin, gérant of the Vérité, published in Lille, and M. Descarrat of the Courrier de Lille, have been condemned to 500 fr. fine for an infringement of the law of 1852, by publishing an article on politics and philosophy without the author's signature being appended to it.

The new clubhouse of the Junior United Service Club, in Charles-street, was opened last Monday for the use of the members.

A body of 250 Prussian emigrants passed through Paris on Saturday last, on their way to Havre to embark for America. Among the number was a venerable pastor, upwards of eighty years of age, who follows his flock to the other continent.

A letter from Redhill Observatory announces the discovery of a new comet by Professor d'Arrest, of Leipsic, on the 22nd of February.

M. Soyer had an interview with the Emperor at the Tuileries on the 27th ult. M. Soyer submitted the model of his new bivouac stove for the army, which his Majesty much approved for its simplicity, efficacy, and the economy of fuel.

The Imperador steam-yacht, under fitment for presentation to the Emperor of Japan, is ordered to be completed with dispatch, so as to admit of her being forwarded to her destination during the latter part of the present month.

A despatch from Trieste says, after the 22nd of January not a single English vessel was seen in the Black Sea.

The municipality of Madrid causes 54,000 loaves of 2 lb. each to be baked every day, and sold at a moderate rate: the quantity is sufficient for about half the population of the city.

It is stated that Darrynane Abbey, formerly the residence of Daniel O'Connell, is about to be sold by the Earl of Cork, whose property it now is.

Since the attack on Canton by the British Admiral the trade between Russia and China by land, and by Kiakhta, has considerably increased.

The Norwegian Government has submitted to the Storthing a bill relative to a loan of 15,000,000 fr., to be concluded abroad, for the construction of railways. The State will guarantee four per cent. interest. The debt will be all paid off in thirty years.

A Lieutenant of the United States' Navy has invented an instrument which is to be applied to the keel of a vessel, gives the depth of water near shore or upon shoals, without the use of the lead, wherever the depth does not exceed two fathoms.

The Brand publishes a proclamation from the Municipal Council of Neustadt warning the inhabitants against the incitements and projects of the Royalists.

The Chamber of Deputies of Hanover adopted on the 26th ult. a bill for the establishment of decimal weights. The Government has likewise submitted to the Chamber a bill for decimal coinage.

The contemplated exhibition in Paris of competitive agriculture for all nations will not take place this year.

In the Novia Scotia Legislature, on the 18th ult., the Hon. Mr. Johnson moved a resolution declaring a want of confidence in the Government. The House divided on it, and the Government were defeated by a majority of six.

The Pope, on the 25th ult., performed in the Sistine Chapel the ceremony of distributing ashes to the cardinals and other prelates. The King of Bavaria was present at the ceremony. His Holiness has an intention of going to Paris.

The desire of the Milan public to witness the masked ball at the Scala on the 24th ult. was so great that the boxes on the third tier were sold at three guineas.

A telegraphic despatch from Vienna, dated the 2nd inst., announces that M. Théodore Balch, Kaimakam of Moldavia, died on Sunday last.

Colonel Townley arrived at Madrid on the 26th ult, with despatches for Lord Howden from the Foreign Office.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Now ready, and may be had through all Booksellers and News Agents,

VOLUME XXIX. of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from July to December, 1856, containing numerous Engravings of Beautiful Coloured Engravings, Scenes and Incidents in the Crimea, Coronation of the Emperor of Russia (Thirty Splendid), Cathedral and other Public Buildings at Moscow, Illuminations at St. Petersburg, Twenty-five Fine Art Engravings, Return of the Guards from the Crimea, Incantations in France, Manchester Exhibition Building, Architectural Improvements in Paris, Portraits of Her most Personages, the "Resolute" presented to her Majesty by the American Government, Cherubs New and Restored, Attempted Assassination of the King of Naples, Fancy Costume Ball, Anti-Jesuitism of London, Ten Sketches in the Free and Slave States of America, Bessemer's New Mode of Manufacturing Iron and Steel (Five Cuts), Railway Station at Calais, Earthquake at Puzzuoli, near Naples, Lazzaroni on the Shore of Naples, a Street Scene in New Plymouth, New Zealand, Monuments and Testimonials to Forrest for Distinguished Services, &c.—Price, elegantly bound in cloth, gilt edges, 18s.; in paper cover, 15s.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS Volumes from the Commencement (May 14, 1842), to December, 1856, consisting of Twenty-Five Volumes, may now be had through all Booksellers and News Agents. Prices of the Complete Set, bound in Strong Paper, for Exportation, £20 12s. Bound in Cloth, elegantly gilt, £27 16s. Any Single Volume can be had separately. Price of Vol. I., cloth, 31s.; II. to XVIII., 28s. each; XVIII., 31s.; XIX., 28s.; XX., 18s.; XXI. to XXV., 31s. each; XXVI., 20s.; XXVII., 18s.; XXVIII., 20s.; and XXIX., 18s.; or, in Four Covers, at 5s. per Volume each.

Covers for Binding the Volumes, 2s. 6d. Reading-cases, 2s. Portfolios, 4s.

For the convenience of Subscribers, every Number is kept on Sale during One Month from the date of Publication, at the published price, after this period they are charged double.

Office, 198, Strand

---

Second Edition, Fourth Thousand, 3s. 6d.

CURIOSITIES of HISTORY. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. By the same Author, 13th Thousand, 3s. 6d.,

THINGS NOT GENERALLY KNOWN FAMILIARLY EXPLAINED.—D. BOGUE, Fleet-street.

---

Now ready, in scarce foap, with Portrait, price 7s. 6d.,

THE MARTYR of the PUNGAS. Being a Memoir of the Rev. Rambia James Leacock, Leader of the West Indian Mission to Western Africa. By the Rev HENRY CASWALL, D.D., Vicar of Figheldean, Wilts, Author of "America and the American Church," &c., &c.

RIVINGTONS, Waterloo-place.

---

NEW WORK BY THE REV. DR. CUMMING

Now ready, in foap. cloth, 6s. 6d., to 5 guineas,

CONSOLATIONS; or, Leaves from the Tree of Life. By the Rev. JOHN CUMMING, D.D., F.R.S.E

CONTENTS:

The Careful Scrutiny—Perfect Peace—The Way of Peace—The Sure Refuge Strong Consolation Neglect Forgotten and Forgiven—Christ Appearing for Us—Life a Brief Day—The Troubled Heart—Eternal Progress—The Opening of a Year—The Universal Ordered Path—Christ's People and their God There is no Difference—The Unapprehensible Sin—The Atoning Blood—My Living Redeemer—Nine Fountains

ARTHUR HALL, VIRTUE, AND CO., 25, Paternoster-row.

---

IMPORTANT to LADIES.—On Saturday, March 28, will be published the first Monthly Number, price Sixpence, of THE LADIES' TREASURY, an Illustrated Magazine of Entertaining Literature, Fashion, Fine Art, Domestic Economy, Needlework, and Fashion. It is impossible, in a short advertisement, to convey any adequate idea of the great talent and comprehensiveness of this new Monthly. The first Number must be seen to be duly appreciated. The Publishers will be happy to forward a copy of "The LADIES' TREASURY, 1 No. 1., on the receipt of six postage-stamps.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street

---

NEW SONG by Lady CAREW—"THE THREE FISHERS."

R. MILLS and SONS, 140, New Bond-street.

---

SO EARLY IN THE MORNING. The favourite Negro Song, arranged by T. F. HIMBAULT. Illustrated, price 3s 6d ; post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

---

PIANOFORTE a GREAT BARGAIN.—To be Sold for 20 Guineas, cost 40 a few months since, in handsome walnut-case, 6½-octave Metallic Plate, and all the latest improvements, the property of a Lady going abroad. To be seen at R. GREEN and CO.'s, 204, Oxford-street.

---

PIANOFORTE.—A brilliant, full, and sweet-toned Cottage, in splendid walnut case, nearly 7 octaves, metallic plate and every improvement, the property of a Lady giving up housekeeping, to be sold for 20 guineas, cost 40 guineas 7 months back To be seen at LEWIS CRAWCOUR and CO.'s, Upholsterers, 7, Queen s-buildings, Knightsbridge, seven doors west of Sloane-street

---

WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers (opposite the Bank of England), 11 and 12, Cornhill, London, beg to call the attention of the public to their Stock of detached LEVER WATCHES, which, being made by themselves, can be recommended for their durability. A warranty is given.

PRICES OF SILVER WATCHES.

Patent Lever Watch, with the improvements, i.e., the detached escapement, jewelled, hard enamel dial, seconds, and mandatory power to stop the going whilst being wound ... ... ... ... ... £4 14 6

Ditto, jewelled in four holes, and capped ... ... ... 5 5 0

Ditto, the finest quality, with the improved regulator, jewelled in 6 holes, usually sold sooner ... ... 5 8 6

Either of the Silver Watches a hunting cases, 10s. 6d. extra.

GOLD WATCHES.—SIZE FOR LADIES.

Patent Lever Watch, with ornamented gold dial, the movement with latest improvements, i.e., the detached escapement, maintaining power, and jewelled ... ... 11 11 0

Ditto, with richly engraved case ... ... ... ... 12 12 0

Ditto, with very neat case, and jewelled in four holes ... 14 14 0

GOLD WATCHES.—SIZE FOR GENTLEMEN.

Patent Lever Watch, with the latest improvements, i.e., the detached escapement, jewelled in four holes, hard enamel dial, seconds, and maintaining power ... ... ... 10 10 0

Ditto, in stronger case, improved regulator, and capped ... 13 13 0

Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance ... ... ... 17 17 0

Either of the Gold Watches in hunting cases, £3 5s. extra.

Any Watch will be sent to any part of the world, packed and sent free to any part of Great Britain or Ireland, upon receipt of a remittance of the amount.

---

SILVER PLATE, New and Secondhand.—A Pamphlet of Prices, with Engravings, may be had gratis; or will be sent, free, if applied for by letter.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Goldsmiths (opposite the Bank of England), 11 and 12, Cornhill, London.

---

LE MIROIR FACE ET NUQUE.—This new Patent Toilet Glass reflects the back of the head as perfectly as it does the face, and both in one glass at the same time, enabling a lady to arrange her back hair with the greatest ease and precision. It is the most unique and complete article ever introduced into the dressing-room. Prices 24s. and upwards. The patent can also be affixed to any good toilet-glass. Drawings and prices sent free by post. To be seen only at the Patentees', Messrs. HEAL and SON, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W. Where also combinations of Toilet Glass that a manufactured as well as a general assortment of BEDSTEADS, BEDDING, and BED-ROOM FURNITURE. Heal and Son's Illustrated Catalogue of Bedsteads, Bedding, and Bed-room Furniture sent free by post.—Heal and Son, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

---

TO FAMILIES FURNISHING.—A Lady is going up housekeeping wishes to dispose of her WALNUT DRAWING-ROOM SUITE, equal to new, and of superior manufacture, for the whole of which she will take 40 guineas, cost more than double a few months back; also a set of mahogany dining tables, six sabreleg chairs, a spring-stuffed settee and easy chair, carpet in fitted sets, Indian and Rose mats, fine bed-rich on handsome pillar and claves, magnificent chiffonier, fitted with fully plate glass back and doors and a marble top, and a handsome chimney-glass, in richly-gilt frame To be seen at LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'s, Upholsterers, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge, seven doors west of Sloane-street—N.B Also a complete suite of superior modern Dining-room Furniture, in morocco, 36 guineas CABINET FURNITURE, CARPETS, and BEDDING.—An Illustrated Book of Estimates and Furniture Cuts, upon, containing 50 Designs and Prices of Fashionable and Second-hand Upholstery, Furniture, &c., gratis on application. Persons furnishing, who study economy, combined with elegance and durability, should apply for this.—LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO., Cabinet Manufacturers, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge, 7 doors west of Sloane-street). N.B Country Orders carriage-free.

---

---

FURNITURE.—A Secondhand Suite of Walnut DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE to be sold at half its original cost, consisting of handsomely-carved pillar and claw Loo Table and Rosewood Table; a fine Chiffonier, plate glass doors and back, and marble slab; six elegant drawing-room Chairs, covered in rich silk; an Easy-Chair and Settee, en suite, fitted with loose elastic covers, &c. one large-size Chimney-glass, in richly-carved and gilt frame The whole for Forty Guineas.—To be seen at ROBERT GREEN and CO.'s, Upholsterers, &c., 204, Oxford-street (nine doors from Orchard-street).

---

JOHN WELLS and CO., 210, Regent-street, London—ARCHITECT, Adhesive. Velvet, Brussels, and Tapestry CARPETS. Splendid Silk Brocades, Damasks, and Chintzes, at moderate prices. Patterns, designs, and prices gratis by post.

---

BABIES' WHITE CASHMERE CLOAKS, One Guinea.
Hoods, Half-a-Guinea.
53, Baker-street (near Madame Tussaud's Exhibition).
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday).

---

BABIES' BERCEAUNETTES, Two and a Half Guineas
Baskets to match, One Guinea.
53, Baker-street.
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday).

---

LADIES' RIDING TROUSERS.
Chamois Leather, with black foot
53, Baker-street (near Madame Tussaud's Exhibition).
W. G TAYLOR (late Halliday).

---

MARRIAGE OUTFITS, Complete, for One Guinea.
Cotton Hosiery, 9s. 6d.
White Dressing Gowns, One Guinea.
Real Lisle Thread Hosiery.
53, Baker-street
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday).

---

BLACK MERINO RIDING HABITS
For Little Girls, 24 Guineas
Ladies' Riding Habits, 4½ to 5 Guineas.
53, Baker-street.
W. G. TAYLOR (late Halliday).

---

MUSLINS of the PAST SEASON.
The whole of the Stock of
THE FRENCH MUSLIN COMPANY
to be cleared out at ridiculous prices for such goods.
Patterns Free.—16, OXFORD-STREET.

---

EMBROIDERED CHRISTIAN NAMES.—LADIES' HANDKERCHIEFS, with Christian Names embroidered by the Nuns of Fan, with the new dietetch needle. Price 1s. 6d. by post 14 stamps; 6d. the half-dozen, by post 6s. 3d.
FRENCH MUSLIN COMPANY, 16, OXFORD-STREET.

---

SPRING SILKS at REDUCED PRICES. Twenty Thousand Pounds' worth of the above goods are now being offered for sale by BEECH and BERRALL, Beehive, 63 and 64, Edgware-road, at the following reduced prices, comprising all that is elegant and useful in Striped, Checked, Brocaded, and Plain Glace Silks, at 9d., 9½d., 10½d., 1s., 1s. 3d., and 9s. 6d. the Full Dress

1800 RICH SILK ROBES,
for two or three flounces, suited to Promenade, Dinner, or Evening wear, at 42s. 6d., 50s. 6d., to 5 guineas, full length, the body and trimmings included (great bargains).
N.B.—Patterns for inspection postage-free to any part.

---

EMBROIDERY and BRAIDING.—The best Muslin, Newest Designs, Moderate Prices, and most extensive Assortment in Mrs WILCOCKSON'S, 44, Goodge-street, W.
A Set of Patterns Free.
A Collar for five stamps.
The Trade supplied.

---

REAL ALPINE KID GLOVES!!!
REGISTERED FASTENING ATTACHED.
In Every Size and Colour for the Present Season.
THE BEST FITTING
and most Durable Glove to be procured at ANY PRICE !!
One Shilling and Sixpence per Pair
ROWLAND and SONS, Sole Agents,
77 and 78, Oxford-street, London.
N.B Sample Pairs forwarded for two extra stamps.

---

SILK SKIRTS READY-MADE.
The Largest Stock of Made-up Silk Skirts in the Metropolis in all the New Brilliant Colours for Spring, at RUMBELL and OWEN'S, 77 and 78, Oxford street.

---

600 BLACK FRENCH GLACE and EPITALFIELDS DUCAPE SILK SKIRTS, ready-made, always in stock, with Velvet Rugis Passementerie and Crape Trimming, from 2½ Guineas. at RUMBELL and OWEN'S, 77 and 78, Oxford-street.

---

NOW READY!!!
RUMBELL and OWEN'S superbly-finished Steel-Plate ENGRAVING of the Seven Elegant Ready-made Flounced Silk Robes, Entirely New, for the Spring Fashions, forwarded
Free by Post on receipt of Seven Stamps.
Address, Rumbell and Owen, 77 and 78, Oxford-street, London.

---

SPRING DRESSES.—PATTERNS of the NEW FABRICS sent to any part Post-free
Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

---

THE SPRING SILKS at KING'S.
213, Regent-street.
Rich and Silks, ... ... ... ...
21 5s.,
Checked Silks,
£1 19s 6d.;
Jasper Silks,
£1 19s.,
Brocha Silks,
£1 19s 6d.;
Gros d Lezzas,
£2 2s.,
Gros Royals,
£2 10s.,
Moiré Antiques,
£3 3s. 6d.,
and Flounced Silks, £1 10s. to £5
the Robe
Patterns sent post-free.

---

NEW SPRING FABRICS at KING'S.
213, Regent-street.
Cambric Dresses,
3s. 6d.
French Muslins,
3s. 6d
Brilliants,
3s. 6d.
Balzarines,
8s. 6d
Llamas,
10s. 6d
Barèges,
12s. 6d.
Monseline de Soies,
Flounced Muslins,
7s 6d to 18s. 6d.
Flounced Barèges,
13s. 6d to 22s 6d
Flounced Silk and Wool Fabrics,
12s. 6d. to 30s
And Silk Poplins,
£1 5s 6d. to £1 17s 6d
Patterns sent post-free

---

BODICES, CORSETS, and STAYS, with Patent Elastic Gussets. Four Patentees Wholesale and for exportation only.—BRIMBLE and ALLAINE, 39, Cheapside

---

EMBROIDERY.—Every Lady should have one of the new PARIS EMBROIDERY SCISSORS COLLAR, at 1s. 6d., and SLEEVES, at 2s. 6d., on beautifully fine Cambric Sent post-free on receipt of stamps, by HARWOOD and CO., Designers and Importers, 37, Wigmore-street.

---

TO LADIES.—The SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, sold by the Maker, JAMES PHILLIPS, Shrewsbury, Gentlemen's Overcoats and Capes of the same material. Patterns of materials and list of prices sent post-free

---

EARLY-CLOSING HOSIERY ESTABLISHMENT. HIRD'S LONGCLOTH SHIRTS 21 or 30s. 6d. and 42s. Linen Collars, 12s. dozen. 24 different sizes to choose from.—A. J. HIRD, 363, Oxford-street (four doors east of the Pantheon).

---

SHIRTS.—RODGERS'S IMPROVED COLOURED SHIRTS. 36s., 41s. 6d., and 47s. 6d. the half-dozen, in all the newest designs, including Fezzs, Slags, Hyrsen Dogs, Pheasants, &c. An assortment of Patterns, Book of Illustrations, with directions for measurement, post-free for two stamps.—Rodgers and Bourne, Improved Coranza Shirtmakers, 59, St. Martin's-lane, London, W. C. Established sixty years.

---

SELF-MEASUREMENT IMPOSSIBLE.—A FRENCH SHIRT ESTABLISHMENT Novelties in Dress Shirts just received by J. BRIL and CO., 69, Conduit-street, W. N.B. Madame Bril's Trousseau and Ladies Outfitting Warerooms at the first floor.

---

CAPPER, SON, and CO., Linendrapers to the Queen, 65, Gracechurch-street, City, during the alteration of their front buildings, continue as usual, in their extensive back premises, their Family Linen, Silk Mercery, General Drapery, and Ladies' and Infants' Outfitting Business
The temporary entrance to the shop is at 170, Fenchurch-street, the fifth door from the corner of Gracechurch-street, E.C.

---

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN, BY APPOINTMENT
Established in 1778
BABIES' BASSINETTES,
Trimmed and Furnished,
ready for use, are sent home free of carriage.
BABIES' BASSINETTES
Trimmed and furnished to correspond
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 65, GRACECHURCH-ST., LONDON, E.C.
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post.

---

Sent post-free, Descriptive Lists of
COMPLETE SETS OF BABY LINEN,
which are sent home
throughout the Kingdom free of carriage.
UNDERCLOTHING FOR HOME, INDIA, AND ALL COLONIES, for Ladies, and Children of all ages.

---

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN, BY APPOINTMENT.
Established in 1778.
LADIES' WEDDING OUTFITS
sent home, free of carriage.
Descriptive Lists, with Prices, sent free by post.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 65, GRACECHURCH-ST., LONDON, E.C.

---

CAPPER SON, and MOON, 164, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.
BASSINETTES, 30s. to 300s.
BABY LINEN.
Books giving descriptions and prices sent gratis.

---

CAPPER, SON, and MOON, 164, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.
LADIES' UNDER-CLOTHING.
READY-MADE.
Books giving descriptions and prices sent gratis.

---

PARIS GLOVE WAREHOUSE,
221, Regent-street.
The Best
ALPINE
KID GLOVES,
One Shilling and Sixpence.
A Sample Pair for 20 Stamps
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

---

GRENOBLE GLOVES
Very best quality.
One Guinea per Dozen,
Ladies' or Gentlemen's.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

---

VERY BEST PARIS KID GLOVES,
No advance in price,
7s., 7½., per Pair.
31s per Dozen
Sample Pair for 32 stamps
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

---

LAST YEAR'S MUSLINS
At Half the original Cost
Patterns free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

---

FRENCH BAREGES, BALZARINES,
Printed Llamas,
Swiss Muslins, &c.,
Half Price
Patterns free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent street.

---

MOURNING MUSLINS, BAREGES, BALZARINES, &c.
The Cheapest Lot in the Kingdom.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

---

FLOUNCED MUSLINS,
BAREGES, &c.
The Cheapest Lot ever Imported
Patterns free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

---

FINE FRENCH CAMBRIC HANDKERCHIEFS,
6s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. per Dozen
Hemmed, stitched ditto, 7s 6d to 15s Half Dozen
Patterns free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street

---

GREAT SALE.—HOWES and HART, 60, Fleet-street.—During forty years the firm of Howes and Hart has been identified in the public mind with the choicest works in Gold and Silver, French and the high-class Paisley Shawls at TWO most redoubtable Establishments, 60, Fleet-street, and 4, Regent-circus, Oxford-street. Business hours from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

---

GUIPURE LACE CURTAINS, extremely elegant, combining the strength of muslin with the gracefulness of lace, 4 yards long, 3½ wide, 20s. per pair Example Curtains sent free.—A. HISCOCK, Nottingham Lacemen, 54, Aldersgate-street, London.

---

STAYS SUPERSEDED.—MARTIN'S ELASTIC BODICE is without whalebone or lacing, furnishing a good support, and adjusted in one minute.—GARNETT and CO., 81, Wells-street, Oxford-street, and Crystal Palace. Prospectuses post-free

---

A. EVAUX and CO., 296, Regent-street, beg to thank the Nobility and Gentry for the patronage which they have already conferred on their French ANTI-ODONTOUS, Jouvin's GLOVES, and the PERFUMERY from Hungary and Bohemia, a perfumery to H.M the Emperor of the French. This high testimonial is sufficient to induce the proprietors to persevere in their efforts, so as to merit further favours.

Fresh arrivals every week, are the Ladies a proof to find in the above Establishments the greatest novelties of the season.

---

DO YOU KEEP LIVERY SERVANTS?—DOUDNEY'S LIVERIES please masters and servants. Footman's fine drab cloth, 42s 9s. ; Coachman's ditto, 50s. Darlington-arcade: and 49, Lombard-street Established 1784

---

CAUTION.—GEORGE HOBSON, TAILOR, 67, Lombard-street, begs to notify to his customers and the public generally, that a person in the opposite Somerset-house, and motto of "Excellence and Economy;" but that he has no connection with him or any other house in London.

---

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES for AUSTRALIA, in good or inferior condition. Mr. and Mrs. JOHN BRACH, 31, and 32, Great Prescot-street, Goodman's-fields, continue to give the highest price in Cash for Ladies', Gentlemen's and Children's Clothes, Regimentals, Underclothing, Books, Plate, Jewellery, and all Miscellaneous Property. Letters for any day or distance punctually attended to. Parcels sent from the Country, either large or small, the utmost value returned by Post-office order the same day. Reference, London and Westminster Bank. Est. 48 yrs.

---

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Miscellaneous Property, &c. The highest price given by Ladies or Gentlemen waited on or addressing to Mr. or Mrs. G. HYAM, 16, Tyler-street, Regent-street, W.; or, parcels being sent, the utmost value in cash immediately remitted.—Established 35 years.

---

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES.—Mr. and Mrs. HART, 81, Newcastle-street, Strand, continue giving the highest prices for every description of Ladies' and Gentlemen's WEARING APPAREL; also Bronzes, Plate, and valued dresses, regimentals, uniforms, point lace, India shawls, Court-trains, &c. Miscellaneous Property, Furniture, miscellaneous property, &c. Ladies or Gentlemen waited on at their residences any time or distance, by addressing as above. Parcels from the country forwarded for their value returned by Post-office order per return.—Established 1804

---

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES.—Mr. and Mrs. LAVY (successors to Messrs. Sauder) continue to give the highest price for Ladies' and Gentlemen's LEFT-OFF CLOTHES of every description.—Regimentals, Epaulets, Swords, and all Miscellaneous Property. Ladies and Gentlemen having any of the above for disposal can be waited on at their residences, by letter addressed to Mr. or Mrs. Lavy, 321, Strand (opposite Twining's Banking Establishment). Parcels from the country a post-office order remitted by return of post. Established 65 years.

---

TO ANGLERS.—CHARLES FARLOW, 191, Strand, manufacturer of superior FISHING RODS and TACKLE, at moderate prices. Catalogues gratis.

---

GOODRICH'S SISAL CIGARS! at his Tobacco, Snuff, and Cigar Stores, 497, Oxford-street, London, near Soho-square. Box, containing 14, for 1s. 8d. Post-free, six stamps extra. Pound Boxes, containing 105, 12s. 6d. None are genuine unless signed "H. N. Goodrich."

---

UNADULTERATED WINES.—FELTOE, SONS, and CO., Importers, 36, Conduit-street, Regent-street, London (established 1815), adhere to the undeviating principle of supplying Wines free from acidity. The Nutty Sherry, 30s. cash. Carriage-paid.

---

CELEBRATED CANTERBURY PUNCH. One Dozen of this delicious beverage in quart hock bottles (six to the gallon) will be forwarded carriage-free to London, hamper and bottles included, on receipt of Post-office order for 30s., payable to THOMAS PAULL DE LASAUX, Wine-merchant, Canterbury.

---

WINES EXTRAORDINARY.—Port, Sherry, Marsala, Madeira, all 30s per dozen, produce of Spain and Portugal Wines at the value of Good Sugar. Two Samples for Twelve Stamps. Brandy, 15s. per gallon, or 30s per dozen.—W. and A. GILBEY, Wine Importers, 372, Oxford-street (Entrance in Newcastle-street), W

---

ICES COMMENCED for the SEASON.—J. TIPPY, Confectioner, No. 27, Oxford-street (near Rathbone-place, and the Sabin Bazaar)
A SPACIOUS and CONVENIENT REFRESHMENT ROOM
Soups, Sandwiches, Patties, Coffee, Tea, &c., always ready 27, Oxford-street.

---

PALMERSTON SAUCE.—This extraordinary piquant and delicious condiment is acknowledged by epicures to possess a peculiar zest, culinary unknown to any other preparation now in use for Fish, Flesh, Fowl, &c., &c. Sole proprietor, W. O. CAMERON, 9, Cannonside-street, City Sold retail throughout Europe by all respectable oilmen, grocers, &c

---

JAMES LEWIS'S MARROW OIL for the HAIR, Jockey Club, Frangipanni, and Wood-Violet Perfumes for the Handkerchief and Ladies Soap for the Skin Manufactory, 6, Bartlett's-buildings, Holborn; and Crystal Palace

---

SOAP.—JOHN KNIGHT'S PRIMROSE SOAP.—The attention of Families, Housekeepers, Laundresses, &c., is directed to this now well-known and highly-appreciated essential article, which, possessing all the sweetness of fresh Spring, is still the most economical that can possibly be obtained for general household purposes It is sold by most of the respectable Oilmen and Grocers in London, at the price of the common ordinary yellow soap. Be particular to observe that "John Knight, Primrose, York-place, St George's East," is stamped on each bar.

---

WHITE and SOFT HANDS all through the WINTER.—The LONDON SOAP and CANDLE COMPANY, 78, New Bond street, have prepared a new WINTER SKIN SOAP, which, by its continued use, will produce the softest of hands and the whitest of skins, even in the coldest weather and hardest water. It is agreeably perfumed, and is sufficiently soft in use
Sold in bars, 1s. per lb. Sole depôt.

---

THE BEST OIL in the WORLD.—Pure French Colza Oil, 5s. per gallon. Messrs Lazenby, of Paris.—Sole Depot, the LONDON SOAP and CANDLE COMPANY, 78, New Bond-street. Moderator globe, chimneys, cottons. Repairs, &c., by French workmen, at Paris prices.

---

THE BEST FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, AND OTHERS.

ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY, for making superior Barley Water in fifteen minutes, has not only obtained the patronage of her Majesty and the Royal Family, but has become of general use to every class of the community, and is acknowledged to stand unrivalled as an eminently pure, nutritious, and light food for infants and invalids: much approved for making a delicious custard pudding and excellent for thickening broths or soups. ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS for more than thirty years have been held in constant and increasing public estimation as the purest farine of the oat, and as the best and most valuable preparation for making a pure and delicate Gruel, which forms a light and nutritious supper for the aged, is a popular recipe for acute and infirmess, is of general use in the sick-chamber, and, alternately with the Patent Barley, is an excellent food for infants and children. Prepared only by the Patentees, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., Purveyors to the Queen, 64, Red-lion-street, Holborn, London. Sold by all respectable Grocers, Druggists, and others in town and country, in packets of 6d. and 1s.; and Family Canisters, at 2s., 5s., and 10s. each

---

THE only FOOD suitable for INFANTS and INVALIDS, manufactured by Analytical Chemists, is BULL'S MARAVILLA, recommended by the most eminent medical men in the world, at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 10s., and 21s., secured with the Signature of Dr. Pereira, Dr. Prout, Dr. Pearson, and BARNETT, Operative Chemists, 22, Cornhill-street, Regent-street, London

---

STEREOSCOPES and STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES at SPENCER, BROWNING, and CO.'s Hand Stereoscope, 5s. each; Views, from 1s. 6d. per dozen.—Great Novelty Stereoscopic Slides and Views mounted in Transparencies and exhibiting the effects of the Moon light. Price 1s. 6d. each, only at Spencer, Browning, and Co.'s, 111, Minories, E. The trade supplied.

---

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY.—S and S. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 23, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W. Observe, opposite the York Hotel. Portability, power, combined with great power in the RACE-COURSE, OPERA, and general out-door day and night purposes. Their celebrated PRESIDENTIAL GLASSES, weighing only four ounces, each containing 12 and 18 lenses, constructed of German glass, will show distinctly a person at a distance of 24 and 3 miles. They serve every purpose on the Race-course, and at the Opera-house. Country scenery and ships are clearly seen at 5 to 6 miles. They are also invaluable for Shooting, Deer-stalking, and Yachting. Her Majesty's Coast-Guards are now making use of them as day and night glasses, in preference to all others; they have also become in general use by gentlemen of the Army and Navy, and by Sportsmen, Tourists, Gamekeepers, and Tourists. The most powerful and brilliant Telescopes, possessing such extraordinary power that they count the number of persons in a crowd at a distance of several miles, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double stars; also the Lunar Mountains. Telescopes can be seen in quarters three-and-a-half miles distant, and an object from fourteen to sixteen miles off. All the above can be had of larger and still more astonishing powers, and are secured by her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

---

EYESIGHT.—Optical Improvements, to enable persons at an advanced age to read with ease, and to discriminate objects with perfect distinctness.—Messrs. SOLOMONS, Opticians, have invented and patented SPECTACLE LENSES of the greatest transparent power. The valuable advantage derived from these lenses is that, instead of viewing through a series of lenses, inclined weakened, and in numerous cases seriously injured, it is preserved and strengthened: and very aged persons are enabled to employ their sight at the most minute occupation; can see with these lenses of a much less magnifying power, and they do not require the frequent change to the dangerous effects of further powerful assistance. Persons can be suited at the most remote parts of the world by sending a pair of spectacles, or one of the glasses out of them, in a letter, and stating the exact distance from eye they can read small print with it, and those who have not made use of spectacles by stating their age 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W. (opposite the York Hotel).

---

DEAFNESS.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme cases of Deafness, called the Sound Magnifier, Organic Vibrator, and Double Vocal Conductor. It fits so into the ear as not to be in the least perceptible: the unpleasant sensation of singing noises in the head is entirely removed It affords instant relief to the deafest persons, and enables them to hear distinctly at church and in public assemblies.—Messrs. SOLOMONS, Opticians to and Aurists, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W., opposite the York Hotel.

---

PULVERMACHER'S MEDICAL ELECTRIC CHAIN (approved by the Académie de Médecine, Paris, and revealed to the Royal Society, London), a discovery of extraordinary curative properties to which no pills or any other medicines can be compared, and which, in every case of debility, whether in male or female, nervousness, by seeing and feeling the wonderful phenomena in produces how infallible and instantaneous are its effects upon the body the invalid should be without it. Thousands of cures show how remarkable, yet truly natural and effectual, it is in the exhaustion, nervaglia (an head and foot) ache). Five complaints. Indigestion, asthma, lumbago, gout, sciatica, deafness, colds, spasms, epilepsy, paralysis, and all nervous diseases. Sent on receipt of P.O.O. Palvermacher and Co., 75, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess' Theatre, and 194, Regent-street, W. Sir Benjamin Brodie and Messrs. Harding and Harding, 4, Champside, Row, 332, Regent street; Williams, 24, Piccadilly; Wall, 191, Cheapside; Begley, 75, Lombard-street; Palmer, 9, Angel Terrace, Pentonville; Hebberden, 27, Regent Quadrant; and Freeman and Wall, 7, Strand.

---

DR. HASSALL,
Late Analyst of the Sanitary Commission of "THE LANCET," Author of "ADULTERATIONS DETECTED" "FOOD AND ITS ADULTERATIONS," &c. &c.

ON DR. DE JONGH'S
LIGHT BROWN COD LIVER OIL.

I have carefully analysed specimens of different brands subjected your Light Brown Cod Liver Oil, and find it KNOWN TO YOU, BEING PURE, NEUTRAL, AND FREE FROM RANCIDITY, and rich in the constituents of life. So great is my confidence in the article, I request, personally, to recommend it TO THE NOTICE OF THE MEDICAL PROFESSION AND THE PUBLIC, as the best cod liver oil I have ever met with.

DR. DE JONGH'S COD LIVER OIL has now, in consequence of its marked superiority over every other variety, assumed the entire confidence and almost universal preference of the most eminent Medical Practitioners as the most speedy and effectual remedy for consumption, bronchitis, asthma, gout, rheumatism, sciatica, diabetes, diseases of the skin, as, scrofula, rickets, infantile wasting, general debility, and all scrofulous affections.

Sold only in Imperial Half-pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; capsuled and labelled with Dr. DE JONGH'S stamp and signature, without which none are genuine, by many respectable Chemists throughout the United Kingdom

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEPOT,
ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.,
DR. DE JONGH'S SOLE BRITISH CONSIGNEES,
By whom the Oil is daily forwarded to all parts of the metropolis.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

The day, two volumes, foolscap 8vo, 9s.,

STILL WATERS. By the Author of "Dorothy." By the same Author,
DOROTHY: a Tale. Second Edition. 4s. 6d.
DE CRESSY; a Tale. 4s. 6d.
London: JOHN W. PARKER and SON, West Strand

Just published, price 5s. 6d.,

THE DIARY for the POULTRY-YARD, DAIRY, and PIGGERY, and POULTRY BREEDER'S DIRECTORY, for 1857. By an ESSEX MAGISTRATE
Published only at the Essex Gazette Office, Colchester, and will be sent, post-free, to address containing sixty-six postage-stamps

Just published Second Edition, 18mo, cloth, price 2s.,

THE PRUSSIAN OCULIST: a Manual of Information concerning the Artificial Eath de Leuw of Gräfrath. By AN ENGLISH CLERGYMAN
London: T HATCHARD, 187, Piccadilly

Just ready, No. 1, price 8d., to be completed in Ten Weekly Numbers, illustrated, crown 8vo, BOOK of ENGLISH SONGS.

By CHARLES MACKAY.
Also ready, No. 2, 3d., uniform with "Songs," &c.,
The MORMONS. By CHARLES MACKAY, LL.D.
HOULSTON and WRIGHT, 65, Paternoster-row, and all Booksellers.

Profusely illustrated by ABRAHAM, price 3s. 6d., cloth, gilt,
THE MOTHER'S MISTAKE.
By Mrs. ELLIS.
London: HOULSTON and WRIGHT, Paternoster-row.

Illustrated with 250 Descriptive Engravings, 2s. 6d.,

WIFE'S OWN BOOK OF COOKERY.—
Accessible Dinners, Inexpensive, and easily cooked Also nice dinners for every day.—WARD and LOCK, and all Booksellers.

Just out, with Steel Engraving by Heath, containing 416 beautifully-illustrated Pages, cloth gilt, price 2s. 6d.
THE FAMILY FRIEND.
WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Just ready, full of fun, in each, fancy covers,

COMIC COCKER. 75 Illustrations by Alfred Crowquill. COMIC GRAMMAR, with 50 Illustrations by Leech. London: WARD and LOCK; and all Booksellers.

DARKEDEEDS.
"Dark Deeds" deals with tragic memorials of terrible occurrences, and is of the most absorbing interest. Price 1s. 6d.
London: G. VICKERS, and all Booksellers.

Just published, and may be had on application, or forwarded post-free,

B. SAVORY'S NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Dressing-cases, Writing-desks, Work-boxes, Travelling Toilette Bags, Medicinal Work, Stationery Cases, Rosewood Tea Caddies, Tea Urns, Tea Trays, Cutlery and Card-plate Engraving, with specimens. 3, Bedford-row, Holborn, and 4, Copthall-buildings, City.

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—Subscribers and purchasers can have their VOLUMES BOUND in the appropriate Covers, with Gilt Edges, at 3s. per Volume, by sending their carriage-paid, with Post-office Order, payable to LEIGHTON, SON, and HODGE, 13, Shoe-lane, London. The only Binders authorised by the Proprietors.

WEDDING CARDS, Enamelled Envelopes stamped in silver, with arms, crest, or flowers: "At Home," and breakfast invitations in splendid variety, and in the latest fashion. Card-plate elegantly engraved, and 100 wedding cards printed, for 4s. 6d.—Observe, at HENRY RODRIGUES', 31, Piccadilly, London.

NO CHARGE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Coronet, Crest, or Initials.—RODRIGUES' Cream-laid Adhesive Envelopes, 4d. per 100. Commercial Note, full-size, five quires for 5d.; thick Note, five quires for 1s.; Foolscap, 1s. per ream; Sermon Paper, 4s. All kinds of Stationery equally cheap, at H. RODRIGUES', 31, Piccadilly, London.

EVERY COUNTRY RESIDENT should send six Stamps to PARKINS and GOTTO, 25, Oxford-street, for their Sample Packet of STATIONERY, sent post-free. No charge for Embossing Crests, Initials, or Address. Country parcels over 20s. carriage-free.

25,000 BIBLES, Prayer-Books, and Church Services, in every description of binding and type, being the largest, largest, and best-bound Stock in the Kingdom, at PARKINS and GOTTO'S, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

PARKINS and GOTTO have opened Three large Show-rooms for the display of cheap, useful, and elegant Articles for Birthday and Wedding Presents, from 2s. 6d. to 5 guineas (a saving of 5s. in the pound).
Writing Slips, from 8s. 6d.
Travelling Bags, 3 to 18 guineas.
Desks, mahogany or rosewood, fitted, from 5s. 6d. to £3 3s.
Rosewood Dressing Cases, lined with silk velvet, silver-top bottles, and jewel drawer, £2 2s.
Gentlemen's Travelling Dressing Cases, fitted, 12s. 6d.
Writing and Dressing Cases combined, 30s.
Pocket Books, Letter Cases, and Where is Its.
Key Boxes and Jewel Cases.
Porte Monnaies and Tablets.
Desiccating Boxes, from 15s.
PARKINS and GOTTO, Manufacturers, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.
Scales and Paper Weights.
Card Cases, ivorine and 3d. Bibles, in pearl, ivorine, and inlaid.
Albums and Scrap Books.
Mr Rookes' Pens.
Inkstands, in bronze, ebony walnut, oak, and buhl
Retirules and Carriage Bags.
Envelope and Stationery Cases.
Glove Boxes and Letter Boxes.
Ladies' Companions, 7s. 6d.
Cases of Choice Cutlery.
Card Baskets and Table Mats.
Ivory Paper Knives.
Book Stands and Slides.
Smart Cases.

MORRELL'S REGISTRATION INK has been chemically tested, and is the ink specially selected by Government for the Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages, and is also used in all the Government Offices

THE VICTORIA CROSS; or New Order of Valour. C. F. HANCOCK, 39, Bruton-street, Bond-street, Jeweller and Silversmith, having been honoured with the commands of the Minister of War to submit the Crosses for this Order from the metal taken at Sebastopol, begs to inform all those who have that distinguished honour conferred upon them that he is prepared to supply the Miniature Medal made of the same material, which can only be obtained at his Establishment, 39, Bruton street

MICROSCOPES.—J. AMADIO'S BOTANICAL MICROSCOPES, packed in mahogany case, with three Powers, Condenser, Pincers, and two Slides, will show the Animalcule in water. Price 10s. 6d. Address JOSEPH AMADIO, 7, Throgmorton-street. A large assortment of Achromatic Microscopes.

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send to the HERALDIC OFFICE Name and County. No Fee for Search. Sketch, 2s. 6d.; or Stamps.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

LINCOLN'S INN HERALDIC OFFICE, First and only Established office in London, and during a series of years have the honour to be appointed Heraldic Artists to most of the Nobility and Gentry.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn GILBERT M'INTOSH, Engraver, Copied, &c.

STUDIO and LIBRARY. Open 10 to 4 daily. MONUMENTAL BRASSES
Ecclesiastic Seals, Illuminated, &c. Arms Painted and Quartered, H. & W.T. Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn

GENTLEMEN having SKETCHES, give them to persons who do not know their Arms to the Laws of Heraldry; therefore the Heraldic Office now executes them. Book plate Arms, 12s.; Crest on Seals, &c., 5s. 6d.
H. SALT, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

HERALDIC S. IGNET CREST RING.—Solid fine Gold, Blue Stone, Onyx, or Cornelian, with Crest Engraved, £1 15s.; or Post-free Order. Presentation Seals, &c. H. SALT, Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office, Lincoln's-inn.

HERALDIC ENGRAVING.—Book Plate, with Arms, 7s.; Crest on Seal or Ring, 6s. 6d.; on Die, 5s. Arms quartered and painted. L. wer Press with Crest Die, 18s. Carriage-free for stamps. Decay Warner and Official Seals.—Mr CULLETON, Royal Heraldic Office, 2, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane). Six heraldic artists constantly employed.

ROYAL HERALDIC OFFICE and GENEALOGICAL MUSEUM for GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND, 2, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane). Family Pedigrees Traced from Ancient Manuscripts. Monastic Records, "Domesday Books," and all Public Records. Search, 2s. 6d.; Extract, 5s. Family Arms Found free of charge. Sketch, 2s.; in Colours, 5s. 6d. or stamps. Armorial Bearings Painted. Members of the College of Arms (the only legal office in London). The Heraldic Studio and Library open from 11 to 4.—Mr CULLETON, Genealogist.

THE PEN SUPERSEDED.—MARKING LINEN.—The most easy, permanent, and best method of marking all kinds of linen, silk, or books, is with the PATENT ELECTRO-SILVER PLATES Any person can use them Initial plate, 1s.; name plate, 2s.; set of movable numbers, 2s. Sent postfree for stamps. Movable alphabets, a, d cipher, with shifting dates —T. CULLETON, Patentee Heraldic Engraver to the Queen, 2, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane, W.C.—No connection with any other house.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

THE ECONOMICAL WONDER of the DAY.—HAMILTON'S MODERN INSTRUCTIONS for the PIANOFORTE. 1200 pages, 48s. Duto for Singing, 3s.; Hamilton's Dictionary of Musical Terms, 69th Edition, 1s.; and Carke's Catechism of the Rudiments of Music, 45th Edition, 1s.
The Ballad of the Day FADING AWAY, as sung by MDlle Piccolomini and Miss Poole Music and Words 2s. each net. Fairy Bells: Duto Duto Two Voices 2s. 6d.
Marliano JENNY GOLDSCHMIDT LIND gave the permission to Robert Cocks and Co.'s Octavo Editions of MESSIAH, 2s., or 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 10s., and 10s.; and the CREATION, 2s., or 3s., 4s. 6d., and 10s. from which she sang on her recent appearance in England.—N.B Specimen Pages of Sixteen of the HANDBOOKS for the ORGANIST (in each guide and pamphlet) sent free.
ST. VALENTINE'S MORNING.—New Song. By the composer of "The Postman's Knock," words by —Burlington, Esq. (of the Theatre Royal, Haymarket). Price 2s. illustrated 2s. 6d.
MOZART'S 1st and 12th MASSES; MOZART'S Requiem, Haydn's 1st Mass Beethoven's 1st Mass, Complete Each arranged for John Bishop. English and Latin words complete
The QUEEN'S LANCERS (as danced in Paris). A new set of Quadrilles, with new figures for night or sixteen persons Composed by ALPHONSE LEDUC Plain Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s
The LANCERS.—Polka. By ALPHONSE LEDUC. 2s Lond on: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, W

KOENIG'S JOURNAL for CORNET-à-PISTONS and PIANOFORTE for MARCH contains Divertente Il Barbiere di Siviglia, Quando le sere (Linda Miller), Grand Lancers Waltz, by D'Egville, and the Soldier's Polka, by D'Albert. Price 1s., postage-free. The First Part of Koenig's Tutor for Cornet-à-Pistons is now ready, price 8s Jullien and Co.'s Portfolio for Cornet Solo (No. 1) contains fourteen popular airs, price 1s
JULLIEN and CO., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S BILLET-DOUX WALTZ, Beautifully Illustrated by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.
JULLIEN and CO., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S MY MARY ANN POLKA. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.
JULLIEN and CO., 214, Regent-street, W

JULLIEN'S MINNIE POLKA, Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s., postage-free
JULLIEN and CO., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S FLIRTATION POLKA, performed with the greatest success at Her Majesty's Theatre, beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s., postage-free.
JULLIEN and CO., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S FRENCH QUADRILLE, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.
214, Regent-street, W

JULLIEN'S CONSTANCE WALTZ. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.
214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S EXCELSIOR WALTZ, performed by Herr Koenig at M. Jullien's Concerts with the greatest success and nightly encores. Price 4s., postage-free
JULLIEN and CO., 214, Regent street, W.

G. A. OSBORNE'S NEW PIANOFORTE WORKS—
1. Ah che il Morte, and the Miserere
2. Fantasia on favourite airs, in Il Trovatore.
3. No, non turbar, and Di provenza il mar.
4. Libiamo and Fanciul e grato.
5. Robert, tol qui l'amo.
6. A favourite Russian air, as a Duet.
Price of each 3s., postage-free.
JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

SABBATH STRAINS: a Collection of favourite Sacred Melodies, easily and effectively arranged for Pianoforte, By FRANZ NAVA. Price of each, as Solo or Duet, 1s., postage-free
No. 1. I know that my Redeemer liveth.
2. With verdure clad
3. Agnus Dei, from Mozart's 1st Mass
4. Before Jehovah's awful throne
5. Holy, holy, Lord God Almighty.
6. Gloria in Excelsis.
7. Hear my prayer.
8. Sun thou wilt not leave.
9. Quel amichevo vero.
10. Vital spark of heavenly flame.
11. My song shall be of mercy.
12. Gloria, from Haydn's 12th Mass.
13. O Lord, our Governor
14. Lord, remember David.
15. The marvellous work.
16. Dona nobis pacem.
17. Kyrie, from Mozart's 12th Mass.
18. Vanish before the holy beams.
19. O, had I Jubal's lyre.
20. Credo in unum Deum
21. Sanctus and Benedictus.
22. In Jewry is God known.
23. He was despised.
24. Cujus animam.
JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

D'EGVILLE'S NEW LANCERS, for Sixteen or Eight Persons, are now ready for Pianoforte, by LOUIS D'EGVILLE, with a full description of the figures. Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 3s., post free
JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W

D'EGVILLE'S GREEN LEAVES WALTZ, for Pianoforte. Price 4s., postage-free. Illustrated by Brandard.
JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent street, W

JULLIEN AND CO.'S
MUSICAL PRESENTATION LIBRARY.
Three Guineas per annum.

Three Guineas' worth of Music presented gratis, to every Annual Subscriber to the above Library

Subscribers are liberally supplied on loan, with every description of New Vocal and Instrumental Music, and have also at their disposal upwards of Three Thousand Volumes, including the standard Operas, Italian, German, French, and Irish songs, and all kinds of Instrumental Music.

At the expiration of the Term of Subscription, each Subscriber has the privilege of selecting—for his own property—from 100,000 different pieces,

THREE GUINEAS' WORTH OF MUSIC

| Terms of Subscription | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| For One Year | £2 | 2 | 0 | For Three Months | £1 | 5 | 0 |
| For Six Months | £3 | 3 | 0 | For One Month | £0 | 10 | 6 |

JULLIEN and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY.
Three Guineas' worth of Music Gratis to all Subscribers
Prospectuses sent free on application to Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

MUSICAL LIBRARY.—10,000 New English and Foreign Compositions of interest and merit, published during the last eighteen months, have just been added to the UNIVERSAL CIRCULATING MUSICAL LIBRARY, Catalogue, Chappell, 50, New Bond-street. Subscribers presented with one guinea's worth of Music. Quarterly Catalogue, 2s.; Complete Catalogue, 6s. 6d.; containing more than 30,000 distinct works. Prospectus on application to Messrs. D SCHEURMANN and CO., 96, Newgate-street, E C

JULLIEN and CO.'S CONCERTINAS, by the most celebrated MAKERS, as used by Signor Regondi, &c., &c.
No 1.—For Concert-room Concertina, 48 silver touches, highly ornamented £ s. d. 12 12
No. 2.—The Monstrosian Concertina, 48 ivory keys .. .. .. .. .. 10 10
No. 3. The Amateur Concertina, 48 ivory keys .. .. .. .. .. 8 8
No. 4. The Everyday Concertina, 48 ivory keys .. .. .. .. .. 6 6
JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN and CO.'S CORNET-à-PISTONS, Approved and tried by Herr Koenig
Manufactured by ANTOINE SOUSTIOR.
No. 1.—The Drawing-room Concert-à-Pistons (by Antoine Cornet(s), used by Herr Koenig .. .. .. .. £8 8 0
2.—The Concert-room Cornet-à-Pistons (by Antoine Cornet(s), used by Herr Koenig, at M. Jullien's Concerts 6 6 0
3.—The Military Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. .. 5 5 0
4.—The Amateur Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. .. 3 3 0
5.—The Every Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. .. 2 2 0
6.—The Oval ears Cornet-à-Pistons (First quality) .. 1 1 0
7.—The Ordinary Cornet-à-Pistons (Second quality) .. 0 12 0
List of Prices, with Drawings of the Instruments, sent on application Instruments of every description supplied at the lowest possible prices.—JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, London, W

MUSICAL BOX DEPOT, 84, Cornhill, London, for the sale of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, made by the celebrated Messrs. NICOLE (Freres), of Geneva. Large sizes, four airs, 14in long, £4; six airs, 18in. long, £6 8s.; eight airs, 20 in. long, £8; and twelve airs, 20½ in. long, £13 13s., selections from the most eminent composers, including popular, national, and operatic airs, together with hymns and other sacred music. A variety of Swiss Musical Snuff-boxes, playing two tunes, 14s. 6d. and 18s; three tunes, 20s.; and four tunes, 42s. each. Lists of tunes, &c., may be had gratis, and sent post-free.

THE THAMES STEAM FERRIES or FLOATING BRIDGE COMPANY, LIMITED.
Capital, £75,000, in 7500 Shares of £10 each
With Power to Increase
Deposit £2 per Share.
Incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies' Act, 1856.
DIRECTORS.
Hon. Fred. William Cadogan, Subscription Telegraph Company, 30, Cornhill
Frederick George, Esq., Finchley-road, St. John's Wood
Jonathan Hutchinson, Esq., Brompton-place
Thomas Jackson, Esq., Pimlico
Charles L. Peel, Esq., 99, Cornhill
(With power to add to their number)
BANKERS—The London and Westminster
John Murray, Esq., M.I.C.E., 11, Great Queen-street, Westminster; and on Finland
ACTING ENGINEER
Henry Palfrey Stephenson, Esq., A.I.C.E., 56, Pall-mall
SOLICITOR
The Commercial Bank of London
SOLICITORS
Messrs Moores and Sills, 16, Great Bond-street.
Messrs Tucker and New, 25, Clement's-inn, Lombard-street.
SECRETARY—Mr. Henry Hill
Offices of the Company, 30, Cornhill

This Company is formed for the establishment of Steam Ferries or Floating Bridges at various points across the River Thames

The necessity for additional means of communication between the north and south sides of the River is most severely felt by the greatly increased population, and the rapidly-exceeding importance of the trade of the Metropolis, has become such as to render further facilities for safe and expeditious traffic indispensable

It must be the endeavour of the Directors to avoid the interference of the numerous vessels of all descriptions navigating the River, and to establish a means of communication which shall be free from the risk of fog, and other impediments to which the navigation of the River is subject

The Company will not exceed £2 per share every three months, and interest at the rate of five per cent per annum will be allowed on all sums paid in advance of calls, and on the shares paid to advance

Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained from J. S. Walker, Esq., Shrubbery, 35, Austinfriars; or from the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company, 9, Billiter-street, London.

And from the undersigned Bankers, to whom applications must be addressed. Letters must be accompanied by the receipt of Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co., for 1s. per share on the number of shares applied for. This deposit will be returned in the event of the application not being acceded to.

JOHN MATTHEWSON, Secretary.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY (Limited).
The Company having now nearly duly registered under the Act limiting the liability of shareholders, and advices having been received from their Agents, that the REMAINING SHARES will be immediately ALLOTTED
Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained from J. S. Walker, Esq., Shrubbery, 35, Austinfriars; or from the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company, 9, Billiter-street, London.
By order of the Board,
W. WILLIAMSON HILL, Chairman.
JOHN BULNS, Managing Director

EXHIBITION, 114, New Bond-street.—Messrs. DICKINSON beg to announce their intention, on the 16th MARCH, to THROW OPEN their LARGE GALLERIES of PORTRAITS and other WORKS of ART, exercising at their establishment, for PUBLIC EXHIBITION, having been favoured by the proprietors with the loan of the Portraits for that purpose. The Exhibition will contain all their choicest Photographic Pictures of the Royal Family, comprising the portraits in the life-size oil picture, likewise their new discovery of the perfect adaptation of real ivory to photographic purposes, guaranteed not to change or fade.

CAMDEN HOUSE SCHOOL, BRIGHTON.—Principal Mr. WILLIAM OLDING.—As there were no Vacancies, when announced, applications were long ago closed. Mr. Olding has, at a considerable outlay enlarged the premises. The next Quarter commences on Wednesday, March 25.

EDUCATION.—There are VACANCIES in a old-established SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN. Address, M. S., Cadogan-terrace, Chelsea.

EDUCATION FREE.—To Gentlemen with Large Families.—A Nobleman has a NOMINATION, which he will be happy to place at the disposal of Parents. Address H. H., 9, Cadogan-terrace, Sloane-street, Chelsea.

ILKLEY WELLS HYDROPATHIC ESTABLISHMENT and HOTEL.—This splendid Mansion, situate amidst mountain scenery, in the finest part of Yorkshire, enjoys the most salubrious climate, affords an unrivalled resort for 100 guests. Physician, Dr Hitchcock. For Prospectus (with view) address Mr. STRACHAN, Ilkley Wells, near Otley

CITY of LONDON HOSPITAL for DISEASES of the CHEST, Victoria-park
Under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. Prince Albert, K.G.
President—His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, K.G
Treasurer—H. Edmund Gurney, Esq.
The Committee have the gratification to announce that the NINTH ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL of this Charity is arranged to take place at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, on WEDNESDAY, the 18th of MARCH, and that the Right Hon. the Earl Granville has kindly consented to preside. They have also pleasure in stating that the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, and many influential friends have intimated their intention of being present as Stewards on the occasion.
The benefits of the Institution have recently been greatly extended. During the last year 262 patients were admitted into the Hospital; and the out-door practice, which has been materially increased in number since the foundation of the Charity, amounted to 5687, or to 918 more than during the previous twelve months.
Not less than a sum of 14000 per annum is required to maintain the Charity in its present state of efficiency, and to continue the amount of medical and other means of accomplishing, while there still remains a loan on the building, and outstanding liabilities to the amount of £7000
The present current income from annual Subscriptions amounts to only £600, and, as the Charity is entirely dependent upon voluntary support, the Committee most urgently appeal to the public for their liberal aid on the present occasion.
CHARLES MASON, Barrister, Bevan, and Co., 54, Lombard-street.
HENRY BEWELL, Hon. Sec.
City Office, 6, Liverpool-street. RICHARD F SLATER, Sec

THE REGISTRAR-GENERAL reports, as the result of the recent very inclement weather, a large increase in the number of deaths from pulmonary affections At the CITY of LONDON HOSPITAL for DISEASES of the CHEST, Victoria-park, applications for relief are, from the same cause, and the destitute condition of the working-classes in the eastern districts of the metropolis, unprecedentedly numerous The Committee, therefore, most earnestly appeal to the benevolent for pecuniary assistance to enable them to continue to extend the generally-acknowledged usefulness of its Institution.
RICHARD F. SLATER, Secretary.
6, Liverpool-street, 4th March, 1857

CANCER HOSPITAL, London and Brompton.
Secretary's Office, 167, Piccadilly, opposite to Bond-street.
The Committee have pleasure in stating that an important progress has been made in successfully treating this hitherto-considered intractable malady. In the course of the last 18 months 346 cases which have been received, all have been alleviated—the disease in many has been arrested others have been completely eradicated upon and it now only remains for time to show how many are absolutely cured
The COMMITTEE SOLICIT pecuniary AID to maintain the current expenses of the establishment. Our guide constitutes a governor, and ten guineas a governorship, which may be paid at the bankers Messrs. Coutts and Co., Strand, or at the Secretary's office, where every information relative to the charity may be obtained.
By order, WILL COCKERELL, Secretary

MR. JOHN DAVIES, Surgeon-Dentist, has the honour of notifying to his Nobility, Gentry, and Public generally that he may be personally consulted in every branch of Dental Surgery as usual American, French, and English ether employed on the premises.—Russell House, corner of Euston-square, New-road

MEDICINE CHESTS of well-seasoned wood, with accurately-stoppered Bottles.—The largest Stock in London is at W. T. COOPER'S, Pharmaceutical Chemist, 26, Oxford-street, W. Illustrated Catalogues free by post

LADIES NURSING NEW NIPPLE SHIELDS, for taking away all pain in nursing, preventing, and immediately curing, cracked or sore nipples.—BENJAMIN ELAM, 196, Oxford-street. 6s. 6d.; by post, 9d. extra.

INFANTS' NEW FEEDING BOTTLES.—From the "Lancet."—"We have seldom seen anything so beautiful as the Feeding-Bottles introduced by Mr ELAM," 196 Oxford-street. Whether for weaning, rearing by hand, or occasional feeding, they are quite unrivalled. 7s 6d each.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY (Limited),
For Establishing Steam Navigation on the Rivers of India
Capital—£250,000, in 25,000 Shares of £10 each
Deposit, 10s per share.
TRUSTEES
James Allen, Esq., Managing Director of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company.
W. Wilberforce Bird, Esq., late Deputy-Governor of Bengal.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS
Chairman—W. Wilberforce Bird, Esq., late Deputy-Governor of Bengal, 37, Sussex-square, London
Deputy Chairman—Lieut.-Colonel Grimes, Bengal Artillery, Ampthill Lodge, Southampton
John Bourne, Esq., London, late of Messrs. John Bourne and Co., Glasgow and Cork.
John Brown, Esq., London, of Messrs. M'Neilcal and Brown, Calcutta
Captain Cotton, R.N., Albert House, Whitchurch, Salop
Lieut.-Colonel Fagan, H.P.I.N., Chilton Lodge, Fulham.
James Kennedy, Esq., late of Messrs. Bury, Curtis, and Kennedy, Liverpool.
Sir John Login
Colonel the Hon Richard T Rowley, 47, Berkeley-square, London.
MANAGING DIRECTOR—John Bourne, Esq., 3, Billiter-street, London.
BANKERS—Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co.
SOLICITORS—Sidney R. Hill, Esq., 28, Throgmorton-street
BROKER—J. S. Walker, Esq., 35, Austinfriars
SECRETARY—John Matthewson
Offices, 9, Billiter-street, London.
This Company rests its claims to public support on two plain considerations: 1st That the rivers of Peninsular Africa navigable by rivers of India are rendered large profits; and 2nd, That the vessels of the Company, by the use of improvements to which it has the exclusive right, be able to carry three or four times the quantity of cargo that can be conveyed by the vessels at present employed. Cheap conveyance is necessary to India to enable the produce of the interior to compete with the cheaper labour of other countries. Of all known means of conveyance, the cheapest is conveyance by water, and railways, even when made, cannot compete with the ordinary water route by the use of the improved steamers which will still remain the great arteries of commerce, as has been the case of America, where superior steam navigation has shown that railways and river conveyance assist instead of opposing one another. The rivers of India are vast arteries—they flow through the richest parts of the country—and they only require that vessels should be established to navigate with safety the cities of New Orleans or Brooklyn with the city of New York, U.S
The Company seeks to obtain powers to establish Steam Ferries wherever they may be required, but the efforts of the company will be principally directed to establishing steam communication with the trade extending from Lombridge to Greenwich on the south, and from London-bridge to Blackwall on the northern shore
The great object of the Company is to carry over the traffic of four ferries But the Directors propose in the first instance to open the Steam Ferry at Woolwich, as the traffic at that point is found below the item of coal shopping; the other in the neighbourhood of Hungerford-market
By an elaborate calculation based upon experiments and carefully-collected statistics, it is shown that at least one-fourth of the heavy traffic through the leading approaches over London-bridge and Waterloo-bridge, viz. coal, timber-laden thoroughfares, coal waggons, carts, &c., from the Docks, on the north side, find their way over the river without making the circuitous route over London-bridge, at a vast loss of time, and consequent waste of cost, from which at present they cannot escape
The Steam Ferry, which a steam Ferry or Bridge is brought to the landing place, at all times of tide, to receive and discharge traffic of whatever description, the Directors have arranged that the Bridge under circumstances in which other vessels would be subject to a considerable degree of motion, and the perfect facility of providing for rapid passages, without offering any obstruction to the navigation of the river, and the strongest recommendations for the adoption of this system; and, were further proof required of the efficiency and safety of the proposed Ferries, it would only be necessary to state that no obstruction or accident has at any time occurred in the port of Tyne, when the arrivals and departures of vessels amount to upwards of 27,000 in the year
If the positive convenience to the public should prove as great as it is fairly expected it will be, it is equally certain that the capital invested will be highly remunerative, as may be inferred by the present price of the North and South Shields Ferry Steamers, which, being of £50 each, are now quoted at £98 to £100
The promoters of the scheme have secured the services of level gentlemen, and of procuring the statistics upon which this enterprise is founded, as well as of securing the necessary approvals, are content to receive one-fourth of the net earnings after the payment of 4½ per cent dividend per annum on the paid-up capital of the Company
The Company has been incorporated in accordance with the provisions of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, 18.6, whereby the liability of the Shareholders will be limited to the amount of their respective shares The objects of the Company may be proceeded with before the whole amount of capital is subscribed
Applications for shares may be made in the following form to the respective Solicitors of the Company, or to the Secretary, at the Company's Offices, No. 30, Cornhill, London, from whom Prospectuses and any other information may be had
All applications for shares must be preceded by a payment to the credit of the Company, at the Bankers, of £1 per Share on every Share applied for in part of the deposit thereon. In the event of less than the whole number of shares being allotted, the amount paid in excess will be appropriated towards the balance of the deposit of £2 per share, which will be due and payable on allotment. If no allotment being made, the whole amount will be returned in full. The remainder of the deposit is to be paid on allotment
No 30, Cornhill, London, February, 1857

Extract from Mr JOHN MURRAY's Report
January 31st, 1857.

"The passage may be speedily effected by powerful boats under proper management, without risk of collision to other vessels, or obstruction to the navigable thoroughfare of the river.
"Such ferries, once established, would soon produce a traffic likely to prove remunerative to the parties engaged in them, from the loss of time and tear to carriages and horses, and the great saving of coal, by the shortening of the distance between the north side of the Thames and the northern districts of the metropolis."

Extract from Report of Mr. H P. STEPHENSON
January 31st, 1857.

"These Ferries will accommodate all kinds of traffic at all times of the tide. Their great utility, requiring no pier nor abutments, and the proposed mode of working perfectly free from all incident to ordinary ferries, and especially precluding all accident with steam vessels, such a very large profit will remain. The amount of capital is simply and fairly estimated."

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES
To the Directors of the Thames Steam Ferries or Floating Bridge Company (Limited).

Gentlemen,—Having paid to the Commercial Bank of London the sum of £ , for your credit, I request you to allot me Shares in the Thames Steam Ferries or Floating Bridge Company (Limited), and I engage to accept such Shares, or any less number that may be allotted to me, and to pay the Deposit and Calls thereon in accordance with the Prospectus, and to execute the Articles of Association and such other instruments as may be requisite or my part as a Shareholder. I am, Gentlemen, &c.,

Name in full .....
Address .....
Profession or trade .....
Date .....

THE COUNTY and GENERAL GAS CONSUMERS COMPANY (Limited)
Capital, £50,000 (with power to increase),
In 10,000 Shares of £5 each: Deposit £1 per Shilling per Share on application, and Fifteen Shillings per Share on allotment.
Established for the purpose of supplying with gas populous districts, and new localities with populations of 2000 to 3000 and upwards, not possessing its advantages
The Engineer has already examined several towns, some of which have applied to be lit with gas These with all practicability, form the first operations of the Company
Applications for charts, prospectuses, &c., to be made at the Offices of the Company, 76, King William-street, City; or of the Brokers, Messrs Crosley Brothers, 30, Cornhill

ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY.—Notice is hereby given, that this Company will on MONDAY, the 9th instant, REMOVE from No. 3, LOMBARD-STREET, to their new Offices, No. 29, LOMBARD-STREET, at the corner of Clement's-lane.
By order of the Board, CHARLES DENNEY, Secretary.
The Fire Premium in 1854 amounted to about £150,000, placing the Company among the very largest offices in the kingdom; indeed, it is believed that there are only three or four offices which equal it in Fire Revenue

LIFE BRANCH.
The Life Revenue during the past year amounted to about £40,000, the new premiums alone exceeding £10,000 A Bonus was declared in 1854 of £2 per cent per annum on the sum assured, averaging about 80 per cent of the premiums paid, being one of the largest ever declared All the Insurances effected during the present year will participate in the next Bonus in 1859
The paid-up and invested Capital, including Life Funds, amounts to nearly Half a Million Sterling.

KENNINGTON AGRICULTURAL and CHEMICAL COLLEGE, Lower Kennington-lane, near London
Principal—J. C. NICHOLS, F.G.S., F.S.S.
Youths intended for the Profession of Land Stewards, Chemical and Manure Manufacturers, Managers of Farms, Graziers, or who desire to follow out Agriculture in the College such as to fully qualify them for their respective callings, will find at this College and Junior Academy may be known on application to the Principal.
ANALYTICAL AND ASSAY DEPARTMENT
Analyses and Assays of every description are promptly and accurately executed in the Laboratories of the College.

LONDON ARMOURY COMPANY (Limited), Manufacturers of ADAMS' PATENT REVOLVERS, with all improvements. May be had of any Gunsmith in London, and in the principal towns in the United Kingdom.

CONTINENTAL DAILY EXPRESS PARCELS AGENCY, 32, GRACECHURCH-STREET
Samples of all kinds, books, papers, and articles for private use, are sent daily to all parts of the Continent through this Agency, and are, by special arrangement with the Belgian State Railway and Royal Prussian Post, laminated with the mails throughout Rates, food and medicals, to be obtained at chief office, 32, Gracechurch-street; Universal, 34, Regent-circus. Parcels to go the same day must be at the City office by three p.m

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 849.—VOL. XXX.] SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1857. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE.

TURBULENCE AND AGGRESSION.

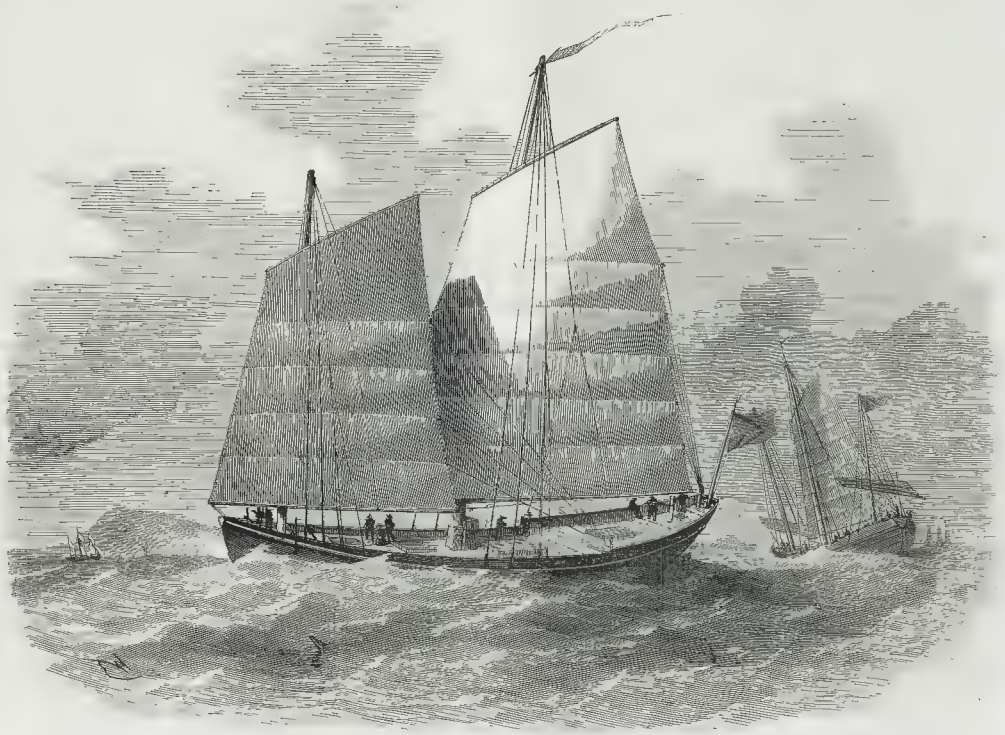
MR. DISRAELI, in the desultory debate of Monday last, on the reduction of the Property and Income Tax to sevenpence in the pound, took occasion to designate the foreign policy of Lord Palmerston and the present Government as "turbulent and aggressive." The epithets were intended to serve an electioneering purpose. Let us see whether there be any justice in them.

Mr. Cobden, and, it now appears, Mr. Disraeli—at least while the latter gentleman is out of office—are in favour of a system of foreign policy on the part of this country which, for want of better or more appropriate words, might be designated as the Chinafication, or the Japanisation, of Great Britain. They and their Parliamentary combination—Mr. Gladstone inclusive—would shut up the English, Scotch, and Irish within the narrow limits of these islands, there to weave, spin, hammer, and plough;—sufficient, like the Chinese, for their own purposes and wants. Having a large and splendid empire in North America, a magnificent empire in Asia, a very promising empire in South Africa, and an empire in Australia destined on some future day to equal if not to eclipse the glories of all these, the men of peace, who aspire to govern this great nation on Chinese and Japanese principles, would, if true to their present professions, declare to our Asiatic, our African, and our American neighbours (happily we have none in Australia) that the rights and interests of the British people in those regions should no longer enjoy any protection from the British Government; that to defend an Englishman or an English ship, when attacked, would be on the part of Great Britain a "turbulent and aggressive" course of policy that could not be endured by a nation which had an objection to a Property and Income Tax. This is, in theory, a very fair-looking policy. If duly carried out, we should, doubtless, after a very short period, have few wars or disputes on hand. India would become Russian. Constantinople would be the head-quarters of the Czar. Canada would defend herself in our default, and withdraw her allegiance from the weak and pusillanimous mother country. The Cape colony and Australia would imitate the example. Gibraltar would be reannexed to Spain, if the French did not take advantage of the tempting opportunity to snatch the prize; and the Empire of Great Britain would collapse into the dimensions which it had in the time of the eighth Henry. All disputes with foreign nations would thus become extremely improbable; unless, indeed, some ambitious Autocrat of all the Russias, or some Potentate nearer home, or perchance some Anglo-Irish President or Dictator of the great American Republic, should attempt upon helpless Britain the policy pursued by the late Czar Nicholas upon the Ottoman Empire. We should have but one war in such a case, and that would be a war for the sanctity of our hearths and homes, and for the preservation, not solely of our independence, but perhaps of our very existence as a nation.—

> Come the eleventh Plague rather than this[should be!
> Come, rather sink us in the sea

It may suit the honest narrow-mindedness of Mr. Cobden, and the factious purpose of Mr. Disraeli, and of those motley-coloured politicians who, under his leadership, seek to overthrow the Government, to represent the jealous vindication of the national honour whenever or wherever assailed as a turbulent and aggressive policy; but the sound common sense of the British people is not to be muddled away by the ingenious sophistries of the one debater or by the flashy rhetoric of the other. The British people dislike war; but they also dislike to be the tame and patient sufferers of oppression and wrong. Moreover, they are extremely sensitive on the point of honour. They are not like the stolid ass that will take a cudgelling, and browse the thistle as resignedly as before, but have more points of resemblance with the high-mettled racer which will brook no indignity. They have studied closely the history of the last few years, and have convinced themselves by unhappy experience that it is the stupid cry of "Peace! Peace!" which has brought all its recent wars and disputes upon the country. They know that if, by any judgment upon them for their manifold sins, they should be cursed with such a man as Mr. Cobden for their Prime Minister, three months would not elapse before they found themselves at war with the whole world. With our army disbanded, our ships rotting in ordinary, and information pertinaciously conveyed to all the kingdoms, empires, and potentates of the earth, that we would submit to any amount of contumely, insult, and wrong, rather than resort to the strength of our own good right hands to ward off the evil-doer and the aggressor, we should not lack enemies. We should be in the position of the Bank of England if it had no one to guard its treasures, with the



MERCHANTS' LORCHAS EMPLOYED IN CANTON RIVER. (SEE NEXT PAGE)

[illegible] abolished, and the swell mobs men and the ticket-of-leave [illegible] disputed possession of the streets. But the whole argument [illegible] duty; and, although Mr. Cobden may not know it, Mr. [illegible] does. But, if to the ignorant man we give the praise [illegible] honesty, what epithet shall we employ to designate the conduct of him who is not ignorant?

The policy of Lord Palmerston has been the true policy of peace. It is peace that the country requires, and peace that it will have. Lord Aberdeen and Mr. Cobden, being peace men, brought upon us the Russian war, by leading the late Emperor Nicholas to believe that they would not resist his wicked aggression against Turkey. Had Lord Palmerston been Prime Minister in 1853 we should in all human probability have had no war against Russia, for Russia would not have dared to carry into effect her aggressive policy. In like manner, if a well-known member of the Peace Society had not unfortunately been made Governor of Hong-Kong by the Aberdeen Administration, we shou'd very likely have had no war against the Cantonese at the present moment. The ferocious and sanguinary Mandarin who governs Canton knew that Sir John Bowring was a man who disapproved of war as inhuman, unchristian, and unphilosophical—who was a member of the amiable league of Universal Brotherhood, and a warm admirer of Chinese literature and—the Chinese decimal system. On a man so peaceable might not any attempt be made, and any insult be committed? On such a philosopher of the Outside Barbarians might not the immense superiority of the Flowery Land be violently proved? Yeh thought so, and took advantage of the opportunity. But he miscalculated his time—and misunderstood his man. Sir John Bowring proved to have both a head and a heart; and, peaceable as he was by nature and by education, found that he could only endure insult and wrong up to a certain point, and that Yeh had overstepped it. All the world knows the result. Had Lord Lyons been Governor of Hong-Kong, or Mr. Bernal Osborne, or even Sir Robert Peel, the dispute might, perhaps, have been "looming in the future;" but it would not at this moment have a broad scope for Mr. Cobden's philosophy, Mr. Gladstone's special reading, Lord Derby's divinity, or Mr. Disraeli's audacity.

To repel turbulence and aggression, and thus to secure peace to the country, has been the object of Lord Palmerston's foreign policy. To invite turbulence and aggression, and thus to provoke war, is or would be the tendency of the policy of those who oppose him in Parliament, and are about to oppose him on the hustings. But the country will pronounce its verdict and maintain the Ministry, whose boast may be that they have maintained the honour of England and given it peace in Europe, as they will hereafter give it peace in Asia, not by cowardly truckling to any foe, great or small, but by unflinching and honest vindication of national honour and national right wherever over and by whomsoever assailed.

CHINESE SHIPPING.

UPON the preceding page we have engraved a "lorcha," the description of vessel which has led to so much dispute in the debates in Parliament upon the war with China. The lorcha is used in the Coasting trade of China by the English and Portuguese. Its position in the dispute is well explained in the following passage from a letter to the Times, with the signature of "A Voice from Hong-Kong":—

"As to the lorcha question a great point was made, if I recollect rightly, on the idea that the Chinese authorities had no knowledge of our practice of granting sailing letters to colonial craft (for they are essentially colonial and not British craft). Now, it is notorious that one of the most [illegible] sources of employment for these craft, and in many instances [illegible] inducement for obtaining the sailing letter, is the [illegible] one by Chinese merchants, but by Chinese pirates and the [illegible] of these craft are employed in carrying cargo and fishing [illegible] the most part fleets of such craft often leaving Hong-Kong [illegible] without intimations of a vessel's passing at night in the grand colony sailing-letter read to obviate the necessity of [illegible] attacks. These vessels rarely carry more than one 6-pr. Even if [illegible] are generally manned and armed to meet [illegible] Chinese [illegible] But a good bigger. A modification to this [illegible] only that all craft has her name and port painted [illegible] Now, and, as the Chinese always speak of a lorcha [illegible] foreign vessel, it seems rather begging the question to suppose that the Mandarin boarded the Arrow under the idea that she was a Chinese vessel, even if the flag was not flying. It will be remembered that all the information so glibly given by Yeh about the ownership of the vessel was obtained by examination of the men taken from on board her. As to the expiry of the sailing letter the point is hardly worth mentioning, were it not to put a case actually once happening [illegible] my own knowledge. A coasting-schooner, carrying the British and Canadian sailing-letter, did not return to Hong-Kong until more than two months after the expiry of the sailing-letter, and had been engaged [illegible] all the time, lying for some time also at one of the five consular ports and bringing specie on board to the extent of upwards of 80,000 dollars. Do the opponents of Lord Wensleydale's law mean to say that this vessel was not entitled to the protection of the British flag, or that the [illegible] at the port she was lying at could not or should not protect her [illegible] interference? As to the national character or name had she [illegible] come? Fancy, if any of them had committed a crime on [illegible] before, even after the expiry of the sailing-letter, he would have [illegible] poor chance. He had not left British Asia, that Supreme [illegible] of Hong Kong had no jurisdiction, because the offence had been [illegible] within China, on board a vessel not being a British one.

"In page 251 we have also engraved a specimen of Chinese Smuggling-craft, as described from the Shanghai Times.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

INSTRUCTIONS have been received at Woolwich from the Commander-in-Chief, ordering four companies of the Royal Artillery to be held in readiness for immediate embarkation for China.

Much activity is visible in Portsmouth Dockyard early and late [illegible] now, workmen being employed from five o'clock in the morning until [illegible] night in getting ready the steam-ships Transit, Assistance, and [illegible] for the embarkation of the troops under orders for China.

The Singapore Free Press of Thursday, Jan. 22, states that her Majesty's brig-of-war Camilla passed Anjer on the 7th, and intended to proceed to China by the Moluccas Sea. The screw-steamer Adventure, Bivouac, belonging to the Borneo Company, also left Singapore at noon on the 21st for Hong-Kong, having on board three companies of Sepoys and a detachment of European artillerymen for Hong-Kong. This vessel was dispatched on the requisition of the Governor of Hong-Kong. The troops consisted of two companies of the 34th Madras Infantry and the European artillerymen from Penang, and the remaining company of the 34th Madras Native Infantry from Singapore.

The 2nd Battalion of the 82nd, and the 90th Regiments will proceed immediately to China. A fourth regiment is also ordered to embarkation for the same destination, but its number we have not heard. The 82nd Highlanders, however, we believe, is the regiment. These corps will be sent out in their full strength—about 1000 each, of all ranks (not including officers). Thus, about 4000 troops will embark at Portsmouth in a few days for the seat of war in the Celestial Empire. The steamers mentioned or ordered to be employed in carrying out these and the other forces (1000 marines) to their destination are her Majesty's ships Sanspareil, Retribution, Honaloya, Transit, Assistance, Adventure, Niton, and Furious, at Portsmouth. The four last named are not commissioned, but are expected to be so for this service. If these vessels bear the same complements as they did on their last service, they will add a reinforcement in seamen and marines of upwards of 2200.

ARCTIC LITERALITY.—M. de la Roquette, the eminent geographer, and Vice-President of the Geographical Society, of Paris, has contributed 100 francs to Lady Franklin's private expedition, about to be fitted out

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday.

PARIS is beginning to find that decidedly it did not amuse itself sufficiently during the Carnival, or, perhaps—nay, probably—it amused itself so much that, like those who have taken to drinking as a habit, it can't do without much amusement. So it convokes assemblies for soirées, concerts, &c., where people talk, play cards, and listen to, for the most part, very indifferent music; en attendant, very often, that a studied impromptu dance is got up to relax the limbs and spirits of the young people, under which head come nearly all persons under fifty who can get partners. Now, too, begins to reign in all its vigour the Lent epidemic of public concerts, during the continuance of which pianists, violinists—music-ists, in short, of every grade, style, and denomination, who can afford to throw away a few hundred francs in hiring a concert-room, and then giving away two-thirds of the tickets to coax people to go to hear them perform—follow that established mode of getting themselves presented to the public. Heaven knows we say this in no spirit of ridicule towards a class we hold in the highest consideration, the class of artists of all denominations; but towards a system which seems to entail little else but expense and mortification, with more or less remote prospect of ultimate advantage on the performer, and, in general, more ennui than enjoyment on the audience.

The affair of the Docks, more especially from the great interest attached to the name of one of the persons accused therein, that of M. Arthur Berryer, continues to excite the most eager attention here; but it seems probable that this will be even surpassed by that affixed to the approaching question respecting the abuse of power attributed to M. de Dreux-Brezé, Bishop of Moulines, which, being considered as a formal violation of the article of the Concordat, is, therefore, of a nature to be tried by the Council of State.

The conduct of M. de Dreux-Brezé, in giving to a priest a cure in itself perpetual, and at the same reserving to himself and exercising the right of discharging him therefrom at his own discretion, is one of the acts of arbitrary authority which has unquestionably added to establish so much discontent and ill feeling on the part of the lower ranks of the clergy against the upper, and the whole ecclesiastical body takes part against M. de Dreux-Brezé—one set, on account of the act of tyranny exercised on an individual of its class; the other, from the importance of the act being so marked as to bring the matter under the jurisdiction of the Council of State, or any other lateal authority, a matter always jealously regarded by the Church. The Pope, in expressing his regret for the murder of the Archbishop of Paris, added that he was by no means ignorant of the discontent existing among the secondary members of the French clergy, in consequence of the despotism of the Bishops. Whatever may be the decision of the Council of State (which has taken up the affair most unwillingly), there seems no possibility of M. de Dreux-Brezé continuing to hold his diocese, so strong is the current of public opinion against him.

The Emperor proposes to go, on the 1st of May, to Rennes, to inaugurate the continuation of the Western Railroad leading to that town. He also intends going, probably in the course of the summer, to Plombières, to lay the first stone of the Thermes, whose construction was decided on during his sojourn there last year. The Emperor receives at present every Monday any of the chief officers of State who require to consult with him on matters of public interest, and proposes establishing receptions on another day of the week for such persons as have obtained letters of audience—which letters, in consequence of there being two days of admittance instead of one, will be much more easily accorded.

The artesian well now being bored at Passy has already reached the depth of 510 metres, and in a few days, when the layer of stone that now lies between the diggers and the water is pierced, the work in this part will be accomplished. The body of water, which will be enormous—equal, some of the engineers assert, to a tenth of the volume of the Seine—will be received in a prodigious reservoir, now in course of erection, with drains to let off the waste in excess; and means are being adopted in this edifice to air the water, i.e., were this precaution neglected, it would asphyxiate the fish in the Bois de Boulogne, the artificial river in which is to be alimented from this source. On the occasion of the bursting forth of the stream from the earth, the Emperor, with several other distinguished personages, proposes to be present to witness this really curious spectacle.

M. Emile de Girardin breaks his prolonged silence by the publication of a new work, entitled "La Liberté," with an introduction likely to attract great and general attention. Madame de Girardin's salon continues to be filled with company of all classes and of every shade of opinion, although she loudly proclaims her own to be wholly Napoléonist.

In one of the latest meetings of the Academy of Science, M. Guérin-Méméville presented to the assembly several ears of wheat with straw upwards of two metres in length, and bearing grain of extraordinary size and abundance. The origin of this remarkable produce was five grains found in an ancient Egyptian tomb, where it must have lain for many centuries. Various experiments have tended to prove that the wheat in question is not only infinitely finer than the ordinary quality we possess, but that, treated in all respects the same, the quantity produced from a similar measure of seed is enormously greater. Near Morlaix, a field being divided, one half was sown with the Egyptian grain, the other with the common, under precisely similar circumstances. The former yielded upwards of sixty to one, the latter fifteen to one, and, when sown grain by grain in a line, it produced more than 656 for one.

THE OVERLAND MAIL—LATER NEWS FROM CHINA.

The steamer Calcutta arrived at Trieste on Wednesday, having started from Alexandria at three p.m. on the 6th of March. The letter-bags were at Alexandria, with dates from Bombay to the 6th February, Calcutta, February 7th, Madras, February 13th; and Hong-Kong, January 8th.

At Hong-Kong the attempt made to poison the European community had caused great consternation; one of the partners in a Chinese bakery had been arrested and committed for trial, with nine other Chinese. Admiral Seymour, at Canton, had withdrawn from the Factory gardens and the Dutch Folly. In reply to the treacherous attempts made by the Chinese against British life and property, the western suburbs of Canton had been burnt down.

Intelligence from Bushire had been received to the 23rd of January. The general health of the army was good, and the supplies were plentiful. No military operation had been undertaken. General Outram had not yet arrived. The conferences between Sir John Lawrence and Dost Mohammed broke up on the 28th January, when the Ameer departed for Cabul. It was asserted that a British Residency was about to be established at Candahar.

The Paris correspondent of the Morning Post says:—

There is every reason to believe, from the character of the despatches and private letters coming from China, that the war is not likely to terminate so soon as might be hoped. It is evident, also, that a considerable naval and military force must be on the watch for some time to come to protect the lives of Europeans, even when hostilities have ceased. The authorities of Pekin have both publicly and privately instructed the Celestials to stab and poison—in fact, possess themselves of the persons of the Barbarians by any means which their ingenious minds can suggest. It results, therefore, that at all the ports where Europeans reside by virtue of the Treaty of 1842, foreigners have either taken refuge on board ship, or forces have been landed for their protection. Ere long augmented naval and military resources will reach the spot, which will afford a material guarantee in hand to treat with "the Son of Heaven," as we ought to call the Emperor of China. Meanwhile it is reported at Canton that Tartar troops and an extensive navy of junks are to attack and drive away the invaders of the Celestial Empire. It was also said that Russia had offered assistance to the Emperor. At all events, it is pretty evident that we are again in for a Chinese war, and, if properly carried on, it is perhaps a fortunate event. Sooner or later it must have taken place. Hitherto we have never succeeded in making the Chinese authorities observe treaties. It has been proved that the Celestial Government has little control over its distant and inferior agents; hence the origin of continual grievances with foreigners, and hence the cause of a general, if not universal, disaffection which has been smouldering since 1842. The "Triad," or secret societies, exist throughout the empire, and their aim is to overthrow the present Tartar dynasty, and reform the existing oppressive and corrupt system of government. Under such circumstances to present European demonstration may be fraught with great events, although we hear the Imperialists and rebels have joined to oppose the English expedition. It is, however, exceedingly difficult to form a correct idea of Chinese politics, or know what is passing in the heart of the empire. The Jesuits know more about China than any one else. They and Russia (which Power extracted some treaties to form anomalous relations with Pekin are the only sources for internal information. The Jesuits have been in a large measure admitted to Pekin, more, at present, on the astronomical calculations for the Chinese Government. Many have been banished, but some have returned to Europe, and bring with them, it is reported, most valuable information. But to the publicity of this information might prevent future entrance; it is not likely to be given to the world. Nevertheless I am told the Jesuits declare a complete convulsion is inevitable. The Chinese are said to be essentially unbelievers in any form of religion whatever, and society is in the most demoralised condition. Many of the Jesuits are declared to have fallen victims to Chinese cruelty and bad faith.

AMERICA

The Royal mail steam-ship Europa arrived at Liverpool on Monday morning with news from New York to the 21th ult.

The House of Representatives, on the 20th ult., passed an original Tariff Bill, submitted by Mr. Campbell, of Ohio, by a vote of 110 against 84. The bill is the same as the last one reported from the majority of the Committee on Ways and Means, except several slight alterations.

The Senate was occupied on the 21st principally with a discussion on the bill granting a State government to Minnesota, which finally passed.

Mr. Buchanan has appointed General Cass to be Secretary of State, and Mr. Cobb to be Secretary of the Treasury, in his new Administration. These appointments (especially the latter) are evidence of Mr. Buchanan's adherence to the policy of the compromise effected by Clay and Webster in 1850 and 1851, resolving to discountenance, on the one hand, the agitation of slavery questions in the South, and, on the other hand, the Abolitionists and Free-soilers at the North. Such, at least, is the interpretation adopted by the New York Herald, which contends likewise that the choice of General Cass, though a well-known democrat, does not imply an assertion of the Monro doctrine of non-intervention, adding:—"On the contrary, we anticipate from the new Administration, and from General Cass, a definite settlement of these Central American entanglements through treaty stipulations with England. We are the more inclined to think so from the intimate connection, commercial and warlike between American and British interests on the other side of the world in China." It is considered that, as General Cass aspires to rule the destinies of the Secretary of State, he will, in giving the new President the aid of his diplomatic and national experience of the affairs of the Government, retire, and be succeeded by the Hon. Howell Cobb, now to be Secretary of the Treasury.

By the steam-ship Texas, dates from General Walker to the 3rd of February had been received at New York. On that day he had reached down to San Juan del Sur with 300 men, to receive the recruits from San Francisco. His head-quarters were at Rivas, and the allied forces, 1500 strong, were within a few distances of that town, they having occupied San Jorge, about three miles from Rivas and Virgin Bay, on the Lake. General Henningsen had had two fights with the troops of Canas, but did not succeed in driving him back. Walker is reported to be confident, and the army in good condition.

AUSTRALIA.

By the arrival of the Mermaid we have received files of papers from Melbourne to the 16th of December inclusive. The political news is of no importance. The following summary of news relating to the gold-fields is from the Melbourne Herald of the 15th December:—

"Our report for the week from the various gold fields is condensed into the following:—That recovered and diligent sub-treasury Avoca has been resuscitated by parties having struck paying ground, and an old and discouraged band has been again bit upon. At Ballarat they were succeeding as well as could be desired. At Bendigo life had been imparted by fresh alluvial ground and paying reefs having been discovered. The report from the Ovens is favourable, both in regard to the production of alluvial and rich quartz reef gold. At Kerang the gilds the digging community, while attending to their individual interests, are not forgetful of their social and political condition. The local court, sanitary, and other public measures being agitated at different assembled diggings."

Another "circular" says:—

The escorts have furnished us with a very fair amount of gold this week, and a larger amount than usual has been forwarded from Castlemaine. By the way, we may notice that two more nuggets from Korong have been sold at that field, and have arrived by this escort. They are not so large as those previously found, and weigh respectively 93 ounces and 122 ounces. It is singular to remark that these were found in the same claim as the large ones now at our office. We have reason to believe that a large emigration will take place from California to our fields immediately, as the prospects are anything but encouraging to miners in that country. Upwards of fifty persons arrived from there last week.

THE COURT.

The Queen and the Prince Consort, with the younger branches of the Royal Family, returned to Buckingham Palace on Thursday, on which day Prince Albert, on behalf of the Queen, held a Levée at St. James's Palace, which was very numerously attended.

Her Majesty continues to enjoy perfect health, and will now remain in London until after an approaching interesting event.

Lord Byron and Major-General Berkeley Drummond have succeeded Lord de Tabley and Mr. J. R. Ormsby Gore as the Lord and Groom in Waiting.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent will leave Frogmore on Monday for Clarence House, St. James's, for the season.

The Countess de Persigny has issued cards for an assembly at Albert-gate House, on Tuesday next.

The Countess Granville had an assembly on Thursday last at her residence in Bruton-street.

The Countess of Clarendon will have an assembly this evening (Saturday) at the noble Earl's private residence in Grosvenor-crescent.

The Countess of Derby had an assembly on Wednesday at the family mansion in St. James's-square.

The Viscountess Palmerston has issued cards for an assembly on Wednesday next.

Lord Carington, as Lord Lieutenant of the county of Bucks, entertained the Judges on the Norfolk Circuit and a large party, including the leading members of the Bar, at Ashridge Abbey, on Saturday last. The Judges remained at the Abbey until Monday morning.

The Baron and Baroness Alphonse de Rothschild arrived at Claridge's Hotel, on Tuesday, from Mentmore, Bucks. On Wednesday the Baron and Baroness left London for Paris, en route for Italy.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer gave his first Cabinet dinner on Wednesday last.

WILLS.—The will of the Right Hon. Digby, Lord Middleton, Baron Middleton, was proved in London under £25,000 personalty.—Benedict John Angel Angel, Esq., of Rumsey House, Wilts, £120,000. John Fownes Luttrell, Esq., of Dunster Castle, Somerset, £80,000.—Major General T. S. Trafford, £9000.—Mrs. Charlotte Howes, of Piccadilly, £45,000.—Charles Roberts, Esq., of St. Paul's Churchyard, and Tor Lodge, Tulse Hill, £70,000.—John Smith, Esq., of the Terrace, Putney, £45,000.

News from Buenos Ayres states that two mines, one of gold and the other of silver, have been discovered in the province of Catamarca. They are reputed the richest that have yet been discovered.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

THE flickering condition of the moribund Parliament has been duly illustrated this week. On Monday, at four o'clock, there was only just a House: and when the Speaker went to the Upper House, on being summoned to attend the first Royal Commission of the Session, he was supported by less than forty of his usual body-guard on these occasions. Members were at clubs, or attending the levees of Mr. Coppock and Mr Brown respectively, making up their electoral books, or distractedly balancing sentences in election addresses which were to please every body and commit nobody.

It could hardly have been generally known that Mr. Speaker was "to speak" that evening; otherwise a much fuller audience would have assembled to listen to the valedictori of, take him for all in all, the most perfect Parliamentary official that ever lived. The initiated observers in the House began early to suspect that something was about to take place—they perceived that one of Mr. Gurney's special shorthand writers took up a conspicuous station in the stenographic [illegible] that Sir John Shaw Lefevre, the Speaker's brother, came from the House of Lords and placed himself in a convenient position for seeing and hearing; that the Deputy Serjeant-at-Arms, on being relieved by his principal -which he generally is as soon as possible after undergoing the fatigue of bringing the mace into the House—did not immediately retire to recruit his exhausted strength, but resorted to the Members' Gallery; and that the seats at the end of the House, appropriated to Peers and distinguished foreigners, began to be overcrowded. By-the-by, among the spectators was Dr. Livingston, the African traveller, who, on his coming in, was warmly greeted by Mr. Layard, Mr. Cobden, Mr. Labouchere, and other members. A whisper now ran through the House that the Speaker was about to announce his retirement from Parliament and the chair of the House of Commons. Accordingly, shortly before five, when the Ministers and chiefs of the Opposition had arrived—but to a very thin House—Mr. Shaw Lefevre, in tones as clear and sonorous as ever, but yet tremulous with emotion, delivered an address to which no one habituated to that House could listen without a odd sensation about the throat and eyes; and the cheers which greeted Lord Palmerston's terse and pointed reply seemed as if they were delivered under protest; it being necessary to understand that members cheered only because it would not be manly for them to sob. Nothing could be more characteristic than his change of voice and manner when Mr. Shaw Lefevre, proceeding to ordinary business, desired the Clerk to read the order of the day. He was no longer a man he was the Speaker again.

In the business of the evening which followed it was not unamusing to observe the nervous inaptitude for the exact matter before the House which every member exhibited, except the Ministers. They, however, could be described as chuckling over the air of discomfiture which pervaded the rest of the assembly. Member after member spoke in [illegible] and sourcrest and engrossed were most of them with the seriousness of their situations, that when one of their number [illegible] executive style of speaking is generally the signal for the indulgence of the rather ponderous House of Commons' fun, stated in a ludicro-pathetic voice that that was probably the last time he should address the House, nobody laughed: though to the unconcerned outsiders there was temptation to mirth, members could not see any joke in that sort of thing. It has been said that Mr. Speaker's words were [illegible] Lord Palmerston's cool way in which Sir Charles Wood jockeyed Mr. Gladstone out of his speech on a motion on going into Supply, and pooh-poohed Lord John Russell when he came to the rescue. Of course, Mr. Gladstone got his speech next night. A mass of this right hon. gentleman, what an expensive piece of parliamentary a return of the number of speeches Mr. Gladstone has made this Session would be! A French beauty, on being once asked how many lovers she had had at her feet, declared that she had ceased to count after a thousand. Every one, on the same principle, has ceased to count Mr. Gladstone's speeches. In the course of Monday evening, between five and eleven o'clock, a gentleman happened to look into the House at intervals five times, and on each occasion he found Mr. Gladstone speaking, and each time on a different subject.

However it might have been on Monday, certainly on Tuesday the Speaker had no cause to complain of the audience which awaited the [illegible] imposing ceremony by which the House of Commons records its approval of the services of their highest officer. The body of the House at an early hour gave warrant of the emphasis with which the unanimous "Aye" to the formal motion which was to be proposed would be uttered; while Archbishops, Peers, and persons of every class who make up the motley groups of spectators which are [illegible] admitted as strangers by the House of Commons, thronged the [illegible] and peeped through every available loophole. Perhaps it was needed for effect that Lord Palmerston kept the assembly waiting for nearly a quarter of an hour in unoccupied expectation before he appeared; but, if the delay was not intentional, it certainly added to the interest of the moment. The speech of the Premier was very well [illegible] on occasion in which a public functionary was doing tribute to [illegible] es of one of the worthiest of that class. It was pointed [illegible] manly in tone, and, being evidently not prepared—at least, [illegible] words were concerned bore marks of spontaneity which [illegible] it off to a nicety. The address of the leader of the Opposition [illegible] re tinged with elaboration; although it was clearly [illegible] m at that simplicity which poets and orators tell us is the [illegible] ic of the language of emotion. The pathos was certainly [illegible] t sort of thing is not Mr. Disraeli's force; and when [illegible] rful (not often, to do him justice) one is apt to [illegible] his lachrymatory is limited in its extent and [illegible] entirely to his command. Lord John Russell was sensible [illegible] t not telling; and his making a speech at all was only [illegible] on the ground that he may well be supposed to be anxious [illegible] orld know that there is a third leader in the House.

Nothing is so characteristic of the House as the unison of its cheers when either party is moved to applause or approbation. No one ever heard a general cheer on either side—it is always a universal and [illegible] outbreak. On this occasion the coalition of all parties [illegible] [illegible] kind of communication. I expected the exact sensations of the hour, yet never was a phrase more loudly endorsed by a unanimous cheer than that in which Lord Palmerston expressed his belief that he was "the faithful organ of the feelings of the House of Commons," when he conveyed their thanks to the Speaker as they were about to lose. Nor was the simultaneous movement by which every member removed his hat but when Mr. Shaw Lefevre rose to address them less striking—the whole House sitting uncovered is an unusual spectacle. If the [illegible] lost any of its effect at any time, it was when the Speaker had [illegible] to put a motion in which he was personally concerned. It was an awkwardness; but there is no provision against it in the rules of the House.

Nevertheless taken as a whole, it was an august occasion. It was a triumph of that great principle of moral suasion which always governs and disciplines the conduct of the gentlemen of England, and in the absence of which the freest deliberative assembly the world ever saw voluntarily places itself under the most absolute of dictatorships.

CONFIDENCE IN LORD PALMERSTON.

COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL.

A court was held on Monday, in consequence of a requisition, numerously signed, "to express the opinion of the court upon the consequences likely to arise to the commerce of the country from the decision of the House of Commons on Tuesday last, and to take such steps as they may think necessary." There was a large attendance of the members of both courts of the corporation

Mr. Besley proposed, amid cheers, the following motion:—

"That her Majesty's servants in China have, in the trying situation in which they were placed, acted in a manner to sustain the honour of the British flag, the commercial interests of the country, and the cause of truth and justice. That this court have learned with feelings of deep regret the decision of the honourable House of Commons on the 3rd inst. Majesty's Ministers, for supporting her Majesty's servants in the discharge of their duty. That this court presents its thanks to Lord Palmerston and her Majesty's Ministers for the course they pursued on that occasion, which justly entitles them to the confidence of the country."

Mr Besley said he felt some pleasure in what had recently taken place when he reflected that the shock which the late decision in the House of Commons had given to the feelings of the people of England would be sufficiently powerful to arouse their sleeping energies. One of the greatest banes of this country for the last ten years had been the indifference of the people to matters of great national import. He hoped that indifference would now cease to exist, and that we should have the people of England attending to their own affairs.

Mr. Deputy Dakin seconded the motion.

Mr Abrahams would not discuss the question whether a Parliamentary majority was right or wrong; but he conceived it to be an extremely dangerous and unwise thing for a municipal body to mix themselves up in questions of party and political strife. He condemned the present step as inconsistent with the duty of the court, which was overstepping its legitimate functions, and proposed the following amendment:—"That it is not expedient for this municipal body to interfere in a party and political question." (Hear, hear).

Mr De Jersey seconded the amendment.

Alderman Salomons did not see any reason for withdrawing confidence in Lord Palmerston.

Mr. Rowe said it was not the principle of the Canton war that defeated the Ministry, but it was a factious opposition in the House of Commons.

Mr. Giblin did not justify the atrocities nor palliate the conduct of Governor Yeh, whom he believed to be a thoroughly wicked man; but he denounced the unnecessary employment of bombs in a closely-crowded town (Cheers). Whilst he did not throw the slightest slur upon those who voted in favour of the Ministry, he gave to those who voted in opposition the same credit for honesty of purpose and an unhesitating approval.

A show of hands having been taken, there appeared in favour of the amendment, 13; against it, 39: majority, 26.

The original motion was then put and carried amidst loud cheers, and the court adjourned.

THE LONDON MERCHANTS.

The following address has been presented to Lord Palmerston by the subjoined firms connected with the trade to China:—

"THE RIGHT HON. THE VISCOUNT PALMERSTON, M.P., &c.

"London, March 5

"My Lord,—We, the undersigned merchants of the city of London, engaged in trade with the East, beg leave to address your Lordship to offer the expression of our cordial thanks for the firmness which you have displayed in upholding the honour of Great Britain, and a determination to protect the lives and property of British subjects peaceably engaged in commercial intercourse with China. We lament the collision, causing the destruction of life and property, which has occurred, and we are under grave apprehensions that still further difficulties and dangers will be created by the late adverse votes in the House of Commons. We therefore look confidently to your Lordship to devise measures calculated to protect our fellow-countrymen, and to extricate us honourably from the present painful state of things in China. In pursuing these great objects we trust you will not be deterred by what has occurred from continuing to maintain a firm and dignified attitude until all treaty obligations are fulfilled, and our commercial relations with China placed on a permanent footing of security and peace.

"We have the honour to be, my Lord,

"Your Lordship's most obedient servants.

"Matheson and Co.; Gregory and Co.; A. Thomson, T. Bonar, and Co.; Palmer, M'Killop, Dent, and Co.; Crawford, Colvin, and Co.; Finlay, Hodgson, and Co.; Robert Benson and Co.; Morris, Prevost, and Co.; Samuelson, Fry, and Co.; Arbuthnot, Latham, and Co.; T. A. Gibb and Co.; Gledstanes and Co.; W. A. Lyall and Co.; Maitland, Ewing, and Co.; Harvey, Brand, and Co.; Daniel Dickinson and Co.; Mackay and Reed; Frith, Sands, and Co.; Dallas and Coles; Anderson, Brothers, and Co."

BRISTOL.

After high change on Saturday afternoon, an address to the Right Hon. Lord Palmerston, expressive of regret at the result of the late vote, was set on foot and received a number of most influential signatures, including those of many magistrates and town councillors, leading merchants, &c. The address is couched in the following terms, and, although originated by gentlemen holding Conservative views in politics, was subscribed by men of all parties:—

"We, the undersigned, inhabitants of the city and county of Bristol, beg to represent to your Lordship the feelings of surprise and regret with which we have received intelligence of the result of the recent division on Mr. Cobden's motion in the House of Commons

"We deeply lament that an Opposition so openly factious, and combining within itself men and principles too incongruous to afford hope of any useful alliance, should have commanded the support of so large a number of members of the House of Commons as to have enabled it to defeat a Ministry remarkable for its truly English character, for the respect it has won for the British name throughout the world, for the security it has obtained for mercantile intercourse with foreign nations, and for the vigour with which it has carried on its Governmental functions at home and abroad. We venture to believe that the alliance by which you have been assailed, while it has greatly lowered the political reputations of the parties engaged in it, has gained no sympathy in the hearts of the British people. We thank your Lordship that, instead of yielding the reins of Government into other hands, you have resorted to the constitutional alternative of appealing to the people; and we desire to express to you our firm conviction that the result of that appeal will not confirm the decision of the House of Commons."

[illegible] Lord Palmerston [illegible] Sheffield. On Saturday morning a meeting of the principal [illegible] of the town was held in the Exchange Rooms, to consider the propriety of passing a vote of confidence in the Premier. The following is the result:—

"We, the undersigned, merchants, manufacturers, and others, inhabitants of Sheffield, feel bound at once to assure your Lordship that we [illegible] the vote recently given by the majority of the House of Commons on Mr. Cobden's motion on the House of Commons, on Wednesday last, and at the same time we feel it our duty decidedly to express our confidence in your Government, with your Lordship at its head, will [illegible] the best guarantee for the [illegible] of British dominions at home and abroad."

The memorial was signed by all the gentlemen present, including many of the most eminent merchants and manufacturers.

THE LIBERALS OF BATH.

A meeting of the Liberals of Bath was held on Monday afternoon at the rooms of the Liberal Association, "to consider whether the general policy of Lord Palmerston is entitled to the support of the Liberals of Bath." Wm. Long, Esq. presided, and there was a large attendance of the most influential men of the party. Both the city members, Captain Scobell and Mr. Tite, were present, and gave long explanations of their conduct in voting against the Government, which was not only in accordance with their conscientious convictions, but with the resolutions of a public meeting held in Bath last month. Several speeches were made, and the meeting ultimately agreed unanimously to the following resolution:—

"That this meeting fully recognise the great talents of Lord Palmerston, and thankfully acknowledge the benefit conferred on the country by the termination of the war with Russia under his Administration. This meeting expresses its confidence in the general policy of the noble Lord, and trusts that the measures introduced under his auspices will be calculated to promote the best interests of the country, and will, by their liberal and reforming tendency, command the support of the representatives of this city

A vote of thanks was given to the members for their attendance and explanation, and the proceedings terminated.

BELFAST.

Like Manchester and Liverpool, Belfast has pronounced for Lord Palmerston, unequivocally and emphatically. A great meeting of the Liberal party was held on Saturday, at which the following resolution was unanimously carried

"That we regret that, by an unnatural coalition of discordant parties, the Government has sustained a defeat which compels an immediate dissolution of Parliament, by a decision which we look on with great alarm, as brought with imminent danger to our fellow-subjects and embarrassments to the servants of the Crown in our distant colonies; and we, therefore, feel it our duty to declare our entire confidence in Lord Palmerston's Government, and our determination to assist in returning to the House of Commons for this borough two members who will support his Administration so long as it is conducted on the principles which have hitherto been his guide

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

(Continued from page 208.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

Mr. Walter Buchanan took the oaths and his seat for Glasgow

The Marquis of BLANDFORD withdrew his Ecclesiastical Corporations Bill.

The second reading of the Imprisonment for Debt Bill, introduced by Mr. PELLATT, was negatived without a division.

Colonel GREVILLE withdrew the Irish Grand Juries Amendment Bill.

The House then went into Committee, when a vote on account to meet Exchequer Bills was taken.

THE VOTE FOR EDUCATION.

On a vote on Education being taken,

Sir J. PARINGTON commented on the present state of that question. He agreed with Mr. Gladstone's remarks of the previous evening that the education vote was to a great degree wasted, but he could not agree that there ought not to be any educational vote at all. It would be presumptuous in him to say what he would do in the next Parliament, where he might not have a seat; but this he could promise, that he would not abandon the cause of education

Mr. E. DENISON hoped that as soon after the reassembling of Parliament as possible Government would state its views on the question.

Sir G. GREY said Mr. Cowper, the new Minister for Education, would state the views of Government when the remainder of the education vote came to be voted

After some further conversation the vote was agreed to.

Some other votes on account were taken, and the House resumed.

The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Bill, the Customs Duties Bill, the Indemnity Bill, and the Copyhold and Inclosure Commissioners Bill, severally went through Committee.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER withdrew the Savings-Banks Bill.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

OUR RELATIONS WITH AMERICA.—The Earl of ELGIN gave notice of his intention on Tuesday next to call attention to the state of our relations with the United States.

GENERAL STATE OF AFFAIRS.—The Earl of DERBY gave notice that on the second reading of the Income-tax Bill he would call attention to the general state of affairs in this country

THE WAR IN CHINA.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, in moving for some returns connected with the execution of the Supplemental Treaty of 1847 entered into with China, took the opportunity of expressing his disapproval of the conduct of the Government in allowing a contraband trade in opium, cotton, and other articles to be carried on in contravention of some of the articles of that treaty. The noble Earl also urged the necessity of forwarding reinforcements with the utmost dispatch, and of taking measures for their comfort, accommodation, and of provisioning the troops, so that they would be enabled upon their arrival to act efficiently and promptly.—Lord PANMURE said that every precaution would be taken to provide such reinforcements as were necessary, and to secure the health of the troops that were being sent to China. After some further conversation the subject dropped

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

PRIVATE BILLS.—On the motion of Mr. FITZROY, a resolution was agreed to suspending all Private Bills at their present stages, and giving power to start therefrom next Session

THE CRIMEAN COMMISSION.—Mr. J. EWART inquired whether the Government intended to make any further recognition of the services of Sir John M'Neill and Colonel Tulloch in the Crimea?—Lord PALMERSTON said the Government had already acknowledged those services in that House: and as they had offered £1000 in the name of the Crown to each of these gentlemen, which they had seen fit to decline, Government did not feel called on to take any further steps in the matter.

THE CRIMEAN WAR.

On the motion for going into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates,

Mr. DUNCOMBE moved the following amendment:—"That Sir John M'Neill and Colonel Tulloch ably fulfilled the duty intrusted to them of inquiring into the arrangement and management of the Commissariat Department, that the evidence on their report proves that in the month of December, 1854, and January, 1855, the suffering of the army must have been intense, and that great mortality was occasioned by overwork and exposure and want of food and clothing; that the examinations into this statement by the Board of General Officers fully support the conclusions arrived at by the Commissioners as to the want of organization in the Quartermaster-General's, Commissariat, and Transport services; that it appears to this House that, from the report of the Board, this inefficiency must be attributed to the imperfect arrangements or conduct of those departments"

Sir J. PAKINGTON seconded the amendment.

Mr. BLACK supported it, and strongly censured the Government for their conduct towards Sir John M'Neill and Colonel Tulloch

Mr. HERBERT admitted that the conduct of the Commissioners was such as to do them great credit, and then made some general remarks upon the subsequent state of the army, similar in their character to those which had been so frequently put forward

General PEEL, as a member of the Board of General Officers, expressed his conviction that the evils which existed in the army in the Crimea were beyond the power of any individuals in the Crimea to prevent; and that Lord Raglan, Admiral Boxer and Capt. Christie all fell victims to the senseless clamour raised by anonymous newspaper correspondents. The principal cause of the casualties was the sending out of a small army to carry on a great war, for which he had no hesitation to say he partially responsible; and then there was, from the position of the army, the difficulty of procuring forage. There was also another cause, arising from the action of the combined Commanders. There were two distinct Commanders. It was, however, evident that improvements were required in the Commissariat Department, which he hoped to see carried out. In conclusion, he vindicated the Board of General Officers against the censure which had been thrown upon their inquiry; asserting that they had acted solely with a desire to discharge their duties properly (Hear, hear)

Mr. S. HERBERT expressed his regret that such a painful subject should be reopened, and his fear that the Home Government were partly to blame for what had happened. With regard to Sir John M'Neill and Colonel Tulloch, that House ought to express some opinion on their services, and he recommended that the present amendment should be withdrawn, and an Address to the Crown moved in its place, requesting her Majesty to mark those services with some signal mark of her approbation.

Sir J. PAKINGTON supported the views expressed by Mr. S. Herbert, and said no two functionaries ever discharged a delicate duty with more honour and ability than Sir John M'Neill and Colonel Tulloch

Mr. EWART expressed his deep regret at the conduct of the Government towards Sir John M'Neill and Colonel Tulloch.

Mr. PALK then withdrew his amendment, and substituted a motion for an Address to the Crown recommended by Mr. S. Herbert

Lord PALMERSTON, not wishing to stand between the House and the accomplishment of its generous wishes, accepted the motion, which was carried amid loud cheers.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.—Sir J. PAKINGTON called attention to the position of non-commissioned officers in the army who had received commissions for their services during the late war, explaining that the pay which they received was quite inadequate for their support

THE ARMY ESTIMATES. The House then went into Committee of Supply upon the Army Estimates. Mr. F. PEEL said that the number of men voted, 116,000, was intended to ask the House to sanction during the three months for which the vote was to be taken was 126,796 against 246,716 last year, being a reduction of 120,000 men. He moved that that amount should be granted. The vote was ultimately agreed to, as were also the other votes on account; after which the House resumed

THE SPEAKER.—Lord PALMERSTON laid upon the table her Majesty's most gracious answer to the Address of the House, praying that some mark of distinction might be conferred on the Speaker. Her Majesty acceded to the prayer of the House, and expressed a desire that the House would enable her to confer the mark of favour in accordance with the usual precedent in such cases. The noble Lord gave notice that he would on to-morrow (Friday) move that her Majesty's Message be taken into consideration.

THE INCOME-TAX BILL.—This bill was read a third time and passed

---

RECOVERY OF THE "TYNE" WEST INDIA MAIL STEAMER.—The Tyne steamer, from the Brazils, which went ashore off St. Alban's Head on the 13th January, was got off on Thursday morning, and proceeded at 7 35 a.m. for Southampton.

A New York paper says the report of the Joint Committee of the General Assembly of Ohio upon Public Institutions and Buildings announces a total of detected overcharges and stealings from the State amounting to 378,383 dollars.

The Radical party have lately lost ground in the Pays de Vaud, as in the canton of Geneva. In the first-named canton seventeen vacancies in the grand council have all been filled by Conservative candidates.

The famous chestnut-tree of the Tuileries Gardens, called the "Vingt Mars," has this year advanced its usual period of bursting into leaf, as its first appearance of green has already become visible. This is the first time since 1811, the year of the comet, such a precocity of vegetation has been witnessed.

SKETCHES IN ASIATIC RUSSIA.

VILLAGE ON THE SIBERIAN SIDE OF THE URAL MOUNTAINS.

We are indebted for the accompanying Sketches to the pencil of Mr. William Spottiswoode, who has recently returned from a tour in this comparatively little known country. However, in this strange region, our tourist informs us, he found the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS in circulation at Ekaterinburg, beyond the Ural mountains; and at Astrakan, on the Caspian.

Kuvashene is the first station on the road from Zlatoüst to Ufa, the residence of the Civil Governor of Orenburg. It is situated among the highest peaks of the Southern Urals, and half way between the principal manufactories and some of the most productive iron mines in the district. Zula, between Moscow and Odessa, Ekaterinburg, at the point where the great Siberian road reaches the eastern foot of the Urals and Zlatoüst, are the three great centres whence the small-arms, muskets, rifles, swords, bayonets, &c., for the entire Russian army are issued. The sketch is taken from the posthouse, looking back in the direction of Zlatoüst. The lower parts of the mountains are clad with birch and pine, while the highest are bare and rocky. The road is deep with mud, and the wooden gangway in front of the logh ouses is often the only practicable path for persons on foot. At the posthouse all accommodation considered necessary for the Russian traveller is furnished: two wooden benches for beds, two chairs, one table, one samovar (or urn) for hot water, two tumblers, and one spoon; and, last but not least, horses for taking him on his way.

Between Astrakan and the Caspian, as well as along the western shores of the Caspian itself, are a considerable number of stations for sturgeon fishery. From this fish, as is well known, caviare and isinglass are made. The church spires show that the village is inhabited by Russians, although a few of the outlying huts may belong to the mixed race, improperly called Tatar at Astrakan. The stakes form the barrier of the station. In the mid channel is one of the large barges that ply up the river sometimes as far as Nijni, now waiting for a cargo of salt fish and caviare. Under the near bank are some of the Kalmuck canoes used for taking up the lines and capturing the fish.

We have much pleasure in adding that Mr. Spottiswoode has printed the results of his tour in a handsome octavo volume, which will be published in a few days.

FISHING STATION BELOW ASTRAKAN.

SKETCHES IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

CULHAM, IN THE UPPER VALLEY OF THE SWAN.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

(Continued from page 178.)

So little is known of this colony that we resume Captain Henderson's Illustrations in the full assurance of their interest, more especially at the present moment, in connection with the new Government scheme of transportation.

Western Australia has thriven greatly since the introduction of convicts; and, under the peculiar system which has been there pursued, it has proved beneficial to the convicts, and welcome to the colonists. Life and property are as safe there as in any part of her Majesty's dominions, and, but for the increasing prosperity on all sides, there are no signs of a penal settlement. With the experience that has been gained there can be little doubt that, with care and watchfulness, this great experiment may be carried out with increasing benefit to the colony.

The revenue has increased from £8596 in 1849 to £34,451 in 1855, and its population has more than doubled. The colony has large resources in extensive tracts of arable land, abundance of excellent timber (about to be introduced into her Majesty's dockyards), and a soil admirably adapted to the growth of all kinds of vegetables, the vine, and the olive. It has large promise of mineral resources; although at present lead and copper only are worked. Possessing an excellent climate, it is well adapted for a horse-breeding colony; indeed many horses bred there have been sent to India, where they are much approved.

Western Australia has already received in five years as many convicts as New South Wales did in thirteen years, and at about one-third the cost; and there has grown up there—unknown and unnoticed, because not wanted—an excellent system of convict discipline and transportation, which is none the less valuable in the hour of need; for there thousands may in a new world regain that position which, once forfeited in England, is scarcely to be recovered.

The upper valleys of the Swan and its tributaries are studded with thriving farms and settlements. The Sketch of Culham, the property of S. P. Phillips, Esq., shows the residence of that enterprising gentleman in the valley of the Toodyay, and the park-like grounds studded with the raspberry jam trees which surround it. The group of horses in the foreground are being driven in from "the Bush" in readiness for a kangaroo hunt, the start for which is in the next Sketch. This exhilarating sport commences before sunrise, and the sense of freedom and enjoyment which one experiences, mounted on a good horse, in the early freshness of an Australian morning, on the boundless plains gemmed with the richest flowers, must be felt to be appreciated. The kangaroos, tall as grenadiers, with heads like rabbits, and tails like bedposts, afford an unlimited quantity of hard galloping; and as they are not bad to eat and are destructive to the farmers' crops their rapid extinction is inevitable.

On the Leschenault Estuary is the site of the city of Australind, where the Western Australian Company located their first settlers, who, unfortunately from a combination of causes, have never reaped the advantages they were led to expect, and to which their energy and talents so well entitled them. They have shared, of course, in the increasing prosperity of the colony, and their worthy Chief Commissioner, M. Clifton, Esq., still flourishes at Australind, surrounded like a patriarch by his enterprising family; and the recollection of his hospitable home and a solid wall of grapes on the right hand and on the left, which stretches for nearly three-quarters of a mile down his model garden, is a most "refreshing memory."

The character of the northern districts is essentially different, and bespeaks, even to a casual observer, their mineral character. There are some excellent cattle-stations and abundance of good land, which capital and a market will convert into waving cornfields.

The copper mine, which is now in the English market, is about forty miles northward, and the Geraldine Lead Mine fifty miles further, being the most northern point to which the operations of the colonists have yet been extended. The lead from the Geraldine Mine is exported in considerable quantities to Singapore, and realises an excellent profit. It is shipped at Port Gregory, a curious little harbour, formed by a long coral reef like an artificial breakwater; about seven miles from which is the establishment of Captain Sanford, who is nearly the most advanced pioneer, and who has devoted to his pursuits as an Australian settler an energy that ought to command success. A colony already so far advanced, and which contains within itself so many elements of prosperity, and to which transportation has been so successfully applied, is a friend in need.

Captain Henderson, in his evidence before the Transportation Committee of the House of Lords, states:—"There is no doubt that there is a vast amount of excellent corn land in the colony. I believe it will grow enough to supply all the Australian colonies with corn." Upon this it has been remarked:—

It is just the colony which, of all others, requires the sort of labour which convicts can afford—it is an agricultural rather than a pastoral country, and a considerable amount of capital and large expenditure of labour are required in order fairly to develop its resources. The colony, too, possesses a fine climate, "the most lovely climate, I suppose, in the world," according to the evidence of the Commissioner-General; and in this respect it differs vastly from those pestilential swamps and fever-producing districts at Cayenne to which the French Government deports its offenders.

KANGAROO HUNT IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, March 15.—3rd Sunday in Lent.
MONDAY, 16.—Boileau born, 1635.
TUESDAY, 17.—St. Patrick.
WEDNESDAY, 18.—Princess Louisa born, 1848.
THURSDAY, 19.—Louis XVIII. fled from Paris, 1815
FRIDAY, 20.—Spring commences. Newton died, 1727.
SATURDAY, 21.—Archbishop Cranmer burnt, 1556.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 21, 1857

| Sunday. | Monday. | Tuesday. | Wednesday | Thursday. | Friday. | Saturday |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| M. A. | M. A. | M. A. | M. A. | M. A. | M. A. | M. A. |
| h m h m | h m h m | h m h m | h m h m | h m h m | h m h m | h m h m |
| 4 45 5 0 | 5 10 5 25 | 5 40 6 0 | 6 15 6 35 | 7 0 7 25 | 7 50 8 15 | 8 40 9 0 |

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—SEASON 1857.—It is respectfully announced that HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE will OPEN on TUESDAY, APRIL 7. Engagements of great interest have been effected both in Opera and Ballet. The Prospectus with full particulars will be issued forthwith.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, the New Comedy of DOUBLE-FACED PEOPLE; A WICKED WIFE; THE LITTLE TREASURE (Rifle Shoulder Pane and Mr Bartolomeo); and A KISS in the DARK. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, a New Drama in five acts, A LIFE'S TRIAL; with A WICKED WIFE (Mr. Howe, Mr. Compton, and Miss Reynolds), and SHOCKING EYES.

ROYAL PRINCESS' THEATRE.—On Monday and during the Week will be presented Shakspeare's Tragedy of KING RICHARD II.: King Richard II., by Mr. C. Kean; Queen, by Mrs. C. Kean. Preceded by Made Hath Charm.

THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Fourth Week of Mr. and Mrs BARNEY WILLIAMS, the celebrated Irish Boy and Yankee Gal,—MONDAY, and during the Week, "Ireland As It Is" "A Night at Notting-hall" "In and Out of Place" to conclude with "Barney the Baron."

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Monday, March 16, and following Evenings (first week), Shakspeare's Play of KING HENRY IV., Part I. with Equestrian illustrations unrivalled by Mr WARD. Hotspur, Mr James Hollingshead. Also a variety of Equestrian Performances, concluding with a brilliant display of Horsemanship, and Scene of the first rate attitudes in the world by NI 4 in the CIRCLE. Commence at Seven o'clock.

GREAT NATIONAL STANDARD THEATRE, SHOREDITCH.—The celebrated SPANISH DANCERS, from the Haymarket, by permission of J. H. Buckstone, Esq., with the SPANISH MINSTRELS, every Evening at the principal Dragoons of the day, Mr. PHELPS, of Sadler's Wells, is engaged, and will appear on SATURDAY next, March 21st

ROYAL SURREY GARDENS.—A GRAND CLASSICAL CONCERT, in aid of the Funds of the EARLY-CLOSING ASSOCIATION, THURSDAY Evening, the 19th first See Placards, and Advertisements in the Daily Journals
JOHN LEWIS, Hon. Secretary.

ST. MARTIN'S HALL.—Mendelssohn's ST. PAUL will be performed on WEDNESDAY NEXT, MARCH 18th, under the Direction of Mr. JOHN HULLAH. Principal Vocalists: Madame Rudersdorff, Miss Palmer, Mr. Lockey, Mr. Weiss, Mr. H. Burnby. Tickets, 5s., 3s. 6d.; Stalls, 5s. Commence at half-past 7 o'clock.

THE BROUSIL FAMILY respectfully announce that they will give a Series of FOUR SOIREES MUSICALES, at their own residence, 24, Nottingham-place, New-road, on THURSDAYS, March 19 and 26, April 2 and 9; to commence at Half past Eight o'Clock precisely. Tickets, One Guinea; Single Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each, at Robert W. Olivier's, Musicseller and Publisher, 19, Old Bond-street, Piccadilly.

HERR ERNST PAUER has the honour to announce that he will give THREE MATINÉES MUSICALES, at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St James's, on WEDNESDAYS, March 25, April 22, and May 13. To commence at Three o'clock precisely. Subscription for the three, one guinea; single tickets, half-a-guinea each; which may be had at the principal Music Warehouses and of Herr Ernst Pauer, at his new residence, 3, Cranley-place, Onslow-square.

MUSICAL UNION SOIREE.—TUESDAY, MARCH 17th. Compositions by Mozart, Mendelssohn, Spohr, Platti, Chopin, &c.; played by Moscheles, Piatti, Hegrove, Hallé, &c. Vocalists: Miss Dolby and Mr. Sims Reeves. Tickets, One Guinea; and admission applyby letter to the Directors, at the usual places. J. ELLA

MR. W. S. WOODIN'S OLIO of ODDITIES, with New Costume and various novelties, Vocal and Characteristic, EVERY EVENING (Saturday excepted), at Eight. A Morning Performance every Saturday, at Three. Private Boxes and Stalls may be secured, without extra charge, at the Box-office. Polygraphic Hall, King William-street, Charing-cross. The Hall has been entirely redecorated.

MISS P. HORTON.—Mr. and Mrs. GERMAN REED'S POPULAR ILLUSTRATIONS.—GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION, 14, Regent-street, every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight. Saturday Morning at Three. Last week of present entertainment. Admission, 2s. and 1s.; Stalls, 3s. May be secured at the Gallery; and at Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street.

THE SISTERS SOPHIA and ANNIE, in their Original Entertainment, entitled SKETCHES from NATURE, will appear at the MUSIC HALL, LEEDS, Monday, March 16th, 17th, 18th, and 20th.

MR. and Mrs. HENRI DRAYTON have the honour to announce their new and successful entertainment, ILLUSTRATED PROVERBS, at the REGENT GALLERY QUADRANT, Every Evening, Saturday excepted, at Eight o'clock. Saturday Morning Performance at Three o'clock.—Admission, 1s. and 2s.; Stalls, 3s., which may be secured at the Gallery; or at Cadby's Pianoforte and Music Warehouse, 42, New Bond-street.

GOMPERTZ'S PANORAMA of the LATE WAR will be EXHIBITED at STAMFORD the week commencing Monday, March 23rd, and the following week at Grantham. After which it will take its departure for Cambridge.

GENERAL TOM THUMB (the original), who appeared three times before her Majesty in 1844, PERFORMS THREE TIMES DAILY, at PRINCE of WALES BAZAAR, 209, Regent-street, from Half-past Twelve to Two, Half-past Three to Five, and Half-past Seven to Nine o'clock. No Stage. Doors open Admission, 1s.—Admission 1s., regardless of age; stalls, 2s.; children, 1s.

BALL, HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS.—Miss JAMES, of the Royal Opera, has the honour to announce that her Annual FULL-DRESS BALL will take place at the above Rooms on TUESDAY, MARCH 24th. Private Band will be under the direction of Mr. J. Bland. Gentlemen's Tickets, 10s. 6d.; ladies' ditto, 7s. 6d. including refreshments. Tickets to be obtained at Collard's, Regent-street; Chappell's, New Bond-street; Duff and Hodgson's, Oxford-street; at the above Rooms; and at Miss James's residence, 34, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn

FREEMASONS' TAVERN.—The BENEVOLENT SOCIETY of ST. PATRICK will hold its ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL at the above Tavern on TUESDAY, the 17th inst., St. Patrick's-day The Most Noble the Marquis of LONDONDERRY in the Chair. Dinner on Table at Seven o'clock.

FREEMASONS' TAVERN.—The HIGHLAND SOCIETY of LONDON will celebrate the ANNIVERSARY of the BATTLE of ALEXANDRIA at the above Tavern on SATURDAY, the 21st inst. Dinner on Table at a Quarter past Seven o'Clock precisely.

FREEMASONS' TAVERN.—The ANNUAL UNITED Pilgrims and Plants, sea-water tanks, glasses, and every other requisite on sale. Workers at their prices.—W. ALFORD LLOYD, 19 and 20, Fordland-road, Regent's-park, London, W.

UNDER the PATRONAGE of the Right Hon. the EARL and COUNTESS of SHAFTESBURY, a RAGGED-SCHOOL BAZAAR will be held in Surrey Chapel School-room, adjoining Surrey Chapel, Blackfriars-road, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the 25th, 26th, and 27th March, 1857, for the erection of additional rooms at Hunter-street, Lambeth, the first ragged school opened in London by Robert Raikes, the Sunday-School Founder. Doors open at Twelve o'Clock

GOODRICH'S SISAL CIGARS! at his Tobacco, Snuff, and Cigar Stores 407, Oxford-street, London, near Soho-square. Box, containing 14, for Four-free, six stamps extra. Pound Boxes, containing 100, 12s. 6d. Notes are issued on receipt of four stamps.—Northumberland Pl., W. Bayswater.

KENT'S PATENT WEATHERPROOF GLAZING.—Varieties of large dimensions fixed complete, at 1s. 6d. per foot sup. Illustrated Price List, on receipt of four stamps.—Northumberland Pl., W. Bayswater.

MR. ALBERT SMITH'S MONT BLANC, BADEN, UP the RHINE, and PARIS, is NOW OPEN every evening (except Saturday) at Eight o'clock. Stalls, 3s.; area, 2s.; gallery, 1s. Stalls can be secured at the Box office, Egyptian-hall, Piccadilly, every day, between Eleven and Four, without any extra charge —The Morning Representations take place every Tuesday and Saturday, at Three o'clock.

CANTERBURY HALL, Westminster-road.—The above Magnificent HALL is Open Every Evening for Musical Entertainments, consisting of New Items from all the popular Operas, Choruses, Madrigals, Glees, Duets, &c., supported by Artists of Celebrity.—Commencement at 7 o'clock precisely.—Suppers, &c., until Twelve.

MESSRS. DICKINSON beg to announce their intention, on the 17th MARCH, to THROW OPEN the PUBLIC EXHIBITION their large GALLERIES, containing the important PORTRAITS and other WORKS of ART that have been executed by them, and now for the first time collected. Messrs. Dickinson having been favoured by the owners with the loan of these Works for that purpose 114, New Bond-street.

MUSIC BUSINESS, SALE or PARTNERSHIP.—The Proprietor of one of the largest and oldest established Music and Pianoforte Warehouses in the North of England is desirous of retiring from business. With this view he is prepared to treat with parties inclined either to Purchase or to take the entire management as an equal Partner, with a capital of not less than £5000. Principals only treated with. Apply to Mr THOMAS GERVAS ROBINSON, 10, Old Jewry Chambers, E.C.

GEOLOGY and MINERALOGY.—Elementary Collections, to facilitate the study of this interesting Science, can be had from Two Guineas to One Hundred; also single specimens, of J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, London

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, LIBRARY &c.—An extensive assortment of ALABASTER, MARBLE, BRONZI and PARIAN STATUARY and BUSTS, manufactured and imported by J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, London

STEREOSCOPES and STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES at SPENCER, BROWNING, and CO.'s. Hand Stereoscopes, 6d. each; Views, from 6d. per dozen.—Great Novelty. Twelve and 100 Views mounted as Transparencies, and exhibiting the effects of Sunrise, Moonlight, &c.; prices 1s. 6d. each, only at Spencer, Browning, and Co.'s, 111, Minories, E. The trade supplied.

PHOTOGRAPHS for HIRE.—A Case, containing from Fifty to Seventy Choice PHOTOGRAPHIC PICTURES, sent on Hire, at charge of 7s. 6d. for an Evening, by W. and S. O. LAMB, 101, Fleet-street, London, N.W.

MICROSCOPES.—J. AMADIO'S BOTANICAL MICROSCOPES, packed in mahogany case, with three Powers, Condenser, Pincers, and two Slides, will show the Animalcule in water. Price 18s. 6d. Address JOSEPH AMADIO, 7, Throgmorton-street. A Name Mentioned.

IMPORTED FLOWER-SEEDS.—Splendid French Peony Roses, Rouget, Pyramid, and German Quilled and Double Asters, in packets containing twelve varieties, at 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s., 2s. 6d. Superb new large-flowering and dwarf German Asters, in packets at 1s. 6d., and 2s. 6d. Rouget, Incarnadine, and Emperor Double Stocks, in packets at 1s., 1s. 6d., and 2s. 6d. German Double Wall flower and German Ranks, in packets at 1s., 1s. 6d., and 2s. 6d. Specimens of Showy and Hardy Flower-seeds, at 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., and 5s. sent free by post on receipt of postage stamps to the amount. Descriptive priced Catalogue of Vegetable and Flower Seeds, with valuable remarks, forwarded to assist amateurs in selecting their seeds and cultivating their gardens, sent free by post on application, or free by post.—MACKIE and M'CULLOCH, Seedsmen (established upwards of 100 years), opposite Southampton-street, Covent-garden Market, London

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS.—Flower Seeds for present sowing: 100 papers for 5s.; 50 for 3s.; 30 for 2s. 6d.; or 12 for 1s. Collections include some of the best varieties of German Stocks, Larkspurs, Ten Weeks, Nemophylas, Ipomeas, Tropæolums, Nicotias, Virginian Stocks, Candytufts, Convolvulus, Lupins, Sweet Peas, Sweet William, &c. &c. Double Wallflower, at 1s., also extra fine Camellia-bloom Balsam, at 1s. All post-free.—Address, JOSEPH GOLDING, Seedsman, Hendon

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS for EARLY SOWING post-free at the annexed prices:—100 fine sorts, 5s.; 50 sorts, 3s.; 30 sorts, 2s. 6d.; 12 ditto, 1s. Descriptive Catalogues, with sample packet, for 24 stamps. WILLIAM KNIGHT, Florist, Hurst-street, Hartfield, Sussex.

ICES COMMENCED for the SEASON.—J. TIPP, Confectioner, No. 27, Oxford-street, near Regent-street, and the Soho Bazaar
A SPACIOUS and CONVENIENT REFRESHMENT ROOM.
Soups, Sandwiches, Pastries, Coffee, Tea, &c., always ready.
27, Oxford-street.

CELEBRATED CANTERBURY PUNCH.—One Dozen of this delicious beverage in quart hock bottles (six to the gallon) will be forwarded carriage-free to London, or any railway station in England on receipt of Post-office order for 28s., payable to THOMAS PAUL DE LASAUX, Wine-merchant, Canterbury.

WINES EXTRAORDINARY.—Port, Sherry, Marsala, Madeira, all 20s. per dozen, produce of Spain and Portugal Wines at the "Age of Hops." Two Samples for Twelve Stamps. Brandy, 15s. per gallon, or 30s. per dozen.—W. and A. GILBEY, Wine Importers, 357, Oxford-street (Entrance in Berwick-street), W.

UNADULTERATED WINES.—FELTOE, SONS, and CO., Importers, 26, Conduit-street, Regent-street, London (established 1815), adhere to their undeviating principle of supplying Wines free from acidity. The Nutty Sherry, 36s. cash. Carriage-paid.

PALMERSTON SAUCE.—This extraordinary piquant and delicious condiment is acknowledged by epicures to possess a peculiar zest, entirely unknown in any other preparation. Sold by Barclay, Field, Perkins, Rowl, &c. &c. Sole proprietor, W. G. CAMROUX, 9, Camomile-street, City. Sold retail throughout Europe by all respectable Italian, grocers, &c.

LAWN-MOWING MACHINES, Scythes (Boyd's Patent Valves and Self-Sharpening), Garden Engines, Garden Rollers, Pruning Knives, and every description of Horticultural and Garden Implements, at the Lowest Possible Prices and free by post.—DEANE, DRAY, and CO. (Opening to the Monument), London-bridge, E.C.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 5, Piccadilly, between the Haymarket and Regent-circus.—Open from Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages interested, privately) and taught at any time suiting their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes; no extra. Improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve lessons. Separate rooms for Ladies, to which department (if preferred) Mrs. Smart will attend.—Apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

CHARLES PACKER (late Antoni Forrer), Artist in Hair to the QUEEN, by Appointment.
Hair Jewellery Department, 136, Regent-street.
Perfumes and Fancy ditto, 78, Regent-street.
Jet and Mourning ditto, 76, Regent-street.

ANTONI FORRER, ARTIST in HAIR and JEWELLERY to the QUEEN by Appointment,
94, Baker-street, Portman-square (opposite the Bazaar).
N.B. Antoni Forrer has no connection whatever with his late establishment at 136, Regent-street.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.—Purchasers will find it to their interest to visit the SARK-ISLAND BAZAAR, London, the Manufacturers of which have their various Implements, as at the Cattle Show, actually working a real Farm, Garden, and Dairy, from Messrs Garrett, Howard, Hornsby, Ransomes, and Sims, Richmond and Chandler, Smith and Ashby, Wilkinson, Barrett, Exhall and Andrewes, Crosskill, Coleman, Cambridge, &c., and all the other principal makers, delivered and charged thereat as if ordered from the works

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY.—S. and H. SOLOMONS, Opticians 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W., Opposite the York Hotel.—Portability, combined with great power in FIELD, RACE-GLASSES, OPERA-GLASSES, and TELESCOPES, of every size and eight ounces, the pocket PERSPECTIVE GLASSES, weighing only four ounces, each containing 12 and 18 lenses, constructed of German glass, is recommended and strongly recommended as 2½ and 3 miles They serve every purpose on the Race-course, and at the Opera and Country scenery and Sea views at 2 miles. They are also invaluable for Shooting, Deer-stalking, and Yachting. Her Majesty's Coast-Guard are now making use of them as day and night glasses, in preference to all others; they have also become in general use by Gentlemen of the Army and Navy, and by Sportsmen in the Highlands. Marksmen, and Yachtsmen. The most powerful and brilliant Telescopes, possessing such extraordinary power that some, in a clear atmosphere, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons with the naked eye—price 5s. Persons unable to procure this Telescope can be seen in Jupiter's satum's ring, and the double stars; with the same object from fourteen to sixteen miles. All the above can be had of larger and all sizes, with increasing powers, and are used by her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

EYESIGHT.—Optical Improvements, to enable persons at an advanced age to read with ease, and to discriminate objects with perfect distinctness.—MESSRS. SOLOMONS Opticians, have invented and patented SPECTACLE LENSES of the greatest transparent power. The valuable advantages derived from this invention is that, instead of vision becoming strained, hastened, weakened, and in numerous cases seriously injured, it is preserved and strengthened; and very aged persons are enabled to employ their sight at the most minute occupation, can see with more distinctness and less magnifying power, and read for a much longer time than with print and writing of the densest powers, and enables them to rear distinctly at church and at public assemblies Messrs SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W. opposite the York Hotel.

PULVERMACHER'S MEDICAL ELECTRIC CHAIN (approved by the Académie de Médecine, Paris, and rewarded by the Great Exhibition), a discovery of extraordinary curative properties to which no pills or any other medicine allows by seeing and feeling the wonderful phenomena it produces: how infallible and instantaneous are its effects upon the body. No invalid should be without it. Thousands of cases allow how remarkable, yet truly natural and efficacious, it is in rheumatism, neuralgia (on head and teeth both), liver complaints, indigestion, asthma, numbness, gout, sciatica, deafness, coxalgia, spasms, epilepsy, paralysis, and all nervous affections. Chains, 4s. 6d. and upwards. Pulvermacher and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess' Theatre. Agents. Weiss and Son, 62, Strand; Savory and Moore, Bond-street; Harding, 4, Cheapside; Rose, 265, Regent-street; Williams, 24, Piccadilly; Wood, 117, Cheapside: Hay ey, 96, Leadenhall-street; Fabian, 1, Bishopsgate-street Without; Hardwick, Colebourne-street, Regent-quadrant; and Freeman and Hayday, Tabernacle-walk, Finsbury.

ART-UNION of LONDON.—SUBSCRIPTION LIST CLOSES this week. Private Orders select from the public exhibition Every Subscription of One Guinea will have, besides the chance of a Prize Two Prints, "The Chase" and "The Deer," by H. C. Shenton, from the historical picture by John Cross, which gained the Government premium of £500, and "The Piper," by Geddes, after the picture by Lewis Pocock. Honorary Secretary.
444, West Strand, March 1857.

A GUINEA GOLD WEDDING-RING and Hall mark'd KEEPER, sent in a morocco box, to any part of the kingdom, on receipt of a Post-office order —GEORGE DEWDNEY, Goldsmith and Jeweller, 17½, Fenchurch-street, London

HAIR JEWELLERY.—Artist in Hair.—DEWDNEY, begs to inform Ladies or Gentlemen resident in town or any part of the kingdom, that he beautifully makes, and elegantly mounts, in gold, HAIR BRACELETS, Rings, Brooches, Rings, Pins, Studs, &c.; and forwards the same carefully packed in boxes, at about one-half the usual charges. A beautiful selection of specimens, handsomely mounted, kept for inspection. An illustrated book sent free.—Dewdney, 17½, Fenchurch-street

BEFORE YOU HAVE YOUR LIKENESS TAKEN send for DEWDNEY'S PATTERNS of BROOCHES, Lockets, Bracelets &c., which are sent free on receipt of two postage-stamps. Receiving Brooches in solid Gold, to show either likeness or hair at pleasure of wearer, from 15s. each. A Gold Plated Brooch or Locket sent free to any part of the kingdom for 9s. 6d.—Dewdney, Manufacturing Goldsmith and Jeweller, 17½, Fenchurch-street, City, London.

TO ANGLERS.—CHARLES FARLOW, 191, Strand, maker of superior FISHING RODS and TACKLE, at moderate prices. Catalogues gratis.

DO YOU DOUBLE UP YOUR PERAMBULATORS?—See T. THOMAS'S new PATENT SAFETY FOLDING PERAMBULATOR, folds in an instant —Patent Carriage Works, High-street, (Strand), Camden-town, London, N.W.

BIJOU NEEDLE-CASE, containing 100 of DEANE'S Drilled-eyed NEEDLES, post-free, for 1s. Any lady inclosing twelve postage-stamps to DEANE, DRAY, and CO., may have this neat and valuable appendage to her work-table forwarded free by return of post.—Deane, Dray, and Co., Opening to the Monument, London-bridge. Established A.D. 1700.

INFANTS' NEW FEEDING-BOTTLES.—From the "Lancet":—"We have seldom seen anything so beautiful as the Feeding-Bottles invented by Mr ELAM." Sold by the Patentee, 52, Oxford-street. Wholesale and for exportation.

LADIES NURSING.—NEW NIPPLE SHIELDS, for taking away all pain in nursing, preventing, and immediately curing, cracked or sore nipples. BENJAMIN ELAM, 52, Oxford-street. 4s. 6d.; by post, 5d. extra

THE PEN SUPERSEDED.—MARKING LINEN.—The most easy, permanent, and best method of marking all kinds of linen, silk, or initial plate, &c., name plate, 3s.; set of movable numbers, 3s.; sent post-free for stamps Movable alphabets, and stamps with shifting dates.—T. CULLETON, Patentee, Heraldic Engraver to the Queen, 2, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane), W.C.—No travellers employed

TO THE INDEPENDENT FREEMEN AND ELECTORS OF THE BOROUGH OF BOSTON.

GENTLEMEN,—The present Parliament being on the eve of a dissolution, you will almost immediately have to exercise the great trust and responsibility of electing your representatives. I therefore beg to offer myself for your suffrages, and to solicit your renewed confidence.

The immediate cause of the Dissolution has been the combination of the Conservative and Peelite parties, together with the alliance of several disappointed members, attached to no party, who very early in the session found a factious excuse for attacking the Government. The Chinese difficulty was eagerly caught at as the weapon to strike with; and you, in common with the other electors of the country, are now called upon to declare your sentiments respecting this attack upon Lord Palmerston and the Liberal party

I am no advocate for a "turbulent and aggressive policy," yet it is absolutely necessary to our existence as a great, a free, and an independent nation, that our fellow-countrymen and our flag, when they are unjustly attacked or insulted, should have the protection of the naval and military forces of the country. Our commerce and our ships are found in every port in the world, and, unless we distinctly proclaim to the nations of the earth that no insult or injury will be permitted, there will be no safety for our trade, and we must renounce the proud title of mistress of the seas

I consider it both factious and unjust to condemn the Government upon an isolated portion of its policy, having reference to a remote nation, of whose temper and disposition towards us the people in England are not so well able to form a correct judgment as those upon the spot. The policy of the Government is sound, in my opinion, be viewed as a whole. Believing it, in this respect, to be one that will always be entitled to the confidence in the simplification of many of the cumbrous and antiquated forms of procedure, which impeded the passage of what are termed private, but which are in reality public, bills, through the Lower House, will doubtless be employed in reforming the similarly antiquated and troublesome procedures which are still obligatory in the Upper. The voice of the country will unite with that of his late colleagues in the unselfish prayer that he may long live to enjoy the ease and the honours which he has won—and in the selfish wish that he may enjoy health and strength for many years, to be of service to the State, and to make amends for the loss which the Commons of England will feel in being deprived of him, by the learning, the zeal, and the patriotism, which he will bring into the House of Lords.

The nations which have at different times, and with more or less success, imitated the constitutional forms of the British Legislature, have never thoroughly succeeded in the great institution of a Speakership. It is far easier to create a Legislative Assembly than to create a President for it of sufficient natural ability and dignity to maintain order and decorum among the members; to enforce his decisions with suavity and firmness; and to rule them with a justice and a mildness which shall virtually make him the unquestioned dictator and arbiter in every doubt, in every difficulty, and in every accidental outbreak of ill feeling or bad manners. In some countries the members of deliberative assemblies have been known to hurl against each other the most unseemly epithets, unawed by the rebuke of their President. At other times they have been known to give each other the lie direct; to resort to personal violence on the floor of the House; and to care no more for the presence, the remonstrance, or the interference of their chief authority, than if he were an automaton moved by clockwork, or a dummy set up for show, and not for service. Even Speakers and Presidents themselves have been swayed by the violence of personal or political feeling, and have descended from their high position not only to squabble with words but to fight with more tangible weapons against offending representatives of the people. But scenes of this kind have never disgraced the Legislature of Great Britain. The Speaker has never forgotten himself for a moment; and, if at any time a too-excitable member has gone astray in the heat of debate, a word from the Speaker has always been sufficient to restore him to reason and to self-respect. The unqualified obedience which all members acknowledge and yield to the Speaker has never been a burden to the House of Commons, and has tended more than anything in its constitution to maintain its dignity within its own walls, and to foster the respect which the great body of the people entertain for it. It may be laid down as an axiom that, whenever the President of a deliberative assembly is unable invariably to maintain order and decorum, the nation, by its manners or its passions, has not arrived at such a high degree of civilisation or political education as to be fitted for the exercise of constitutional liberty. In this respect, as in many others, Great Britain has set an example to the world. Whatever may have been the faults of the present House of Commons, it must be admitted that it has not lessened the force of that example, either in its collective capacity or in that of its distinguished Speaker.

THE addresses to electors of candidates who aspire to the honours of a seat in Parliament are not in general of such a character as to warrant the criticism of the public press. Parliamentary literature of this kind must pass for what it is worth with the particular constituencies to whose sympathies it is directed; but when a man of the mark of Lord John Russell addresses a constituency like that of the city of London, or such an important person as Lord Palmerston speaks to the world through the intermediation of the electors of Tiverton, the occasion becomes one of national interest, and calls for the notice and criticism of those who write contemporary history. The address which Lord John Russell has just issued to the electors of London is a temperate, an able, and in every respect a remarkable document. Its effect may be to make the electors reconsider his Lordship's high character and eminent services, and to place him once more in that position with regard to the metropolitan city which his public conduct since he proceeded as Minister to Vienna, in the year 1855, has done much to endanger. That Lord John Russell will be returned to the new Parliament no one can doubt. That the country should be deprived of his presence in that Assembly would be a misfortune, not to Lord John himself, but to the nation; and if London should reject him there are many smaller constituencies who would think themselves honoured in being represented by a man with a name so historical, of a talent so unmistakable, and of public usefulness so long and so zealously proved. If the electors of London think proper to withdraw their confidence from his Lordship, it is for them to do so, and leave him to seek other avenues to Parliament. Upon this point we shall not presume to offer an opinion, much less advice. The electors themselves best know whether they have confidence in him; and if not, on what grounds that confidence has been forfeited by a statesman whom they have so often trusted. But to the address which he has issued, whether or not it serves the purpose of his re-election, it is impossible to deny the praise of manly straightforwardness, and of statesmanlike comprehensiveness of principle. We do not agree with his Lordship in the view he has taken of the events of Canton; we do not approve of the vote which he gave in favour of Mr. Cobden's motion; and, going further back, we do not think that he showed himself a wise Ambassador in Vienna, or that he has given in his address an explanation of his policy on that occasion which elevates his diplomatic character; but, with all these drawbacks, we are glad to record our humble admiration of his lifelong services to the Liberal cause, and of his honest efforts in favour of all movements and of all measures which have had for their object the elevation of the physical, social, and moral condition of the people, and the overthrow of the remnants of bigotry, superstition, and intolerance which yet linger amongst us. Few persons who take an interest in public affairs can have forgotten the memorable address of his Lordship to the same constituency twelve years ago, when, by declaring himself in favour of the total repeal of the Corn-laws, he compelled the late Sir Robert Peel to do likewise: and thus procured for the country—at a much earlier period than might otherwise have been the case—a boon which has proved of incalculable advantage. Some such result, or we are much mistaken, will follow the address which he has just issued; and the result will not be greatly influenced by his return for London or impeded by his rejection. After such a declaration as the following, from such a man as Lord John Russell, it is impossible for Lord Palmerston to be otherwise than a reformer:—

> I am perfectly aware that the terms peace, economy, and reform have for the moment lost their charm to the ears of the present generation. But I must yet declare that, if again elected your representative, you must not expect from me an abjuration of my old creed. In office and out of office I have pursued the objects which those three words are intended to designate. The present Government, although they may be followed by new adherents, enemies of civil and religious liberty, cannot found their power permanently on any other basis than that of the good old principles and the good old cause. Whatever may be your determination, it is my purpose to adhere to them for the remainder of my life.

Whether the Premier needs such a stimulus it is not for the public journalist to determine. We can but express our satisfaction that the challenge has been thrown down, and our conviction that it must be taken up by any man who aspires to be Prime Minister and hold his place with the concurrence and support of Parliament.

ELECTION INTELLIGENCE.

THE METROPOLITAN BOROUGHS.

LONDON.—A general meeting of the Liberal Registration Association of the city of London was held at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, on Tuesday, in reference to the representation of the city in the next Parliament. Mr. Grogan took the chair. The four candidates nominated were Baron Rothschild, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Banks Curtis, and Sir James Duke. Alderman Salomons proposed a resolution expressing regret that the connection so long existing between Lord John Russell and the city of London should be separated. The resolution was, however, by desire of a portion of the meeting, withdrawn, until a more fitting opportunity. The meeting was adjourned till next Wednesday. Lord John Russell has issued an address to his constituents, in which he repudiates the charge of "combination and conspiracy" as the "falsehood of a day." The error of Government, he says, was in not dispatching a person of superior authority to Hong-Kong, "with instructions to defend the lives and properties of British subjects, and to restore, as soon as possible, a state of peace." This is now intended, as he goes on to say. But one is at loss to perceive why a course advisable on the 10th of March should not have been taken on the 16th of January. Or, if Sir John Bowring was worthy of entire approval in January, why he should be virtually superseded now, when his policy and his conduct remain the same." In reference to this he says:—"I am perfectly aware that the terms peace, economy, and retrenchment have lost their charm to the ears of the present generation. But I must yet declare that, if again elected your representative, you must not expect from me an abjuration of my old creed. In office and out of office I have pursued the objects which those three words are intended to designate. The present Government, although they may be followed by new adherents, enemies of civil and religious liberty, cannot found their power permanently on any other basis than that of the good old principles and the good old cause. Whatever may be your determination, it is my purpose to adhere to them for the remainder of my life."

WESTMINSTER.—Sir De Lacy Evans has issued his address to this constituency. He remarks:—"Gentlemen, I don't pretend to say to what it may be attributable, but never have I seen the principles of Parliamentary Reform so completely ignored as by the present House of Commons. The less regret, then, should we feel on the opportunity now offered for a declaration of opinion throughout the country of electors and non-electors. I came into Parliament, even before I had the honour of being known to you, as a warm advocate of reform. Westminster, long before that period, was the historical head-quarters of this great cause. I have been faithful to it. I will never deviate from it. Whatever party may be disposed to promote it will have my adhesion, and, I am equally confident, will have your anxious and powerful support."

FINSBURY.—It is expected that Mr. Thomas Duncombe will be returned as usual. Alderman Challis will retire. There are two other candidates in the field—Mr. Cox, a barrister, and Major Reed.

LAMBETH.—Mr. Charles Pearson issued an address to the electors, and it was thought that Mr. Williams's recent vote would have endangered his otherwise safe seat. Mr Pearson has, however, thought proper to withdraw, and it appears from the all but unanimous vote at a numerous meeting of the electors on Wednesday evening that Mr. Williams is perfectly safe.

MARYLEBONE. There is no chance of a change here. Sir B. Hall has served the borough faithfully for more than twenty years; and, whether in or out of office, he has always been the hardworking representative of his constituents. Lord Ebrington, although he may have differed from some of his constituents, has done so openly, and given his reasons fairly. This straightforward policy has brought him many friends. Mr. Jacob Bell, with a generous feeling highly creditable to him, declines taking any advantage of the absence and ill health of Lord Ebrington to offer himself on this occasion, and thus in any way damage or divide the Liberal interest.

TOWER HAMLETS.—To all appearance Sir William Clay and Mr. Butler will be returned without opposition

MIDDLESEX.—There will be a sharp contest here. Great dissatisfaction is felt at Lord Robert Grosvenor's recent vote, and it is very probable that he will be opposed. Mr. Bernal Osborne is going to Devonport. The Marquis of Blandford will be the Conservative candidate; and it is said that Mr. George Byng will start.

MANCHESTER.—The opponents of the sitting members having determined on putting in nomination Sir John Potter and the Right Hon. Robert Lowe, Vice-President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Gibson addressed his committee on Tuesday evening in one of the large rooms of the Free-trade Hall, and met with a favourable reception. Mr. Cobden is to be invited to represent Mr. Bright in his absence; and a great meeting is to be held at the Free-trade Hall next Tuesday, at which the honourable gentleman is to be present. Mr. Bright, having been informed that his friends had decided on putting him again in nomination, replied by electric telegraph, in the following terms: "Rome, Tuesday, March 10.—I accept the decision of the committee. You shall have my letter, with the address. JOHN BRIGHT."

WEST RIDING.—On Wednesday afternoon a meeting of the West Riding United Reform Registration Association Executive and General Committee was held in the hall of the Stock Exchange, Leeds, for the purpose of selecting a gentleman or gentlemen of Liberal politics most suitable to be put in nomination at the ensuing election. Frances Carbutt, Esq., occupied the chair, and two or more gentlemen attended as deputations from nearly every one of the polling-places in the West Riding. A long and animated discussion took place. Eventually it was resolved to bring forward Lord Goderich and not to oppose Mr. E. Denison, the present member, unless the Conservatives should introduce a second candidate. It is, therefore, probable there will be no contest for the West Riding.

LIVERPOOL.—The addresses of the two Conservative candidates, Messrs. Horsfall and Turner, were posted through the town on Wednesday. They both refer to their past career as indicative of their future policy, if elected. There is no doubt of the return of the former, but as regards the latter it is extremely uncertain, if not unlikely—his putting the town to the expense of a contest having excited much disapprobation amongst his previous supporters. The general feeling is in favour of the present members, Messrs. Horsfall and Ewart.

COVENTRY.—Sir Joseph Paxton has issued an address, in which, while again soliciting the suffrages of the electors, he gives his reasons for voting on Mr. Cobden's motion. "Should Lord Palmerston," he observes, "in the course of the address, "manifest a progressive and liberal spirit in his home policy, combined with the same vigour and capacity which distinguished him in the late Continental struggle, he shall have my hearty support."

GREAT YARMOUTH.—On Saturday Mr. W. T. M'Cullagh and Mr. E. W. Watkin, the Liberal candidates, appeared before a public meeting at the Star Hotel.

Mr. J. W. Shelley, one of the magistrates of the town, was called to the chair. Mr. M'Cullagh declares himself in favour of an extension of the suffrage, and to affording some legislative protection to the poor voter in the exercise of the franchise. Mr. Watkin expresses his intention, if returned, to support an extension of the suffrage, vote by ballot, educational and other reform. A resolution in favour of both candidates was passed by the meeting.

PRESTON.—The present Conservative member, Mr. R. T. Parker, has announced his intention not to offer himself. The Liberal member, Sir George Strickland, Bart., has not made any sign. Mr. Grenfell, a Liberal Whig, is in the field for the vacant seat.

LEEDS.—The Liberals have announced the Right Hon. M. T. Baines and Mr. F. Carbutt, one of the Directors of the Midland Railway, and for many years an eminent wool-merchant in the town. He is put forward by those known as the advanced Liberals, and is an opponent of Church and State, and of National Education. The friends of National Education have brought forward W. E. Forster, Esq., who has already addressed the Liberal electors, and who would have united that party in his favour had he consented to waive his opinions in favour of the education of the people. Should the Conservatives unite with the Radicals, it is probable that the Right Hon. M. T. Baines and Mr. Forster will be returned.

TOWN AND TABLE TALK ON LITERATURE, ART, &c.

THE news of the week, as far as literature and art are concerned, belongs to that class which the writers of the last age not improperly entitled "fripery news." The forthcoming elections absorb conversation; and authors are asking, not about forthcoming works from the pen of Mr. Disraeli, Sir Bulwer Lytton, Mr. Layard, Mr. Stirling, Mr. Warren, or Sir George Lewis, but whether those gentlemen are likely to be returned to Parliament for the particular places they at present represent. The general impression seems to be that Mr. Layard will lose his seat for Aylesbury, but that he will be readily chosen for another English borough. His active mind can never be in want of honourable and useful employment; and, as he seems to have set his heart on politics, he has the best wishes of all who love literature; though, indeed, we would willingly spare his attendance in the House on this condition, that he would give us another book upon any subject during the present year.

Mr. George Scharf, jun., has been appointed secretary to the Stanhope Portrait Gallery of British Celebrities. Though Mr. Scharf is not understood to have made English portraits a particular study, or to be well versed in Granger and Bromley, in Houbraken or in Lodge, yet he brings to his new business a general knowledge of art which the committee will find of essential service in their undertaking. He draws rapidly and well, and can, when required, carry off the position and air of a portrait on his thumb nail. The election of Mr. Scharf is one, therefore, that will give in the long run general satisfaction. While on this subject we may mention incidentally that there is no truth in a rumour that the Stanhope Committee differed loudly and vehemently on the propriety of admitting a portrait of James Boswell into the collection, or that two very celebrated writers (members of the committee) on Boswell's character spoke earnestly for and against the admittance of James Boswell. Surely a portrait of Boswell would not be out of place even if hung by the side of Johnson, and on the same line of sight. "Shall Cromwell have a statue?" is not, therefore, likely to be supplanted in the public prints by "Is Boswell a hero and a British celebrity?"

A right good man and true on armour and costume, Mr. Planché, is at present in Manchester, classifying, grouping, and cleaning judiciously the far-famed Meyrick collection of ancient armour. Mr. Planché was the friend of Sir Samuel Meyrick, one in whose knowledge of mediæval manners he had just reliance. Mr. Planché has, in addition, a fine taste for chronological arrangement and picturesque grouping; so that the Meyrick collection, the reader may rest assured, will be seen in Manchester in May next as Meyrick himself would have loved to have seen it. The whole of the armour in the Exhibition (rather select than extensive) is, we may add, very properly intrusted to Mr. Planché.

Who is to decorate the Art-Treasures Exhibition Building? Mr. Owen Jones, or Mr. Digby Wyatt, or Mr. Edward Salomons? In whose taste shall we rely, to whose pencil shall we intrust the decoration of the richly-ribbed roof that is to contain the Art-Treasures of England? Artists differ, mere colourists differ, architects of course differ, decorators differ, committeemen differ—rather, we should say, they did differ; now their differences are over—so runs the gossip of the day—and the decoration is intrusted (not unwisely, we think) to the far-famed Mr. Crace—the Crace who has done so much that is in exquisite taste for the Palace of Devonshire and the Duchess of Sutherland. Mr. Crace is hard at work, and what he has done already has pleased that fit audience—the few and many. We may add that the decoration is not blue and white (Hyde-park or Sydenham pattern), but something better.

Our readers will not have forgotten our paragraph of last week respecting the Royal Irish Academy and the Royal Dublin Society. We will not say that the paragraph did good service, but it has led to good, for the Royal Dublin Society has not imitated the Royal Irish Academy. No, indeed! the Royal Dublin Society has only this week most freely consented to lend all its treasures—and it has many—but has wisely allowed Mr. Kemble (the Kemble) to make the selection required. Mr. Kemble has selected, not thirty-nine, but seventy-nine articles; and Mr. Petrie—Petrie of the Round Towers—has placed his large and very fine collection of Irish antiquities at the disposal of Mr. Kemble and the Art-Treasures Exhibition.

While we are recording what we hear pleasantly, a friend, fresh from a first-class express, and impatiently headlong for the best hansom in London, rushes frantically before us, and whispers loudly in our ear that the Marquis of Hertford—the King Charles the First of modern collectors—sends his thirty-seven finest pictures—and his whole collection is surpassingly fine—to this Manchester he knows not what Exhibition. The Marquis, whose taste in art is not to be disputed, has made the selection himself, wishing to show what he has inherited and what he has bought; and the nobleness of his inheritance is only to be surpassed by the wise magnificence of his purchases. Christie and Manson, it is said, value the thirty-seven pictures at something above seventy thousand pounds. Lord Hertford, it is announced, wished at one time to have all his pictures hung together; but has—in his true love for art—at once consented to the chronological arrangement of the committee. His Lordship's acquisitions will tell with equal effect, and certainly to more useful artistic purposes, by the arrangement his Lordship now thinks the best—and this is the view of our impatient friend, cold from the fresh-horsed hansom cab.

The half ex-Chancellor of the Exchequer and the late ex-Chancellor are agreed upon every point of the Budget, saving the folly of a civil vote of no one knows what (not even Mr. Anderson, of the Treasury) for the Ordnance Survey of Scotland. Mr. Gladstone computed the vote (was it done at a late hour?) at something between four millions sterling and five millions sterling, and Sir George Lewis (in no way too cordial and with reason with his right honourable friend) thinks thus accurately of the excessive and unwise vote:—

> I don't be lol that the Government is called upon to produce a plan upon so gigantic a scale that the outline of a single county in Scotland would take up all over the floor of Westminster Hall (Cheers and a laugh)—a scale so large as to be utterly useless for all the ordinary purposes of a map, and only applicable to the objects of estate surveys. That was decided by the House however, but I still entertain the opinion that a map upon the scale of one inch to the mile, accurately laid down, is all that Government ought furnish for national purposes.

How will the Scottish lion roar at hearing this! It is enough to bring from his grave

> Sir David Lyndsay of the Mount,
> Lord Lion King at Arms.

THE MARRIAGE OF THE PRINCESS ROYAL.—The Cross, Berlin newspaper, states on authentic information that the ceremony of betrothal of her Royal Highness the Princess Royal to Prince Frederick William will take place at London during the month of May; and that the Prince and Princess of Prussia will accompany their popular and respected son to England for that purpose. The marriage, adds the Cross, is fixed for the 21st of November, or as soon after as possible. The newly-married couple, it is believed, will remain in England about a month or more, and there pass the Christmas holidays; after which they will commence their journey to the Prussian dominions, and make their entry in state into Berlin immediately after the new year, by which time the palace now fitting up for their residence will be fully completed and properly fired.

CHINESE REBELS.

THE WAR IN CHINA.

It was stated by Lord Palmerston in Parliament last Tuesday week that, but for the unfortunate events which have recently happened at Canton, this country, in connection with France, and probably with the concurrence of the United States, were about to send a mission to Pekin for the sake of extending our diplomatic relations with China. Of course that arrangement is suspended for the present; but it will be seen from the following letter, which appeared in the Moniteur of last Saturday, that the entente cordiale between England and France still prevails, notwithstanding all the efforts of the friends of Russia to break it:—

Hong-Kong, Jan. 14.

The Chinese no longer restrict themselves to mere self defence at Canton and upon the river; they have issued proclamations and pamphlets exciting the inhabitants to hatred and to the murder of foreigners; they prohibit them from serving the Barbarians, and we have had reason to apprehend an insurrectional movement at Hong-Kong itself. Sir John Bowring has come to an understanding with Admiral Guerin, the Commander-in-Chief of the French division, and they have decided in concert upon effectual measures for keeping down, in case of need, the Chinese population. Fifty men of the French crews have taken up a position in the east part of the town, and every arrangement has been settled for landing, at the first signal, all the landing companies and four field howitzers.

It would appear that this attitude taken by the French is to be ascribed to the instructions received by the last mail. France and England had concerted, we are assured, before they knew even of the recent events at Canton, to obtain from the Chinese Government the revision of their treaties which expire forthwith, and their representatives are said to have received despatches which, whilst prescribing to them the identical conduct they will have to observe for the attainment of this object by common accord, authorise them to afford each other mutual support in all eventualities. Be that as it may, it is time to have a reinforcement sent to us, and, should fresh forces fail to come to China, all Europeans indiscriminately would be exposed to most serious dangers.

In fact, you will learn that the incidents of the contest, of which Canton is the principal theatre, are succeeding each other rapidly and acquiring every day more serious importance. You will know when you receive this letter that the Factories have been destroyed; they were set on fire by the Chinese in twenty different places at one and the same time, and the English, unable to multiply themselves, made efforts, but in vain, to subdue the flames.

Where the Factories once stood we now see nothing but a heap of ruins. Encouraged by the momentary deficiency of force at the disposal of Admiral Seymour, the Chinese are showing themselves resolved to go on by means of murder and arson; Imperial soldiers in disguise took their passage on board the Thistle steamer, carrying the mail; while this vessel was descending the river these soldiers fell upon the Europeans, whom they assassinated, and they then, having set her on fire, ran her ashore.

In the course of the 3rd inst. a large number of junks attempted to take the Coromandel war-steamer, carrying Admiral Seymour's flag. The Chinese had chosen the moment when the tide was at the lowest, and when the different steamers could not come to each other's assistance. The Coromandel made a vigorous resistance, and the assailants were obliged to sheer off, after losing many of their number. The English had one officer and four men killed, and eight men wounded.

We have already spoken (says the Paris Moniteur de la Flotte) of the odious orders sent by the Court of Pekin to the Mandarins governing the maritime provinces of the Celestial Empire. In several quarters, and particularly at Shanghai, these orders have not been carried out.

CHINESE MODE OF CARRYING THE WOUNDED.

HONG-KONG: CENTRAL PORTION OF THE TOWN OF VICTORIA

but in a great number of others they have, unfortunately, but too much exerted the bad passions of the inhabitants. Some of the Mandarins have addressed to the populace proclamations breathing the most cruel dispositions. We have received that of the Governor of Whampoa, of which the following translation is just now seasonable:—

Infamous foreigners have presumed to raise the standard of revolt against the sublime and venerated authority of the Emperor. They have attacked the city of Canton, in order to burn it; and already have they received the punishment they merited, for our invincible troops have repulsed them, and killed a great number of them. Let them be attacked from every part of the empire. Let every inhabitant of China who shall meet an Englishman inflict on him the fate he merits. Already do our innumerable fleets and our mighty armies, which are prepared by the whole world, advance to drive them away. Let everybody unite with that design, let every one take part in the war, and teach foreigners to tremble before the will and before the anger of our Sovereign, whose glance is as burning as the rays of the sun, and whose power is immeasurable.

He who shall not act in conformity with these orders shall be considered as a traitor, and may expect from us a chastisement as prompt as terrible.

You hear: Obey. The Mandarin Governor, TCHYN-TOO.
Done at Whampoa, the 5th day of the 12th Moon.

As soon as this proclamation appeared, the agitation that ensued among the populace was so great that the small number of Europeans in the town felt it prudent to evacuate, and the foreign vessels at anchor in the roads or in the Tchoukiang, a river of great commerce, put to sea with the Europeans on board. Whampoa is not one of the five ports open to foreign commerce in virtue of treaties. It is a port situated about a dozen miles from Canton, where vessels requiring to that city often anchor to take in water and provisions. The proclamation of the Mandarin of Whampoa (says our correspondent), the only one of which we know the text, is stated to be one of the least violent. We may judge by it of the disposition of the Chinese authorities.

A Paris letter, in the Nord, of Brussels, says:—

The French squadron in the China Seas is about to be reinforced, and an arrangement has been concluded to that effect between Count Walewski, Lord Cowley, and Admiral Hamelin.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

The first of the Engravings at page 238 represents a party of Chinese Rebels; and the second Engraving the mode of carrying a wounded Rebel, both taken from Sketches made during the siege.

In the general view of Hong-Kong, at page [illegible] is shown the central part of the town with Victoria, at the base of the lofty hills. The town was founded in 1841; and within two years, from a tent pitched for the Government residence, it became a large assemblage of stores, forts, wide streets, bazaars, and markets, and several public buildings.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

LORD THURLOW.

THE RIGHT HON. EDWARD THOMAS HOVELL THURLOW, third Baron Thurlow, of Thurlow, in the county of Suffolk, whose death occurred on the 2nd inst., at Herne Bay, was the eldest son of the celebrated Lord Chancellor Thurlow a nephew and successor, Edward, second Baron Thurlow, by his wife, Mary Catherine, eldest daughter of James Richard Bolton, Esq. He was born the 12th Nov., 1814, and succeeded his father, as third Baron, the 3rd June, 1829. He married, the 9th Nov., 1836, Sarah, only daughter of Peter Hodgson, Esq., by which lady (who died the 31st March, 1840) he has left two sons, the eldest of whom, Edward Thomas, his successor, born the 6th Oct., 1837, is now the fourth Baron Thurlow.

THE EARL OF FIFE.

THE RIGHT HON. JAMES DUFF, fourth Earl of Fife, Viscount Macduff, and Baron Braco, of Kilbryde, county Cavan, in the Peerage of Ireland, and Baron Fife in the Peerage of the United Kingdom, was the eldest son of Alexander, the third Earl, by his wife, Mary, daughter of George Skeene, Esq., of Skeene, and was born the 6th October, 1776. He married, the 6th Sept., 1799, Maria Caroline, second daughter of Louisa, Countess of Dysart, and her husband, John Maunsey, Esq., of Graham Grange, Lincolnshire, and by this lady, who died the 20th Dec., 1805, he had no issue. He succeeded his father in his Earldom and other Irish titles on the 7th April, 1811. He was created a British Peer, as Baron Fife, of the county of Fife, the 28th April, 1827. His Lordship, during the early portion of his life, greatly distinguished himself as a soldier. He was with the Spanish army in the Peninsula previously to 1814, holding the rank of Major-General in that service. He was wounded at the Battle of Talavera, in 1809; and again more severely at the attack of Fort Matagorda, near Cadiz, in the following year. At the conclusion of the Peninsular war he returned to Scotland. His Lordship was for many years Lord of the Bedchamber to the late King William IV. He had been made a Knight of the Thistle in 1827, and was, with the exception of the present Earl of Aberdeen, the senior Knight of the Order. He was nominated a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of Guelphs of Hanover in 1823, and was also a Knight of the Spanish Order of St. Ferdinand, and of the Swedish Order of the Sword. His Lordship was Lord Lieutenant of Banffshire and Vice-President of the Antiquarian Society of Scotland. The Earl of Fife died on the 9th inst. at his seat, Duff House, Banffshire. As he had no issue his Barony of Fife in the United Kingdom becomes extinct; and he is succeeded in his Irish honours, and his extensive estates in the counties of Banff, Aberdeen, and Forfar, by his nephew, the elder son of the late General the Hon. Sir Alexander Duff, G.C.H. of Delgaty Castle, Aberdeenshire. James Duff, Esq., M.P. for Banffshire, who now becomes the fifth Earl of Fife, and who was born in 1814, married, in 1840, the Lady Agnes Georgiana Hay, second daughter of the late Earl of Erroll, by whom he has a youthful family. The Earls of Fife, whose original surname of Macduff the genius of Shakspeare has made familiar to the world, spring from the very Macduff the thane of the tragedy, that powerful chieftain was, for his services in destroying the usurper Macbeth, created an Earl, in 1060, by King Malcolm Canmore. The present Earldom of Fife is a second creation, bearing date in 1759.

DR. KANE.

ELISHA KENT KANE, the justly celebrated traveller, was born at Philadelphia, in 1822. He was educated at the Universities of Virginia and Pennsylvania, and graduated with honours as a Doctor of Medicine in 1843. Immediately after receiving his degree he was appointed on the diplomatic staff as surgon to the first American Embassy to China. He availed himself of the facilities afforded by his position to explore the Philippines, which he accomplished principally on foot. His charts are still preserved. He was the first who descended the crater of Taal, and ventured to make a topographical sketch of the interior of that great volcano. After these explorations Dr. Kane traversed India. On his return journey he was so unfortunate as to lose all his papers and journals, and to suffer severely from the plague. His profound interest in the question of slave trade induced him next to sail from the United States in a frigate for the coast of Africa. He visited the slave factories from Cape Mount to the river Bonny, and had a free access to the barracoons of Dahomey. He returned home only to make preparations for new adventures and perils in Mexico. He was dangerously wounded at the Battle of Nopaloca, and acquired renown and credit for the brilliant performance of the difficult and dangerous duty of carrying President Polk's despatches to General Scott. With that love for geographical research which characterised him throughout life, he contrived to obtain barometrical altitudes of Popocatepti during his military services in Mexico.

On the return of peace he was attached to the United States' Survey under Professor Bache, and was at work in the Gulf of Mexico when the liberality of Mr. Grinnell stimulated the Government of the United States to the first American Expedition in search of Sir John Franklin. Dr. Kane immediately volunteered his services, and was appointed surgeon to the expedition. His narrative of this voyage was published in 1852. The narrative of Dr. Kane's Second Expedition is just published. The Doctor, to the general regret of his countrymen, and of all lovers of science and enterprise in England, died recently at the Havannah.

A portrait of Dr. Kane appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, No. 830.

THE WEATHER.

THE STORM ON SUNDAY LAST.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS*)*

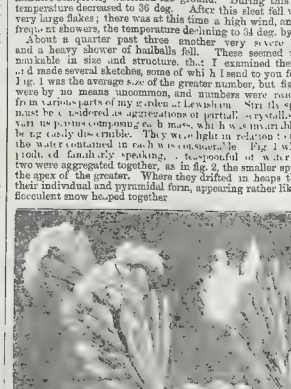
On Sunday, March 8, after a period of more than a month of unusually fine weather, during which less rain had fallen than in any corresponding period since the year 1821, a change suddenly took place. Till about 11 a.m. it was fine; at 11h. 20m., when the temperature of the air was 45 deg., a very severe hailstorm took place, which in a few minutes completely whitened the ground. During this interval the temperature decreased to 36 deg. After this sleet fell with snow in very large flakes; there was at this time a high wind, and afterwards frequent showers, the temperature declining to 34 deg. by noon.

About a quarter past three another very severe hail arose, and a heavy shower of hailballs fell. These seemed to me remarkable in size and structure, that I examined them with care, and made several sketches, some of which I send to you for engraving. Fig. 1 was the average size of the greater number, but figs. 2, 3, and 4 were by no means uncommon, and numbers were readily collected from various parts of my garden at Lewisham. Strictly speaking they must be considered as aggregations of partial crystallised snow, the ball in question composed of such a mass, which is primarily pyramidal, being easily crumble. They were light in relation to their size but the water contained in each was considerable. Fig. 1 when dissolved yielded, familiarly speaking, a teaspoonful of water. Sometimes two or more aggregated together, as in fig. 2, the smaller springing from the apex of the greater. When they drifted in heaps they soon lost their individual and pyramidal form, appearing rather like particles of flocculent snow heaped together.



The distinct prismatic structure of these bodies was to me highly interesting, as completely analogous to that of the crystals of snow published in the report of the British Meteorological Society. With one single exception, which I noticed, the prisms radiated downwards from the apex to the base of the cone, which was irregular and jagged. I never before remember to have seen hail of this particular description.

As bearing upon the recent investigations into the nature of crystalline formations these remarks may not be devoid of interest to your readers and the public. I may add that the number of these hailballs was truly remarkable, for in the course of a few minutes the ground was thickly covered with them, many drifts remaining in sheltered places till noon of the following day, though diminished in size; also that their crystalline structure was more easily discernible a few minutes after than at the time of their descent—the opaque and outer particles being by then dissolved.

On the following day frequent squalls of hail of the same pyramidal form and structure, but not remarkable in size, were experienced. At midnight also, and for some hours after, the ground was whitened with multitudes of snow crystals of from one to two tenths of an inch in size. All were of stellar form, varied in structure, and lightly resting on the blades of short grass, which glistened with them in the moonlight in all direction, presenting a rich and beautiful field for the pursuit of minute observation.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,
JAMES GLAISHER, Sec. Brit. Met. Soc.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE CAMBRIDGE OBSERVATORY FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 11, 1857

| DAY | Dry Bulb | Wet Bulb | Dew Point | Dry Bulb | Wet Bulb | Dew Point | Wind | Rain |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 9 a.m. | | | 3 p.m. | | | 9 a.m. | |
| | ° | ° | ° | ° | ° | ° | | inches |
| March 5 | 37·6 | 37·4 | 37·1 | 38·9 | 37·9 | 34·6 | S.W. | 0·000 |
| 6 | 39·52 | 38·8 | 37·2 | 41·1 | 40·7 | 39·9 | N.W. | 0·000 |
| 7 | 39·64 | 39·6 | 39·2 | 45·2 | 42·4 | 36·3 | W. | 0·000 |
| 8 | 39·59 | 41·7 | 40·4 | 43·6 | 42·9 | 42·3 | W.N.W. | 0·214 |
| 9 | 29·891 | 40·7 | 40·6 | 41·5 | 34·8 | 30·2 | N. | 0·043 |
| 10 | 29·69 | 38·4 | 35·5 | 44·8 | 42·5 | 37·1 | S. | 0·000 |
| 11 | 29·80 | 39·4 | 37·6 | 44·2 | 39·1 | 32·0 | S. | 0·000 |
| Means | 29·742 | 41·5 | 39·7 | 42·9 | 40·7 | 36·2 | | 0·26 |

The range of temperature during the week was 28·1 degrees.

Hear frost covered the ground on the morning of March 6th, and on the nights of the 8th and 10th. Snow was falling heavily on the forenoon and afternoon of the 8th, and on the morning and during the night of the 9th. The ground was covered with snow at 9 a.m. of the 10th; but it had completely disappeared by noon, although a few flakes fell afterwards.

The weather was very stormy and unsettled throughout the days of the 8th and 9th and the wind was blowing with great violence from the N. Thunder was heard on the afternoon of the 8th. The sky has been much overcast, but was very clear on the day of the 5th, on the afternoon of the 7th, and on the nights of the 9th and 10th.

A faint halo was noticed round the moon on the night of the 8th, and a very well-defined one remained visible for some hours on the night of the 9th.

J. BRIEN

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION

Lat. 51° 29′ 60″; Long. 0° 16′ 47″ W.; Height above sea 34 feet.

| DAY | THERMOMETER | | | | | | | WIND. | | RAIN |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Mean of 24 Hours. | Mean of Dew-point. | Mean Elastic Force of Vapour. | Mean Humidity. | Mean Tension of Vapour. | Mean Dew-point. | Mean Elastic Force of Vapour. | General Direction. | Number of Hours. | Fall in 24 Hours. |
| | Inches | ° | | | inch | ° | | | Miles | Inches |
| March 4 | 29·741 | 39·8 | ·311 | 89 | ·268 | 35·8 | 49·1 | W. | 397 | 0·000 |
| 5 | 29·775 | 39·0 | ·301 | 91 | ·264 | 33·9 | 48·1 | W. | 277 | 0·000 |
| 6 | 29·845 | 41·2 | ·341 | 91 | ·299 | 38·7 | 52·5 | W. | 241 | 0·000 |
| 7 | 29·815 | 40·1 | 0·329 | 92 | ·302 | 37·2 | 52·5 | W.S.W. | 271 | 0·000 |
| 8 | 29·761 | 40·4 | ·331 | 94 | ·312 | 38·2 | 44·1 | W. | 411 | 0·000 |
| 9 | 29·561 | 42·3 | ·361 | 97 | ·350 | 41·7 | 42·6 | N. | 165 | 0·111 |
| 10 | 29·561 | 38·5 | ·307 | 94 | ·287 | 36·8 | 38·5 | N.E. | 168 | 0·014 |

The daily means are obtained from observations made at 6h. and 10h. a.m., and 2h., 6h., and 10h. p.m. on each day, except Sunday, when the first observation is omitted. The corrections for diurnal variation are taken from the Tables of Mr. Glaisher. The "Dew-point" and "Relative Humidity" are calculated, from observations of the dry and wet bulb thermometers, by Dr. Apjohn's Formula and Daniell's Tables of the Tension of Vapour. The movement of the wind is given by a self recording Robinson's Anemometer, the amount stated for each day being that registered from midnight to midnight.

The number of applicants to be admitted as attorneys in the forthcoming term is ninety-five, including several who were "plucked" last term, when the extraordinary number of thirty were sent back.

It is said that a large emigration will take place from California to Australia immediately, as the prospects are anything but encouraging to miners in the former place.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

DONCASTER has had a very fair meeting, despite a cold inclement sky, which early on Tuesday threatened to cover the course with snow. Mr. T. Parr led off, as he has done at four of the Spring Meetings so far, but this time with Odd Trick. Polly Peachum, a chestnut filly, by Collingwood, and purchased for sixty-five guineas at the Maresfield sale, proved that her Liverpool form was a good one, as with 4 lb. extra she cut down twenty "Hopeful" opponents in a common canter; Peregrine, a Longueran colt of Mr. T. Parr's, finishing second; and Heroine, the little 500-guinea winner of the Yerling Stakes at Shrewsbury, far away in the ruck. The senior jockeys, Holmes, Nat, Bumby, A. Day, &c., showed in some force on the two-year-olds, for the first time this season.

St. Giles, the Wynnstay colt of Lord Ribblesdale, defeated everything quite easily in the Betting-room Stakes, but he will have some awkward customers at Northampton, if he goes there; and we doubt whether distance be his forte. Adamas and Commoner will, we believe, both be found, on the contrary, to be stayers.

The steeplechase at Doncaster was rather better than it usually is; the Liverpool winner, Emigrant, had a fall, which put his chance entirely out. A French Count won it with his horse Jean du Quesne, ridden by Lamplugh, whose steeplechase fame has so long been known in France. Sandboy stepped up and broke his back; so the casualties were wonderfully light. One capture started with a st. 7 lb. Why do not the committee refuse to handicap under 9 st. 7 lb., or 10 st., and then Lincolnshire and Holderness would send its horses "with men to ride them"?

Yesterday was still very much fancied for the 2000 Guineas, which will be a struggle of no ordinary interest this year. Blink Bonny is gradually going back for the Derby, and Lord Clifden's lot (a pair of impostors, to our mind) have taken the pas of her.

Chester Cup speculation is almost nil, and, in fact, the Leviathan's determination not to be "dead," but to stick to post-betting, has thrown a great damper over "the Corner." Ellerdale, Cameron, and Virago are all at the Dutchman's paddocks; Boiardo is sold into Norfolk; and old Melbourne's name has disappeared from the sire list, not before it was time, as breeders would have nothing more to do with him. He was only twenty-three, and has brought his owner an enormous income, on the average, for nine or ten seasons past. His son Oulston is a very unworthy successor to him at Cawston. The Danube, who was so much spoken of as a yearling, but failed as a racer, probably owing to a hock enlargement, has gone into Lincolnshire, which has Mortimer, Captain Cornish, and a great deal of fresh blood this year. The latter is a grandson of Don John, whose death in America has just been reported.

Apropos of sales, the Masons have dissolved partnership, and eighteen of their horses will be sold at Tattersall's on Monday week. James, the renowned rider, will still keep on the stables in Mount-street. Mr. A. Thompson's foxhounds, fifty-three couple working and twenty-five couple unentered, will be sold in April; and Mr. Marshall's foxhounds are also seeking a fresh proprietor. Mr. Assheton Smith's hounds had a great run on Monday; and, as a proof that the race of good sportsmen is not likely to be lost, we may mention that a little fellow of the name of Henry Richardson, of eleven and a half, on a pony of 11¾ hands, went through the whole of that extraordinary run of 3h. 45m. with the old Surrey last month. Will Goodall's accident was, we hope, only a matter of not a very serious character; and we are delighted to see that Mr. Charles Davis is to receive a testimonial by the united subscriptions of those who have hunted with the Queen's hounds, and all who wish to honour this archetype of a huntsman. The Norfolk Foxhounds finished their season last Friday. A correspondent informs us that the subscription nearly reaches £2500, and that, although they have had but poor sport, there being scarcely any foxes at first except at Melton Constable, and a legion of other first-season hindrances, everything now looks well for the future—foxes plenty and Speedies few.

The steeplechase list is larger than usual. Haverfordwest stands for Wednesday; Warwick and Horncastle for Thursday; and the Grand Military and the Pytchley Hunt, near Brixworth, for Friday. Mr. Merry has set a rare example to this degenerate steeplechase age, as Essence is weighted at 12 st. 7 lb., and the scale does not go below 9 st. 5 lb. Emigrant gave Weathercock 12 lb. and a beating at Liverpool, which Mr. Merry estimates at 7 lb.

The most exciting sporting incident of the month for naturalists has been the capture of an eagle 7 ft. 6 in. from tip to tip, by a shepherd, who pounced on him as he was "tamelling" the body of a sheep, and mastered him with the aid of his dog, who gave him "a game wing" in the struggle.

The coursing meetings for the week are Altcar Club and Limerick (O) on Wednesday and Thursday, and Mount Louise (Monaghan) on Thursday and Friday. The result of the great Waterloo Cup event was Scotland first, Lancashire third, and Cumberland second and fourth. "Cannie Cumberland" has, it would seem, some rare long-tail blood left, though its old judge has retired from the lists. King Lear's dam, Repentance, is for sale. Nothing like using fame at the critical moment; and the celebrated Riot is matched with Barrator. If she had been in form the Rs would have shown better at Altcar than they did.

DONCASTER SPRING MEETING.—TUESDAY.

Trial Stakes.—Odd Trick, 1. Bourgeois, 2.
Hopeful Stakes.—Polly Peachum, 1. Peregrine, 2.
Doncaster Spring Handicap.—Mystic, 1. Pantomime, 2.
Municipal Stakes. Polish, 1. Bullock, 2.
Chesterfield Plate.—Mysterious Jack, 1. Lord Nelson, 2.

WEDNESDAY.

Betting-room Stakes.—St. Giles, 1. Admiral Lyons, 2.
Juvenile Selling Stakes.—Queen of the Isles, 1. Mrs. Taft, 2.
Grand National Steeplechase.—Jean Du Quesne, 1. Hindoo, 2.
Scurry Stakes.—Admiral, 1. Plausible, 2.

SALISBURY RACES. THURSDAY.

Craven Plate.—Shark, 1. Dupe, 2.
Wiltshire Stakes.—Apathy, 1. Tame Deer, 2.
Fourth Biennial Stakes.—Happy Land, 1. Merry Sunshine, 2.
Third Biennial Stakes.—Vanguard, 1. Wanderer, 2.
City Bowl. Lady Conyngham, 1. Hero 2.

A NEW DODGE.—A few days since a well-dressed, gentlemanly-looking man, leading a beautiful boy some five years of age, entered a jeweller's shop in Broadway, New York, and asked the price of a handsome gold bracelet; it was 120 dollars. The gentleman examined and finally bought the article and put it into his pocket. He then took out a large purse, full of shining pieces, and opened it. At that moment he suddenly exclaimed, with a look of alarm, "Why! where is Charley?" and, dashing the plump purse on the counter, he rushed from the store, in frantic search of Lis boy who had disappeared. The clerk awaited the gentleman's return for some time, with the purse lying where he had cast it down in his excitement. No fear of trickery was entertained, as the purse evidently contained money amounting to twice the value of the bracelet. But when hour after hour passed without the gentleman's return, and it was found that the purse only contained brass medals, the size of half-eagles, the clerk and his master both came to the conclusion that their customer was a slipper-man, and that his innocent-looking boy was not being brought up in the way he should go.—Boston (U.S.) Traveller.

THE LAW OF LIBEL FOR NEWSPAPERS.—The case of Davison v. Duncan, which has attracted much public attention, came on at the Durham assizes last week. The plaintiff in the action was Joseph Davison, a solicitor in the city of Durham; the defendants, William Duncan and John Taylor Duncan, proprietors and publishers of the Durham County Advertiser. The action was brought to recover damages—laid at £1000—for a libel, alleged to be contained in a report of a meeting of the Hartlepool Commissioners, published in the defendants' newspaper. The defendants pleaded, firstly, not guilty; secondly, that the facts were true; and thirdly, that the statement complained of was a just and true report of what had taken place, and that they published it without malice. The case came on for trial through the learned Judge (Justice Crampton) summed up, stating his opinion that the expressions made use of at the meeting clearly contained libellous matter. Reporters and newspaper proprietors were public individuals performing very useful and important functions, but if they circulated slanders they must be held responsible, as other private individuals were. The jury retired for a short time, and at two o'clock returned with a verdict for the plaintiff—one farthing damages.

Amongst the reforms which will be introduced after the return of the Emperor of Austria to Vienna are the following:—Jews' emancipation bill, suppression of corporations and regulation of trades, reduction on entry dues paid by machinery, and complete suppression of transit dues.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

THE expiring House of Commons is rapidly dispersing of its last worldly bushness, not forgetting, however, to improve the occasion by delivering a series of speeches calculated to edify the constituents of the new House. A temporary Budget meets with little opposition, and the votes for the various services are promptly granted. Addresses to the constituencies appear in scores, and the excitement of a general election has caused, as usual, some ludicrous offers of services to be made on the part of individuals whom one would not exactly select as those designed for statesmanship. Some of these will disappear, but it may be desirable hereafter to indicate such as persevere, to the scandal of the community. No new candidates of mark are at present mentioned; but the veteran reformer, General Thompson, who has been too long excluded from Parliament, has taken the field; and one or two other useful men, who have not recently been returned, again come forward.

The fatal blunder made by the coalescing factions, and the adroit use to which it has been turned by Lord Palmerston, have wrought up the perpetrators to a pitch of rage which occasionally finds really childish demonstration. There is no shutting their eyes to the certainty that, in place of a fluctuating majority in a Parliament summoned by the Conservatives, the Premier will in two months have a large, steady, and certain majority in a Parliament elected-at his own call, and that a factious combination, designed to overthrow him, will have placed his Administration upon a securer basis than any Cabinet has known since the time of Sir Robert Peel. The Conservatives bear this conviction with the decorum of gentlemen; and beyond a little angry growling from the ultras, who have not found "the sword of Gideon" work the deliverance which they expected, the regular Opposition is content with harping upon the fact that Lord Palmerston is not a young man, that they do not understand his policy, and have a general impression that he is a traitor. But the Manchester organs, the gentle peacemongers, cannot bear things with so much composure. They literally rage, and spit out spite against Lord Palmerston upon every occasion which serves, or can be made to serve. They began by proclaiming his Fall, and in their ecstasy described mob-cheering at Westminster as the exulting shouts of an indignant nation. But when they found that the objectionable Premier had not fallen at all, and that the nation was certainly raising its voice, but that it was to give him unmistakable encouragement, that addresses were pouring in upon him, great constituencies writing to him, and public meetings of the respectable and influential classes passing unanimous resolutions in his favour, they waxed ludicrously frantic, and up to the last date are ringing the changes upon every epithet of abuse, from murderer to coxcomb, that can be found for the Viscount. The amenities of the past age, when patriots were all sacrilous, are revived by the cheap press and its patrons; and in their intense vulgarity may be seen a specimen of what our journals would be under the dynasty of King Calico. For a few weeks this will go on, the apostles of peace become more and more rabid, and every small anti-ministerial gathering will be magnified into a meeting of the people—the people, en masse, having pronounced for the man who upheld the honour of England during the war, and has since refused to prostrate it at the cry of cant and faction.

Mr. Shaw Lefevre, the Speaker of the House of Commons, has signified that he retires at the close of this Session, after discharging his duty in the chair for nearly eighteen years He was chosen in 1839, on the retirement of Mr. Abercromby, and in opposition to the Conservative candidate, Mr. Goulburn, by 317 to 296, and has since been chosen twice without contest. Eloquent tributes were paid on Tuesday night by Lords Palmerston and John Russell, Mr. Disraeli, and Sir John Pakington, to the retiring Speaker; and although the public at large, having little conception of the number and intricacy of the questions which the Speaker of the House of Commons has to deal with at a moment's notice, may not attach a due value to this portion of Mr. Lefevre's merits, the continuous testimony borne to his tact, dignity, and amiability, must have familiarised most people with his character. He receives a retiring pension and a peerage, and neither has often been more worthily earned. Mr. Lefevre's portrait was published in a recent number of this Journal.

The Indian Mail has just arrived, and the most important piece of information which it contains is that, in retaliation for the atrocities of the Cantonese, the western suburb of Canton has been burned to the ground by Admiral Seymour. His reinforcements will by this time have reached him, and it would seem, from the powerful force to be placed at his disposal, that the object of the Government is to make a road for the British Envoy to the foot of the Emperor's throne. It is not probable that Sir H. Rawlinson, or Sir John M'Neill, or the representative, whoever he may be, who is to be accredited to China, will condescend to be put into communication with the miscreant Yeh, or that we shall now desist from hostilities until we have been afforded the means of making the demands of civilised Europe comprehensible to the head Government.

The question of the opium trade between India and China was brought before the Lords by the Earl of Shaftesbury on Monday, but in the mildest form in which a question could possibly be raised; and it was disposed of in corresponding fashion. He asked that legal opinion might be taken upon the subject; and this was agreed to by the Government, but upon the distinct condition that they should not be bound by the result. There is a good deal of nonsense talked about opium; the fact being that tobacco-smoking, in excess, is just as deleterious, and the gin-drinking prevalent among our lower orders far more unwholesome and demoralising.

The real history of the British Bank rascality is now being developed. The examination of Mr. Esdaile, one of the governors, is being taken, and the inquiry elicits from that unimpeachable authority a reluctant confession of such jobbing, juggling, and jesuitry as has rarely been heard of. In addition to the exposure of a fraudulent system, which for its coldblooded wickedness stands apart from ordinary guilt, a singular side-light is thrown upon the proceedings of some who have hitherto preserved what they supposed to be a discreet silence, but one which in the instinct of self-preservation they will hardly care to keep much longer. Pursued by the relentless Mr. Linklater, the ex-governor was compelled to divulge the wretched system which has brought about so much sorrow and ruin, and the logic of the Commissioner was used to induce him to qualify the whole by the briefest and strongest terms in the language—those which the public has long since applied to the entire management of the British Bank.

It is to be hoped that a large stock of receipt and postage stamps is in store, or in the hands of the distributors, or else the public may sustain inconvenience by the result of one of the most fierce and awful fires which it ever witnessed and which, in a couple of hours of the night of [illegible] destroyed the White Bear stamp manufactory.

In the House of Commons there are 105 barristers and six solicitors, and in the Lords nine lawyers—making 120.

MUSIC.

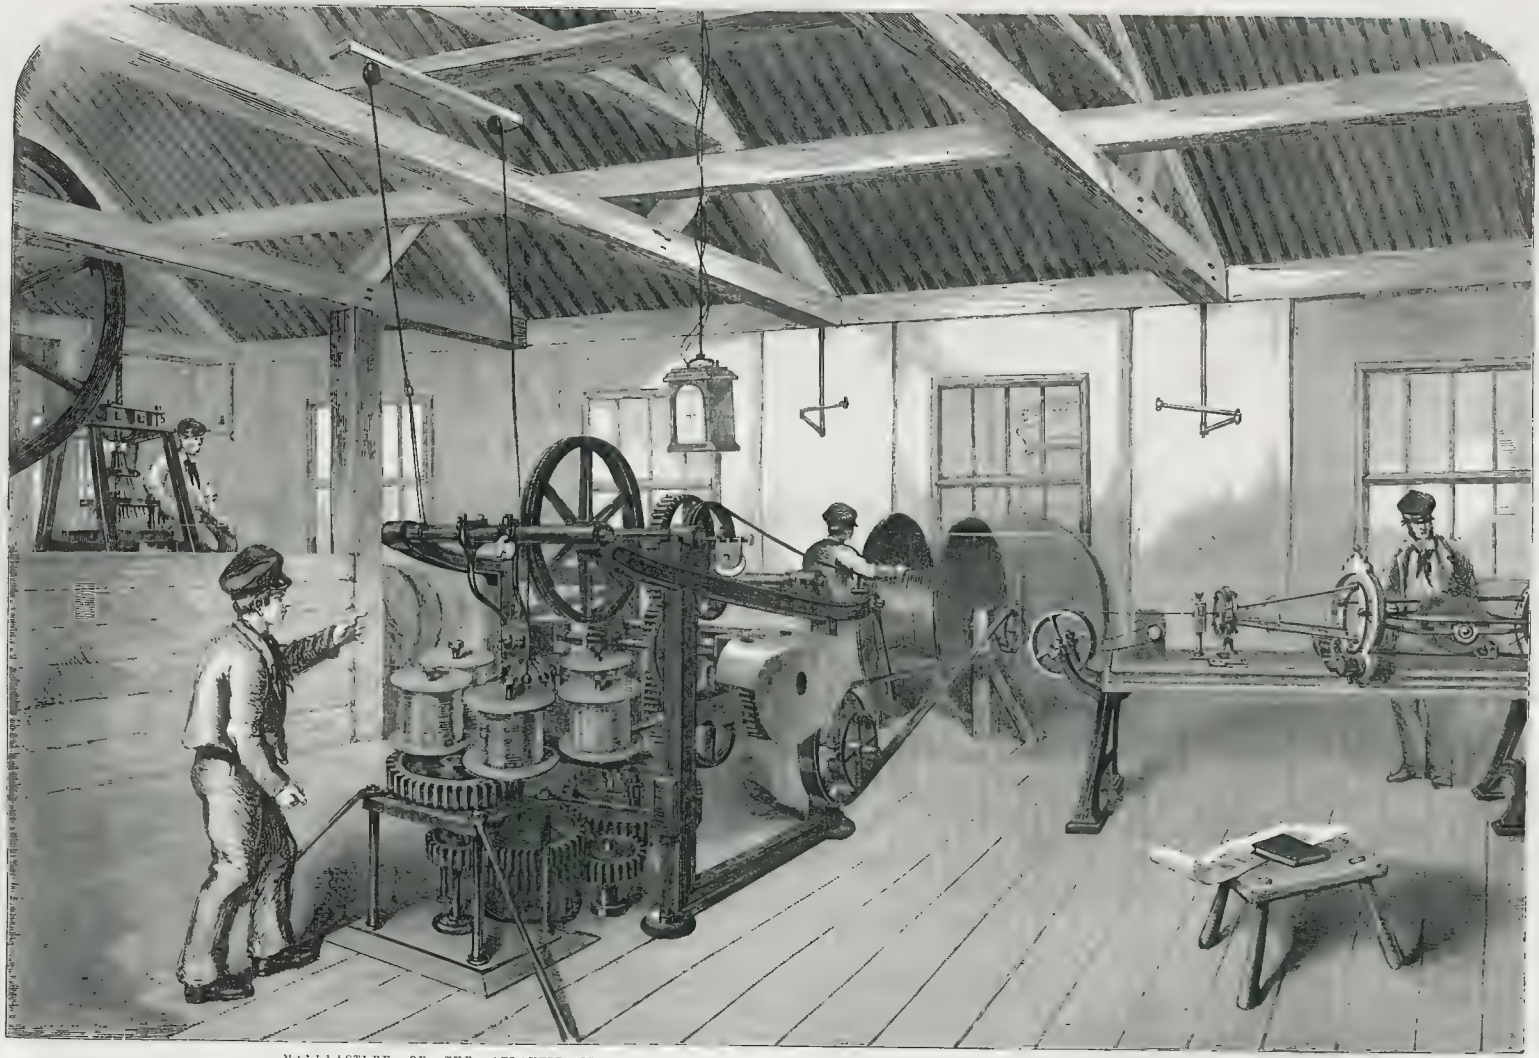
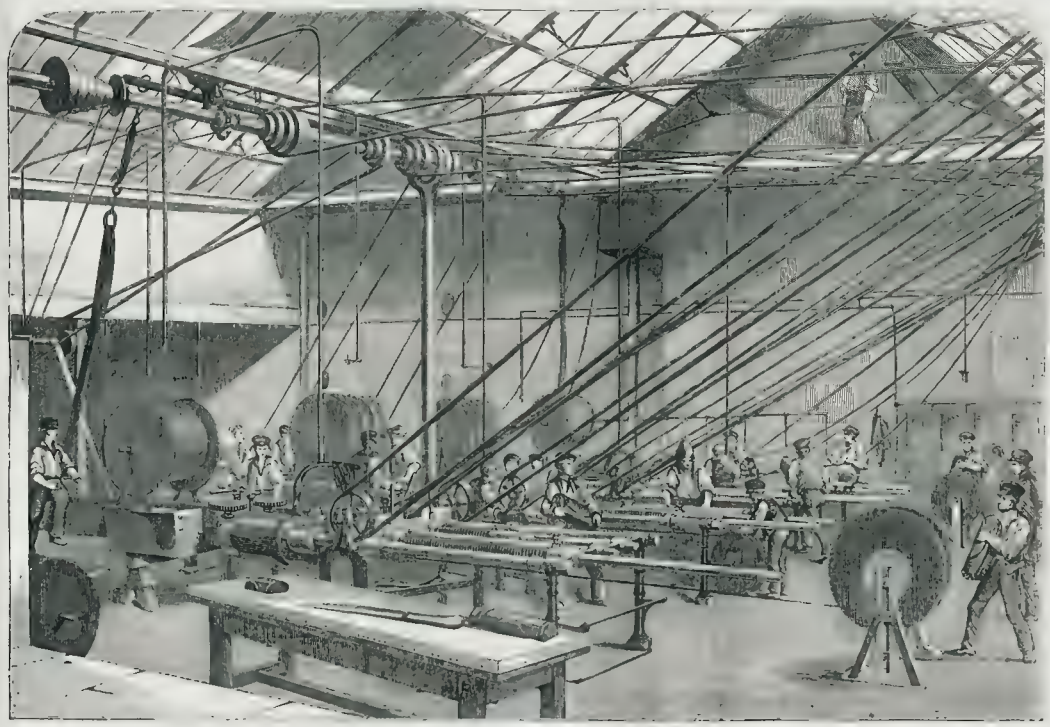
MR. HENRY LESLIE'S CHOIR gave their second concert at the Hanover square Rooms on Thursday evening last week. We have already given some account of this choir, and may now repeat that it is lovely to hear such ladies and gentlemen formed and trained by the able conductor of the Amateur Musical Society. They have the unpolished themselves at that society's concerts, and are now giving a series of performances on their own account—not with the view of amusement, but to defray the necessary expenses of their practisings, purchase of music and other incidental outlays. This effort was on the whole an excellent one, though in one or two of the pieces essayed were somewhat too ambitious for so young a choir. This was especially the case with Weber's famous "Sanctus" and "Sweet is every sabbath day"—one of the most difficult as well as most beautiful works of its class. Its complicated harmony demands the utmost precision, and its extreme refinement the most delicate and expression on the part of the singers. In both these respects they were deficient; and they failed, moreover (being unaccompanied), in keeping their voices up to the pitch at which they set out. Beginning in G minor, they fell, before the end of this long piece, almost to F nearly a whole tone. A few chords struck on the piano so softly as to be audible only to the whole and excellent ear



MANUFACTURE OF THE ATLANTIC SUBMARINE CABLE AT GLASS, ELLIOTT, AND CO.'S WORKS, EAST GREENWICH.

MANUFACTURE OF THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH CABLE.



MACHINES COVERING WITH GUTTA PERCHA THE ATLANTIC CABLE WIRE, AT THE GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY'S WORKS, WHARF-ROAD.

THE several extensions of the Electric Telegraph present rare combinations of science and the arts, which are fraught with interest. Of the submarine cable which is to connect the Old and New Worlds the public has already heard much; but comparatively few persons are aware that it differs in structure, weight, and other conditions from most of the ropes hitherto laid, and embraces several valuable improvements suggested by successes or failures with previous lines.

The cable from Dover to Calais, that of the Magnetic Telegraph Company between England and Ireland, and others less generally known, being laid for the greater part of their length in comparatively shallow water, where the consideration of danger from anchors is a very grave point to be met, weigh seven or eight tons to the mile nd are of strength sufficient to resist almost any strain to which they are table, except, perhaps, so enormous and exceptional a force as that to which the Ostend rope was subjected in the re-ent storms, when a large ship held on to the cable for a long time, but finally broke it asunder by the tremendous power of the gale. The injury was repaired on the renewal of fair weather, and the rarity of any interruption happening to lines of such calibre (this being the only instance of accident occurring to any the stronger kinds of rope, while those of a lighter character laid in still lie depths to the Hague and elsewhere have been frequently repaired and require comparatively little or no outlay for their maintenance) may be accepted as evidence of the sound judgment exercised in the selection of a heavy class of rope to span frequented and shallow sea.

THE ATLANTIC CABLE, READY FOR SHIPMENT, MORDEN WHARF, EAST GREENWICH.

Near the shores of Newfoundland and Ireland, and until the depth is so increased as to be beyond the range of damage from anchorage or the grounding of icebergs, the Atlantic cable will be stronger even than the most massive rope yet laid; but in the chief portion of the route where are the great depth bears with its disadvantages and difficulties the advantage of perfect rest and security for the wire when laid, the weight will not exceed a ton per mile

In diminishing the weight to this extent, which in the water, by reason of the difference in specific gravity, will be about thirteen to fourteen hundred weight per mile, care has been taken to retain as much strength as possible, and with this view the core or conductor is protected by strands instead of by solid wires, and by this method the pliability of the rope is also much increased.

The Atlantic cable may be divided into two parts, the core and the armour—the former being the conductor to be actually employed in the transmission of electrical sensations under the ocean between Europe and America; the latter, only a protective and strengthening appliance merely to help put the delicate wire at the bottom of the sea. The core is composed of seven copper wires of the gauge known as No. 22, and spirally gathered round each other to form a strand or cord the object of the arrangement instead of a single wire of the same sectional area being to provide against the possibility of any break or contact taking place in the metal. This strand, which will stretch two hundred miles in length is coated with three layers of the purest gutta percha separately applied in the same manner as that with telegraphic wire. The core thus formed by the double covering of gutta percha over the copper strand in the lengths of an inch in diameter, being thus a good conductor and at the advantage thereby gained in the security of insulation is of the highest importance

The core of the entire cable—two miles in length—is now in the course of manufacture under the superintendence of Mr. Statham, at the extensive works of the Gutta Percha Company, Wharf-road, City-road, London. The outer protection of iron wire has been committed to two eminent firms—viz., Messrs. Newall and Co., of Gateshead; and Messrs. Glass, Elliott, and Co., of East Greenwich each firm having undertaken to complete 1250 miles within a specified period. The accompanying cuts illustrate the processes at the Gutta Percha Company's Works, and at East Greenwich

The core is conveyed to East Greenwich upon large reels, each containing rather more than a mile of wire, and there placed on standards in a lower floor of the factory, the reels being so arranged as to allow of the wire being readily drawn off. Thence it passes into an upper floor, where are the machines for serving it with a thick covering of hemp, well saturated with a mixture of tar and pitch; this lapping of yarn answers as a bed for the reception of the external iron wires, and protects the gutta percha from any injury during the next process.

The outer wires, or armour, are laid into strands, each composed of seven of the best charcoal iron wires (number 22 gauge). These strands are made by a machine embodying some novelty in its construction,—the bobbins of wire, which are the chief weight, and which have hitherto been moved around a centre, being stationary, while a frame rotating with great rapidity bears the wires from the bobbins and forms the strand. The bobbins, seven in number, are supported in the centre of the revolving frame upon independent centres, the wires being passed over small pulleys to a perforated iron girdle-plate at the end of the machine, through which they pass, and, meeting on the other side, are laid together in a compact and regular strand. The enormous speed at which these machines are worked is a striking contrast to the old method of strand-spinning, where, the most weighty part being carried, the rate of motion and the quantity of cord manufactured are limited!

Some idea of the rapidity with which it is necessary that the strands must be made in this instance may be gathered from the fact that the contracts for the manufacture of cable alone require fifty miles per week into at the close of last year; and that 120 miles of iron wire are employed in the formation of each mile of the cable; no less than 5,15,000 miles having to be drawn and spun into 45,000 miles of strand by the early part of the ensuing summer.

The core, being served with tarred yarn, passes from the drum into the final process of covering with the wire strands by the closing machines. These are so constructed that the laying-plates extend some distance above the upper floor line, and the bobbins, eighteen in number, containing the strands, are placed upon a horizontal frame nearly level with the ground floor line; and, as the machine is caused to revolve by means of steam-power, the strands are unwound from their reels and pass through a hollow cap, through which, and through the centre of which the core is drawn; and the strands being thus regularly laid in a spiral direction the manufacture of the cable is completed. A drum of the finished cable is next within the machine, and carries away the cable as it is formed. After passing through a tank containing tar and pitch in certain proportions, and maintained at an even temperature, it is laid in large coils ready for delivery on board ship.

The greatest care is exercised in testing the insulation and efficient conduction of the wire with very delicate galvanometers and a powerful battery series of more than five hundred cells. In a separate room is arranged a series of electro-magnetic bells connected with the testing apparatus and in circuit with the wire in the machine, as well as the completed cable outside, so that any defect or want of continuity in the rope is immediately made known.

The construction of the cable and the arrangements for laying it are under the control of Mr. Bright, the engineer to the Atlantic Telegraph Company; its electrical condition and the apparatus for working through it being in the charge of Mr. Whitehouse, the electrician.

From the extensive plant of the Gutta Percha Company, and the energetic efforts which have been put forth, there is every probability of their portion of this great work viz., the entire length of 2000 miles being completed early in May next.

Messrs. Glass and Co.'s works, at East Greenwich, were erected in 1854, for the express purpose of manufacturing submarine telegraph cables. They have the advantage of a river frontage of 200 feet, with great facilities for taking the ships directly on board vessels lying within a distance easily connected by a floating platform. The depth of the wharf from the river to the manufactory is 400 feet, and in this area are sunk tanks capable of containing from 2000 to 3000 miles of cable, with every means of admitting water from the river to submerge the cable from time to time during the progress of manufacture, to prove the perfect insulation, if necessary. The machinery is of the most approved description, and will be capable, with the additional works now erecting, of producing, if necessary, 120 miles of cable per week. At present, from fifty to sixty miles per week of the Atlantic cable are manufactured, and 200 miles completed.

STATUE OF "ERIN," BY JOHN BELL.

THIS finely characteristic figure was designed and modelled to a commission of Mr. Bland, the publisher. It was originally intended for the Irish Exhibition in 1852, but the work being finished too late for its reception in Dublin, Mr. Blashfield had a copy made in terra-cotta, and which was finished by Mr. J. Bell and exhibited at the Royal Academy. This original is now in Mr. Blashfield's possession, at his gallery, Praed-street, Paddington.

The terra-cotta clay for this statue weighed upwards of one ton before it was fired. It is excepting the harp, all burnt in one piece, and without a flaw, having been carefully composed by means of a reverberatory kiln. The height of the statue is 5 feet 4 inches.

Mr. Blashfield possesses a collection in terra-cotta, of many thousand copies of works of ancient and modern design. In an illustrated memoir upon this elegant art, with reference to terra-cotta as a material, he states:—

Much inquiry and discussion have recently taken place on the durability of stone and other substances for external architectural work in this country. It is said that a great deal of the granite disintegrates and crumbles; that marble and stone decay in a few years, and that metal readily corrodes; but it is said that well-burnt terra-cotta withstands the ravages of time unimpaired; the only secret to ensure its durability being that of sufficient firing. To obtain elegant colour, fine texture, and truth of surface, great mechanical contrivance and scientific knowledge are required; but for durability all depends on the firing of the different articles after they are made. Ancient nations well understood this, and burnt their pottery especially to suit the purposes to which it was applied, —that for exposure to weather being the most vitrified.

Works of great magnitude may be executed in terra-cotta in one piece and with accuracy. The shrinking in drying after moulding or modelling is by careful manipulation reduced to a fixed scale, and by proper dislocation provision for meeting the operation of firing is without risk. The objection, therefore, offered by sculptors to the use of terra-cotta for statues is thus removed, and the economy with which sculptural works can be produced in this material [illegible] from [illegible] and casting may be studied in the interval and [illegible] without loss of time and the risk of copying, and with [illegible] and [illegible] the artist unimpaired.

Mr. Blashfield has published an "Account of the History and Manufacture of Ancient and Modern Terra-Cotta: and of its Use in Architecture as a Durable and Elegant Material for Decoration," which will be read with especial interest in connection with the Works at Mill Wall, Poplar or the Gallery of Specimens, at Praed-street.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND

THE CLERKENWELL PUMP.

A RELIC of old Clerkenwell has just been removed. It is dated ostensibly but from the commencement of the present century. Still it is associated with, and is the representative of, the patronymic spring from which the parish is named. In the well, around which the parish clerks, or clerkens, were wont to assemble to act pictures plays. The whole district (says the "Curiosities of London") was originally a village, which grew up around the Priory of St. John of Jerusalem, north, and the Nunnery of St. Mary, south, of what is now Clerkenwell-green. It was then a succession of pastures and slopes, with "the River of Wells," or "Flest," flowing between two hills on its western border; and its rural character is kept in mind by its Coppice and Hiderness rows, Saffron-hill, Vineyard-gardens, Fields-lane, Clerkenwell-green, and Ray-street; whilst Turn-mill recalls "the noise of the water-mills" mentioned by Fitzstephen in 1190. The inscription board of the noted pump shall tell the rest.

A.D. 1805.
WILLM. BOUND. } Churchwardens.
JOSEPH BIRD. }

For the better accommodation of the neighbourhood this pump was removed to the spot where it now stands. The spring by which it is supplied is situated four feet eastward; and round it, as history informs us, the parish clerks of London, in remote ages, annually performed sacred plays. That custom caused it to be denominated "Clerks' Well," and from which this parish derived its name. The water was greatly esteemed by the Prior and Brethren of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem and the Benedictine Nuns in the neighbourhood.

We hope another memorial of the Well is to be set up.

There are at present no less than 40,000 Chinese located in different parts of the colony of Victoria, and chiefly employed in seeking for gold at the various gold-fields.

The Belgian Chamber of Representatives, in its sitting of Saturday last, terminated the discussion of the different chapters of the budget, and voted it in its ensemble by a majority of 67 to 8.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

We have again to notice a very limited amount of business doing in all public securities, both for money and time. An increased demand having sprung up for money the value of Consols has slightly given way; but the principal cause of the present inactivity must be attributed to the large supplies of gold which continue to be purchased here on Continental account—chiefly for the Bank of France. This week we have had two arrivals of gold from Australia, the amount received being over £500,000; but we understand that the whole will be sent to the Continent—chiefly to the Bank of France. In addition to small supplies forwarded to various quarters, about £150,000 in gold has been withdrawn from the Bank of England for further shipment; this latter shipment is probably for the purchase of silver, of which metal £56,000 has come to hand from Antwerp. These movements in the precious metals have exercised considerable influence upon the Money Market. Still, there is no prospect before us of money becoming cheaper for a considerable period

The details relative to the projected International Bank in Paris have come to hand. The capital is to consist of 200,000 shares, amount to £ 80,000. In shares of 200f each. Only about half of the capital will be raised at once. This project, although it is free from any novelty in banking, is regarded with more than favour, and, no doubt, it will be productive of much benefit to the commerce of France

The value of National Stocks and Securities has undergone no material variation, but the tendency of price has been downwards. Early in the week the Consol Market was devoid of animation, and the following prices were quoted:—Bank Stock, 221½ to 222; Three per Cent Consols, 93¾ to 93⅞; Three per Cent Reduced, 93¾; Long Annuities, 1860, 2⅜; India Bonds, par; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. prem.; Exchequer Bonds, 98¾. On Tuesday the market was very flat, and scarcely any business was effected:—Bank Stock marked 220 and 222; Three per Cent Consols, 93½; India Bonds, 2s. dis. to 1s prem., Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. prem.; Consols for Account, 93¾ and 93½; Exchequer Bonds, both series, 98¾. Wednesday's business was limited: Bank Stock realized 223; the Three per Cent Consols were 93½; Ditto, for Account, 93⅝; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. prem.; Ditto, Bonds, 98½ to 3s prem. The Directors of the Bank of England made no change in the rates of discount.

Advices from Mexico state that the Government of the United States is about to advance a loan of £5,000,000 in consideration of Somb ceded This news is regarded in a most favourable light by the holders of Mexican Bonds in which, however, very few speculative purchases have been made. The Foreign Stock generally has continued quiet, and we have very few changes to notice in the quotations. Brazilian Five per Cents have been done at 102¾; Buenos Ayres Six per Cents, 84½; Mexican Three per Cents, 22¾; Ditto New Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 19¾; Portuguese Three per Cents, 45½; Russian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 98½; Sardinian Five per Cents, 91; Turkish Six per Cents, 97; Turkish Four per Cents, 101¾; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 64; Turkish Four per Cents, 99½; Spanish Three per Cents, 41½; Danish Five per Cents, 102; Ecuador New Consolidated, 15; French Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 93 fr. 50 c.

The value of all Joint-Stock Bank Shares has been well supported; but the business doing has been moderate. City, 70; London and County, 32½; London Joint-Stock, 20½; London and Westminster, 5⅞; Oriental, 41; Ottoman, 16½; Provincial of Ireland, 59½; South Australian, 36¾; Union of Australia, 61

Miscellaneous Shares have been rather inactive, as follows:—East and West India Docks, 119½; St. Katharine, 92; Victoria, 96½; Australian Agricultural, 2½; Electric Telegraph, 93; Peel River Land and Mineral, 2⅞; Van Diemen's Land, 14½; Royal China, 5⅞; Warrand and Birmingham, 16½; Berlin Waterworks, 5½; East London, 106½; Grand Junction, 73; Kent, 80; Lambeth, 98; West Middlesex, 99; Hungerford Bridge, 8.

There has been much less activity in the market for Railway shares than last week. The fall in prices, however, has not been extensive. The following are the official closing prices on Thursday:

ORDINARY SHARES AND STOCKS.—Ambergate, Nottingham, and Boston, 4¼ ex div.; Caledonian, 69⅞; Chester and Holyhead, 38; Eastern Counties, 10⅞; Eastern Union, B Stock, 4⅛; Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, 36⅞; Great Northern, 95; Ditto, A Stock, 97; Ditto, B Stock 122½; Great Western, 68¾ ex div.; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 101¼; London and Brighton, 108½; London and North-Western, 94¼ ex div.; London and South-Western, 104⅞; Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire, 37; Midland, 82 ex div. and ex new; Norfolk, 86⅝; North British, 46⅝; North-Eastern (Berwick), 86⅝ ex div.; Ditto, York, 86⅝; North Staffordshire, 12½; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 30¼; Shropshire Union, 50; South Eastern, 74⅝ ex div.; South Wales, 85⅛ ex div.; Vale of Neath, 26½; Wimbledon and Croydon, 8¾

LINES LEASED AT FIXED RENTALS.—Hull and Selby, Half Shares, 84 ex div.; London and Greenwich Preference, 23½; Midland Bradford, 80 ex div. and ex new.

PREFERENCE SHARES. Eastern Counties. No. 2, ¾ pm.; Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, 76½; Great Northern Five per Cent, 116; Ditto, Redeemable at five per cent prem.; Great Western Five per Cent, 104½; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 6; Midland Consolidated, 98 ex div. and ex new; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 111; Scottish North-Eastern, Aberdeen Stock, 116; Ditto, Seven per Cent, 106; South Wales, 97 ex div.; Waterford and Kilkenny.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.—Bombay, Baroda, and Central India, 93; Calcutta and South-Eastern, ¾ prem.; Central Oude, ¾ prem.; East Indian, 113½; Geelong and Melbourne, 21⅝; Grand Trunk of Canada, 51⅛; Ditto, Six per Cent Debentures, 82; Great Indian Peninsular, 81⅝; Ditto, New, 34½; Great Western of Canada, 16¾; Ditto, New, 11⅝.

FOREIGN.—Great Luxembourg, 6¾; Lombardo-Venetian, 12⅝; Namur and Liege, 9; Northern of France, 38; Paris and Lyons, 29½; Sambre and Meuse 10¾

In Mining Shares only a moderate business has been passing. On Thursday St. John del Rey were 20½. Santiago de Cuba, 7; and United Mexican, 4¾.

[illegible] Mormon

Although very little business is doing in the Shares to day, the Bankers as well as [illegible] Money, and [illegible] for Account are firm. In the Unfunded Debt very little is passing. Exchequer Bonds and Railway Shares are firm. The accounts of the Bank of France, made up to-day, are favourable. It shows a slight decrease in the circulation, and a decided improvement in the stock of bullion compared with last month

THE MARKETS

[illegible] was sensibly supplied with English wheat, [illegible] matters were quiet and the demand for all [illegible] Compared with Monday, however, [illegible] Foreign wheat was steady, and [illegible] Fine samples of both sorts were firm, [illegible] improvement in value. Grinding and distilling barley [illegible] Monday [illegible] secondary kinds ruled [illegible] Beans and peas were firm, but [illegible] Arrivals this week:—Wheat, 21661 barley [illegible], 4690; oats, 3470; flour [illegible]; linseed [illegible]; rapeseed [illegible]; barley, 13,270; oats, 1100; flour, 5630 [illegible]

[illegible] At Mark Lane [illegible] to 68s; Ditto, white, 58s. to 68s; Norfolk and [illegible] Ditto, white, 58s. to 68s; Kent and Essex, [illegible] Ditto, white, 58s. to 68s; Scotch and Irish [illegible] Ditto, white, 58s. to 68s; foreign [illegible] Dantzic, 74s to 78s; [illegible] Odessa and Taganrog, [illegible] Ditto, white, 58s. to 68s; Marianopoli, [illegible] per quarter. Town-made flour was in [illegible] Ditto, white, 58s. to 68s; Norfolk and

NEW BOOKS, &c.

THE NEW NOVEL.
Just published, in two volumes,
FRIENDS of BOHEMIA; or, Phases of London Life
By H. MURRAY, Esq., Author of "The Governing Classes."
"Mr. Murray is a genuine satirist, employing satire for a genuine purpose. You laugh with him very much, but the laughter is fruity and rich in thought. 'Friends of Bohemia' is a book of broad grins. The humour has on life—the whimsicalities have lead to philosophy. The author has a merriment akin to that of 'Jacques' and that of 'Touchstone.'"—Athenæum.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and CO., 65, Cornhill

Now ready, in 1 vol. 8vo, with Illustrations, price 21s.
ALDERSHOTT AND ALL ABOUT IT, Military and Social. By Mrs. Major. Literary and Pictorial. By Mrs. Tod Mr. Major. "You have taken with you to the camp the place in the camp, Lenthall Moor Place, Warwick, Abbey, &c., and all Aunt Easter's Book of Prayer, in which you have to speak."—Punch.
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and CO., 2, Farringdon-street.

Now Edition, brought down to the Peace of Paris, 1856
In 8 vols., 8vo, price £1 10s., cloth lettered,
RUSSELL'S MODERN EUROPE, with a Continuation, by Dr. Gilfillan, from the Treaty of Vienna, 1815, to the Peace of Paris, 1856. By WILLIAM JAMES MAC HAIG, Esq. Forming the New Edition of Russell's Modern Europe.
London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE and CO., 2, Farringdon-street.

Now ready, in 3 vols., 8s. 6d. each, containing 1,152 pages of useful matter, pre-eminently illustrated, and forming a complete library of every thing conducive to Home Comfort,
THE FAMILY ECONOMIST.
Also a Monthly Numbers, 3d. each.
HOULSTON AND WRIGHT, 65, Paternoster-row.

ANNOTATED EDITION OF THE ENGLISH POETS
This day, in 1 vol., 8s. 6d.,
ANCIENT POEMS, BALLADS, and SONGS of the PEASANTRY
With Introductions and Notes, by ROBERT BELL.
JOHN W. PARKER and SON, West Strand

Now ready, imperial 8vo, cloth, 15s., 127 Lessons, 155 Pages of Text, 42 Plates, and 313 Woodcuts,
LESSONS on ART. By J. D. HARDING.
"By means of which all may teach themselves Drawing and acquire a correct taste in Art."
Now ready, by the same Author,
THE GUIDE and COMPANION to LESSONS on ART. Imperial 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d., 178 Pages of Text, 15 Plates and Woodcuts.
LESSONS on TREES. 2nd Edition, imperial 4to, cloth, 15s., 32 Lessons descriptive, and illustrated on 30 Lithographic Plates.
ELEMENTARY ART; or, the Use of the Chalk and Lead Pencil Advocated and Explained. 4th Edition, imperial 8vo, cloth, 9s., 87 Pages Text, 24 Plates (some tinted), and 49 Wood Engravings.
DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

Profusely illustrated by ANELAY, price 3s. 6d., cloth, gilt,
THE MOTHER'S MISTAKE.
By Mrs. ELLIS.
London: HOULSTON and WRIGHT, Paternoster-row.

Just out, in 1 vol. 8vo, Engraving by Heath, containing 416 beautifully-executed pages, crown 8vo, cloth gilt, price 9s. 6d.,
THE FAMILY FRIEND.
WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Illustrated with 250 Descriptive Engravings, 3s. 6d.,
WIFE'S OWN BOOK of COOKERY.—Agreeable Dinners economized, and easily cooked. Also Receipts for every day.—WARD and LOCK, and all Booksellers

Price 1s. monthly No. 1, price 9d., to be completed in Ten Weekly Numbers, profusely Illustrated, of BOOK of ENGLISH SONGS.
Edited by CHARLES MACKAY
Also ready No. 1, 2d., price 1d., Songs, &c.,
The MORMONS. By CHARLES MACKAY, LL.D.
HOULSTON and WRIGHT, 65, Paternoster-row; and all Booksellers.

CORRECTA TABLE. See TITAN for March.
[illegible]

DRESS. A Treat for the Times for English Ladies.
Now ready, 12 for 6d.; or, by post, 7d.,
BOWGOTH and HALL, [illegible] Regent-street

Just published, 3,000 Edition, price 21s., free by post,
THE ART of BREWING, Fermenting, and Making Beer, Ale, and Porter, on Scientific Principles. Reading Rooms, &c. Directions for Preventing Accidents Fermentation, and every other necessary information to all persons in this important art certain the result of success. Practical Brewer. By JOHN LEE BENGUE, late of the Anchor Brewery. JAMES HATTI, 8, St. Paul's Churchyard

Now ready, post-free for 14 stamps,
HOW to PRINT and WHERE to PUBLISH: Practical Advice to Authors and Inexperienced Writers.
[illegible]

Just published, Thirteenth Edition, five, bound, price 10s., post-free, 12s.
HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC PHYSICIAN. By J. LAURIE, M.D. Devoted of all technicality to medicine as prescribed without the indications for its selection, and the cases it is to be administered. An excellent work for families, emigrants, and missionaries. A Medicine Chest for this work, price 50s.
AN EPITOME of the ABOVE. Price 5s. A Guide to those cases requiring treatment in family practice. A Case for the work, price 3s. 6. Carriage-free on receipt of Post-office order or Bank Bill. Also, the Medicines, Sixes, 1s. each, price 1s., free by post.
HOMŒOPATHIC FAMILY GUIDE: Directions for treatment of ordinary ailments. A Chest of Medicine for this work, price 10s.
HOMŒOPATHIC TREATMENT of INDIGESTION, Constipation, and Hemorrhoids (Piles) By W. MORGAN, M.D. Containing Directions for the Treatment of these Common Disorders Rules for Diet, Receipts for Delicacies which may be taken by persons suffering from these complaints. 8vo, bound, price 4s. 6d.; post-free, 5s.
[illegible]

Just published, Third Edition, greatly enlarged, 1350 pages, cloth, 36s.,
CYCLOPÆDIA of PRACTICAL RECEIPTS and Collateral Information in the Arts, Professions, Manufactures, and Trades, including Medicine, Pharmacy, and Domestic Economy, designed as a Compendium and Book of Reference for Every Manufacturer, Tradesman, Amateur, and Heads of Families, forming a Comprehensive Supplement to the Pharmacopœias. By ARTHUR JOHN CHURCHILL. New Burlington-street

Just published, Cuts, two, price 2s. 6d.,
HYGIENIC, MEDICAL, and SURGICAL HINTS for YOUNG OFFICERS of the ROYAL and of the MERCHANT NAVY. By W. M. SAUNDERS, M.D., Surgeon R.N. JOHN CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street.

STAINED WINDOWS, &c., are now showing at [illegible] by the new and beautiful process, DIAPHANIE, by Ladies and Gentlemen will find Profitable Assistance adapted for Windows in Halls, Staircases, Churches, &c., in every style and all materials, wholesale and retail. DIAPHANIE Manufactory, Show-rooms, and Offices, 339, Oxford-street (opposite Soho square), London.
PLAIN INSTRUCTIONS in DIAPHANIE. Price 6d. [illegible] free, 7 stamps

THE GENERAL ELECTION. To STATIONERS and Others. J. MAYEN and CO., Wholesale Manufacturing Stationers and Sealing-Wax Makers have always on hand a stock of all articles of STATIONERY used in ELECTIONS ready for immediate transmission to any part of town or country. 66, Fish-street-hill (near the Monument), London, E.C. Established 30 years.

REEVES'S DRAWING PENCILS, In every degree of shade
113, Cheapside, London, E.C.

MORRELL'S REGISTRATION INK has been recently tested, and is the Ink specially selected by Lawrence for the legislature's use. Shades, and Marriages, also made on all the Government Offices

PERFECT FREEDOM FROM COUGHS IS SECURED BY DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS. Singers and Public Speakers they are invaluable for [illegible] Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s. per Box [illegible] Stamping Vendors

MEDICINE CHESTS of well-seasoned wood, with accurately-stoppered Bottles.—The largest Stock in London at W. F. COOPER'S, Pharmaceutical Chemist, 26, Oxford-street. Illustrated Catalogues free by post.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

SO EARLY IN THE MORNING. The favourite Negro Song, arranged by R. F. HIMMLAU. Illustrated. price 2s. 6d. post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street

NEW MUSIC
TEDESCO'S MOONLIGHT RAMBLES: a set of Six Brilliant and Pleasing Drawing-room Pieces for Pianoforte. No. 1 Evening Star, 2s. No. 2 Rubinet Brook, 2s. No. 3 Moonlight Reverie, 2s. No. 4 Gondolier's Nocturne, 2s. 6d. No. 5 Wanderer's Song, 2s. No. 6 Will o' the Wisp, 2s.
Lee and Pybus (of 6) by GUSTAV SCHIRMACHER and Co., 86, New-gate street, E.C.

THE GREAT HANDEL FESTIVAL at the CRYSTAL PALACE.—Just issued, JOHN BISHOP'S Superior and Modern Arrangements (from Messiah, Israel, Judas, Belshazzar, &c.) of DAN MACARACK'S Each work complete, with Book of Words each piece. Ask for Robert Cocks and Co.'s edition
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, W.

I WISH I WERE A FAIRY QUEEN. New Song, composed by ALBERT GLOVER; sung by Miss Poole at Cocks and Co.'s New Burlington-street, W.

PRAY CALL AGAIN AND ASK.—New Song by JAMES R. THOMPSON. Price 2s. Duets, Solo-square

THE FLUTE.—CLINTON and CO.'S improved and beautifully-made 8 keyed FLUTE in fine cocoa silver keys as a present for a Lady going abroad. To be seen at 5, Shepherd-street, Manufactory, 35, Percy-street, Bedford-square

PIANOFORTE.—A brilliant, full, and sweet-toned Cottage Pianoforte, in handsome walnut case, with fine tone, metallic plates, and every improvement, the property of a lady giving up housekeeping, to be sold for 20 guineas; cost 40 guineas a few months back. To be seen at LEWIN CRAWCOUR and Co.'s, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge, seven doors west of Sloane-street.

GEO. LUFF and SON'S New, Patent HORIZONTAL GRAND, in their New Show-rooms, Pianofortes and Harmoniums, 27, Soho-square. Illustrated Lists and Testimonials free.

PIANOFORTE of GREAT BARGAIN.—To be Sold for 20 Guineas, cost 40 a few months since, in handsome walnut case, 6½ octaves, Metallic Plate, and all the latest improvements, having been purchased by a Lady going abroad. To be seen at H. CREEN and CO.'s, 72, Oxford-street.

TOLKIEN'S 25-GUINEA ROYAL MINUTO PIANOFORTE, 6½ octaves—H. T., the original Maker of a Twenty-Guinea Pianoforte in 1837, by the care he has devoted to all branches of the manufacture, also and the highest reputation throughout the kingdom for its extreme, unequalled for durability and delicacy of touch, more especially for their excellence in standing in tune in the various climates of our colonies. In elegant walnut, rosewood, and mahogany cases, packed abroad for £2 10s extra. H. TOLKIEN, Manufacturer, 27, 28, and 29, King-William-street, London-bridge. PIANOFORTES for HIRE

PIANOFORTES.—EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS.—Semi-Cottage, Rosewood and Walnut-tree Cottages and Piccolos, 6½ octaves, with all the latest improvements, have been [illegible] by HOLLAND'S Old-established Pianoforte Warehouse, 26 and 28, King William-street, London-bridge [illegible]

TO FAMILIES FURNISHING.—A Lady [illegible] to dispose of her WALNUT DRAWING-ROOM SUITE, equal to new, and of superior manufacture, [illegible] Also a handsome Chiffonier, [illegible] on handsome plate and claws magnificent chiffonier, [illegible] with lofty plate glass back, and vases and a marble top, and a Bergère [illegible] To be seen at LEWIN CRAWCOUR and Co.'s, 7, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge, seven doors west of Sloane-street. N.B. As a lot of superior modern Household Furniture, in mogany and gilt CABINET FURNITURE, CARPETS, and BEDDING.—An Illustrated Book of Bedsteads and Bedding, Cabinet Furniture, Carpets, &c., gratis on application. Lewin Crawcour sent post free 150 Designs and Prices of Fashionable and Superior Upholstery, Furniture, &c., goods on approbation, forwarded to any part of the kingdom. Purchasers of Furniture, who study economy, combined with elegance and durability, should apply for this. LEWIN CRAWCOUR and Co., Cabinet Makers and Upholsterers, Knightsbridge (7 doors west of Sloane-street). N.B. Country Orders carriage-free.

FURNITURE.—A Secondhand Suite of Walnut DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE to be sold at half its original cost, consisting of handsomely-carved pillar and claw Loo Table and Occasional Table, 3-feet Chiffonier, plate glass door and back, and marble slab; six elegant drawing-room Chairs, covered in rich silk to match; Couch and Settee, en suite, lined with bone chintz; also one large Cheval glass, in neatly-carved and gilt frame. The whole of the above is in the stock of ROBERTSHAW'S and CO.'s, Upholsterers, &c., 295, Oxford-street (nine doors from Orchard-street)

HEAL and SON'S NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing 84 Designs and Prices of 150 different BED ROOM FURNITURE, as well as of 100 Bedsteads, and prices of every description of Bedding, sent free by post. Heal and Son, Bedstead, Bedding and Bed room Furniture Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

GERMAN, SWISS, and NOTTINGHAM LACE MANUFACTURERS Largest and choicest Stock in London now on view at HOWARD and LOWMAN'S,
Regent-street

LADIES' ECONOMICAL OUTFITTER.
[illegible] Habit Shirts, Flannel Shirts, Chemises, Drawers, Petticoats, Dressing Gowns, Corsets, Handkerchiefs, Hosiery, &c., all of the best quality, well made, and at moderate prices. Gentlemen's own materials trimmed with Needlework, 4s. 6d. each; Ties the Wedding Outfits [illegible] half the usual charges

30s. FLANNEL DRESSING-GOWNS for the SPRING in Sky, Pink, Grey, China-Blue Cords, &c., trimmed with a self-border, and lined throughout with Cambric. Every size. Sent to any part of the kingdom on the materials sent by post. Mrs. HUTCHINS, 7, Regent-street, Quadrant

UNDERCLOTHING for LADIES.—The Outfitting Rooms of THE SCOTSMAN are now the most extensive and complete in the Phil Duplessis department. Every article of underwear necessary for a Lady's Outfit is supplied for a Guinea and Six Sovereigns for the voyage to India or Australia. In the Lady Departments are exhibited the choicest work and beautiful Fabrics ever will be found in any establishment. A variety of Patterns, of great [illegible] has been registered according to Act of Parliament by JAMES HARVEY, THE SCOTSMAN, 245, Regent-street

LADIES' WEDDING ORDERS.—Mrs. ROBERTSHAW has the attention of Ladies to her superior READY-MADE LINEN for using Gowns, Cambric Handkerchiefs, and Hosiery. Every description of Underclothing for Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children, of the best quality, and at moderate prices. Mrs. ROBERTSHAW'S Show-rooms are on the first floor, and are fitted up with every convenience for the inspection of Ladies. No goods are sent from the house upon approbation. 295, Oxford-street, Nine doors West of Orchard-street

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—A Single Stay, Carriage-free, on receipt of Post-office order
The "Imperial" Bodice . . . . . 17s. 6d.
The "Self adjusting Corset" . . . . . 12s. 6d.
A Book with Illustrations and Price sent on receipt of a postage-stamp, from which a selection of any Corset can be made.
Crinoline Skirts, from 7s. 6d.; Spring Steel Skirts, 16s.; Waterproof Skirts, 2s. 6d.; Jupe Skirts, 10s.; Flounced Woolsey Skirts, from 10s. 6d.
CARTER and HOWELL'S, Regent-street, 65, Haymarket, and 3, Stockwell-street, Greenwich, and Crystal Palace.

LADIES' UNDER-CLOTHING.
Complete Night Dresses, Drawers, Dressing Jackets, and Gowns. Hose
All of the best material and work at wholesale prices.
Ladies' Trousseaux may be had by post
WHITELOCK and SON, 168, Strand, W.

LATEST FASHION for SHIRTS. Shirts with the new French Quilling for fronts, collars, cuffs, &c., in a variety of patterns, 7s. 6d. each. Half-dress Quilling Collars, of the new Military, Elite, or Navy shapes, free by post: for 6s. 6d., stamps. Measure to be taken right round the neck, chest, and wrist.
WHITELOCK and SON, 168, Strand, W.

SHIRTS.—E. LODGE and CO.'S Celebrated (non Registered) Six for 38s. or 42s.; DRESS SHIRTS, Coloured Flannel Shirts, Coloured Yachting Shirts. New patterns for the season. All [illegible] 1, 2, and 15, Strand. Established 1794.

SPRING DRESSES.—PATTERNS of the NEW FABRICS sent to any part Post-free. Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

THE SPRING SILKS at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Striped Silks, £1 5s.
Checked Silks, £1 10s.
Jasper silks £1 15s.
Brocade silks, £1 17s. 6d.
Gros d'Ecosse, £2 2s.
Gros Royals, £2 10s.
Moiré Antiques, £2 18s. 6d.
and Flounced Silks, £1 10s. to £5 the Robe.
Patterns sent post-free

NEW SPRING FABRICS at KING'S, 243, Regent street.
Lambaine Dresses, 3s. 6d.
French Muslins, 5s. 6d.
Brilliants, 5s. 6d.
Balzarines, 6s. 6d.
Llamas, 10s. 6d.
Barèges, 12s. 6d.
and Mousseline de Soies,
7s.
Flounced Muslins, 7s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.
Flounced Barèges, 12s. 6d. to 25s. 6d.
Flounced Silk and Wool Fabrics, 10s. 6d. to 30s.
And Irish Poplins, £1 5s. 6d. to £2 17s. 6d.
Patterns sent post-free

BODICES, CORSETS, and STAYS, with Improvements, and all the New Front Fastenings, wholesale and for the trade only.—BIDDLE and ALLAIN, 33, Cheapside

CAPPER, SON, and CO., Linendrapers to Her Majesty the Queen 69 Grace-church-street, London, beg to call attention to their Stock of Fabrics, combines as usual, in their extensive back premises, their Family Linen, Silk Mercery, General Drapery, and Ladies' and Infants' Outfitting Business.
The temporary entrance to the shop is at 120, Fenchurch-street, the Silk door from the corner of Gracechurch-street, E.C.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN, BY APPOINTMENT.
Established in 1778.
BABIES' BASSINETTES,
Trimmed and Furnished,
ready for use, are sent home free of carriage.
BABIES' BASKETS
Trimmed and furnished to correspond.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, GRACECHURCH-ST., LONDON, E.C.
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post

Sent post-free, Descriptive Lists of COMPLETE SETS OF BABY LINEN, which are sent home
Free of carriage.
UNDER-CLOTHING FOR HOME, INDIA, AND ALL COLONIES, for Ladies and Children of all ages

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN, BY APPOINTMENT.
Established in 1778
LADIES' BEDDING OUTFITS
sent home, free of carriage.
Descriptive Lists, with prices, sent free by post.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, GRACECHURCH-ST., LONDON, E.C

CAPPER SON, and MOON, 164, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W
BASSINETTES, 30s. to 309s.
BABY LINENS
Books giving descriptions and prices sent gratis.

CAPPER, SON, and MOON, 164, REGENT-STREET, LONDON W.
LADIES' UNDER CLOTHING, TROUSSEAUX.
Books giving descriptions and prices sent gratis.

MOURNING ORDERS
At PETER ROBINSON'S
Family and General Mourning Warehouse
From the immense business done by this house with country customers, P. R. is enabled to supply large orders at a very reasonable cost, and to send goods for selection to any part free of expense.
Always on hand, a very extensive stock of
SKIRTS, MANTLES, and BONNETS.
Also every description of Goods for Dress, warranted of the best manufacture, and at moderate prices
COURT MILLINERY and DRESSMAKING
Complete suits for WIDOWS and CHILDREN'S MOURNING kept made up ready for immediate use, and a note to the warehouse, describing the number of mourners, will be sufficient to bring such forth with
Address PETER ROBINSON, Family Mourning Warehouse, 103, Oxford-street, London

BLACK SILKS.—Patterns of all the New Silks forwarded free. Decagon, Royals, Widows' Silks, the new Gros d'Ecosse. All recommended for durable wear. Also Rich Skirts made up with flounces, in great variety.—Address, PETER ROBINSON, Mourning Warehouse, 103, Oxford-street.

NEW FABRICS for MOURNING.
THE DELICE CASHMERE,
THE CRAPE PARAMATTA,
THE CRAPE BALZARINE,
THE RAINBOW PARAMATTA,
all highly recommended for durable wear Patterns free. To be obtained only at PETER ROBINSON'S Family Mourning Warehouse, 103, Oxford-street, London

OPENING of NEW INDIA ROOMS.—FARMER and ROGERS, in consequence of the enormous increase of business in their INDIA and CHINA DEPARTMENTS, have been compelled to OPEN the NEW and SPACIOUS ROOMS, divided exclusively to the exhibition of India and China Shawls. The assortment which is the largest in England, comprises every description of Shawl manufactured in India and China. Ladies' Shawls bought and exchanged.—The GREAT SHAWL and CLOAK EMPORIUM, 171, 173, 175, Regent-street

CORSETS PLASTIQUES.—These Corsets, after four years' trial, have been universally approved, and are the newest invention to meet the demand for a perfect and graceful resolution of ease, elegance, and economy, with a guarantee. See Report by Académie Impériale de Médecine de Paris, de la Société Impériale de Médecine de Lyon. Medailles d'Or and d'Argent de Chambre Société Savante—Depôt of the Inventor, F. FONTAINE, [illegible] James's

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR, Patented, can be worn in the usual way, or to turn down. Note Lost all the Genuine are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY and NAVY."

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR. The above consists of four substances, and is the best Shirt Collar ever invented. Note All are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY and NAVY."

THE ARMY and NAVY SHIRT COLLAR, to be had of all Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers throughout the United Kingdom All are stamped
"FREDK. LAURENCE, PATENT ARMY and NAVY."

JUPONS à RESSORT DEPOSE.—For the Ball-room, Promenade, or Travelling, these PATENT SPRING PETTICOATS are perfection, they never crease or get out of order, and are particularly graceful and ladylike. Packed in a small box, and sent any distances upon receipt of a Post-office order for 16s. 6d. Address, Mrs. ROBERTSHAW, 100, Oxford-street.

ROBERTSHAW'S POROUS SHIRT.—Registered, 5s. and 6s. 6d. each. Price, 30s. per doz. for fit and work of these Shirts are unequalled, and the fabrics are of the same sterling makes for which the house has been celebrated for above seventy years.—Address Robertshaw, 100, Oxford-street. Established 1777

LADIES requiring FANCY NEEDLEWORK of the most fashionable description, and best quality, are requested to favour the Misses RAMSEY, of No. 18, Brompton-row, Brompton, London, S.W. (established 1848), with their orders, as they may depend upon attention and punctuality in their execution An extensive assortment of articles for English and Guipure Work [illegible], Berlin Wools, Silks Patterns, and every requisite for the work-table. A [illegible] sent by return of post.

EARLY-CLOSING HOSIERY ESTABLISHMENT.—BIRD'S LONGCLOTH SHIRTS, 30s. for 37s. 6d. and the Linen Collars, 11s. a dozen. 23 different sizes in stock from.—A. J. BIRD, 263, Oxford-street (four doors east of the Pantheon).

CAUTION.—GEORGE HOBSON, TAILOR, 37, Lombard-street, begs to notify to his customers and the public generally, that a person in the same street is copying his name and motto of "Excellence and Economy;" but that he has no connection with him or any other house in London.

DO YOU KEEP LIVERY SERVANTS?—LODDON'S LIVERIES please masters and servants. Footman's Suit, best quality, £3 3s.—17, Old Change, and 25, Burlington-arcade, and 49, Lombard-street. Established 1784.

FISHER'S DRESSING-CASES. 168, Strand. Catalogues post-free.

FRANGIPANNI.—PIESSE and LUBIN, Perfumery Factors, 2, New Bond-street, London, are the only makers of the genuine Frangipanni Scent, pronounced by connoisseurs to be the most fragrant and lasting odour made.

VIOLETS.—BRIEDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET SCENT presents a bunch of violets fresh from the fields, is very lasting, and does not stain the handkerchief. Price 2s. 6d.—157, New Bond-street (facing Redmayne's).

FOR the COMPLEXION, GOWLAND'S LOTION.—Persons exposed to the weather at this variable season will find this wash on the application of this celebrated herbal preparation, experience its extraordinary genial qualities. It produces and sustains a most purity, delicacy, and vivacity of complexion, removes freckles, spots, and pimples, and promotes healthy action and elasticity of the skin. Sold by all Druggists and Perfumers. Price, ½ Pints, 2s. 9d.; Pints, 5s. 6d.; Quarts, 9s. 6d.

JAMES LEWIS'S MARROW OIL for the HAIR; Jockey Club, Frangipanni, and Wood-Violet Perfumes for the Handkerchief, and Lotion Soap for the Skin.—Manufactory, 6, Bartlett's-buildings, Holborn; and Crystal Palace.

JONES'S FLESH SOAP, is per packet, allays irritation, and produces a soft and healthy skin. To be had through any Italian Warehouseman and Chemist.—Jones and Sons, near the Turnpike, Islington, London, N.

SOAP.—JOHN KNIGHT'S PRIMROSE SOAP.—The attention of Families, Housekeepers, Laundresses, &c., is directed to this now well-known and high-appreciated domestic article, which, possessing all the properties of a finest soap, is still the most economical that can possibly be obtained, for general household purposes. It is sold by most of the respectable Oilmen and Grocers in London, at the price of the common ordinary yellow soap. Be particular in observing that "John Knight, Primrose, York-place, St. George's East," is stamped on each bar.

THE BELMONT GLYCERINE SOAP contains Price's Pure Glycerine, distilled, by their patent process, from Palm Oil. It is recommended for washing infants and shaving; it softens the skin, and is a most agreeable toilet soap for general use. PRICE 8 CANDLES, which will not drop grease when carried. Them sand as common candles, prevent damage to dresses and carpets. They should be burnt in the candlesticks made especially for them in fretation brass, with cotton-branch arms, and palm-leaf feet, having stamped round the edge, "Price's Patent Candle Company, London." All the above may now be had retail through any Druggist, Furnisher, or Grocer
The Soap, in English Oriental Boxes, price 6d., 1s., and 1s. 6d. each; the Candles, in Boxes, 1s. and 2s.; Candlesticks, 2s. 6d. each.
And wholesale at
BELMONT, VAUXHALL, LONDON.

WHITE and SOFT HANDS all through the WINTER. The LONDON SOAP and CANDLE COMPANY, 24, New Bond-street, have prepared a most WINTER SKIN SOAP, which, by its continued use, will produce the softest of hands and the whitest of skin even on the coldest weather and hardest water. It is agreeably perfumed, and beautifully soft to use.
Sold in bars, 1s. per lb. Sole depôt.

BELMONT GLYCERINE SOAP.—This valuable soap for toilet use is sold in boxes of three tablets, at 1s., 1s. 6d., and 2s. each
PRICE'S NEW HARNESS CANDLES, which will not drop grease when carried about. In boxes at 1s. and 2s.—Candlesticks for ditto, 2s. 6d each. The above may be had wholesale and retail of WM. MATHEWS, 253 Regent-street, Oxford-street. Wholesale Agent to Price's Patent Candle Company

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, Used in the Royal Laundry, And pronounced by the Laundresses to be the [illegible] starch ever used
Sold by all Chandlers, Grocers, &c., &c.

BENZINE COLLAS
CLEANS
Gloves, Silks, Feathers, Ribbons, Cloth, Carpets, &c., &c.
In Bottles, 1s. 6d., of all Chemists and Perfumers.

THE BEST OIL in the WORLD.—Pure French Colza Oil, 4s. per gallon.—Messrs. Lemaire, of Paris, Sole Depôt, the LONDON SOAP and CANDLE COMPANY, 79, New Bond-street, Aldersgate-street, chimneys, notices. Magasin, &c., by French workmen, at Paris prices

ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS, for more than Thirty Years have been held in constant and increasing public estimation as the purest farine of the oat, and as the best and most valuable preparation for making a pure and delicate Gruel, which forms a light and nutritious food for the aged, is a popular recipe for colds and influenza, is of general use in the sick-chamber, and, obviously with the Patent Barley, is an excellent food for Infants and Children
Prepared only by the Patentee, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE & CO., Purveyors to the Queen, 64, Red-lion-street, Holborn, London.
Sold by all respectable Grocers, Druggists, and others in Town and Country in Packets of 6d. and 1s.; and Family Canisters, at 2s., 5s., and 10s. each.

THE only FOOD suitable for INFANTS and INVALIDS.—The principal Prize Medal Granula, GILLOCK'S SEMOLA was awarded to it the most eminent medical men. In use daily, at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., and 5s., and also secured with the Signature of G. Bartlett's Patent Machine, by BARNLEY, Operative Chemists, 22, Cornhill-street, Regent-street, London.

NO VENT-PEG REQUIRED for BARLOW'S SYPHON TAP. By all means see its action explained. Price 6s. 6d.: Electro-plated, 8s. each. Engravings gratis, or post-free.—James Barlow, 14, King William street, Mansion-house.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES for AUSTRALIA, in good or inferior condition. Mr. and Mrs. JOHN HAGAN, 31, Newcastle-street, Strand, opposite Somerset-house, continue to give the highest price in Cash for Ladies', Gentlemen's, and Children's Clothes, Regimentals, Outfitting, Boots, Books, Jewellery, and all Miscellaneous Property. Letters for any day or distance punctually attended to. Parcels sent from the Country either large or small, the utmost value returned by Post-office order the same day. Reference, London and Westminster Bank. Est. 42 yrs.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Miscellaneous Property, &c. The highest price given. Ladies or Persons waited on at their own residence by Mr. or Mrs. HYAM, 16, Tyler-street, Regent-street, W.; or, parcels being sent, the utmost value in cash immediately remitted.—Established 36 years.

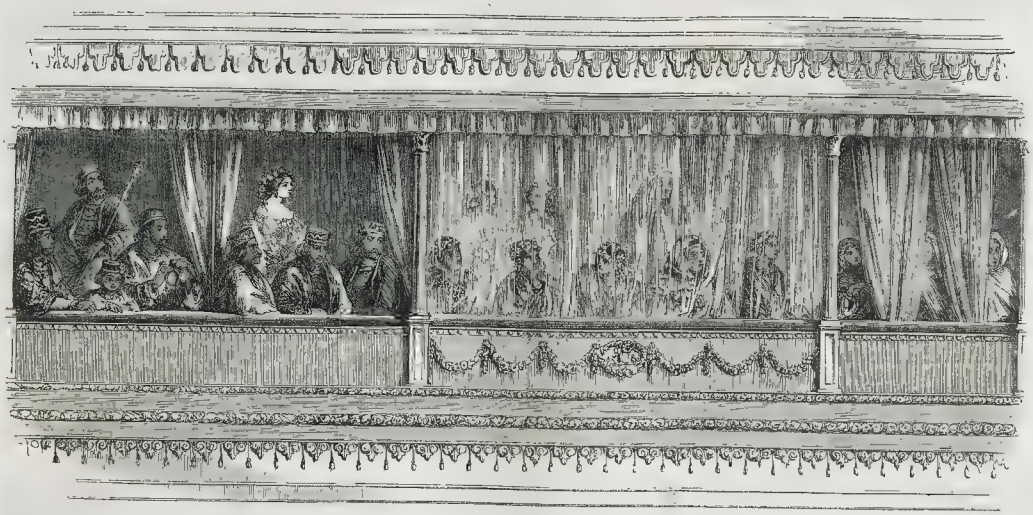
WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES.—Mr. and Mrs. HAST, 31, Newcastle-street, Strand, continue giving the highest prices for every description of Ladies' and Gentlemen's WEARING APPAREL; also Regimentals, satin, and velvet dresses; regimentals, uniforms, point lace, India shawls, Court-trains, jewellery, books, furniture, miscellaneous property, &c. Ladies or gentlemen punctually waited on at their residences any time or distance, by addressing as above. Parcels sent from the country the utmost value remitted by Post-office order per return.—Established 1801.

DR. HASSALL, Chief Analyst of the Sanitary Commission of "THE LANCET," Author of "ADULTERATION DETECTED." "FOOD AND ITS ADULTERATIONS," &c., &c.

ON DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT BROWN COD LIVER OIL.
"I have more than once, at different times, subjected your Light Brown Cod Liver Oil to chemical analysis—and I can pronounce it to be genuine—and I have always found it to be free from all impurity, and rich in the constituents of bile. So great is my confidence in the article, that I usually prescribe it IN PREFERENCE TO ANY OTHER, in order to make SURE of obtaining the article in its purest and most efficient condition."

DR. DE JONGH'S COD LIVER OIL has now, in consequence of its marked superiority over every other variety, secured the entire confidence and almost universal preference of the most eminent Medical Practitioners as the most speedy and effectual remedy for CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, DIABETES, INFANTILE WASTING, GENERAL DEBILITY, AND ALL SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS.

Sold ONLY in IMPERIAL Half-pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; capsuled and labelled with DR. DE JONGH'S stamp and signature, WITHOUT WHICH NONE ARE GENUINE, by their respectable Chemists throughout the United Kingdom
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEPOT,
ANSAR, HARFORD, AND CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.,
DR. DE JONGH'S SOLE BRITISH CONSIGNEES.
By whom the Pts. & Qts.; forwarded to all parts of the metropolis.



THE QUEEN AND PRINCES OF OUDE AND SUITE AT DRURY-LANE THEATRE.

On Tuesday week the Queen of Oude honoured Drury-lane Theatre with a state visit. Her Majesty was accompanied by the Princes and a large suite, including two or three European ladies. The Royal party occupied four boxes, the Queen and her ladies being in the Royal box, the Princes and gentlemen of their Court in the adjoining boxes. This, being the first appearance of her Majesty at any public place, created considerable interest and curiosity. The effect of so many and varied Oriental costumes was rich and peculiar, and the blue and silver tissue hung entirely over the Royal box for the purpose of shrouding the Queen from vulgar gaze gave an air of mystery to the dark faces, rich dresses, and flashing jewels which were dimly seen through it. Her Majesty's visit lasted from the commencement to the end of the performances, the interest and astonishment of the Royal party seeming to increase every moment, more particularly during the pantomime. None but females were allowed to receive or attend upon the Queen during the evening.

ERIN," BY J. BELL. EXECUTED IN TERRA COTTA BY BLASHFIELD.
(SEE PAGE 244.)

GALL-NUTS UPON OAK-TREES IN DEVON.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

MUCH attention has been drawn to the oak-trees in Devonshire during the last three or four years. They have suddenly appeared studded with gall-nuts, in numbers so abundant as nearly to equal the leaves. The specimens which I forward will give some idea of the clusters with which the trees are loaded. I am not aware whether this gall-nut is equal in its astringent qualities to the gall-nuts imported, or whether it might become a useful article of commerce; but in some districts it is so plentiful that almost any amount might be collected at a cheap rate.

"No present," say Kirby and Spence (i., 315), "No present that insects have made to the arts is equal in utility and universal interest, comes more home to our best affections, or is the instrument of producing more valuable fruits of human wisdom and genius, than the product of the animal to which I have alluded. You will readily conjecture I mean the fly that gives birth to the gall-nut, from which ink is made." It is of the genus Cynips. They are imported from Smyrna, Aleppo, and other ports in the Levant, and from the East Indies.

"The galls most esteemed are known in commerce under the name of blue galls, being the produce of the first gathering, before the fly has issued from the gall. It will not be uninteresting to know that from these, when bruised, may occasionally be obtained perfect specimens of the insect. The galls which have escaped the first searches—and from most of which the fly has emerged—are called white galls, and are of very inferior quality, containing less of the astringent principle than the blue galls, in the proportion of two to three. The white and blue galls are usually imported mixed, in about equal proportions, and are then called galls in sorts. If no substitute equal to galls, as a constituent part of ink, has been discovered, the same may be said of these productions, as one of the most important of our dyeing materials constantly employed in dyeing black."

GALL-NUTS UPON OAK-TREES IN DEVON.

On examining the specimens which I send it will be seen that some of them have a hole on one side from which the insect has escaped. These will come under the denomination white galls, as described, and these are a season older than the others. The others still contain the insect; and if they are carefully cut open with a penknife a live grub or maggot will be found in the centre. Try them.

"All these tumours," continue the entomologists above quoted, "owe their origin to the deposition of an egg in the substance out of which they grow. This egg, too small almost for perception, the parent insect, a little four-winged fly, introduces into a puncture, made by her curious spiral sting, and in a few hours it becomes surrounded with a fleshy chamber, which not only serves its young for shelter and defence, but also for food, the future little hermit feeding upon its interior, and there undergoing its metamorphosis. Nothing can be more varied than these habitations. Some are of a globular form, of a bright red colour. * * * Others, beset with spines or clothed with hair, are like seed-vessels. * * * Some are exactly round; others like little mushrooms; others resemble artichokes; while others again might be taken for flowers. In short they are of a hundred different forms, and of all sizes, from that of a pin's head to that of a walnut. Nor is their situation on the plant less diversified. Some are found upon the leaf itself, others upon the footstalks only, others upon the roots, and others upon the buds. * * * How the mere insertion of an egg into the substance of a leaf or twig, even if accompanied, as some imagine, by a peculiar fluid, should cause the growth of such singular protuberances around it, philosophers are as little able to explain, as why the insertion of a particle of variolous matter into a child's arm should cover it with pustules of small-pox. * * * When chemically analysed, galls are found to contain only the same principles as the plant from which they spring, but in a more concentrated state."

Now, it may reasonably be asked, whether these English galls, suddenly become so abundant, could not be turned to some use? It may not be easy to explain the cause that has developed them so plentifully during the last few years; but the fact nevertheless remains: they are "as thick as blackberries." In depositing her eggs the insect appears to select the newest twigs (for they are deposited in the bark of the twig, and not in the leaf) that is, in laying her eggs in the spring of 1857, she will choose the shoots of last year's growth. It may be remarked, also, that it is the young oak-trees that are the most covered with these gall-nuts, or the branches of trees that have been pollarded. A live grub is found in most of them during the summer and autumn months; but at this period of the year the perfect insect has in most cases escaped. I detected one insect on the point of emerging. It is not a fly; it is a minute beetle, about the eighth of an inch long.

Sidmouth, P. O. H.

PUMP IN RAY-STREET, CLERKENWELL-GREEN, SUPPLIED FROM THE CLERKS' WELL.—(SEE PAGE 244.)

MARRIAGE CEREMONIAL OF THE BARON ALPHONSE DE ROTHSCHILD AND MISS LEONORA ROTHSCHILD: THE BRIDEGROOM BREAKING THE WINE-CUP

(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The House met at four o'clock, when the Royal assent was given by commission to the following Bills: The Royal Marine Forces Bill, the Chief Constables Bill, the Public Health (Supplemental) 1837 Bill, and the Indian Subjects Commission Bill.

The Earl of EGLINTON presented a petition from Irvine against the opium trade; and petitions from other places in Scotland, praying for a restriction on the traffic in spirits in that part of the kingdom.

Baron and Testamentary Jurisdiction Bill.—Lord LYNDHURST moved that the House should resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House on the Bill on the Wednesday next after the Easter recess, and the Solicitor-General to prepare instructions to the Committee with respect to the Divorce Bill and the Testamentary Jurisdiction Bill.—The Lord Chancellor replied, that he thought it would be better to postpone the consideration of the Bill to the Committee of the Whole House, with these bills during the present Session; but they would, undoubtedly, be reintroduced, with some slight alterations, at the earliest period after the reassembling of Parliament.

THE OPIUM TRADE.

The Earl of SHAFTESBURY called the attention of their Lordships to the subject of the opium trade. His object was to ascertain the state of the law, in order to devise some remedy for the evil of which he complained. A good deal had been heard of the opium traffic between India and China, and of late the public mind and the public conscience had been greatly scandalised by the immoral system which had been so long in existence in the Indian and Chinese Seas. So long as that system was allowed to continue it would be impossible for peace, quiet, or good order to subsist between our Indian territories and those of the Emperor of China. His Lordship concluded by moving that certain queries should be submitted to the Judges touching the legality of the arrangements made by the East India Company for the cultivation of the poppy in India, and the sale of opium in China.

The Lord Chancellor saw no case for the opinion of the Judges. Suppose they pronounced the trade illegal, how were they to punish all engaged in it for twenty-five years past? The Government would submit the questions so far as related to the manufacture and sale of opium to the legal advisers of the Crown.

The Earl of SHAFTESBURY said if the whole case were referred to the law officers of the Crown he would withdraw his motion.

Earl GREY thought the question was one of too grave importance to be handed over to the law officers of the Crown. It required the consideration of Government on many points of high delicacy.

The Duke of CLARENCE doubted to great extent the question of legality or otherwise on the part of the East India Company. Government could not justify the use of opium. He did not see why all mad drinkers, but a few, and opium was the only thing to counteract the effects of other intoxicating liquors would be to stir up drunkenness to a high degree.

Lord GRANVILLE said he understood the noble Lord to the Chancellor to say that he had been informed the Judges would place our relations with China—whether they be for the future.

The Lord Chancellor had stated that Ministers were not acquainted with the facts. He was not aware that the Judges would place our relations with China—whether they be for the future.

The Earl of SHAFTESBURY had never suggested the abandonment of opium-growing in India. He wished to disconnect the Government from it. If the law officers were against him he would not fear to appeal to the country.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH inquired how the question was to be adjusted?

The Lord Chancellor said he had suggested that the facts should be submitted to the law officers.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH: How are you to get at the facts?

The Duke of ARGYLE said most of the facts could be almost taken for granted.

The Earl of DERBY said the arrangement between the House on either side was made by the Earl of Shaftesbury after his own fashion, but that was not binding on the House.

The resolutions, after some slight hesitation, were withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

Lord Pevensey took the oaths and his seat for East Sussex.

Bills Withdrawn.—Sir J. Pakington withdrew his Education Bill for Worcester. Mr. Sheppard withdrew his Bill for the Reformatory Schools Bill, for the session.

The Sound Dues.—In answer to Mr. G. Duncan, the Chancellor of the Exchequer said he believed the treaty for the commutation of the Sound Dues would be signed this week. It included a reduction not of the Sound Dues only, but also of the Transit Dues, of four-fifths their present amount.

Resignation of the Speaker.—The Speaker wished to say a few words before he called on the order of the day for the House to go into a Committee of Supply. Mr. Shaw Lefevre, in withdrawing the Bill for Mr. Whitmore, the Attorney-General, Lord Henley Bath, and Sir G. Grey the Reformatory Schools Bill, for the

Memorabilia,

LITERARY, ANTIQUARIAN, SCIENTIFIC, AND ARTISTIC.

"A little chink may let in much light."—OLD PROVERB.

TOM D'URFEY.

What martyr to hypochondriasis has not consulted Doctor Thomas (vulgo Tom) D'Urfey, whose "Pills to purge Melancholy" relaxed the rigid, frigid muscles of saturnine King William, and cast out the Blue Devils from the querulous Majesty of Queen Anne? which pills may be "taken," and the taker "well shaken," without any incongruous animosity save that of "holding both his sides during the shaking produced by fits of laughter! Who has not enjoyed the racy old English humour of Tory Tom, on whose shoulder the merry monarch leaned familiarly, humming an opera tune? Of whom it was said that many an ambitious person got credit for pretending to have been in his company, and of whom it was sung (in reference to his intimacy with the Duke of Albemarle, son of General Monk, and his own poverty-stricken fortune) —

> He prates like a parrot;
> He sups with the Duke,
> And he lies in a garret.

His ready wit, lyrical talents, and musical voice, made D'Urfey capital company. At Knowle, the princely seat of the Duke of Dorset, he was ever a right welcome guest, and his portrait bravely be-perwigged smiles upon us in its magnificent picture gallery. A rare print, entitled "A Sketch of a Tepping Meeting between a Parson, a Burgher-master's Steward, and a Poet," represents him (the Poet) doing the honours at a convivial party of drinkers, smokers, and jokers, in a snuggery at Knowle, and another print, still rarer, exhibits him in grand pontificalibus, as Randolph Ruby-face, A.M., Chaplain in ordinary to the Bacchanalian Society of Wine-bibbers, with "tub ecclesiastic," cushion, bottle, glass, and book before him, holding forth on the virtues of wine! It is to be regretted that this social scion of Apollo and the "jolly God," who wrote "more odes than Horace, and about twice as many comedies as Terence," should, in "the sere and yellow leaf," have fallen into poverty. But for the humane interposition of the kind and the accomplished Addison this veteran singing-bird might have literally died in a cage.

Against the wall in the south-west angle of St. James's Church, Piccadilly, may be seen a stone bearing this quaint inscription—"Tom D'Urfey, died Feb. 26, 1723."

This too brief notice of so celebrated a wit is intended to herald a piece not printed in his works and known but to a very few hunters after oddities. A piece so extremely scarce, that at the sale-rooms of Messrs. Sotheby, in 1823, it was knocked down as a bibliographical maniac for Two pounds ten shillings, its published price, in 1727, being only sixpence! Its title is "The English Stage Italianized, &c., Written by Thomas D'Urfey, Poet Laureat de Jure."

This literary curiosity is a free, facetious satire on the popular passion for Italian sing-song, that the well-merited success of the "Beggar's Opera" "scotched," but did not kill. It shows, in a ludicrous vein, the necessity of banishing those "formal fellows," Shakspeare, Ben Jonson, Otway, and Congreve; of turning adrift the abettors and interpreters of their dulness, Wilks, Booth, Cibber, and Oldfield; and of filling up their places with fiddling, singing, and dancing Signors and Signoras! who by the "hurly-burly of coaches, the conflagration of torches, the circle of belles, the crowd of beaux, and the smile subscription," prove that the town is entirely their most humble servants.

Now for the argument. Æneas, the itinerant Prince of Troy, and his father, Anchises, are entertained at the Court of Carthage by Queen Dido. Æneas relates his adventures to her Majesty, during which Harlequin, the Queen's butcher, purloins some piquant morsels from his plate. For this poor Harlequin is condemned to be hanged; but the Prince, who relishes a practical joke, procures his pardon, only to make a pimp of him! The good looks of Æneas "have transfixed the soul" of Queen Dido. She falls into love fits; but, recovering, makes Columbine her confidante.

But "the course of true love," as says the "Divine Williams," "never did run smooth." The Prince, instead of returning the Imperial passion, casts a sheep's eye at Columbine. Harlequin tells his master that the fair figurante is pre-engaged. Æneas, however, insinuates a piece of gold into his palm, and Harlequin promises, "upon his honour," to pimp for him.

The slighted Majesty of Carthage, drawn dagger in hand, resolves to cry quittance with the coquette Columbine! A Cabinet Council is held, Harlequin sitting as Prime Minister, "the Doctor" as War Secretary, and Scaramouch as Clerk. It is determined to pursue the fugitive lovers, who have fled to the sea-coast. Harlequin (sub rosa) informs them of their danger; pockets another purse of gold; sees them safely on board ship; and wishes them (colours flying and guns roaring!) bon voyage.

Queen Dido on horseback harangues her brave troops; Harlequin, as Generalissimo, makes a loyal reply; Pantaloon promises to conquer or perish, and "the Doctor," from the Privy Purse, supplies the sinews of war. The Generalissimo, however, and "the Doctor" cheat the poor soldiers out of their pay, and admit Pantaloon (who threatens to peach!) to share in the plunder.

A "scout" announces the quick approach of the enemy. The Carthaginian heroes in a panic throw down their arms hurriedly, and take to their heels; Pantaloon, fearing to be pulverised, scours away after them; and Queen Dido, "in doleful dumps," is left solus in her glory.

Another "scout" informs her Majesty that his predecessor's alarm was a false one, and that the hostile fleet are windbound. She takes "rides about the camp like a fury," and makes Harlequin her Lord High Admiral.

The Queen, "dressed as a Shepherdess," runs stark mad, and the sympathetic maids of honour, to fall in with her strange humour, bleat her mournful lambs! One of the royal frolics is to make Harlequin a Hobby-horse. "The Doctor" is now called in; he prescribes, and Queen Dido becomes "compos." Alas! he has heavy news to tell her. Harlequin, who has all along nourished a secret passion for her sacred person, in a paroxysm of despondency, has suspended himself from the back-stairs banister! Dido commands that his corpse shall be brought in; when she cries over it like a tragedy queen. "The Doctor," to comfort her, offers to bring the dead to life again; which he does by a pharmacopœial process not necessary to be recorded. Her Majesty, resenting the affront of Æneas, crowns the catastrophe by giving her hand to Harlequin; and Harlequin, to the martial music of drums and trumpets, is proclaimed King of Carthage! -GEORGE DANIEL, Canonbury.

QUERIES.

SHAKSPEARE CONUNDRUMS.—I beg to present you with some nuts for Shakspeareans to crack, consisting of those passages in the dramatic works of the "divine Williams," as he is called across the water, which have been usually accounted inveterate corruptions. The ingenious will, perhaps, be disposed to try their hand upon them, and all students of the text will, I am sure, be glad of their suggestions. I take the text of the first folio:—

1. "Tempest," act iv., s. 1.

> At last I left them
> I'th filthy mantled poole beyond your Cell,
> There dancing up to th' chins, that the fowle Lake
> Ore-stunke their feet.

2. "All's Well that Ends Well," act iv., s. 1.

> Bertram. * * * Say thou art mine, and ever
> My love as it beginnes, shall so persever.
> Diana. I see that men make ropes in such a scorre,
> That wee'l forsake ourselves.

3 "Troilus and Cressida."

> Andromache. O be perswaded, doe not count it holy,
> To hurt by being just; it is as lawfull:
> For we would count give much to as violent thefts,
> And rob in the behalfe of charitie.

C. MANSFIELD INGLEBY, Birmingham.

USEFUL READING DESK FOR LITERARY COMPILERS.—Old and well nigh obsolete fashion! are every day coming into vogue again. Would it not be worth while for some London cabinet-maker to manufacture a few desks for literary purposes, on the following admirable plan? The extract is a postscript of a letter from Sir. W. Scott to Terry, dated June 18, 1823:—"Has an old-fashioned consulting-desk ever met your eye in your rambles? I mean one of those which have four faces, each forming an inclined plane, like a writing-desk, and made to turn round as well as to rise, and to be depressed by a strong iron screw in the centre. They are old fashioned, but choicely convenient, as you can keep three or four books (folios, if you like) open for reference."—W. J. FITZPATRICK.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A CORRESPONDENT.—The Ettrick Shepherd's letter. The original of the letter of James Hogg which published a week or two back as a new is in the possession of Mr. Gilbert French.

RECEIVED.—D. C. L., J. R. Thompson, J. Shearer, —(signature unintelligible), Blackheart Abbey, B. S. Middlewick, A. M., J. F. K., J. H. Hewitt, Achates, T. T., J. M. Malcolm, Spiritus Mundi, D. S., H. Carles D'Thompson, W. Dyce, L. A., Rusticus, W. B. B., Ipswich, J. M., L. W., J. Fitzpatrick, Hornu, Leeds, Alpha, A. H. Wills, Wolverhampton, M. Bird, C. Colwell, A. C., Tunbridge Wells Antiquary, H. D., of Surbiton, J. Abingdon, A. Subscriber, Edwin Simkins, B. A., Cambridge, B. D. Monogram, Oldbus, S. T. P., Non Fear Old Sam, Basil Tarrant, Ignoramus, Ignoramus, J. Gilbert, Cambridge, F. L., Hereford, R. H. S. M., Small Arms, Africanus, W. S., Stempenloh, Wolverhampton, Mermaid, Gawaytun Yew, T. W. M., J. F. G., S. S., John Harwood Hill, J. F. J., E. H. P., Spalding, E. Walford, M. A., G. M. Ingleby, Mackenzie Walcott, M. A., F. F. H. W., Duckworth, J. G., D. D. Gall, H., H. W. Ellis, F. Pollett, J. Dyce, An Inquisitive, C. A. Greaves, S. H., F. A. Blunt, Somebody, J. Grantham, W. F. Hannay, W. W., Paul Pry, Maidstone, John James.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. W., Regent's-park.—Your move shall be considered; but, as Black had won back the odds he gave, he could make sure of the game, pay as he chose.

CECILIE HAROLD should procure some rudimentary treatise on the game. It is impossible for us to find room for answers to such questions.

W. B., Chester.—The arrangements necessary are completed; but there is every prospect of the new last meeting of Brilliancy and Skill being transferred to Manchester.

G. H. M., Bristol.—Both are so friendly to your obtaining the volumes, we should think, of whomsoever applied for the volumes—for them.

L. C., Leeds.—Of Staunton's "Chess-player's Companion," which we first called upon to recommend as indispensable to every player, nothing seems by correspondence have lately been much improved or his inventors, Messrs. Jaques. A reappearance has been added to each board for all the moves played, or not occupied on the field, in which by the bond of a Knight every Piece is as free, if not as powerful as a Queen in place. For the prices we must refer you to the makers.

F. H. M. DUGUID, Liverpool; CRAMPTON, D. T., W. H. F. N., W. R.—The Solution sent by each of these Correspondents was correct; but arrived too late for publication last week.

DELTA, Montreal.—As you state the easy your opponent was bound to capture the Pawn.

S. A player, teaching a P one with the old-time intention of playing it, is not warranted, in saying J'adoube, to replace the Piece and move another.

PLAYER, RIVERS, W. DARBY, Jun., T. H., Wyman, J. L., Rose, Les Officiers du Vaisseau Ajax, Asthma Beck, F. S., Crampton, H. E., Rosbo, A. Z. B. J., M. V., W. Grimshaw, H. Job.

G. DE ROZE.—The Problem appears to have been sent without any Solution. Perhaps you will favour us with another copy? If it is, it should be inserted on forthwith.

INVESTIGATOR.—Your Solution of No. 680 by "Indian Problem" is correct.

I. S. R.—The Black Knight could not capture the Queen under such circumstances.

T. K.—Your games shall be reported on shortly.

VOX.—The game played by correspondence between Crofold and Alcalde Chapelle and won by the former Club has been forwarded to us; and, if it possesses sufficient interest, shall be published.

SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 679, by Mrs. Pillsbury, J. E. B., F. R., Crampton are correct.

SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 680 by D. D., Alpha, Suffolk-square, Les Officiers du vaisseau l'Ajax, The Northern Girl, A Clerk, Oldbus, F. C. D., H. F. N., Rustic Tile Doll, W. D., Chester, Jack of Worcester, Oldham, H. Blomberg, John de Blaina, are correct. All others are wrong.

PARIS.—Your solution of 678 is imperfect.

H. WHITTEN.—It reached us not.

J. DE BLAYDON. Now in the examiner's hands.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 679.

| WHITE. | BLACK. | WHITE. | BLACK. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. Kt to K 7th (ch) | R takes Kt | 3. B to K 8th | Anything |
| 2. Q to Q 4th (ch) | B takes Q | 4. Kt or Pawn mates. | |

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 680.

| WHITE. | BLACK. | WHITE. | BLACK. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. B to K 8th | P to K B 3rd (ch) | 4. B to K 8th | K takes Kt |
| 2. B to Q B 3rd | K to B 5th (best) | 5. P to K B 4th— | |
| 3. P to Q 4th | K to Kt 4th | Ding. ch. and mate. | |

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 681.

| WHITE. | BLACK. | WHITE. | BLACK. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. Q to her 4th (ch) | K takes Q | 3. B to Q R 2nd | Any move |
| 2. Kt to K B 5th | R to K 6th | 4. One of the Kts mates. | |

PROBLEM No. 682.

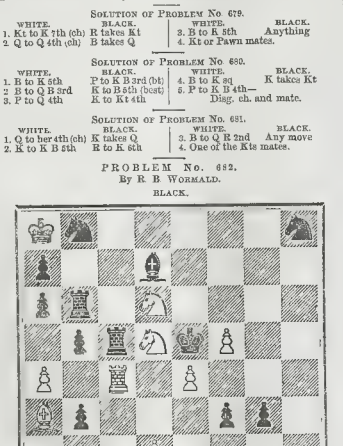
By R. B. WORMALD.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

CHESS IN THE METROPOLIS.

Continuation of the Games between MR. STAUNTON and the AMATEUR from MEXICO.

SKIRMISH IN WHICH MR. S. GIVES THE ODDS OF HIS Q ROOK.

(Remove Black's Q Rook from the board.)

(Evans' Gambit.)

| BLACK (MR. S.) | WHITE (MR. W.) | BLACK (MR. S.) | WHITE (MR. W.) |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. P to K 4th | P to K 4th | 14. Q to K R 6th (c) | Q to K B 2nd |
| 2. K to K B 3rd | Q Kt to Q B 3rd | 15. Q to Q Kt 6th (ch) | P to Q B 3rd |
| 3. K B to Q B 4th | K B to Q B 4th | 16. Q to Q 3rd | B to Q B 4th |
| 4. P to Q Kt 4th | B takes Q Kt P | 17. B to Kt sq | Kt to K R 3rd |
| 5. P to Q B 3rd | B to Q B 4th | 18. P to K B 4th | Kt to Kt 5th |
| 6. Castles | P to Q 3rd | 19. Q to K 2nd | P to K R 4th |
| 7. P to Q 4th | P takes P | 20. Kt to Q B 3rd | Q to K R 3rd |
| 8. P takes P | K B to Q Kt 3rd | 21. P to K 5th | Q to K R 5th |
| 9. Q to Q Kt 3rd | B to K 3rd (a) | 22. P to K Kt 3rd (b) | Q to K 2nd |
| 10. B takes B | P takes B | 23. P to K R 3rd | Castles on Q side |
| 11. Q takes P (ch) | Q to K 2nd | 24. P takes Kt | P ths P (dis ch) |
| 12. Q to K R 3rd | Kt takes P | 25. K to Kt 2nd | Q to K 3rd |
| 13. Kt takes Kt | B takes Kt | 26. Kt to K 4th (c) | |

And White gave mate in three moves

(a) In games of this description, where large odds are given, it is often politic in the inferior player to throw away a Pawn for the sake of exchanging Queens, or parrying the attack.

(b) He should first have taken Pawn with Pawn, discovering check.

(c) Regardless of the mate which his opponent was so obviously preparing for him!

DER LAZA'S LEITFADEN.—Chess amateurs here and elsewhere will be pleased to know that a new edition of Der Laza's instructive treatise has just made its appearance in Berlin; and with it a companion volume, consisting of an accurate reprint of the ancient work of Damiano, edited by the same indefatigable amateur. Both these books will be much in demand in this country. It is to be hoped the Berlin publishers will take measures to supply copies with dispatch and punctuality.

THE AMERICAN CHESS MONTHLY.—The second number of this new candidate for popular favour has come to hand, and, we are glad to see, bears fully out the promise of the opening one. The games are well selected, and the problems plentiful and excellent. There is also an elegant little paper on the Poesy of Chess, in which the allusions to the noble game, by Chaucer, Lydgate, Spenser, Cowley, Denham, Beaumont and Fletcher, &c., &c., are daintily arrayed and pleasantly commented on.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

His Majesty King Leopold arrived at Brussels, from Laeken, on the 5th inst., for the purpose of presiding at a grand Court dinner that took place in the evening.

The Gloucester Chronicle states that arrangements have been made on behalf of the Lord Bishop of the diocese with the agents of Lord John Russell, by which the noble Lord's residence near Stroud has been let to the right rev. prelate for a period of two years.

A letter from Nice, dated the 2nd inst., announces the arrival in that city of the Grand Duchess Olga and her august husband, after a stormy passage from Marseilles. The Grand Duke Constantine had arrived there on the previous day from Genoa.

The Marchioness of Londonderry has made the munificent donation of £1000 towards the restoration of St. Nicholas Church, Durham.

Mr. Peabody, the American banker, has given the city of Baltimore 300,000 dollars for the establishment of an institution which is to include a free library, a musical academy, and a picture gallery. The gift is further to be increased to 500,000 dollars.

The Swedish Government has demanded from the Diet of Stockholm a dotation of 105,000 rix dollars (about 4s. 2d. each) for the Duke and Duchess of Ostgothland (Prince Oscar, who is shortly to marry a Princess of Nassau), and dotations of 20,000 rix dollars each for Prince Augustus and the Princess Eugenie.

Mr. Walpole, Mr. Fitzroy, and Mr. Stuart Wortley are in the field for the office of Speaker to the House of Commons.

On the 2nd inst. a funeral service was celebrated in a salle of the Grand Ducal Palace, Carlsruhe, which was laid out as a Russian chapel, in commemoration of the late Emperor Nicholas. All the members of the Grand Ducal family assisted at the ceremony. Upon the invitation of his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Michael, many Russians came to Carlsruhe on the occasion.

Immediately after the signature of the treaty of peace between Persia and England Feroukh Khan sent off a despatch to Bucharest, the last station of the telegraphic line, where one of the attachés of the Persian Minister of Foreign Affairs was in waiting to receive it, and to start immediately for Teheran.

On the 15th of April the foundation-stone of the public library at Liverpool will be laid. This provincial institution is to cost £20,000, the whole of which sum is given for the purpose by Mr. William Brown, M.P.

A report has been presented to the French Emperor from M. Rouland, Minister of Public Instruction, pointing out to his Majesty the advantages that would accrue to agriculture from the establishment at the Museum of Natural History of a Professorship of Vegetable Physiology.

The Council of the Geological Society has awarded the Wollaston Palladium Medal to M. Joachim Barrande, of Prague, for his services in developing the history of the lower palæozoic rocks.

Preparations are being made at the Palace of the Angarten, at Vienna, for the reception of Field Marshal Radetzky, who is shortly expected in the Austrian capital.

The subject selected for the gold medal competition of this year for the Royal Academy, both in sculpture and painting, is "The Good Samaritan."

Feroukh Khan, according to a Paris letter in the Independance of Brussels, is endeavouring to negotiate a treaty of commerce between Persia and Belgium.

Mr. Sumner, the senator for Massachusetts—honoured by just men for his sufferings at the hand of Preston Brooks, of South Carolina—is now on his way to England.

Dr. Elisha Kane, the Arctic traveller, is dead, at the age of thirty-four. A despatch from New Orleans of the 23rd ult. says that his death occurred on the 16th, at Havannah. The officers of the island attended his funeral in a body.

Mrs. Beecher Stowe is at present in Rome, after a somewhat disastrous journey both by land and sea. Mrs. Stowe proposes remaining a few weeks in Rome previously to visiting Naples.

La Vérité says that the Abbé Livois, the director of the French mission in China, is at this moment in Paris.

Judge Haliburton, author of "Sam Slick," &c., is to deliver a lecture in the City Hall, Glasgow, on the 26th inst., under the auspices of the directors of the Athenæum.

The Zeit says that intelligence has been received of the death of Dr. Vogel, the African traveller, after his arrival at the capital of Wadi.

Mr. George W. Harris, late stipendiary magistrate of Granada, has been chosen secretary of the Reform Club. The candidates were 126 in number.

The Salut Public of Lyons says that Cruvelli has been engaged to play for two months in that city, and that she will shortly make her first appearance there in the "Prophet."

W. Emerson is engaged upon two works—one of which, "The Conduct of Life," will be published next autumn. It is based upon a series of lectures delivered a few years since. The other is to be called the "History of Intellect," and is expected, by the author, to be the great literary performance of his life.

The widow and orphan daughter of M. Cabet, the Communist leader, who died at the Icarian settlement of Nauvoo (Illinois) two or three months ago, have been reduced to the most abject poverty in consequence of his death. A subscription in their behalf has been opened in Paris.

William Henn, Senior Master in Chancery, in Ireland, died suddenly on Monday morning. As Senior Master his salary was £2500 a year.

A paleographic despatch from New Orleans states that news had arrived there of the capture of the Costa Rican fortifications at the mouth of the Serapiqui by Walker's troops.

Captain W. H. Palin, late of the Indian army, has been appointed Chief Constable of Manchester, in place of Captain Willis. There were 120 candidates for the office, including many officers of the army, of all ranks up to Colonels. The salary is £300 per annum, with £50 for horse or cab hire.

We regret to state that Professor Owen is suffering from an affection in his eye.

The Under Secretaryship to the Foreign Department of the Government of India, Bengal, has become vacant by the death of Mr. Frederick Shaw.

J. Hawes Davis, an officer of the Vigilance Committee committed suicide in San Francisco Jan. 14 by taking strychnine. He is said by the San Francisco Sun to be the ninth member of that committee who has committed suicide.

Mr. Spurgeon's congregation at the Music Hall on Sunday increased Sir James Graham, Lord John Russell, and Lord Stanley of Alderley.

It is rumoured that Prussia will oppose the entrance of Austria into the German Zollverein, at the Conference now sitting at Berlin.

The Constitutionnel has made an electoral and geographical discovery, which is far too important to be passed over unnoticed; viz., that Mr. Cobden has no chance of being re-elected for the West Riding, which it describes as "La partie oriental de Londres" the eastern part of London.

The Chamber of Representatives of Belgium has rejected the proposition to grant a pension of 250 fr., to the persons decorated with the Iron Cross (that is, those who combated in the revolution of 1830).

The Melbourne, Geelong, and Ballarat line of electric telegraph was to be opened to the public on the 15th of December. All shipping arrivals at the Heads will now be known in Ballarat as soon as in Melbourne, and from this date the public will be enabled to send private messages.

The negotiations relative to the junction of the Russian and Prussian railways have been brought to a close. The Governments of the two countries have agreed that the construction of the lines of junction shall commence next year, and be terminated simultaneously.

The last papers from Sidney call attention to a matter of great importance to English underwriters. It is stated to be a frequent practice on the part of some consignees to get perfectly sound goods condemned as "damaged by sea water."

According to the census which took place in December, the results of which have just been officially announced, it appears that the population of Brussels, not including the faubourgs, amounts to 152,200 and odd inhabitants, occupying nearly 17,000 houses.

The Royal proclamation for the dissolution of the present Parliament, and the calling of another, is expected to be issued about the 25th of this month.

Russia has entered for the first time into official relations with a South American Republic, having exchanged a treaty between her and the Republic of Venezuela.

CANTON AND PART OF THE SUBURBS, SKETCHED DURING THE CONFLAGRATION IN THE CITY

ATTEMPT TO CAPTURE THE PASSENGER-STEAMER "FEI MA" ("FLYING HORSE") BY 53 IMPERIAL JUNKS, IN CANTON RIVER.

CONFLAGRATION AT CANTON.

(From a Correspondent.)

CANTON, 14th January, 1857.

I SEND you a Sketch of Canton, taken yesterday morning from the top of Church Tower, our only elevated position that is left here. This Sketch embraces the city and eastern and southern suburbs; also a part of the ruins of the Factories and Garden.

This Sketch is of interest as it was taken during the only fire of importance which we have succeeded as yet in making inside the city—namely, the Viceroy's yamun, where an extensive fire was raised yesterday at three p.m., which lasted till this morning at seven. On the right, lower down in the View, is the site of an extensive fire yesterday, which burned all the old Hongs between the Garden and Dutch Folly. This View is also of interest, as the church on which it was sketched is about to be burnt down and the Garden abandoned by H.M. forces.

Among the striking points in the View are on the left, Magazine-hill and Gough's Fort on the heights; in the left foreground are Jardine and Co.'s factories. On the right foreground is the Garden and the Royal Marines' guard-room; and in the river is shown Dutch Folly Fort, and beyond it are the remains of French Folly Fort.

THE WAR IN CHINA.

H.M.S. Sybille, Whampoa, Jan. 12, 1857.

WE have entered on what may be called the tragic period in our present struggle with the Chinese. At first, events were all successes—the whole business was to be concluded and finally arranged by a coup de main. Forts destroyed, the provincial city in a state of siege, the wall breached, a grand assault, and all was to be over! But it has turned out otherwise, the Chinese character, even yet, is not so well known as we thought; in fact they seem to be, as Mr. Meadows says, "the best (?) misunderstood people in the world."

You will have heard how the Factories were burned, and how the Viceroy Yeh had the audacity to charge the English with having themselves caused the conflagration, and that he actually wrote a letter of expostulation to Sir J. Bowring on the subject, showing plainly enough that he knew "a day of reckoning" would come sooner or later.

Although driven from their homes, the Cantonese merchants behaved in an admirable way, encouraging the Admiral and strengthening his hands as far as they could. The Factory grounds have been intrenched and the Barbarians have not yet been driven into the sea.

The Dutch Folly (River Pearl Fort) has befriended us well in the emergency. Here we have a strong garrison and guns of the heaviest calibre: the island is situated in front of the new city wall, and is a most important position in case the city has to be bombarded.

Attempts without number have been made to damage our ships by gunpowder explosions—hitherto, however, without success; it is probable they may in the end do us some harm by these means, as their ingenuity is as great as their inordinate love of dollars, to gain which numberless persons would willingly risk life or limb.

But it is not at Canton the real tragedies occur—for a Chinaman after all has a rewarding respect for our "fighting ship," but cheerless. Take, for example, the sad case of the Thistle, [illegible] end, of which, perhaps, you have heard, as from other sources, lest the should not be so, however, I will give you some particulars as I heard them from an eye-witness.

CHINESE SMUGGLING CRAFT, STRAIT OF FORMOSA.—(SEE PAGE 232.

The Thistle was one of those small steamers that ran from Hong Kong to Canton with the nightly mail. She also was fitted for Chinese passengers; her captain was called Wiemer, a German; and her [illegible] was a foreigner. On the night of the 21st of December the 27th was returning to Hong-Kong, when near the second bar passed close to Titi, a fleet of junks concealed under the land of the foreigner. Sneaking, however, and concealed in getting [illegible], but hardly had she escaped this danger when a second and [illegible] of the same fleet commenced firing. The captain himself took the helm, and again the Thistle ran through the junks under a heavy fire; several Chinese were killed and wounded on board the post-boat; she had no guns to reply with.

The Thistle returned to Canton on the 26th of December, and was returning to Hong-Kong on the 30th, when off the same spot the Chinese crew rose and murdered all the Europeans and Malays on board, cut off their heads, and set the boat on fire, having first taken her up a creek to a village called Nam Kong-Tow. She was then ransacked by the villagers, and finally towed down to Hong-Kong by a steamer passing by.

Here I give you another instance:—At Whampoa there was left a solitary chop (i.e., a hulk used for a dwelling-house), belonging to an American physician, in charge of a European, with five or six Chinamen. He was sleeping in his bed a few nights since, when the chop was forcibly entered the Chinese servants were nowhere; and the poor European was quietly murdered, his head chopped off, and carried away in a bag to Canton.

One more example:—In a small chop at the same place (Whampoa) lived an old Scotch gentleman, his wife, and daughter. It was not [illegible] three weeks ago, one afternoon, when he had just returned from his business ashore, a Chinese Sampan came alongside the chop, professedly with a chit, or letter, for Mr. Cowper (the owner). His daughter, who was at the gangway, offered to take the note, but they declined giving it to any one but "the master." Accordingly Mr. Cowper fearing nothing—came out to take the note; but no sooner made his appearance than he was seized by three strong Chinamen, dragged into the water, forced from his daughter's arms, and finally carried off by the vile miscreants, who, with all their vaunted respect for age, could thus drag an old man of sixty-five from his home and his family, and perhaps coolly murder him at their leisure—all for the sake of 100 taels. These things are sickening and revolting enough to us, but to a Chinaman the present opportunity is nothing more than an occasion for making a "pigeon" in heads.

Let me give you one more instance of the courage and martial spirit of these wretched people:—Last Friday (Jan. 9th) a little passenger steamer was running up to Canton. She was a very fast boat, and rightly named the Fei Ma (Flying Horse), about two o'clock p.m., in passing a celebrated creek, where the Thistle was captured, she was attacked by fifty-three large Imperial junks: each of these junks carried two if not four heavy guns, and was propelled by at least forty oars with three or four men at each oar. The steamer, owing to the Malay leaving the wheel, lost her way and was very nearly surrounded. The Chinese, knowing we could offer no resistance, came on most manfully. Their shot flew round us like hail: nine or ten penetrated the side; one went within an inch or two of the boilers, others right through the boat; and it was only after a good twenty minutes' ordeal that the little steamer distanced her cowardly pursuers. Here was a fine exhibition of Chinese valour—more than 5000 men in frantic haste and pursuit of one little steamer, carrying some eight or nine passengers, whose heads, however, were worth 100 taels each.

While we are thus valued "per head," is it any wonder if the life of a Chinaman is valued as a thing of slight consequence. I confess that I myself am being, as I once supposed, naturally inclined—feel my blood boil to think of these things, and look on every Chinaman as my sworn foe.

I could give you other instances of the same character, but there is no necessity. I venture to say whatever apologists at home may favor, that no one who has lived here for any length of time, or witnessed the proceedings of these cowardly people, can have any respect or feel much regard or pity for them. I believe it is the unanimous opinion of the missionaries at Canton that it is quite time to teach these people a most severe lesson, and that we are waging against piracy and barbarity even when recognised and promoted by an Imperial Government, as much as we are when perpetrated without license on the open sea, or under the hope of concealment.

I sincerely trust that I am not taking a wrong or inhuman view of these people's character. I venture to whatever apologists at home may favor, that no one who has lived here for any length of time, or witnessed the proceedings of these cowardly people, can have any respect or feel much regard or pity for them. I believe it is the unanimous opinion of the missionaries at Canton that it is quite time to teach these people a most severe lesson, and that we are waging against piracy and barbarity even when recognised and promoted by an Imperial Government, as much as we are when perpetrated without license on the open sea, or under the hope of concealment.

I sincerely trust that I am not taking a wrong or inhuman view of these people's character. I was almost before me like a dream—that after the murder of poor M. Chapdelaine, the French missionary, in the province of Kwang-Si, his ruthless murderers, not satisfied with his blood, cut out his heart and ate it. I will vouch for the truth of this. I have the word of two German missionaries that it is not at all an unusual event. Yet these are the people who call us Barbarians.

Yours truly, E.

(From another Correspondent.)

H.M.S. Encounter, 10th Jan., 1857, off Canton.

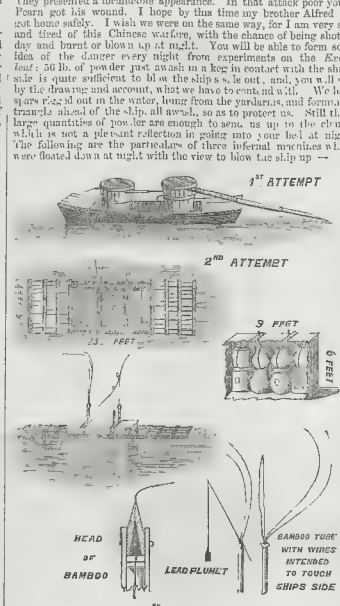
MY DEAREST FATHER,—No doubt ere this you expected that I should have been on my way for happy old England; but this war has given us plenty of work on this confounded river, for, on account of our light draught of water, we are kept constantly on the move at high water—at low water we cannot get over the flats. Our fires have never been out since we left Hong-Kong—hauled up by day and steam up all night nearly three months. In addition to killed and wounded, we have a fearfully long sick list, and no end of deaths. Our last was a mate, nephew of Lord Hardinge, about twenty-one years of age. We are all very sick and tired of this work. We are firing from daylight till dark, and at all hours of the night also. Our last affair was an attack on Sunday last, of a fleet of 100 war-junks, each mounting ten guns, with from eighty to 100 men, at low water, when we could not get at the brutes: the Master's Assistant of the Calcutta was mortally wounded in the stomach, went to him while he was dying on our main-deck, to receive his last words for his poor father, Mr. Pearn, of the Deptford Dockyard; to whom I sent a lock of his hair, with his dying words.

Hong-Kong is in a sad state. All the Chinese merchants have left, and the servants have a reward offered them to murder and poison all their masters. A few days since an unfortunate small post river-steamer, the Thistle, left Canton with a lot of Chinamen passengers, supposed to be for Hong-Kong. They were searched on their way on going over the gangway. Some women came on board just as she was sailing. These were not searched; but after the vessel had got about thirty-six miles down the river these women distributed knives and arms they had concealed about them to the passengers, who turned out to be soldiers. They murdered all the Europeans and then burnt the wooden part of the ship; the hull, being iron, was picked up by the Barracouta. The next day a high price was set on all our heads: 500 dols. for those of the officers, and 50 dols. for the men's; and 10,000 dols. to burn or destroy any of our ships. I send you for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS details of three different attempts to blow this ship up; but, thank God, we have got off clear so far. I can assure you that the times here are rather too stirring to be pleasant. To-morrow the Admiral intends burning every thing that he can lay his hands on. There are about 500 war-junks now up a branch of the river about three miles and a half off, and if they only had the pluck, and knew their strength, they could eat us; as it is they worry and annoy us very much. I had the first guard in our pinnace the night before last. I was about a thousand yards ahead of the ship, and I had scarcely let go the anchor before I observed in the moonlight about a hundred row-boats each with a gun in her bow; I had just time to up anchor, let drive the howitzer at them, and retreat. I got three guns in an instant, but the ship opened fire and covered me in my retreat. Every night some attempt is made to blow us up; and, although the Chinamen are not great warriors still they are very cunning, and their numbers are like the sand on the seashore. This day week three of our vessels kept 400 of theirs, large and small, with about 15,000 men in them, at bay. They presented a formidable appearance. In that attack poor young Pearn got his wound. I hope by this time my brother Alfred has got home safely. I wish we were on the same way, for I am very sick and tired of this Chinese warfare, with the chance of being shot by day and burnt or blown up at night. You will be able to form some idea of the danger every night from experiments on the Excellent: 56 lb. of powder put awash in a keg in contact with the ship's side is quite sufficient to blow the ship's side out, and, you will see, by the drawing and account, what we have to contend with. We have spars rigged out in the water, lying from the yardarms, and forming a triangle ahead of the ship, all awash, so as to protect us. Still these large quantities of powder are enough to send us up to the clouds, which is not a pleasant reflection in going into your bed at night. The following are the particulars of three infernal machines which were floated down at night with the view to blow the ship up:—



CHINESE INFERNAL MACHINES.

The first was a sampan, towed by a canoe, on the 24th Dec., 1856, captured close under the bow by our second gig rowing guard. The fuze was lighted in the bamboo tubes in the side.

The second attempt was on the morning of 5th Jan., 1857, about 2.30. Two rafts, moored together, with about twenty fathom of line buoyed up with hooks to catch cables or anything else, and on the wires touching the ship's side, to break by the little lead weight the lighted fuze on the top of the bamboo, which communicated with the powder. These were lighted and all ready; but fortunately observed by our guard-boat, and towed clear of ship. Being only a raft it was just awash, and in each caisson at least 17 cwt. of gunpowder in open tubs and jars. The raft itself was made of 6-inch plank, well bound together, and caulked.

The third attempt was on the morning of the 7th Jan., 1857, at 4.30. A pair of vessels in the shape of a can-buoy, with a flag on the top, about eight inches long; the fuze, with a tin box containing punk over the fuze; then a cover with lighted match on top: this had a string to it, which, when pulled, drew out the centre partition, and communicated the fire to the punk, to allow the fellows who swam off with them towards the ship to make their escape; but they got frightened at some stir with the boats, and by accident one went off with a fearful explosion on the starboard bow, about sixty yards, and the other, being deserted, floated down on our booms. One of the men was caught and brought on board here, and had his brains blown out on the port gangway. The buoy-shaped vessel was capable of holding about ten cwt. of gunpowder.

January 11th.

This afternoon we went on a burning expedition: each ship had her work laid out for her by the Admiral. The First Lieutenant and myself had charge of the party from this ship. Many thousands of pounds worth were burned—even the [illegible]ace, tail of live fish, geese, pigs, &c., &c., on an extensive scale. Lord Elgin were maddened with the loss of property and life, [illegible] and [illegible] barracks and stores down on our head, and the Chinese soldiers, who were very thick, tried hard to cut us off, but we only had [illegible] spears we knocked them down like nine-pins. One party lost two men killed and one mortally wounded, and one officer of the 59th Regiment from a brick on his head. The Chinese got the bodies, and cut off their heads, for the reward. One poor fellow, wounded, saw them cut the heads off, and, as soon as he could get a clear chance, down he ran for the party, but got mortally wounded in his turn. We were obliged to make such a sharp retreat that we could not recover their bodies, although the marines offered to go and try. These marines are the finest fellows I have ever been with; the more danger we get into the firmer and more determined they are. We are going to leave the part that was occupied by the English, and move down the river, off Bird-nest Fort; and then we shall go down a few more miles, which will better than remaining up here. I have told you all the news I can think of; and I hope the next letter I write will be to say that we are on our way home. Give my kindest love to my sisters and all at home; and, as ever, my dearest father, believe me to remain, your affectionate son,

G. R.

THE PRESENT PARLIAMENT.—The present, which is the fourth Parliament of Queen Victoria, and the sixth of the "reformed" Parliaments, was elected in July, 1852, under the auspices of the late Earl of Derby, then at the head of the Conservative Administration. It would not, according to the Septennial Act, die a natural death until the 20th of August, 1859 (the day at which the writs for the new Parliament were made returnable); but since the year 1838 no Parliament, according to Mr. Dod, has approached its extreme limit. The present Parliament, if dissolved without any material delay, will have failed to attain the age of five years by some four or five months. The Russel Parliament, elected in July and August 1847, lasted four years, seven months, and two weeks; and the Parliament which placed the late Sir R. Peel in office in the year 1841 lasted as long as five years and seven months, or very nearly six years. This was the longest of the reformed Parliaments, the shortest having been the first, elected at the end of 1832, the age of which was one year and eight months only. It will be found that the average duration of the six reformed Parliaments elected from 1832 to 1852 has been as nearly as possible, four years, supposing the present Parliament to be dissolved this spring.

EAST INDIA JUDICIAL ESTABLISHMENTS.—Certain papers, relating to the East India Judicial Establishments have been printed by order of the House of Commons. By an extract of a letter from the Government of India, dated May, 1856, it appears that steps have been taken to submit the first report of the India Law Commissioners to the Government of Bengal and the north-western provinces, and to the Judges of the supreme Courts of the various presidencies with a view of ascertaining their sentiments thereon. These returns had not yet been received. Among these papers is a memorial signed by twenty-five Christian missionaries at Calcutta, addressed to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal on the social, judicial, and moral degradation of the peasantry of the province. In this document the memorialists declare their belief that in many districts neither life nor property is secure, that the police and judicial system is inefficient, notoriously corrupt, and oppressive to the poor, that the zemindari system is demoralising and pauperising the peasantry; that the rural population live in a state of poverty and wretchedness produced chiefly by the present system of landed tenure; and that a silken spirit of discontent and a bitter feeling of hatred towards their rulers, are being engendered in their minds. The memorialists conclude by praying for a commission of inquiry. In reply to this Mr Halliday, the Lieutenant-Governor, pens a minute in which he admits the existence of the evils pointed out, but says they are greatly exaggerated, and depicted in too gloomy colours. Some of them are beyond the action of legislative remedy, and must be left to the progress of education and civilisation; while the others, such as the inefficiency of the police, and the bad law of landlord and tenant, are to be amended; and measures for that object are now under consideration. All that Government can do shall be done. He expresses a very decided opinion against any commission of inquiry.

PRINCE EUGENES BEAUHARNAIS.—An interesting article in the Monitcur, by General Vaudey d'Ageric, Aide-de-Camp to the Emperor, contains a very complete vindication of the memory of Prince Eugene Beauharnais, against an imputation of treason cast upon him in the last volume of Marshal Marmont's "Memoirs." The allegation was that in the beginning of 1814 Prince Eugene, having been ordered by Napoleon to evacuate Italy and bring his army across the Alps, to arrest the progress of Prince Schwartzenberg at the head of the Austrians, had disobeyed the order, in the hope of preserving the crown of Italy for himself, notwithstanding the fall of the Emperor. General Vaudey admits that Prince Eugene did evacuate Italy, but he says that before there was time to act upon it, Napoleon, elated by the victories of Montmirail and Champaubert, sent counter-orders, of which General Vaudey, then an Aide-de-Camp of Prince Eugene, was himself the bearer, directing the Prince to hold his position in Italy, as long as he could, and to defend it inch by inch. The article also contains letters from Prince Eugene and his wife, showing that he had indignantly rejected advances made to him by Austria through the Prince de Taxis, with the view of inducing him to barter his allegiance to the Emperor for the title of King of Italy.

AMERICAN SLAVERY.—An interesting meeting took place at Paris last week. The French Protestant clergymen, with the elders and deacons of all the Protestant churches, have come together to prepare a "grand, but severe remonstrance" to the Protestant shareholders of the United States. The address, which has been extensively signed, asserts that Protestantism has been charged with its toleration of slavery, and consures the American Protestants to wipe out this reproach.

A NEW SECT.—At Philadelphia a woman named Anna Meister was arrested on the complaint of several persons on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences. Anna Meister, like Miller and Joe Smith, is the founder of a new society and faith, the doctrines of which are a thousand times more absurd and ridiculous than were promulgated by either of the two worthies named above. She announces herself to be the "Daughter of God and the Holy Ghost and the Sister of Christ," and with these pretensions she has succeeded in raise a society numbering about two hundred women, all Germans (no men admitted in this City of Brotherly Love, where the people are supposed to be fully enlightened in the principles of the Bible and Christianity. —New York Tribune.

THE MEDICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.

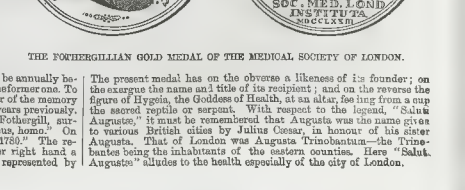
On Monday last the eighty-fourth anniversary meeting of this society was held at Willis's Rooms. Dr. Chowne, president, in the chair. The annual oration was delivered by Mr. Wm. Adams, after which the society's silver medal was presented to Dr. Smith, upon his retirement from the office of secretary; and the Fothergillian gold medal awarded to Mr Edwin Canton, F.R.C.S., surgeon to the Charing-cross Hospital, as the successful competitor, for his essay "On the Diseases and Injuries of the Spine—their Pathology and Treatment."

The Medical Society of London is the oldest of the medical societies in the metropolis—with the exception, probably, of the Physical of Guy's Hospital—and was instituted May 19th, 1773. The first meetings were held in the house of Dr J. C. Lettsom, and the number of members then limited to thirty physicians, thirty surgeons, and thirty apothecaries. A house was afterwards rented by the society, in 1779, in Crane-court, Fleet-street; and subsequently one was purchased in Bolt-court, by Dr. Lettsom, in which the meetings continued to be held until a few years since, when the society amalgamated with the Westminster Medical.

On the 14th Sept., 1773, a gold medal, of the value of ten guineas, was instituted by the society to be awarded every two years to the author of the best essay on a subject proposed by the Council. Neither of the first essays sent in was deemed sufficiently meritorious to be deserving of the prize; and it does not appear, from the records of the society, that the medal was ever, at any subsequent period, awarded. It is a curious circumstance that one of the abovementioned essays was written in Latin by a Dutch lady, in praise of a certain nostrum for the cure of all varieties of fever.

In June, 1784, Dr. Lettsom placed at the disposal of the society a gold medal, of the value of ten guineas, to be annually bestowed upon a candidate under the same regulations as the former one. To this medal he gave the name of Fothergillian, in honour of the memory of his friend, Dr. John Fothergill, who had died four years previously. On the obverse of this medal was the likeness of Fothergill, surrounded by the legend—"Fothergillius, medicus, amicus, homo." On the exergue was—"Nat. Mart. 8, 1712. Ob. Dec. 26, 1780." The reverse represented the figure of Hygeia, holding in her right hand a wreath to crown the successful candidate, who is represented by Æsculapius. The surrounding legend was "Don. Soc. Med. Lond. an. Sal. 1773 instit." The first award of this medal was to Dr. Falconer, of Bath, on February 28, 1787. The contingency of Dr. Lettsom's gift ceased in 1814, when the death of Dr Anthony Fothergill put the society in possession of an annuity of five hundred pounds which that physician had left to it in trust, "the interest of which, it is stated in the deed, is to be laid out in gold medals or other honorary premia for promoting medical knowledge, or other useful arts." Dr. A. Fothergill likewise left to each of the following, and for the same purpose, a similar sum: The Royal Humane Society, the Physical Society of Guy's Hospital, and the Society of Useful Arts, Adelphi.



THE FOTHERGILLIAN GOLD MEDAL OF THE MEDICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.

The present medal has on the obverse a likeness of its founder; on the exergue the name and title of its recipient; and on the reverse the figure of Hygeia, the Goddess of Health, at an altar, feeding from a cup the sacred reptile or serpent. With respect to the legend, "Saluti Augustæ," it must be remembered that Augusta was the name given to various British cities by Julius Cæsar, in honour of his sister Augusta. That of London was Augusta Trinobantium—the Trinobantes being the inhabitants of the eastern counties. Here "Saluti Augustæ" alludes to the health especially of the city of London.

REAL ALPINE KID GLOVES!!!
First Delivery of all the New and Brilliant Colours for Spring, in every size, with the Registered VICTORIA BANDALETTE FASTENING ATTACHED, Complete.
ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE PER PAIR.
The Best Trimmed and Most Durable Glove to [illegible] at Any Price!!!!
Address, RUDKIN & OWEN, 77 and 78, Old-street, London, [illegible] of the
[illegible]
N.B. Sample Pairs forwarded for two extra stamps

THE NEW SPRING SILKS
AT BUMBELL and OWEN'S
PANTHEON HALL OF COMMERCE.
The [illegible] } Twelve Yards for
The Rich Broché Silks .. .. .. } £1 15s. 6d.,
The Millerain Checks .. .. .. } Widest Width
The Grosgrain Bar Glaces .. .. }
The Rich Broché Silks .. .. .. } Twelve Yards for
The Gros d'Ecosses .. .. .. } £2 12s. 6d.
The Gros des Indes .. .. .. } Widest Width.
The Pearl Bar Silks .. .. .. }
The Gros Royal Corded Glaces .. }
The Janzer Coloured Silks .. .. } Fourteen Yards.
The Broché Flounced Silks .. .. } From £2 12s. 6
The Chené Figured Silks .. .. } to £4 Guineas
The Satin Bar Flounced Silks .. } the Dress.
[illegible]
N.B. The above are now selected in the Purest Silk, and produced to all the New and Brilliant Colours for the Spring Fashions
Address, Bumbell and Owen, 77 and 78, Oxford-street, London.

PARIS GLOVE WAREHOUSE.
221, Regent-street.
The Best
[illegible]
[illegible]
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

GRENOBLE GLOVES.
Very best qualities
Only one Quality per Dozen,
Lad[illegible] or Gentleman's
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

VERY BEST PARIS KID GLOVES
[illegible]
7s. 9d. per Pair,
Six for 1l. 8s.
[illegible]
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

LAST YEAR'S MUSLINS
At Half the original Cost.
Patterns Free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

FRENCH BAREGES, BALZARINES,
Printed Llenas,
Swiss Cambrics, &c.,
Half Price.
Patterns free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street.

MOURNING MUSLINS, BAREGES,
BALZARINES &c.
The Cheapest Lot in the Kingdom
Patterns Free.
BAKER and CRISP 221, Regent-street

FLOUNCED MUSLINS,
Also in A
The Cheapest ever Imported
Patterns Free
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent street.

FINE FRENCH CAMBRIC
HANDKE[illegible]
[illegible]
Hemmed [illegible] Half Dozen
[illegible]
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent street

1500 BLACK SILK APRONS, with C[illegible]
[illegible]
BAKER and CRISP, 221, Regent-street, London.

GREAT SALE.—HOWES and HART,
60, Fleet-street.—During forty years the firm of Howes and [illegible] have been [illegible] the most fashionable and [illegible] Their most noteworthy Continental productions in Muslins, Silks, Dresses, &c., &c., William Hart, for some time sole proprietor of the Business, returns his best thanks for past favours, and respectfully announces to the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that he is leaving the trade, and is now SELLING OFF the whole of his valuable STOCK at a great reduction from the original prices.—60, Fleet-street. Business hours from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m

STAYS SUPERSEDED.—MARTIN'S
ELASTIC BODICE is without whalebone or busks for [illegible] giving a good support and [illegible] to the figure.—MARTIN'S [illegible] Wells-street, Oxford-street, and Crystal Palace [illegible]

See "London Gazette," 20th February, 1857.
DISSOLUTION of the PARTNERSHIP of SPENCE and BUCHANAN, and SALE of the ENTIRE STOCK
In consequence of the retirement of Mr. Buchanan, the whole of the valuable STOCK is NOW ON SALE
Silks [illegible] Dresses
Shawls [illegible] Mantles
Mantles and Cloaks [illegible] Fancy Dresses
Fancy Dresses [illegible] Mercers
Mercers [illegible] Furs
Furs [illegible] Haberdashery, &c.
All purchased previous to the late great advance
In addition to the above are 3,000 Pieces of Silks, Shawls, Fancy Dresses, and Robes, amounting to 21,579 14s. 8d., bought during the last three months at Job Prices, and now repurchased by JAMES SPENCE and CO. at a large Discount from the original cost price, and are marked at prices that must be appreciated by customers, and will warrant the recommendation of the stock to the special and immediate attention of the [illegible]
The [illegible] premises were closed on the 26th, 27th, and 28th Feb., during which time the Proprietors were engaged in arranging the Stock and all the Goods in the Show-rooms, prior will be charged to all.
Hours of business during the sale from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.
JAMES SPENCE and CO.
77 and 78, St. Paul's Churchyard, London

MUSLINS of the PAST SEASON.
The whole of the Stock of
THE PARISIAN CHEAP COMPANY
to be cleared out at ridiculous prices for such goods.
Patterns Free—16 OXFORD-STREET.

EMBROIDERED CHRISTIAN NAMES.—
[illegible] Ladies [illegible] Initials [illegible] Name [illegible] Marked with the new Shaded Letter. Price 1s. 9d. by post 14 stamps; 3s 6d the half dozen, by post 28. 3d. FRENCH MUSLIN COMPANY, 16, OXFORD-STREET

SPRING SILKS at REDUCED PRICES.
Twenty Thousand Pounds' worth of the above goods are now being offered for sale by BEECH and BERRALL, Beehive, 63 and 64, Edgware-road, London, at the following reduced prices, comprising all that is elegant and useful in Striped, Checked, Bespoke, and Plain Coloured Silks, at 25s. 6d., 29s. 6d., 33s. 6d., and 37s. 6d. the Full Dress
1800 RICH SILK ROBES,
for two or three flounces, suited to Promenade, Dinner, or Evening Costume, at 63s. 6d., 84s. 6d., 105s. 6d., to 5 guineas, full length, for body and trimming included (great bargains).
N.B.—Patterns for inspection, postage-free to any part.

ELEGANT FOREIGN FLOUNCED
[illegible] Robes, [illegible] Fancy Dresses, now on sale at BEECH and BERRALL'S, The Bee Hive, 63 and 64, Edgware-road, London, at the following reduced prices, 10s. 6d., 21s. 6d., 25s. 6d., 29s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. (Skirts sufficient for Trimming, and Body included).—N.B. Patterns for inspection, postage-free to any part.

LADIES' JACKETS, MARCELLA, TWILL, NAPNOOK, or CAMBRIC, with Designs marked on them for Embroidery or Braiding, and every description of Embroidery or Braiding, better material and cheaper than any other House in London, at MRS WILCOCKSON'S,
41, Goodge-street, W
A list of prices sent free by post. A Collar for five stamps.
The Trade supplied.

TO LADIES.—The SHREWSBURY
WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, sold by the Maker, JAMES PHILLIPS, Shrewsbury. Gentlemen's Overcoats and Capes of the same material. Patterns of materials and list of prices sent post-free.

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send to [illegible] HERALDIC OFFICE
Name and County. No fee for search. Sketch, 5s. 6d., or Stamps. H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

LINCOLN'S INN HERALDIC OFFICE,
First and only Established Office in London, and during a series of years have Patronised, 50, chief, Emmanuel, &c., Arms of most of the Nobility and Gentry. H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn. GRANTS of ARMS Furnished, Copied, &c.

STUDIO and LIBRARY, Open 10 to 4 daily.
MONUMENTAL BRASSES.
Ecclesiastic Seals, Hatchments, &c. Arms Painted and Quartered.
H. SALT, Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

GENTLEMEN having SKETCHES, give them to persons who do not engrave them, to the Laws of Heraldry therefore the Heraldic Office now executes them. Book-plate Arms, 21s.; Crest on Seals, 8s.; 9s. 6d.
H. SALT, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

HERALDIC SIGNET CREST RING.—
Solid Gold, Engraved, Cups, or Cornelia, with Crest Engraved, £1 18s.; or Post-office Order. Presentation Seals, &c
H. SALT, Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

HERALDIC ENGRAVING.—Book Plate, [illegible] Crest on Seal or Ring, 5s. 6d.; on Die, [illegible] Arms Engraved from with Crest 12s. 16s. Carriage-free for stamps. Documentary and Offices. Seals.—Mr CULLIN, Royal Heraldic Office, 8, Long-acre (one door from St. Martin's-lane). Six heraldic engravers permanently employed.

ROYAL HERALDIC OFFICE and [illegible] INSTITUTE OF GREAT BRITAIN and [illegible]
[illegible] Seals, Dies, Rings, Brasses, Monuments, &c.
[illegible] Arms Painted and Quartered.
[illegible] Search and Information.
[illegible] Sketch and Description, 2s. 6d.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Vellum, Card, or Canvas, 10s. 6d.
[illegible] Crest on Seal or Ring, 7s. 6d.
[illegible] Arms Painted and Emblazoned for Painters, 5s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Carriage Panels, 21s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Silk Banners, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Vellum, Address, &c., 10s. 6d.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Gateway, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Hatchment, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Window, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Pedigree, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Shield, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Banner, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Flag, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Pennon, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Scroll, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Ribbon, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Badge, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Medal, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Coin, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Seal, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Ring, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Die, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Stamp, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Book, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Pamphlet, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Letter, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Envelope, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Card, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Paper, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Parchment, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Vellum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Canvas, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Silk, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Satin, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Velvet, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Leather, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Wood, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Metal, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Glass, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Porcelain, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Earthenware, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Stoneware, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Terracotta, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Majolica, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Faience, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Delft, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Wedgwood, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Parian, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Biscuit, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Bisque, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Ormolu, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Gilt, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Silver, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Gold, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Platinum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Iridium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Osmium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Rhodium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Ruthenium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Palladium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Mercury, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Tin, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Lead, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Zinc, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Antimony, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Bismuth, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Arsenic, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Cobalt, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Nickel, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Manganese, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Chromium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Molybdenum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Tungsten, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Uranium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Titanium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Tantalum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Niobium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Pelopium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Cerium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Lanthanum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Didymium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Yttrium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Erbium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Terbium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Ytterbium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Scandium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Thorium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Zirconium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Glucinum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Aluminium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Magnesium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Calcium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Strontium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Barium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Lithium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Sodium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Potassium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Ammonium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Hydrogen, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Oxygen, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Nitrogen, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Chlorine, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Bromine, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Iodine, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Fluorine, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Boron, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Silicon, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Carbon, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Phosphorus, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Sulphur, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Selenium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Tellurium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Chromium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Molybdenum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Tungsten, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Uranium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Titanium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Tantalum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Niobium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Pelopium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Cerium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Lanthanum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Didymium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Yttrium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Erbium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Terbium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Ytterbium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Scandium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Thorium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Zirconium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Glucinum, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Aluminium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Magnesium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Calcium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Strontium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Barium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Lithium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Sodium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Potassium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Ammonium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Hydrogen, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Oxygen, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Nitrogen, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Chlorine, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Bromine, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Iodine, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Fluorine, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Boron, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Silicon, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Carbon, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Phosphorus, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Sulphur, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Selenium, 42s.
[illegible] Arms Painted on Tellurium, 42s.

MODERATOR LAMPS.—The simplicity, [illegible] solidity, and graceful finish of the mechanism of T. FRARCE and SON'S LAMPS render them unrivalled by any other manufactory in this or any other kind, and have gained for them so general a preference. The patterns are equally various and novel, and with great originality combine every style that is beautiful and pure in taste. Thomas Pearce and Son, 23, Ludgate-hill, E.C., Direct Importers of only the finest Oil.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the BEST.—
Moderator Lamps, from 5s. 6d. each. All who require a really good Moderator Lamp should inspect Gardners' neat and recherché collection, which will be found unequalled, consisting of several thousand patterns. The show-rooms, the largest in London, extend the entire length of Tradescant's passage into Tradescant-street.—Gardners (by appointment to her Majesty), 453 and 454, Strand, Charing-cross, and 2 and 3, Tradescant-street, Established 1 years.

CHUBB'S FIRE-PROOF SAFES are constructed of strong Wrought Iron, and the Detector Locks which secure them are gunpowder-proof. Detector Locks for every purpose. Street door Latches, Cash and Deed Boxes. Full Illustrated price-lists sent on application.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

HALL'S PATENT CABINET MANGLE
[illegible] SUPERSEDES ALL OTHERS.—Price Drawings, Testimonials, &c., post-free, to any address from WOODS, Suffolk Iron Works, Stowmarket.

COACHMAKER
BY APPOINTMENT TO HER IMPERIAL FAMILY OF FRANCE.
T. R. STREET begs with confidence to submit to the various IMPROVEMENTS in MODERN CARRIAGES [illegible] in the Crystal Palace and his Manufactory, Nottingham) to the Manufactures. Every style, from the late-gotten Basket to the handsome and luxurious Par-horse Carriage made on puma combining the taste and mechanical advantages of the English and American builds with substantial workmanship and best materials Of the two First-Class Prize Medals awarded by the International Jury of the late Paris Exhibition Mr. S. had the high honour of [illegible] one, the latter from London obtaining the choice. Mr. S. will, therefore, endeavour in showing visitors to Nottingham over his [illegible] to explain to them the improvements, economy and many conveniences to assist skilled labour, and thus lessen the cost of production.
Mr. Street, having a Covered Van of his own on the railways, will engage to deliver any new carriage of upwards of 200 value at half the regular railway charges.
Drawings, Estimates, and every information forwarded on application from Foreign and foreign orders executed on liberal terms
T. R. STREET, Coachmaker, Nottingham. Established 1736

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY (Limited).
For Establishing Steam Navigation on the Rivers of India
Capital—£250,000, in 25,000 Shares of £10 each
Deposit, 10s. per share
TRUSTEES.
James Alan, Esq., Managing Director of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company
W. Wilberforce Bird, Esq., late Deputy-Governor of Bengal
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
[illegible] W. Wilberforce Bird, Esq., late Deputy-Governor of Bengal
[illegible] Lieut.-Colonel Grimes, H.E.I.C.S., Ampthill Square, London
[illegible] Thomas Bland, Esq., London, late of Messrs. John Bourne and Co., Glasgow and Liverpool
John Brown, Esq., London, of Messrs. M'Nichol and Brown, Calcutta
Captain Cotton, R.N., Albert House, Whitehouse, Salop
Lieut.-Colonel Fagan, H.E.I.C.S., Clifton Lodge, Fulham
James Kennedy, Esq., late of Messrs. Bury, Curtis, and Kennedy, Liverpool
Sir John Leith
[illegible] Richard T. Rowley, 47, Berkley-square, London
[illegible] Messrs. Wm. Watson and Sons, Solicitors, 6, Old Jewry, London
[illegible] Henry H. Hill, Esq., 2, Bank-buildings, London
[illegible] J. S. Walker, Esq.
[illegible] London
[illegible] ...ions to public support on two plain considerations. They are these:—1st. The most [illegible] navigation in India are realising large profits; and 2nd, That the wants [illegible] of India are such, that if properly worked to which it has the right, be able to carry three or four times the quantity of cargo that can be carried by the steamers at present employed. Cheap conveyance is necessary to India to enable the produce of the interior to reach the coast. Of all known means of conveyance, the cheapest is conveyance by water; and railways even when made, cannot supersede the necessity of navigating the great rivers which will still remain the great arteries of commerce as has been found to be the case of America, and where experience has shewn that railways and river conveyance exist instead of opposing one another. The services of vessels of any extent—they draw (though the richest parts of the country) and they only require that vessels should be established upon them which shall be capable of carry ing a large cargo on a light draught of water to ensure rapidity, and economy, which is so vital in commercial undertakings.
The calls will not exceed £5 per share every three months, and [illegible] at the rate of five per cent per annum will be allowed on all on a during commencement, and also on those paid in advance.
Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained from J. S. Walker, Esq., Shrewsbury, 22, Alexander-street, Bayswater, and at the Offices of the Company, 2, Bank-buildings, London, of the Secretary at the Offices of the Company.
By order of the Board.
W. WILBERFORCE BIRD, Chairman
JOHN BOURNE, Managing Director

KENNINGTON AGRICULTURAL and CHEMICAL COLLEGE, Lower Kennington-lane, near London
[illegible] SIR T. G. S., F.C.S., &c.
Youths intending to become Practical Agriculturists, Chemical [illegible] Manufacturers, or Managers of Mining Property, will find [illegible] of GOLD MATHS.—SIDE FOR LADIES
Patent Lever Watch, with the improvements, &c., the detached escapement, jewelled in four holes, hard enamel dial, and maintaining power to continue going while being wound in four holes, and capped ... ... £4 14 6
Ditto, the finest quality, with the improved regulator ... 6 6 0
Ditto, the finest quality, with the improved regulator ... 8 8 0
All warranted to be made by the gold cases ... 10s. 6d. extra
Elcher of the Silver Watches in hunting cases, 10s. 6d. extra
GOLD WATCHES.—SIDE FOR LADIES
Patent Lever Watch, with ornamented gold dial, the movements with the improved detached escapement, maintaining power, jewelled ... ... ... 11 11 0
Ditto, with richly engraved cases, jewelled in four holes, hard enamel dials, and maintaining power ... ... 13 13 0
Ditto, with very strong cases, and jewelled in four holes ... 14 14 0
GOLD WATCHES.—GENTLEMEN'S
Patent Lever Watch, with the latest improvements, detached escapement, jewelled in four holes, hard enamel dials, and maintaining power ... ... ... 10 10 0
Ditto, with richly engraved cases ... ... ... 12 12 0
Ditto, in silver cases, improved regulator, and capped ... 17 17 0
Ditto, in silver cases, and gold bassine ... ... 17 17 0
All Watches warranted to keep time to an entire second, and sent free to any part of Great Britain or Ireland, upon receipt of a remittance of the amount [illegible] Watches executed by the most eminent makers.

SILVER PLATE, New and Secondhand.—
A Complete Catalogue, with Engravings, may be had gratis, or sent free, post-free on application or by letter.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Goldsmiths (opposite the Bank of England), 11 and 12, Cornhill, London

DINNER, DESSERT, and TEA SERVICES.
A large variety of New and good Patterns. Best quality, superior taste, and very moderate prices. Also, very description of Cut Table Glass, equally advantageous.
THOMAS PEARCE and SON, 23, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE.
[illegible] HOUSE,
[illegible] Hill, [illegible]

PANKLIBANON FURNISHING IRON-
MONGERY.—These three houses are [illegible] of elegant and rich Electro-Plated Goods, Moderator Lamps, Chandeliers, Urns, Baths, Fashionable Stoves, Fenders, Fire-irons, Hardware, and General Furnishing Ironmongery, with the lowest possible prices marked in plain figures, which will be found one fourth less than any other house in the trade. Purchasers, strong and well made, to 6d each nearly changed to. 6d. The best Colza Oil, 4s. 6d. per gallon.—56, and Bazaar, Baker-street.

FURNISH YOUR HOUSE with the BEST
ARTICLES they are the CHEAPEST in the end.—DEANE, DRAY, and CO.'S Priced Furnishing Lists may be had gratuitously on application, or forwarded by post, free. This list embraces the leading articles from all the various departments of this extensive establishment, and is arranged to [illegible] purchasers in the selection of [illegible] Cutlery, Electro-plate, Lamps, Baths, Bedsteads and Bedding, Britannia Metal, Copper, Tin, and Iron Goods, Turnery, Brushes, Fenders, Fire-irons, Stoves, Kitchen Ranges, Culinary Utensils, Gasaliers, Tea Trays, Japanned Goods, Table Cutlery, Marble Chimney Pieces, Kitchen Furniture, &c., &c.—DEANE, DRAY, and CO., The Monument, London Bridge.

PAPERHANGINGS and DECORATIONS.
—[illegible] Every description, Portland-street, Oxford-street, the Public and the Trade are supplied with the largest and cheapest Stock in the Kingdom, commencing at 2d. per piece of 12 yards. N.B. Estimates given for House Painting, Decorating, &c.

D. HULETT and CO., Manufacturers of
GAS CHANDELIERS, Hall Lanterns, Glass Lustres, and every description of Gas Fittings. A large assortment of the Newest Designs always on show. Every article marked in plain figures. Patentees of the Mercurial Gas Regulator.—55 and 56, High Holborn

MODERATOR LAMPS.—The simplicity, [illegible] solidity, and graceful finish of the mechanism of T. FRARCE and SON'S LAMPS render them unrivalled by any other manufactory in this or any other kind, and have gained for them so general a preference. The patterns are equally various and novel, and with great originality combine every style that is beautiful and pure in taste. Thomas Pearce and Son, 23, Ludgate-hill, E.C., Direct Importers of only the finest Oil.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the BEST.—
Moderator Lamps, from 5s. 6d. each. All who require a really good Moderator Lamp should inspect Gardners' neat and recherché collection, which will be found unequalled, consisting of several thousand patterns. The show-rooms, the largest in London, extend the entire length of Tradescant's passage into Tradescant-street.—Gardners (by appointment to her Majesty), 453 and 454, Strand, Charing-cross, and 2 and 3, Tradescant-street, Established 1 years.

CHUBB'S FIRE-PROOF SAFES are constructed of strong Wrought Iron, and the Detector Locks which secure them are gunpowder-proof. Detector Locks for every purpose. Street door Latches, Cash and Deed Boxes. Full Illustrated price-lists sent on application.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

HALL'S PATENT CABINET MANGLE
[illegible] SUPERSEDES ALL OTHERS.—Price Drawings, Testimonials, &c., post-free, to any address from WOODS, Suffolk Iron Works, Stowmarket.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

[illegible] Edition, with Additions by Professor Henfrey [illegible] with AN ANALYSIS OF THE BRITISH FERNS and their ALLIES. By G. W. FRANCIS, F.L.S. With 8 Engravings. Fifth Edition, Revised by ARTHUR HENFREY, F.R.S., F.L.S., &c., Professor of Botany, King's College, London, and Lecturer on Botany at St. George's Hospital. with an additional Plate of the Latest Discovery
"We highly recommend it to all desirous of becoming acquainted with the interesting race of plants."—Horticultural Gazette.
The clear and comprehensive manual of Mr. Francis"—Quarterly Review, Jan., 1857.
London: BERGER, MARSHALL, and Co., Stationers' Hall court

MARRIED LIFE, Its Duties, Trials, and Joys. By the Rev. W. B. MACKENZIE, M.A.
Thousand. 18mo, cloth, 1s. 6d.; white silk, 2s. 6d.
JACKSON, and HALLIDAY, 54, Fleet-street.

DWELLINGS of the RIGHTEOUS. By the Rev. W. B. MACKENZIE, M.A.
Third Thousand. 18mo, cloth, price 1s. 6d
JACKSON, and HALLIDAY, 54, Fleet street

MARRIED LIFE and DWELLINGS of the RIGHTEOUS. By the Rev. W. B. MACKENZIE, M.A
[illegible] and HALLIDAY, 54, Fleet street

With New Illustrations, through [illegible] price 1s.
MINISTERING CHILDREN: a Tale dedicated to Childhood. By a CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER.
JACKSON, and HALLIDAY, 54, Fleet-street.

Worth Notice.—What has always been wanted is now published.
Sixteenth Thousand. Price 1s., free by post.
THE DICTIONARY APPENDIX, with upwards of 7000 Words not found in the Dictionary, comprising the Participles of the Verbs, which puzzle all writers. No person that writes a letter should be without the work
J. F. SHAW, 36, Paternoster-row.

USEFUL BOOKS, INDISPENSABLE TO ALL.
Eighth Thousand, price 1s., or by post.
INDISPENSABLE.—LIVE and LEARN.
A Guide for all who wish to speak and write correctly. "Live and Learn is an excellent book. We look upon it as really indispensable. We advise our readers to imitate our example, procure the book, and sell it not at any price."—Edinburgh Chronicle.
THE NEWSPAPER and GENERAL READER'S COMPANION; being a familiar explanation of nearly 600 classical and foreign words, phrases, and quotations, of constant recurrence in newspapers and periodicals, and in the literature of the day. By the Author of "Live and Learn." Fifth Edition, post free.
MISTAKES in DAILY CONVERSATION. How to Spell, Write, and Pronounce them Correctly. Old and young, educated and uneducated, may consult this little work with advantage. Seventh Edition. Price 6d.; by post, 7d.
HINTS FOR LEARNERS.—Price 1s., cloth, free by post.
The RIGHT WAY of LEARNING FRENCH CORRECTLY; pointing out the difficulties which puzzle the beginner and the finished. Tenth Thousand, revised, and greatly enlarged.
THE RIGHT WORD in the RIGHT PLACE.—No lady correspondent, no public speaker, no member of youth, nor man of business should delay procuring this indispensable help to [illegible] correct writing and speaking. Price 6d.; by post, 7d.
London: J. F. SHAW, Southampton-row and Paternoster-row.

Just ready, the New American Novel,
LENA RIVERS.
By
MARY J. HOLMES
Royal 18mo, crimson cloth, 1s. 6d.
London: GOTTO'S Limited, 24, Holles-st.
MILNER and SOWERBY, Halifax, and all Booksellers.

OXFORD in the STEREOSCOPE.—A NOVEL
[illegible] to Wales and the [illegible] Oxford, [illegible] Stereoscopic Views of Oxford, by [illegible] on the Collodion Process, and [illegible] Stereoscopic Company of 54, Cornhill, and 313, Regent-street, London News. Price of the series of two [illegible] in a portfolio, 2s. each slide.
Also, just published
FORTY PHOTOGRAPHIC VIEWS of OXFORD.
By F. H. DELAMOTTE. (With the Times of Oct. 15th, 1856.—Price 42s. to be set in a portfolio, or 5s. each view. A list of [illegible] forwarded on application.
Any of the above sent, carriage-free, on receipt of a cheque or post-office order. The trade supplied by Sykes and Son.

AMERICAN CATALOGUE; or, English
Guide to American Literature: containing the principal Works published in America from 1820 to 1855 [illegible] Titles, Size, Date of Publication, and London Agent. In one thick [illegible] 6d. each, post free; or the Catalogue complete, with [illegible] 12s.
Orders, payable to LEIGHTON, BELL, and ROOKE, 13, Shoe-lane, London. The only Binders authorised by the Proprietors

50,000 BIBLES, Prayer books, Church
Services, and elegantly-bound Books for Presents, at FIELD'S GREAT BIBLE WAREHOUSE, 65, Regent-quadrant (corner of Air-street), Piccadilly. Established A.D. 1800, and the only House for the celebrated Guinea Easel, Bible and Hall-Quadrant Stereoscope. Catalogues gratis. The Trade supplied.

WEDDING CARDS, Enamelled Envelopes
stamped in silver, with arms, crest, or flowers. "At Home," and breakfast invitations in the newest style. Ball and dance tablets. Card-plate elegantly engraved, and 100 superfine cards printed, for 4s. 6d.—Observe, at HENRY RODRIGUES', 21, Piccadilly, London.

NO CHARGE for STAMPING PAPER and
ENVELOPES with Crests, Monograms, or Addresses.—HENRY RODRIGUES' Cream laid Adhesive Envelopes, 4d per [illegible] Note, full-size, five colours for 4d.; thick Bristol, the richest Enamel, 1s.; Foolscap, 2s. per ream; Sermon Paper, 4s 6d. All kinds of Stationery equally cheap, at H. RODRIGUES', 21, Piccadilly, London

EVERY COUNTRY RESIDENT should send six Stamps to PARKINS and GOTTO 25, Oxford-street, for their Sample Packet of STATIONERY, post-free. No charge for Embossing Crests, Initials, or Address. Country parcels over 20s. carriage-free.

25,000 BIBLES, Prayer-Books, and Church
Church Services, in every description of binding and type, being the cheapest, largest, and best-bound stock in the Kingdom, at PARKINS and GOTTO'S, 24 and 25, Oxford-street

PARKINS and GOTTO have opened Three large Show-rooms for the display of their Goods, and relievers Articles for Birthday and Wedding Presents, from 2s. 6d. to 40 guineas (a saving of 6s in the pound).
Writing Cases, fitted, from 2s. 6d. Scales and Pens Weights
Dressing Cases, from 5s. 6d. Inkstands, from 6d
Dressing Bags, from 5s. 6d. Envelope Cases, from 6d
Reticules and Purses, from 1s. 6d. Despatch Boxes, from 5s
Writing and Dressing Cases combined, from 21s. Scent Cases
Work Boxes and Tables. Envelopes and Note Paper
Gentlemen's Travelling Dressing Cases, fitted, 15s. 6d. Blotting Cases
Ladies' Dressing Cases, fitted, 15s. 6d. Bibles, in all sizes and bindings Pocket Books, Letter Cases, and Purses. Inkstands, Glass, Ivory, &c.
Where is [illegible] Envelope Cases
Key Boxes and Jewel Cases. Desks
Purse Mounted with Tablets. Book Slides and Rules
Despatch Boxes, from 8s Scent Cases
PARKINS and GOTTO, Manufacturers, 24 and 25, Oxford-street

FREE TRADE in all BOOKS, Music, &c.;
2d. discount in the 1s. of all books, magazines, periodicals, quarterly reviews, almanacks, pocket-books, duties [illegible] The rate of postage is 2d. for each half-pound; 6d. will [illegible] of music, post-free. Buyers of the above will find it a saving in the end even after paying the postage or carriage [illegible] Country and foreign [illegible] parts of the United Kingdom [illegible] and [illegible] post free. Remittances [illegible] Buyers are requested [illegible] Postal Order [illegible] Publishers—S and [illegible] Cornhill, 4 [illegible] buildings, back of the Bank of England, London E.C. Copy the address

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Now ready, at all the libraries, in 3 vols.,

THE DAYS OF MY LIFE. By the Author of "Margaret Maitland," &c.

"The author writes with her usual fine capacity for the picturesque, her preference for simplicity, her invariable good sense, good feeling, and good taste. No part of the narrative is uninteresting."—Athenæum.

MARRIED for LOVE. By the author of "Cousin Geoffrey."

THE SECOND WIFE

HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers (Successors to Henry Colburn).

New and Cheaper Edition (at the rate of 3s. 6d. per volume), in 10 Vols., fcp. 21 15s., cloth lettered,

MISS EDGEWORTH'S NOVELS and TALES: Containing all that was in the former edition of 15 volumes, and now first including her last novel, "Helen," embellished with Engravings on Steel by Goodall, Engleheart, J. W. Cook, Rolls, and other eminent Engravers, from Paintings by Harvey.

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and CO.; WHITTAKER and CO.; E. Hodgson; Westbourne and Co.; H. G. Bohn; Smith, Elder, and Co.; Houlston and Co.; J. Bain; H. Renshaw; Tegg and Co.; Routledge and Co.; C. Templeman, Willis and Sotheran; and G. and J. Robinson, Liverpool.

COMPLETION OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

On the 31st inst., price 3d. (or, post-free, 4d.), No. XIV. of A MANUAL of BRITISH BUTTERFLIES and MOTHS. By H. T. STAINTON, Author of "June: a Book for the Country in Summer Time."

London: JOHN VAN VOORST, 1 Paternoster-row; and to be had of all Booksellers and News-agents

This day is published, price One Shilling,

THE NEW PALACES of ADMINISTRATION. By a CAMBRIDGE MAN.

Cambridge: MACMILLAN and CO. London: Bell and Daldy, 186, Fleet-street.

Now ready, price 2s. 6d., cloth, gilt edges,

WHO'S WHO in 1857. "As various in its contents as an official Directory, the Blue-book, and the Court Guide."—Chronicle. "The most useful publication of its class extant."—Observer. "Most useful to all officials and men of business."—Bell's Life. "One of the indispensables for the office and library table."—Sunday Times.—BAILLY, BUTTERS, London.

This day, two vols. 8vo, with Map and Illustrations, 28s.

THE KINGDOM and PEOPLE of SIAM. By Sir JOHN BOWRING, F.R.S., her Majesty's Plenipotentiary in China.

London: JOHN W. PARKER and SON, West Strand

Just published, price 7s. 6d.,

AUSTRALIAN ESSAYS on Subjects Political, Moral, and Religious. By JAMES NORTON, Esq., Sen., of Hawkie, in the county of Cumberland, New South Wales, Member of the Legislative Council of New South Wales

London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, LONGMANS, and ROBERTS.

Just published, price 1s. 6d.,

"I TOO;" and OTHER POEMS. By I. BERLINER. Cheap Edition. Fcap. 8vo cloth, 1s. 6d. Free by post on receipt of the amount in stamps.

London: KENDLE and SON, 437, Oxford-street; and all Booksellers.

Cr. 8vo, cloth, price 2s. 6d.; post-free, 2s. 10d.; with Map, 6d. extra,

LONDON AS IT IS TO-DAY; WHERE TO GO AND WHAT TO SEE; with Two Hundred Engravings.

London: H. G. CLARKE and Co., 252, Strand.

Price 6d. each, post-free, to be had everywhere,

FRENCH in a FORTNIGHT WITHOUT a MASTER. "Will accomplish more than it professes."—Illustrated Magazine.

FIVE HUNDRED FRENCH PHRASES, for all who aspire to speak French. GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row, London.

THE following STANDARD WORKS to be had at the NASSAU STEAM PRESS, 66, St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross:—

In cloth, 1s.; by post, 1s. 2d.: coloured throughout, 2s.; by post, 2s. 8d.,

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK. Upwards of a quarter of a million of this book have been sold. Illustrated by 175 beautiful Woodcuts, the most alluring introduction to learning ever published.

In cloth, 6d.; by post, 7d. 6d.,

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON READING-BOOK. Lessons of the most instructive and amusing character, selected from the best authors, beautifully illustrated with 250 Engravings

Cloth, gilt, 2s. 6d.; by post, 2s. 8d.,

MAUNDER'S LITTLE LEXICON; a Dictionary of the English Language, compendious and comprehensive, containing many thousand more words than Johnson, Ash, or Webster.

Cloth, gilt, 3s. 6d.; by post, 3s. 8d.,

MAUNDER'S LITTLE BIOGRAPHER: a Geographical Dictionary of every known place on the Globe. A Population Table from the latest Returns.

Gilt, 1s. 6d.; by post, 1s. 7d.,

MAUNDER'S LITTLE CLASSIC and CHRONOLOGICAL COMPANION; being a complete Guide to the Study of Mythology and Ancient History.

Gilt, 1s. 6d.; by post, 1s. 7d.,

MAUNDER'S LITTLE GRAMMAR: a Guide to English Grammar; a Dictionary of Synonymes, Examples of Composition, Proverbs, and Aphorisms, in Latin, French, Spanish, Italian, &c.

6d. each; by post, 7d.,

ETIQUETTE. The Complexion. The Teeth. The Hair. The Dress The Dance. The Party. The Visitor. Courtship. The Wedding The Housewife. The Baby.

1s.; by post, 1s. 1d.

The YOUNG CHEMIST; or, Scientific Recreations: 1000 Philosophical, Scientific, and Amusing Experiments, for the Parlour or Drawing-room

Volumes, 4s. and 5s. 6d.; Parts, 6d.,

The HOME CIRCLE. An Illustrated Family Magazine, filled with Amusement and Instruction of every description, especially arranged for the benefit of every member of the household

In cloth, gilt, 3s. 6d.; by post, 3s. 8d.,

The LADIES' OWN BOOK. Copious Instructions in every branch of Ornamental Work, by the most celebrated Lady Professors. Beautifully Illustrated

London: NASSAU STEAM PRESS, 66, St. Martin's-lane.

HUNT ON STAMMERING

Just published, Second Edition, price 5s., by post, 5s. 18d.,

A TREATISE on the CURE of STAMMERING, &c. By JAMES HUNT Ph. D., M.R.S.L., &c. "Unquestionably the most popular book on the subject in the world. It supplies a beautiful and humane system, and in doing so indicates rapidly and accurately the character of the boy, be he said, also the cruelty and inadequacy, of the various systems hitherto in vogue."—Dr. WILSON, M.D. of Impediments of speech. This volume is a really admirable treatise, and no less admirable biography."—Sun, Dec. 6, 1856.

In the press, by the same Author,

A MANUAL of the PHILOSOPHY of VOICE and SPEECH. In 6 Parts.

London: LONGMAN and CO.; by post, from the Author's residence, 6, New Burlington-street, W.

HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC PHYSICIAN. By Drs FULTE and EPPS. 518 pp., 7s. 6d. A Medicine Chest, 55s

Dr. Epps's Domestic Homœopathy, 2s. 6d. A Medicine Case, 42s.

Dr Kelly's Homœopathic Handbook, 2s. A Medicine Case, 20s.

JAMES EPPS, 170, Piccadilly, 213, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury; and 82, Old Broad-street, City

Third Edition, 8vo, 430 pages, 2s. 6d.,

THE WATER CURE: Its Principles and Practice. A Guide in the Preservation of Health and Cure of Chronic Diseases. With 11 narratives. By JAMES WILSON, M.D. "We honestly recommend this work as a trustworthy guide."—Examiner

London: TRUBNER and Co., 60, Paternoster-row

3s. 6d., Post-office order, or 4s postage-stamps, Second Edition,

CORPULENCY and its NEW SELF-DIETARY CURE. A Pamphlet, by A. W. MOORE, M.R.C.S. Brief and intelligible. Sold and sent by Mr. WILLIAM BOLWELL, 41, Yambrook-street, Pimlico, S. W.

A TREATISE on ACACIA CHARCOAL (prepared by Electricity), and the Antiseptic Laws.—Great results from simple means in Cancer, Lupus, Scrofula, and Consumption: Ulcers, Diarrhœa, Spermatorrhœa, Skin Diseases, Indigestion, and many other complaints. Post-free.—W. WARRINGTON EVANS, 19, Bernard-street, Primrose-hill, London.

Second Edition, 6d. post-free,

PAINLESS TOOTH EXTRACTION without CHLOROFORM, by CONCILATION. By J. WHITEMAN WEBB, L.S.A., Surgeon Dentist, 21, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square.—Operations from 10 to 4.

Now ready, Fifth Edition, with cases, price 1s. 6d.; by post, 2s.,

LATERAL CURVATURE of the SPINE; with a new method of treatment for securing its removal. By CHARLES VENNAL, Esq., Surgeon to the Spinal Hospital, London.

London: J. CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street; and all Booksellers.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

HENRI LAURENT'S MARGUERITE POLKA, superbly illustrated in colours, price 3s. "The principal subject is provokingly frank and seductive."—Musical World

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

HENRI LAURENT'S NEW RUSSIAN WALTZ, illustrated with a Portrait of the Emperor. The Alexandra Rosenzeig Valse, price 4s., performed with immense success at the Argyll Rooms

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

HENRI LAURENT'S ARGYLL GALOP superbly illustrated in colours, price 3s. "One of the best galop tunes we have heard for a very long time."—Musical World

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

HENRI LAURENT'S MALAKOFF GALOP, played by the Orchestral Union. Third edition, price 2s. 6d., illustrated.

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street

MISS DOLBY'S NEW SONG. "The Ocean Tree is whispered low and wild." The poetry by LONGFELLOW, the music by DALBE.

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MISS LOUISA VINNING'S NEW SONGS, sung at the Crystal Palace with immense success.—1. "The Syren of the Ball," by Alfred Mellon. 2. "The Rustic Gate," by Frank Mori. Price 2s. 6d. each.

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

SIMS REEVES'S NEW SONG, "Come into the Garden, Maud!" The poetry by ALFRED TENNYSON, the music by M. W. BALFE. Price 2s.

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S "Annie Laurie," brilliant Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S "La Mia Letizia," beautiful Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 2s. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S TROVATORE.—Fantaisie brillante, published this day, uniform with her celebrated fantaisies on La Traviata, price 4s.

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

BALFE'S SERENADE QUADRILLE, on the celebrated Songs by Longfellow and Balfe. Dedicated to Miss Rosa Newton. Price 3s.

BOOSEY and SONS, Musical Library, Holles-street.

BOOSEY and SONS' MUSICAL LIBRARY. —100,000 works are in circulation, including above 2000 Operas, in every shape. Subscription, Two Guineas per annum. Full particulars gratis, from BOOSEY and SONS, 28, Holles-street.

D'ALBERT'S ALBUM for 1857. Third Edition!—The sale of this very popular work, which is beautifully illustrated by Brandard, has far surpassed any of its predecessors. It contains a greater variety of new Waltzes, new Quadrilles, Polkas, &c., &c.; is splendidly bound, and forms the most attractive Musical Gift-book ever published. Price 21s., post-free.

CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-street.

GUARDO O CARO.—Waltz for Voice and Pianoforte, composed expressly for Madame Rudersdorff. By A. RANDEGGER. Price 3s., post-free. This is the most successful vocal composition recently published; it has been always enthusiastically encored. By the same popular composer—Round the corner, 1s. 6d.; Yesterday and To-morrow, 1s.; Be sure you call, 1s.; The Meadow Gate, 1s. Sent post-free.

J. WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London.

VARENNA.—Valse brillante pour le Piano, par EDOUARD WOLFF. Price 4s. Sent post-free. Published by EWER and CO., 390, Oxford-street, London.

MENDELSSOHN'S THREE MARCHES. Pilgrims' March, from the 4th Sinfonia; War March of the Priests, from "Athalie" (copyrights); and Wedding March, from the "Midsummer Night's Dream" (original edition). Price each, for Pianoforte Solo, 1s.; Duet, 1s. 6d. Post-free.—EWER and Co., 390, Oxford-street, London, publishers of all Mendelssohn's Works. Catalogues gratis.

MOZART'S DON GIOVANNI and FIGARO, arranged for the pianoforte, as Solos and Duets, with ad. lib. accompaniments for Flute, Violin, and Violoncello. EDITED by CHARLES CALLCOTT. Each Opera in three Books, containing all the favourite Airs, Duets, &c.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

MISS P. HORTON.—The New SONGS in MR. Mr. and Mrs. Reed (late Miss Horton) are now starring entertainment—viz. "Gather me and cry." "Love makes the Home," and "The Fourth Day," are published by CRAMER, BEALE, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S NEW POLKAS. The Pet of the Polkas, the Laughing Eyes, Gay Fawkes, Minnie Polka, Tit-a-Tat, and Tontik's, 6d. each. Duets, 6d. each; or by post, 7 stamps

MUSICAL BOUQUET OFFICE, 192, High Holborn.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S NEW VARSOVIANAS and SCHOTTISCHES: The Silver Lake and the Midnight Varsovianas. My Favourite and My Daughter's Schottischs. 6d. each. Duets, 6d. each; by post, 7 stamps

MUSICAL BOUQUET OFFICE, 192, High Holborn.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S NEW WALTZES and GALOPS. The Blue Eyes, Dreams of Childhood, and Love Birds' Waltzes, the Excursion and the Wardrigle Galops. 6d. each. Duets, 6d. each; by post, 7 stamps

MUSICAL BOUQUET OFFICE, 192, High Holborn.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S NEW QUADRILLES My Mary Anne, Bobbing Around, the Delphegor, Musketeers', the Edinburgh, and Roscoe Dundee, 6d. each. Duets, 6d. each; or by post, 7 stamps

MUSICAL BOUQUET OFFICE, 192, High Holborn

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S NEW SONGS: Come into the Garden, Maud, and Sweet and Low, 6d. each; words by TENNYSON. Alas, The North Carolina Rose, and While I my Banjo Play, 6d. each. The four Songs, free by post, for 30 Stamps.—MUSICAL BOUQUET OFFICE, 192, High Holborn.

ROSSINI'S STABAT MATER (Price 1s. 6d.), in 8vo, Vocal Score, with Piano Accompaniment, Italian and English Words. Please to order NOVELLO'S EDITION, 69, Dean-street, Soho, and 35, Poultry. Specimen pages of the Oratorios gratis

HAIL the MIGHTY WARRIORS BRAVE! New Song, written and composed by MR. MACKENZIE WILSON. 2s. 6d.

"This song abounds with excellent points. The melody is rich and flowing, and affords a full expression of the fervent lines entitled with deep pathos in the words. We heartily recommend it."

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., her Majesty's Music-publishers, New Burlington-street, W.

NEW SONG. SPRING BLOSSOMS. Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER. Price 2s. 6d., postage-free. This Song, published in the same elegant form as "Summer Roses," "Autumn Fruits," and "Winter Evergreens," completes the series—a set unsurpassed for the beauty of words, music, and embellishment. "Spring Blossoms" will, if possible, take the lead, as it is most graceful and pleasing.

London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—The LANGUAGE of the EYES, as sung with the most distinguished success by Miss Poole, commencing "The sweet to hear a gentle voice." Composed by C. HODGSON. Price 2s., postage-free. Caution.—This is the only edition sung by Miss Poole.

DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG, THE OLD GARDEN GATE. Composed by J. W. HOBBS. Price 2s., postage-free. "This song will be a second 'Philip the Falconer' in popularity. Its sale is interesting and will last, the music excellent."

London. DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

HUMOROUS SONG for the LADIES, I WISH HE WOULD MAKE UP HIS MIND Also CHATTEY'S charming nonsenses, SNOW FLAKES and SPARKLING SPRAY; the celebrated fantasias upon HAPPY LAND and ROBIN ADAIR, and the most brilliant variations upon the RATCATCHER'S DAUGHTER, are published by ADDISON and Co., London

QUEEN OF THE MAY.—Song, by Mrs. ARKWRIGHT, 2s. 6d.; the same, for Pianoforte, by Mdme. Thénar, 2s. 6d.—G. LOSHDALE, Musical Circulating Library (terms, from 3 guineas), 95, Old Bond-street, London.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

D'ALBERT'S COURT of ST. JAMES' QUADRILLE, elegantly illustrated by BRANDARD, in Colours. Price 4s., post-free

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S BOBBING AROUND.—Quadrille, in which is introduced the most popular air of the day. Price 3s. solo, 4s. duet, post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S QUEEN'S WALTZ, beautifully illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S ST. PETERSBURG, New Quadrille on Russian Airs, Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s. post-free.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CZARINA SCHOTTISCHE. Illustrated. Price 3s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S SOLDIERS' POLKA. With a Portrait of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, by Brandard, in Colours. Price 3s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S EMPEROR'S GALOP, beautifully illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 3s., Solo or Duet, Post-free. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CORONATION POLKA. Beautifully illustrated by Brandard. Price 3s., Solo or Duet, Post-free CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CRIMSON ROSES. Ballad by Signor PARAVICINI. Composed for and sung with great success by Miss Dolby. Price 2s.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S YOUNG PUPIL, in 24 Nos., containing the following popular Airs of the day, arranged for the Youngest Performers in the Pianoforte. Price 1s. each, postfree; also as Duets, 1s. 6d. each.

No. 1. D'Albert's Fair Star Valse.
2. Do. Dew-drop Valse.
3. The Irish Emigrant.
4. Red, White, and Blue.
5. D'Albert's Sultan's Polka.
6. Do. Como.
7 Nelly Bly
8. The Campbells are Coming.
9 Ye Banks and Braes.
10. D'Albert's Faust Valse.
11. Do. King Pippin Polka.
12. Annie Laurie.
13. D'Albert's Palermo.
14. Low Back'd Car
15. The Original Varsovians.
16. D'Albert's Margarita Valse.
17. Home, Sweet Home.
18. Partant pour la Syrie.
19. Last Rose of Summer.
20 Ronnie Dundee.
21 Caller Herring.
22 Bohemian Air.
23. Sea Bell.
24. D'Albert's Queen of Roses Valse.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CAST BREAD UPON THE WATERS. New Sacred Song, written by J. E. C., and composed by J. RHODES. Price 2s., post-free.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KŒNIG'S JOURNAL for CORNET-à-PISTONS and PISTON MARCH contains Il provesan Il mar (Traviata), Quando le sere (Louise Miller); Green Leaves of Wales, by D'Egville; and the Soldier's Polka, by D'Albert. Price 6s., postage-free. The Full Pianoforte Tutor for Cornet-à-Pistons is now ready, price 3s. Jullien and Co's Portfolio for Cornet Solo (No. 1) contains nine popular Airs. Price 1s.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S BILLET-DOUX WALTZ, Beautifully Illustrated by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S MY MARY ANN POLKA, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S MINNIE POLKA, Illustrated in Colours Price 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S FLIRTATION POLKA, performed with the greatest success at her Majesty's Theatre, beautifully illustrated in Colours. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S FRENCH QUADRILLE, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S CONSTANCE WALTZ, Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., postage-free.

214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN'S EXCELSIOR WALTZ, performed by Herr Koenig at M. Jullien's Concerts with the greatest success, and highly encored. Price 4s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

G. A. OSBORNE'S NEW PIANOFORTE WORKS:—

1. Ah che la Morte, and the Miserere.
2. Fantasia on favourite airs, Il Trovatore.
3. Nos. 1 and 2 combined, Il provesan Il mar.
4. Libiamo and Parigi o cara.
5. Robert, toi qui j'aime.
6. A favourite Swedish air, as a Duet.

Price of each 3s., postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

SABBATH STRAINS; a Collection of Favourite Sacred Melodies, easily and effectively arranged for Pianoforte. By FRANZ NAVA. Price of each, as Solo or Duet, 1s., postage-free

No. 1. I know that my Redeemer liveth.
2. With rapture I gaze
3. Agnus Dei, from Mozart's 1st Mass
4. Before Jehovah's awful throne
5. Holy, holy, Lord God Almighty.
6. Gloria in Excelsis.
7. Hear my prayer.
8. But thou didst not leave.
9. Quæ mundo beatus
10. Vital spark of heavenly flame.
11. My song shall be alway.
12. Gloria, from Mozart's 12th Mass.
13 O Lord, our Governor.
14. Lord, remember David.
15. The marvellous works.
16. Dona nobis pacem.
17. Kyrie, from Mozart's 12th Mass
18. Vanish before the holy beams
19. O, had I Jubal's lyre.
20. Credo in unum Deum.
21. Sound the loud timbrel.
22 In Jewry is God known.
23. He was despised.
24. Cujus animam.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

D'EGVILLE'S NEW LANCERS, for Sixteen or Eight Persons, are now ready for Pianoforte, by LOUIS D'EGVILLE, with a full description of the figures, illustrated with Diagrams Price 3s. postage-free.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

D'EGVILLE'S GREEN LEAVES WALTZ, for Pianoforte, 4s., postage-free. Illustrated by Brandard.

JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

JULLIEN AND CO'S MUSICAL PRESENTATION LIBRARY. Three Guineas per annum.

Three Guineas' worth of Music presented gratis, to every Annual Subscriber to the above library.

Subscribers are liberally supplied on loan, with every description of New Vocal and Instrumental Music, and have also at their disposal upwards of Three Thousand Volumes, including the standard Operas, Italian, German, French, and English songs, and all kinds of instrumental Music

At the expiration of the Term of Subscription, each Subscriber has the privilege of selecting—for his own property—from 100,000 different pieces,

THREE GUINEAS' WORTH OF MUSIC

Terms of Subscription.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| For One Year | .. | £3 3 0 | For Three Months .. £1 5 0 |
| For Six Months | .. | £2 2 0 | For One Month .. £0 16 6 |

214, Regent-street, W.

NEW MUSIC, &c.

JULLIEN and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY. Three Guineas' worth of Music Gratis to all Subscribers.

Prospectuses sent free on application to Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street, W.

CHEAPEST MUSICAL REPOSITORY in ENGLAND. All NEW MUSIC HALF-PRICE; Sacred Music at One Fourth and a Third. Country Orders executed. Catalogues, one stamp.—ALCOCK, 19, Rathbone-place, Oxford-street.

THE ALEXANDRE HARMONIUM at Six Guineas. Class Singing, Private Use, or for the School-room —CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, with one stop and five octaves, 10 guineas; three stops, 15 guineas; five stops, 22 guineas, and eight stops, 35 guineas. Full descriptive lists sent on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street

THE PATENT MODEL HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 55 guineas. Illustrated Catalogues of Pianofortes and Harmoniums upon application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street; and 13, George-street, Hanover-square

PIANOFORTES for Sale at CHAPPELL'S. The best instruments by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., for SALE or HIRE.—50, New Bond-street; and 13, George-street, Hanover-square.

THE ALEXANDRE HARMONIUM AT SIX GUINEAS.

ALEXANDRE and SON have made the Harmonium at the lowest price possible, to bring the instrument within the means of all classes. It is in an Oak Case, with Four Octaves, is alike calculated for Private Houses and for Chapels, and is

INDISPENSABLE TO THE SCHOOL-ROOM.

The Six-Guinea Harmonium will be taken in exchange for any of the more expensive descriptions, without loss or diminution

Alexandre and Son have received the Gold Medal of Honour at the Great Exhibition at Paris, 1855. Their Harmoniums have been pronounced the best by Rossini, Auber, Adam, Thalberg, Liszt, &c., and by the Professors of the Conservatoire de Musique at Paris

The more expensive Harmoniums range from 10 to 55 guineas. These are brought to the highest degree of perfection, and are equally adapted to the

CHURCH OR DRAWING-ROOM,

AS AN

ACCOMPANIMENT TO THE VOICE OR PIANOFORTE.

Messrs. Chappell have just received a number of Alexandre's celebrated HARMONIUM PIANOFORTES, which combine the excellences of both instruments. The two can be used in combination by the same performer, or each instrument is perfect in itself. Price from 40 to 150 guineas.

An immense Stock of

PIANOFORTES BY THE BEST MAKERS,

from Twenty Guineas upwards, which can be thoroughly recommended and warranted

Messrs. Chappell and Co. have just opened a number of NEW ROOMS FOR INSTRUMENTS, enabling the purchaser to select a Pianoforte or Harmonium from the largest Stock in London, and to try the merits of the various makers side by side.

Full descriptive Lists of Harmoniums and of Pianofortes will be sent on application to

CHAPPELL AND CO.,

50, NEW BOND-STREET, AND 13, GEORGE-STREET, HANOVER-SQUARE

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE. Sixty Fifty Guineas.—This instrument has (unlike the ordinary Cottage Pianoforte) Three Strings and the fullest Grand compass of Seven Octaves. It is strengthened by every possible means to endure the greatest extremes of heat and cold, and to stand perfectly in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description, the tone is remarkably full and rich, and the power equal to that of a Richmond Grand. The case is of the most elegant construction, in rosewood, the touch elastic, and the repetition very rapid. Every possible precaution has been taken to ensure its standing well in tune. Chappell and Co. especially call the attention of the public, the profession, and merchants to the Foreign Model, feeling assured that no Pianoforte, in at corresponding size, has hitherto been made in England at the same price. Every instrument will be warranted, and, if desired, exchanged within twelve months of the purchase.—50, New Bond-street, London.

JULLIEN and CO.'S CONCERTINAS, by the most celebrated Makers, as used by Signor Regondi, &c., &c. No 1.—Rosewood Concertina, 48 silver toucbes, highly ornamented .. £ s d 12 12 0

No. 2. The Full Rosewood Concertina, 48 ivory keys .. .. .. 18 10 0

No. 3. The Amateur Concertina, 48 ivory keys .. .. .. 8 8 0

No. 4. The Everyday Concertina, 48 ivory keys .. .. .. 6 6 0

Jullien and Co., 214, Regent-street.

JULLIEN and CO.'S CORNET-à-PISTONS, Approved and tried by Herr KOENIG, Manufactured by ANTOINE COURTOIS.

No. 1.—The Drawing-room Cornet-à-Pistons (by Antoine Courtois), used by Herr Koenig at M. Jullien's Concerts £ s d

2.—The Concert-room Cornet-à-Pistons (by Antoine Courtois), used by Herr Koenig, at M. Jullien's Concerts 8 8 0

3.—The Military Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. 6 6 8

4.—The Solo Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. 6 6 0

5.—The Navy Cornet-à-Pistons .. .. .. 4 4 0

6.—The Orchestral Cornet-à-Pistons (First quality) .. 3 3 0

7.—The Ordinary Cornet-à-Pistons (Second quality) .. 2 2 0

List of Prices, with Drawings of the Instruments, may be had on application. Instruments of every description supplied at the lowest possible prices.—JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, London, W.

MUSICAL BOX REPOSITORY, 32, Lodgate-street, near St. Paul's).—WALES and M'CULLOCH are direct importers of Nicole Frere's Celebrated MUSICAL BOXES, playing brilliantly the best Popular, Operatic, and Sacred Music. Large Choice, four Airs, 24s; Six, 36s; Eight, 52s; Twelve Airs, 81s 12s. Snuff-boxes, Two Tunes, 14s. 6d. and 18s.; Three, 30s., Four, 60s. Catalogue of Tunes, gratis, and post-free, on application.

CASE'S FOUR-GUINEA CONCERTINA, with eight keys, in mahogany frame and mahogany case The cheapest musical instrument manufactured. Just published, 150 Melodies and Accompaniments, Arranged by George Case. Price 3s And Third Edition of Instruction Book for the Concertina, 7s 6d. Sole Manufacturers of Case's Patent Concertinas.

BOOSEY and SONS, 24 and 26, Holles-street, London.

R. S. PRATTEN'S PERFECTED FLUTES on the old system of fingering, possessing a greater amount and finer quality of tone than any other Instruments. Prices from 4 guineas each, manufactured by RUDALL and SONS, 24, Holles-street, London. Under the personal inspection of Mr Pratten, who is in constant attendance for the purpose of displaying the superior qualities of these instruments to purchasers

HARMONIUMS.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. are agents for ALEXANDRE'S NEW PATENT MODEL. 201, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. have a great variety by all Makers, New and Secondhand, for SALE or HIRE.—201, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES EXTRAORDINARY.—At MOORE and MOORE'S, 104, Bishopsgate-street, Within. These are first-class Pianos, of rare excellence, possessing unquiet improvements, producing much effect, a grand, a pure, and beautiful quality of tone that stands unrivalled. Price, from 21 Guineas. First-class Pianos for hire, with easy terms of purchase.

THE CONCERTINAS manufactured solely by the inventors and Patentees, Messrs. WHEATSTONE and CO.—The Patent Concertina, of superior make, unequalled, with double action, to play in five keys. Ditto, £3 12s. 6d., to play in all the keys.

The Patent CONCERT CONCERTINAS, unrivalled in tone, as manufactured for Signor Regondi, and the most eminent performers, are the best to keep in tune, and are made better than any others, price 12 guineas.

Rosewood Concertinas, with 48 keys, full compass, double action, from £4. 4s.—Condult-street, Regent-street, W.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOT, 54, Cornhill, London, for the sale of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, made by the celebrated Messrs. NICOLE (Frères), of Geneva. Large size, four airs, 14 in. long, £4; six airs, 18 in. long, £6 5s; eight airs, 20 in. long, £8; and twelve airs, 24 in. long, £12 12s.; selections from the most eminent composers, including popular, national, and operatic airs, are arranged expressly for each separate musical movement. A variety of Swiss Musical Snuff-boxes, playing two tunes, 14s. 6d. and 18s.; three tunes, 30s.; and four tunes, 42s. each. Lists of tunes, &c., may be had gratis, and sent post-free.

COLLARD and COLLARD'S SEMI-COTTAGE PIANOFORTES. To be SOLD, at low prices, for cash, or for HIRE, with the option of purchase, eight fine-toned instruments, with 6½ octaves and repetition actions in handsome rosewood cases. Also, a Sounder and full-sized concert grand, and double action Harp, by Erard.—At HOLDERNESS, 444, New Oxford-street

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1857.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 850.—VOL. XXX.] SATURDAY, MARCH 21, 1857. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE.

THE LATE PARLIAMENT.

THE Parliament of 1852 may be said to have drawn its last breath on Wednesday. Before we again have an opportunity of addressing our readers the country will be busily engaged in electing its successor. We, therefore, speak of it as of a thing that is no more, and can proceed to sum up its virtues or its errors, and write its epitaph.

If the evil that men do lives after them, the good is not always interred with their bones. Of the late Parliament it may be said that the worst thing it ever did was productive of the best consequences. Its vote on the Chinese question, which would have been a crime in an irremovable Legislature, but which, with the power of a dissolution in the hands of the Minister, was no worse than a blunder, is the most serious charge that can be brought against its judgment or its patriotism. Happily, its factious vote was its death-warrant. The evil that it did was limited to the period of its existence, and is not likely to bear fruit in after time, if we may judge of the character of the Parliament which is to succeed it, by such flashes of opinion and sentiment as have been struck from the popular heart in public meetings, or in the addresses of candidates.

Until the hour when it became evident that the bifurcate Opposition, with Mr. Disraeli at the end of the one prong, and Mr. Gladstone at the tip of the other, would, either designedly or fortuitously, unite in support of the amiable resolution of Mr. Cobden, and leave the Ministry in a minority, the Parliament cannot be said to have deserved ill of the country. Elected, in 1852, under the auspices of party chiefs, who, if they did not hanker to restore the Corn-laws, openly proclaimed that protection to native industry was, in their opinion, the true policy of the nation, the Parliament, before it had been many weeks in existence, gave the deathblow to the exploded doctrines of the Anti-Free-traders, and rendered it impossible for Protectionists to carry on the Government upon Protectionist principles. The first trial of strength which the political authors of its being submitted to it, proved fatal to them as Ministers. They fell amid the ruins of their Budget, sighing for the power which they have never been able to regain, and for the sweets of office which have never again come within reasonable distance of their lips.

The Administration of Lord Aberdeen succeeded; and the Parliament, seeing in the fall of Lord Derby and Mr. Disraeli a just retribution upon men whose conduct on the question of Free-trade had done so much to impair confidence in modern statesmanship, and to loosen the bands of political morality, accorded to their successors a full measure of confidence. Mr. Gladstone, as Financial Minister of Lord Aberdeen, produced an excellent Budget; and the Parliament, looking solely to its merits, yielded it a hearty support. Had there been at this time no design on the part of the late Emperor Nicholas to appropriate the body and the wealth of the "sick man" in Turkey; had he not been encouraged in his nefarious purpose by the knowledge that Lord Aberdeen was a peaceable man and his friend, and by the unfounded notion that Mr. Cobden and Mr. Bright, two very eloquent and very influential members of the British Legislature, entertained opinions on the question of war which were in accordance with those of their countrymen, it is possible that Lord Aberdeen's Ministry would have deserved well of the country, and that Mr. Gladstone might have earned the reputation of an able financier and a wise statesman. But the inevitable war against Russia, for the preservation of Turkey and the independence of Europe, showed the real calibre of that fair-weather Administration. Unequal in every respect to the occasion; bunglers in every department of affairs, especially in those requiring skill, foresight, promptitude, and determination; unable even to comprehend the vastness of the conflict in which they had engaged; and expressing, even to the last, a belief in the generous intention of the Emperor of Russia, which under the circumstances was little better than silliness, they speedily lost the confidence of the country, and with it the confidence of Parliament. Questions of domestic importance, which at other times would have enlisted the lively sympathy of all classes of the people, lost in the presence of the war all interest and all hold upon the thoughts of the nation. By that section of politicians who would Japanise or Chinafy Great Britain the Parliament was blamed for partaking of this apathy, and for concentrating its attention upon the one great and permanent object of the war. But in this respect Parliament merely showed that it was equal to the emergency, and that it faithfully reflected the opinions and cordially sympathised with the instincts and the feelings of the nation. Guardian of the public purse, it never begrudged the millions necessary for the vigorous prosecution of the war, and only visited the Ministry with its displeasure when it attempted to carry on such a struggle with insufficient means and with relaxing energies. When at the eleventh hour this vacillating and weakminded Ministry fell, amid the satisfaction of all the friends, and the sorrow of all the foes of Great Britain, the late Parliament yielded to Lord Palmerston its most unhesitating support. There was but one question either for Ministers or for Parliament to consider, and that was the war, and the means of conducting it with the ancient valour and the ancient success of Englishmen. Both of them were equal to the occasion. The House of Commons, including all parties in it—with the sole exception of those crotchetty peacemongers whose sympathies are always elicited in favour of the nations or tribes, civilised or barbarian, with whom it may be the sad necessity of their own country to be at war—cordially supported the Minister; and in due time, and mainly as a consequence of his much-needed energy, peace was restored to Europe; and the fair fame of England, which the Continental despots asserted to have been tarnished, and which false friends in every part of the world strove to whisper away, was restored to its original brightness, and flashed in the face of the world with a splendour which its bitterest foes might lament, but which they found it impossible to deny.

THE CASTEL NUOVO, AT NAPLES.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

If to Lord Palmerston be due some praise for this great result, it should not be forgotten, either in the last hours of the dying Parliament or in the historic page which will record its deeds when it is no more, that to the House of Commons, which so zealously supported him in his manly and wise policy, belongs an equal amount of gratitude. Of the praise justly due to them both the voice of faction cannot deprive either the Minister or the Parliament. Both may have had their shortcomings on minor matters, and on matters which would not have been minor in more tranquil times; but in the one great business which in the years 1855, 1856, and 1857 they had to perform, under the penalty of degrading and weakening their country in the estimation of the world, they acquitted themselves like virtuous citizens and wise statesmen.

If it be judged by this standard, the Parliament of 1852 ought to stand well in the estimation of the country. For sake of a result so noble it may be spared many of the reproaches which might otherwise be levelled against it. At times, and especially in the closing act of its existence, it was factious; but, taking it for all in all, it would be unjust to deny that it had generous emotions and patriotic principles, and that, in the most important event of our age, it acted upon them with promptitude, with dignity, and with success.

For its last unfortunate vote it has paid the penalty. If, as seems probable, the new Parliament will have all the sterling British honesty of the old, with a smaller sprinkling of such impracticable doctrinaires as Mr. Cobden, and of such foggy philosophists as Mr. Gladstone, who too often darken counsel with vain words, there will be nothing to regret, but very much to approve, in the sudden termination of its existence by its own suicidal act. Some of the idle babblers, and men of one idea, who were clogs upon the efficiency of the late House, will doubtless find their way to the next Parliament; but it will be something gained if, instead of sitting for metropolitan cities, for learned universities, or for populous and wealthy divisions of counties, they are driven into small decaying boroughs, where electors are few and public spirit is at its minimum.

There have been wiser Parliaments than the last, but it is a consolation to believe that the next will be a better, and that, with peace in Europe, our domestic as well as our foreign policy will try its capacities and elicit its statesmanship.

THE CASTEL NUOVO, AT NAPLES.

THE Castel Nuovo, which is the principal object in our sketch, is one of the most interesting relics of mediæval architecture in Naples. It was built, or begun, in the thirteenth century, by Charles I., who was tired of his residence in the Castel Capuano, now the prisons of the Vicaria. A convent of Franciscan friars once stood on the site of the castle; but the walls of the monastery were dismantled in 1284, and replaced by the more warlike walls of the castle. From that time it has borne the name of the Castel Nuovo. It has five principal towers, which are now inclosed within the castle. The strong outer works were built under Alphonso II. about the middle of the fifteenth century. The triumphal arch of this Sovereign is perhaps more deserving of observation for the history of design than any other object in the city. It is not remarkable for the purity of its art, it is for its grandeur; and it recalls those times when Italian commerce was widely extended, when the press was beginning to assert its gigantic power, and those great architectural efforts were made the true expression of awakening mind. Without, however, criticising in detail this castle, so well deserving minute attention, it may be mentioned that within or about its precincts are included the Military Armoury, the Arsenal for Artillery, the Royal Foundry, and the Marine Arsenal. There is a communication between it and the Royal Palace; and thus in one spot are concentrated not only the Sovereign, but that which is necessary to the assertion of his authority.

Of little use in modern warfare, the Castel Nuovo is formidable only against the inhabitants of the city, and of late years great attention has been given towards fortifying it in this way. Cannon threaten the entire neighbourhood around. They point downwards through the populous street called Bassa Porta towards the the Largo Castello, where the artist is standing; and as if this were not enough a parapet has been erected on the "Grand Guard," and the houses in the foreground of the picture, behind which the soldier can pour forth their volleys of musketry. These are interesting proofs of the success of the actual system of Government, and of the contentment and happiness of the Neapolitan! We have heard of such a proverb as "killing with kindness." Surely the proverb had its birth in Naples. On the opposite side to that which is presented in the Sketch the view is towards the sea. On the right of it is the Royal Palace, and on the left the façade faces the popular quarter of the Bassa Porta, the most characteristic and lazzaronesche quarter of all Naples.

In the Darsena, or Marine Arsenal, are at the present moment employed and imprisoned 206 criminals; for the Darsena, which lies under the Palace windows, is one of the bagni of the kingdom.

An affray occurred in Washington the other day, in which Mr. David Hume, a merchant of Alexandria, Virginia, was shot dead by Colonel Lee, a clerk in the Pension-office. The occurrence grew out of a misunderstanding at the President's levee the night before, in which Colonel Lee accused Mr. Hume of picking his pocket.

A Paris letter in the Indépendance of Brussels states that a play written by Alexandre Dumas in twenty-four hours is about to be performed at the residence of M. de Girardin and that M. Dumas, who boasts of being the best cook in France, is to superintend the preparation of the dinner which is to precede the performance.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday.

IN Paris we have a sort of Lent in the daytime, and a sort of Carnival at night. The churches where the preachers in vogue hold forth, chiefly on the eventualities of the day, are crowded; the salons are equally well filled of an evening; and the Lanciers have lost little ground since Ash Wednesday was supposed to put a veto on such pastimes.

Great attention is being excited by the sermons of the Père Ventura, in the chapel of the Tuileries. The Sunday before last he commenced by announcing his intention of delivering, not a religious, but a political discourse. In this he denounced Greece and Rome as the originators of all the crimes and all the evils of the present century, by the universatory spirit they have infused into the existing generations. This is certainly a somewhat far-fetched explanation of the state of affairs of our day, which the reverend Father pronounces to be so utterly vitiated, "that if the angels came down on the earth they would reascend to heaven corrupted." Although the sermons in question are preached before the Emperor, the Père Ventura hesitates not to enter fully on such questions as the duties of Princes, the origin of power, flatterers, punishments, rewards, &c., and to discuss them without any especial ménagemens for the positions of his audience.

But the attraction, the topic of the day, is the American spirit-medium, Mr. Hume, who, it is asserted, by those who believe in him, produces the most remarkable manifestations that have yet been displayed by an operator of this sort, and who is at the summit of favour at the Tuileries.

It appears that the Empress's patience being exhausted by the enormous charges of her dressmaker, milliner, &c., she has hit upon a plan which, it is supposed, will lighten these expenses—namely, the establishing in the Tuileries of an atelier for the making up of all her dresses, cloaks, bonnets, coiffures, &c., under her own eye. This will also help to satisfy the desire her Majesty complains of the impossibility of fulfilling, that of visiting the fashionable shops where such articles are displayed to any number of her Majesty's subjects who choose to go and look at them.

There is great talk of the Revue de Deux Mondes being purchased by M. de Girardin, at the price of 600,000 francs, though some declare that M. de Girardin is not likely, on his side, to give that sum; while others assert that M. Bulos, the present proprietor, would be by no means disposed to accept it, which view decidedly complicates the chances of a satisfactory arrangement. Alexandre Dumas has written a piece which is shortly to be performed at the house of M. de Girardin.

The affair of M. de Dreux Brezé continues to excite the greatest attention; and Monseigneur Menjaud, Bishop of Nancy, First Almoner to the Emperor, has been sent to Rome with a mission, not, as was supposed, respecting the coronation, but to obtain the Pope's approval of the measures proposed by the Imperial Government in the matter.

A curious instance of the force of popular prejudice has just occurred near Evreux. Many of the French peasants live in the conviction that the cause of the potato disease lies in the vapour from the railroad locomotives; and last week a labourer, approaching the line as the train from Caen was passing, deliberately fired a pistol at one of the stokers, who fortunately escaped unhurt. The man has been arrested.

Mdme. Ristori is expected here in April to resume her performances at the Italian Opera House. Our space does not admit of our speaking at the length we would desire on the "Fiammina" of M. Mario Uchard (husband of Mdme. Madeleine Brohan), given last week at the Théâtre Français. A first work, it possesses, with the freshness of a young hand, all the merit of composition, construction, finish, and effect of the most experienced dramatic author, and has a soundness of principle, and a healthy tone of feeling, and, for the most part, of morality, very seldom met with in the modern French school of writing.

FRANCE AND THE PAPAL STATES.

A very remarkable State paper, regarding the relations of France and Rome, has been communicated to the Daily News, occupies nearly six columns of that journal, so that we are precluded from giving it in our circumscribed space. The French Envoy at Rome, deeply impressed with the belief that the various Cabinets of Europe are intensely preoccupied with the situation of the Pontifical States, and believing that the question is greatly obscured by party misrepresentations, thinks it may be useful to give "a truthful and impartial review of the facts," for the benefit of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The view which the French Envoy takes of the Italian question may be briefly stated. He does not attempt to deny that there is great dissatisfaction with the present state of things. Many causes have led to this. The Papacy is not at evil day it was in past ages. "During the two last centuries the general prosperity of the Pontifical system, and the abundant resources which flowed to Rome from all parts of the world, silenced complaint. But the great changes which have taken place in Europe during the last fifty years have dried up the sources of Rome's affluence. The Church has been compelled to remain contented with the revenue derived exclusively from its own territory. [What a melancholy change!] Hence discomfort, which, increasing from year to year, leads the minds of men by an easy process to discuss and attack the acts of their Government." This is so exceedingly naïve, and goes so far to explain the weakness of the poor old Papacy, which cannot stand without "the armed protection with which France and Austria surround the holy chair," that we may pass over those political speculations of the writer in which he endeavours to show that Italy is utterly unfit for self-government. While recognising the widespread dissatisfaction which prevails throughout the peninsula, the French official is utterly unable to suggest any remedy. In the Papal States the people are generally comfortable, he affirms. "The condition of the people is that of comparative ease. They rush together in crowds at the first signal of public rejoicing or pleasure. . . . Misery of the most expansive kind is to be traced on the features of all." Why, then, should any true patriot bawl for reform?

As regards the future of Italy, the French Envoy, while he holds out no hope of relief from any quarter, seems to entertain the most gloomy forebodings of a coming storm:—

I do not think that all the questions of this world must necessarily have a definitive solution. The Roman question, in my opinion at least, has none. We can only, exercising a benevolent and attentive protection, avert the dangers of a catastrophe, and prolong a provisional state of things which has at least the grand merit of preserving Europe from innumerable evils.

Any other order of measures would only precipitate events. If his Majesty's Government, from motives easily comprehended, should desire to put a stop to the French occupation of the Roman States after a delay of greater or less duration, it would be better at once to abandon the sinews to the impulse of the current than to open them by dealing, either by means of advice openly given, or by forced and ostentatious, the coup de grace to the temporal power of the Popes.

In the presence of the existing agitation of mind in Italy, and of the very lively emotion caused by the publication of the protocols, it is impossible to keep down a profound feeling of anxiety as to the future destiny of the Papacy. If care is not taken Europe will see the most terrible of problems present itself—terrible, in fact, because it is connected with the deepest and the most ardent passions of the human heart.

The words pronounced by your Excellency in the Conference, the assurance you have given of the interest which the Emperor's Government will not cease to take in the safety of the Pontifical power, are certain proofs that the true interests men, giving a moral, rather than a material, support to the Pontifical flag and establishment, but still a support which is sufficient, is it not a hundred times better to have recourse to this certain remedy than to attempt to obtain similar ends by ways full of peril? If in such circumstances the temporal power of the Papacy should be menaced anew, and if, in spite of our efforts, grave complications should arise the responsibility would then at least rest wholly and entirely on events which are often stronger than man, and we should not have to reproach ourselves with having contributed to so fatal a result.

THE WAR WITH CHINA.

The news from Hong-Kong comes down to January 30th, at which date trade was at a standstill, the attention of the European inhabitants being chiefly directed to means for their protection against the Chinese. Allum, the alleged bread-poisoner, and his associates, were to be tried immediately. Public expectation was directed to the arrival of anticipated naval and military reinforcements, and the recommencement of offensive operations. Her Majesty's steamer Sampson arrived at Hong-Kong on the morning of the 23rd of January, having on board Admiral Sir M. Seymour, who is reported to have forwarded to India urgent despatches for a large military force. The Sampson, on her way down to Hong-Kong, fell in with a fleet of 150 Mandarin junks, and destroyed several of them. These junks had threatened an attack on Hong-Kong. With the exception of retaining Tee-to-tum fort, it appears that Admiral Seymour has been forced to abandon Canton. Even the intrenched gardens could no longer be retained, as all the available force is required to keep open the passage of the river, in consequence of the wilful sinking of junks to prevent any vessels of war or steamers passing up with troops. Whampoa has been completely abandoned, her Majesty's ship Sybille having been removed. All the valuable property, as dockyards, &c., had been abandoned to the Chinese, who were destroying everything of value.

THE BURNING OF CANTON.

(From the Hong-Kong Register.)

The Barracouta arrived from Canton on the morning of the 15th of January, bringing some wounded men and one officer of the 59th Regiment, also news of the destruction of a great part of the city of Canton by fire.

Early on Monday morning (January 12) there was a simultaneous movement amongst the boats of the squadron and of the Dutch Fort, having their respective ships with strong-armed parties of marines and blue-jackets. They landed at different parts of the suburbs from the eastern end of the Chinchew Hong to the timber yards above the Sameen packhouses. The Barracouta had moved up abreast of a small fort opposite the Pa-tee creek, the Encounter at some distance above the boom, and the Niger in her old anchorage, off the Factory gardens. The boats rowed a little distance from the shore, to protect the working parties, who advanced into the narrow streets with forces and axes, and soon commenced the work of destruction, the houses, being for the most part built of wood along the banks of the river, soon caught fire, a good breeze unpelling the flames to the stronger buildings in the rear. In less than an hour the vast tract of suburbs above mentioned was on fire, the clouds of smoke stretching over Honam Island. The flames were stirred up now and then by shot and shell from the ships. The Dutch Folly was very successful with some grenades, which set fire to several houses within the city, clearing a space of about 250 yards near the Yamun. The Barracouta's firing was very rapid for some time, caused, as was afterwards learned, by the attack of some Mandarin soldiers who, recruited behind some ruins, kept up a practice of jingal firing till compelled to make a hasty retreat. Meantime a party of the 59th Regiment, amounting to seventy men, under Captain Bushe, repaired, as they thought, to their allotted quarter, were proceeding to destroy some houses; but, instead of going to the left of Hog-lane, they unfortunately went to the right, and soon found themselves under the city walls. It was always a difficult matter to find one's way through those narrow streets in the rear of the Factories, now doubly so, from the state of ruin in which they are. Blocked with the debris of fallen houses; piled brick and barricades thrown up in all directions, and a number of houses near the walls pulled down during the burning of the Factories, rendered the passage intricate and difficult. On reaching the walls they were assailed by a volley of stones and a discharge of matchlocks and jingals. Two men were killed, and an officer (Mr. Statham) wounded; the men were compelled to retreat. It would have been madness to attempt storming the houses in the face of such an overwhelming force. The dead men were left behind, and when the drummer, who was supposed to have been killed; it happened, fortunately for him, that he was last stunned from the effects of a blow on the head from a heavy brick. On partially recovering his senses he found himself lying at a little distance from his dead comrades; but still scarcely able to move. Some of the wounded Chinese drew him the way his comrades had gone. Scarcely was he within the door when he saw some Chinese soldiers rush from a street and cut the heads off the dead men. He waited no longer, but made a bold dash to the gardens, which he reached, notwithstanding the hot pursuit after him. The Braves kept up a fire of matchlocks on him, a ball from one of which knocked the sword from his hand, wounding his thumb severely. The fire continued during the whole of Monday night and a part of Tuesday, and has done an immense amount of damage. On Monday afternoon the Barracouta was sent down to Whampoa to remove the Sybille and Spanish steamer Don Jorge Juan from that dangerous anchorage. The Fencane, Marion Lee, and Spark, steamers were busily employed in towing clogs and ships down to the second bar, where they are to be moored near the ships of war on Tuesday night. A good deal of American property was removed from Whampoa. The Sampson was fully expected up from Hong Kong, if not to remove at least to protect it, as the church and many other edifices are sure to be pulled or destroyed as soon as John Chinaman gets over his first panic. The Acorn is anchored at Hamilton Creek, the Hazard above the junk, seized a few days since by the Encounter, well armed and filled with stink pots and various other combustibles.

Early yesterday morning (January 14) before five o'clock, the Chinese commenced an attack on the Dutch Fort by discharge of rockets from the city. It did not last very long, the rocket party being quickly dislodged from their position by the rapidity of the shelling of Lieutenant Dent, who we are happy to say has turned to his duties in good health.

From the continual firing in the Dutch Fort the walls and buildings have much suffered, they are very small, and rather comfortless. There is a rumour afloat that it will be dismantled and blown up in a few days for the stronger position of Bird's Nest Fort, which will become headquarters. It is only garrisoned by the marines of the Sybille. The garrison also, it is said, will be withdrawn, no longer worth holding when there is a more advantageous position at hand, and the gardens can be easily swept whenever it seems prudent to the Admiral. We may soon expect the appearance of a large reinforcement of troops and ships of war, when a new fight will dawn on the dim and obtuse eyes of old Yeh. The godowns of Samsoe were spared about Samsoe on Monday. Not so the Chinchew hong, which were all burned to the ground. Hong-qua is one of the principal losers.

WHOLESALE POISONING AT HONG-KONG.

The following account of the poisonings is from the Hong-Kong Register:—

In an extra we published on Thursday last we had just time to call attention to the fact that an attempt had been made to poison all the consumers of bread supplied by a Chinese baker. This has naturally caused great alarm and excitement during the week, and been the fertile cause of many rumours, true or false. The following is, as nearly as we can get, a statement of facts. We believe it is the custom of the Parsees and other natives of India to eat an early first breakfast. Early on the morning of Thursday a medical gentleman of this city was called upon to prescribe for several Parsees and Moormen labouring under the effects of what appeared to be poison. As the persons applying were from different houses, and had eaten of their own county, the only suspicious article was, naturally, the bread supplied to them from the Esing shop, a Chinese bakery. As the morning advanced numerous cases of sickness occurred, and our attention was so much occupied in giving what assistance we could render that we were unable to dine in breakfasting, owing to which, the cause of the sickness being apparent, we escaped it by just eating any bread. After being tolerably satisfied of the nature of the case, our first course was to go to the police and report it, and advise that every man in the Esing shop should be arrested. The arrest was effected after some time, the persons taken into custody amounting to forty-nine; but Allum, the principal partner, and his family—consisting of himself, his father, son, two women, and children—were found to be missing, and on inquiry it was discovered that the whole family had started for Macao in the Shamrock at eight a.m. From various sources we learned that Allum had been busily engaged the previous day in settling up long-outstanding accounts which parties had dunned him to settle up for months before. One of these parties was one of the owners of the steamer Shamrock, and during the arrangement of the accounts Allum was particularly anxious to be assured of a passage for his family to Macao the next morning. Suspicion immediately alighted more particularly on him. Had it depended on our Government to pursue and capture him he would have escaped, but for a want of precaution on his part, supposing him to be the guilty man. The steamer Shamrock had been supplied with the bread from the Esing shop, and all who partook of it experienced the same effects as the parties on shore; this aroused the suspicions of the captain of the steamer, Mr. Antonio (formerly of the Endeavour lorcha), and he, knowing he had the baker on board, retained him and his family, believing that the bread delivered in Hong-Kong would be of the same kind, and that all supplied with it would have been poisoned. A very active private citizen, Mr. W. M. Robinet, did what the Government should have done, and chartered a private steamer, the Spark, which got under way at eleven o'clock, and reached Macao from two to three hours after the Shamrock. Mr. Robinet, finding Allum detained on board that vessel, had him arrested, and he was delivered over by the Macao authorities to the police officers sent after him in the Queen, and he was brought back next day in the Shamrock. There was naturally a great excitement, but Lynch law is out of the question, for many reasons, in this colony; and so the prisoner is undergoing the usual examination before the magistrate.

The atrocious attempt has, we are thankful to say, failed in every case, and, although two or three hundred people must have partaken of the poisoned food, no lives have been lost. Many suffered very severely none more so than the family of Sir John Bowring—Lady Bowring was poisoned particularly. Two children who were incautiously allowed to eat some of the bread a second time were at one time in considerable danger. A careful analysis by the medical men of the colony has shown that the poison was arsenic.

KAFFIR CIVIL WAR.—TREMENDOUS SLAUGHTER.

By the mail-steamer England, which arrived at Dartmouth on Tuesday last, we have news from Natal relating to the disturbances among the Zulus. These disturbances were caused by a contest between Ketchwya and Umbulazi, two sons of the paramount Chief Panda. On the 2nd of December the latter was defeated with immense slaughter. The victorious Ketchwya, a lad of nineteen, after the battle divided his army into three sections, and with these scoured the country in all directions putting to death not only his enemies, but also all neutral or doubtful subjects who came in his way. He, however, kept clear of the immediate vicinity of Panda, who, by the latest intelligence, was raising an army in defence of his throne. It is said that the number of persons slaughtered by the victors must have been upwards of 20,000.

The latest accounts, which appear to be reliable as to the great fact, though somewhat confused in detail, state that Panda had recovered his power by ceding a large portion of territory to the Boers, who were assisting him against his rebellious son

Yesterday afternoon (says the Natal Mercury of Dec. 27) a Dutch farmer named Von Staden came in direct from the Upper Zulu bush, and brought the somewhat startling intelligence that Panda has made over to the Boers the Zulu country from the Tugela to the White Umvulosi River and the sea, under a treaty of protection to Panda, who also all neutral or doubtful subjects who came in his way. He, however, kept clear of the immediate vicinity of Panda, who, by the latest intelligence, was raising an army in defence of his throne. It is said that the number of persons slaughtered by the victors must have been upwards of 20,000.

The latest accounts, which appear to be reliable as to the great fact, though somewhat confused in detail, state that Panda had recovered his power by ceding a large portion of territory to the Boers, who were assisting him against his rebellious son

Yesterday afternoon (says the Natal Mercury of Dec. 27) a Dutch farmer named Von Staden came in direct from the Upper Zulu bush, and brought the somewhat startling intelligence that Panda has made over to the Boers the Zulu country from the Tugela to the White Umvulosi River and the sea, under a treaty of protection to Panda, who is to be guaranteed in the possession of his nominal sovereignty. The large slice of the Zulu country thus ceded comprises the most healthy and fertile portion of the whole, flanking the Natal border along its entire length, and having a commercial outlet on the coast at St. Lucia Bay. We have not heard what is to be done with Ketchwya, but presume he will share the fate of the weaker, now that a stronger than he has taken the field. The Boers, it is stated, are hunting him from his hiding-place. Boers came in to the number of from 400 to 500—strong enough to dictate their own terms, and we understand the cession will be speedily occupied by a large number of settlers from the Buffalo district and the more remote and inconvenient districts of the Transvaal. This new turn in Zulu affairs considerably complicates the difficulties of our colonial statesmanship, though we do not in the least apprehend that it increases, but rather diminishes, the danger of inroad or collision.

PERSIA.

From the Gulf our news extends up to the 23rd ult.—the Pioneer, which arrived here (says the Bombay Times) on the 4th inst., having left Bushire on that date.

No further military operations had taken place, and the interest of the intelligence from this quarter is greatly diminished by the Treaty of Peace.

INDIA.

The conferences between Dost Mahomed Khan and Sir John Lawrence broke up on the 28th January, on which day the former took leave of our Plenipotentiary for his own dominions; and the belief is very general that the Dost has given his consent to the establishment of a British residency at Cabul. A melancholy occurence took place on the evening of the 27th ult., which certainly was a sad finale to the Dost's visit. Four officers rode out towards the Dost's camp, and, when about a mile from it met some men, to all appearance in charge of cattle. It, however, turned out that they were Afreedees, and, as soon as the officers passed, the natives turned round and gave them a volley, and immediately bolted into the pass (the officers were unarmed). Lieutenant Hand, 51st Native Infantry, was mortally wounded, after riding a short distance towards the Dost's camp, and fell: he lived about an hour after he was brought in. The Dost's people made a litter and carried him into the camp formed near the Khyber.

AMERICA.

The Royal mail-steamer Asia arrived at Liverpool on Sunday last, bringing files from New York to the 4th instant.

The inaugural address of the new President, which had been expected by this arrival, has not come to hand. The New York Daily News of the 4th thus accounts for the disappointment.—"We learn from Washington that the inaugural address of the President elect will not be put in the hands of the printers until to-morrow, consequently it cannot be received through the mails in season for publication on Thursday morning. There being but one wire working between this city and Washington—the mazes of the Morse line having been blown down at the Susquehanna River on Monday—it will not be possible to receive in season for publication in the evening editions more than a brief abstract of the address, but we shall hope to receive the full document over the wires in season for our edition of Thursday morning."

The Cabinet of Mr. Buchanan, it seems, will be composed of the following individuals, and probably under the following arrangement:—

State Department: Lewis Cass, Michigan. Treasury Department: Howell Cobb, Georgia. Interior Department: Jacob Thompson, Missouri. War Department: John B Floyd, Virginia. Navy Department: Aaron V. Brown, Tennessee. Postmaster-General: J. Glancy Jones, Pennsylvania. Attorney-General: Isaac Toucey, Connecticut.

Washington was in a state of the greatest excitement, in anticipation of the ceremony of inauguration. A telegraphic despatch of the 3rd, in the New York Herald, says:—"The avenues are densely crowded with citizens and strangers of both sexes, notwithstanding the cold. An immense number are at the Capitol, and still greater numbers are wending their way thither. The hotels and private boarding-houses are overflowing, and many persons, doubtless, will pass the night in the streets. This is probably the greatest influx of visitors ever known. Some minor fights have occurred, but nothing serious is likely to take place. Expectation is on tiptoe for to-morrow

The Burdell murder has not lost its interest. A clergyman—the Rev. Mr. Marvine had deposed, before the surrogate, to the marriage of the deceased to Mrs. Cunningham, one of the parties charged with the murder. It has been reported that Governor King has sent written directions to the district attorney, requiring him to take the necessary legal measures for the removal of Dr Connery from his office as coroner. The charges upon which the Governor has proceeded in this matter have, it is said, been drawn up by Mr. Clinton, counsel for Mrs Cunningham, and are based upon the course of conduct he pursued in the investigation of the circumstances attending the death of Dr. Harvey Burdell. The coroner is, it appears, to be impeached, on the ground of incompetency and improper conduct; but he is determined to contest to the last the power and authority of the Governor and for that purpose has already engaged counsel.

---

DEATH OF UNCLE TOM.—The Indianapolis Journal mentions the death in that city of Thomas Magruder, an old negro, aged 110 years. He is supposed to have been the one who suggested the name and the leading features of the character in Mrs. Stowe's novel, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." This supposition is based on the coincidence of name and character, and on the fact (says the Journal) that Henry Ward Beecher during his residence here was a constant visitor of Uncle Tom's, well acquainted with his history, and a sincere admirer of his virtues. We have been told that Mrs. Stowe herself sometimes called to see the old man. Uncle Tom's Cabin, too, was the name of his house among all his acquaintances, and was a familiar phrase here long before Mrs. Stowe immortalised it. At all events we know that it is the impression with all the friends of Mrs. Stowe and her brother in this city that old Uncle Tom was the original, or at least the suggestion, of the hero of the "Cabin."

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

GOVERNMENT ARTISANS AND EMIGRATION.—Upwards of 2000 workmen in various departments of the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, having received notice to leave, in accordance with the reductions in the last army estimates, a memorial, adopted at a large meeting of the men held in the Repository hall at the Royal Arsenal, has been forwarded to Lord Panmure, and strongly recommended by the heads of the departments. The memorialists say that they are out of employment, and add:—"Your memorialists, therefore, humbly beg your Lordship will be pleased to interest yourself in procuring from Government the grant of a free passage, with rations and the use of necessary stores, for a voyage for their wives and families to the Canadas, Australia, or elsewhere." The above memorial has received the favourable consideration of the War-office, and it is confidently believed that the means of free emigration will be provided for the whole of the men.

THE HOSTILITIES AT CANTON.—On Monday morning the deputation appointed by the meeting which was held in the City on Friday waited upon Lord Palmerston and Chancellor Gladstone, the purpose of the memorialists being to thank the Government for their prompt and manly proceeding to him the resolution adopted on that occasion. The Lord Mayor, having introduced the deputation, handed in the resolution. Lord Palmerston said it gave him great satisfaction to find that the course that had been adopted by her Majesty's Government with regard to late events had met with the approbation of so great a commercial community as that of the city of London. He regretted that the House of Commons should have come to an adverse vote on the motion of the hon. member for the West Riding; but, such being the case, no other course than that which the Government had adopted was open for them to follow for the protection of life and our great commercial interests in China. The Government had thought it right to protect the servants of the Crown in China in the course they had adopted, from a conviction that had any other Ministry been in power they would have acted in a precisely similar manner. The Government, in consequence of the adverse vote referred to, had thought it necessary to appeal to the country; and he was proud to hear that a city possessing so great and so many interests as the city of London should have thus testified its approbation of the conduct of the Government. The deputation then withdrew.

FATE OF LEICHARDT, THE AUSTRALIAN EXPLORER.—Mr. Samuel Sidney, author of "The Three Colonies of Australia," will, on Monday evening next to the Geographical Society a paper on the probable fate of Dr. Leichardt, the Australian explorer, communicated to him by a party of squatters in the Wide Bay District, in the extreme north of the province of New South Wales.

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY OF ST. PATRICK.—The seventy-fourth anniversary festival of this excellent charitable institution was held at the Freemasons' Tavern on Tuesday last. The Marquis of Londonderry presided, supported by the Earl of Annesley, Viscount Massereene and Ferrard, Lord Dufferin, Sir Cusack P. Roney, Mr. Commissioner Murphy, &c. From a report which was distributed round the room it appeared that the income of the society during the past year had amounted to £1812 2s. 10d. The subscriptions for the evening amounted to upwards of £150

HOSPITAL FOR DISEASES OF THE CHEST.—The ninth anniversary festival of this charity was held at the London Tavern on Wednesday, when upwards of 200 gentlemen sat down to dinner, which was served in the usual style of that establishment. Earl Granvill presided, supported by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Mr. Sheriff Keats, Dr. Livingston, Mr. H. E. Gurney, Mr. J. Dillon, &c. The annual report states that the total receipts since last year were £3934, of which there had been expended £2812 for current expenses, and £1999 in liquidation of outstanding claims on account of the building and furnishing of the hospital. The toast of "Success to the charity" was most warmly responded to by Mr. S. Gurney subscribing 250 guineas; Mr. H E Gurney, 250 guineas; and Overend, Gurney, and Co., 100 guineas. The total subscription amounted to £3720, exclusive of legacies of £877.

HEALTH OF LONDON.—The total number of deaths registered in London, which in the previous week was 1175, was, in the week that ended Saturday last, 1156. The number of births exceeded the number of deaths by 488. Of the 1156 persons who died, 573 were males and 583 females. Last week the births of 853 boys and 796 girls in all 1644 children were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1857-66 the average number was 1626

MOTHER AND FOUR CHILDREN BURNT TO DEATH.—A fire, involving the destruction of a large amount of property, and the loss of five lives, happened about nine o'clock last Tuesday night at No. 9, St Mary's-terrace, Walworth-road, a millinery dépôt. On the fire being discovered some one injudiciously broke open the door, which caused the flames to spread in every direction round the place, cutting off all escape for Mrs. Rayner and the four children. Mrs. Rayner previously succeeded in bringing down one of her children, and she then returned, regardless of her own life, to endeavour to save the other four. Unfortunately the nearest escape was at the corner of the premises, about a hundred and a half distant. The moment the news reached the station the conductor started with his escape, and arrived before an engine. He then found the flames belching forth from several of the windows, but he at once placed the machine between the burning premises and the adjoining house. When he had got halfway up the flames rushed through another window, igniting the escape, and he was obliged to descend. The fire was not extinguished until the house was nearly burnt out.

THE DOUBLE MURDER AT WALWORTH.—On Wednesday last Thomas Fuller Bacon and Martha Bacon, his wife, who have been in custody for several weeks, charged with the murder of Edith Ann Bacon, aged two years and a half, and Sarah Ann Bacon, aged eleven months, were brought from Horsemonger-lane Gaol to Lambeth Police Court, for final examination before Mr. Elliott. The evidence of the various witnesses having been read over, Mr. Elliott asked Mr. Woodward, who appeared on behalf of Bacon, if it was his wish to offer any remark before the committal of his client. He replied that as his worship, as he understood, had made up his mind to send the case before a jury, he should reserve his defence. The prisoners were then committed for trial; and the chief clerk bound over the witnesses, thirty in number, to appear at the next session of the Central Criminal Court.

COUNTRY NEWS.

NEWSPAPER LITERATURE.—On Friday evening last Mr. J. F Smyth delivered his second lecture on "The Rise and Progress of Newspaper Literature" to a numerous audience. He commenced by tracing the progress of newspapers from 1770—the period at which he had left off on a former occasion. He began and development of the Times "that wonderful organ" was dwelt on at its first issue; the then progressive state of printing whole words continued the jealousy of the French in introducing the steam engine, the first instrument which the printing of two pages per hour was effected; its less astonishing ability to print from 4000 to 5000 per hour now; the arrangements to procure news by pigeon post, by railway, by steamers, &c.; the immense sums paid, and the rapidity with which news is obtained from the remotest quarters of the globe. Connection in telegraphic news was also referred to in the London papers the important news brought by the various packets before they had come up the Southampton waters, in fact, the Southampton people themselves often heard the news brought by their own steamers from abroad after from the London papers. The Stamford Mercury was next alluded to, and a copy of its first number handed round the room. The Illustrated London News was also glanced at, another newspaper in the room which, though like a host of others, had had only a short existence, had a good reputation and circulation and was of universal interest. Its proprietor Lord Brougham was a man of genius and attracted much attention when he conceived the idea of combining illustrations with news, and was the originator of the Illustrated London News. The first copy of this paper was also handed round for the inspection and gratification of the audience. Mr Smyth believed, in reference to Mr Ingram that having attended and aided the operations of his collieries, he embarked in the enterprise, and by great judgment and unsparing liberality secured the influence of the Illustrated London News. The weight of paper used, some weekly circulation of its newspaper. The weight of paper used the staff employed, &c. were then noticed. After paying a high tribute to Mr Ingram's character, energy and usefulness, he expressed a hope that he might long continue to be such an ornament to his country. Boston Guardian

THE ART-TREASURES PALACE AT MANCHESTER.—A high wind on Saturday morning did considerable damage to this building by destroying portions of the glass which runs along the centre and most exposed part of the semicircular roof. At one time it was deemed desirable to withdraw the workmen employed inside from the danger to which they were exposed by the falling fragments of glass; but fortunately the wind abated towards noon, and the damage will easily be repaired.

FEMALE REFORMATORY.—The foundation-stone of a new reformatory and refuge for females was laid in the presence of a large concourse of spectators on Monday last, at Exeter. The Mayor, Mr. W. Buckingham, performed the ceremony, and addresses were afterwards delivered by Sir M Lopes, Mr. Milford, and Sir H. Northcote. Although there are many reformatory institutions for boys in different parts of the country there are but few for girls, and great difficulty has been experienced in placing girls convicted of offences in the county of Devon in reformatory schools. The want will now be soon supplied.

THE LORD LIEUTENANT OF THE WEST RIDING.—The Queen has appointed Lord Milton Lord Lieutenant of the West Riding of Yorkshire, in the room of the Earl of Harewood, deceased.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

By the Constitution of this country Peers are not to interfere in Parliamentary elections. But there is no reason why a Peer who is the leader of a party should not try to influence, not "interfere" with, the course of the legitimate attendants on the hustings by means of "a few observations" to the other members of that body in the State who, in common with soldiers, must keep out of sight of polling-booths and returning officers. A "few observations," rightly interpreted, with due reference to the idiosyncrasy of the orator who proposes to utter them, means a speech two hours long, and which covers six acres—columns we mean—of a morning paper! Nobody, however, objects to listen to, and a great many persons do not object to read, even, such a specimen of a "few observations" when Lord Derby is the speaker.

Whether it was from a conscientious belief that they would in spirit be infringing a great principle of the Constitution by patronising an electioneering address from a Peer, or whether they were engaged in violating the letter of the law, by making election arrangements in their own districts, it is certain that the members of the House of Lords did not muster strongly to respond to Lord Derby's invitation on Monday. Although the attendance of strangers was large, yet even there was to be observed a symptom of the thinning which Town has undergone in the last few days. But, as usual, the constituencies of the Park, the Botanical Gardens, and the Opera, were duly represented by the Ladies' Galleries; and there were enough of foreign diplomatic eyes to stare at the way in which one public man and statesman can talk of another—and that other a First Minister—in a free Parliament and under a limited Monarchy.

Notably among the absent Peers was the Earl of Elgin, whose troublesome notice of motion on the state of our diplomatic relations with the United States disappeared with the suddenness of a pantomimic trick, from the Order-book of the House of Lords exactly at the moment that he kissed her Majesty's hand on his appointment as Minister Plenipotentiary to China. There was but one of the recent ecclesiastical "protégés" of the Premier present to listen to the portrait of a Palmerstonian Bishop as limned by Lord Derby; and, in truth, when his Lordship was painting them with a bold and vigorous grappling with his canvas worthy of a political Michael Angelo, the smooth youthful countenance of the Bishop of London was a study for a physiognomist. Let it, however, be understood that while Lord Derby's speech was essentially personal, simply because he took issue on the question of Lord Palmerston's personal claims on the country; though the ridicule was unsparing, and the sarcasm biting, yet the tone and manner were unusually divested of bitterness; indeed, he threw over his whole speech a colouring of good humour, which went far to make it bearable, even to those whom it most severely attacked. Even Mr. Vernon Smith laughed, as standing on the steps of the throne there was an unmistakable direction of every one's eyes at him when Lord Derby talked of the "appendages" of the Government. But, in truth, the noble Earl could hardly have been unconscious of that which almost every one must have felt as he went along, that in the elaborate picture of Palmerston's political career which he drew there was an involuntary description of a good deal of his own; and when he declared, as he didin fact, that so long as Lord Palmerston had no domestic policy he should receive the support of the Conservative party, it could not but be obvious that Lord Derby was, to a great extent, laying down his own principles of statesmanship. Nevertheless, the speech was a pleasant, and indeed an exciting, entertainment; and nobody who heard it but must have been willing to admit that when next Lord Derby made an oration he would be glad to be "there to hear."

There was among the private strangers a good deal of incredulity when the Leader of the House of Lords was pointed out to them in the person of a mild boyish-looking—shall we say dumpy?—gentleman, who, in the dim distance of the Peers' Chamber, seems to be about eighteen years old. But the unenlightened stranger, who at first listened with dismay to the somewhat thick utterance of the champion who was to defend the Ministry against the slashing onslaught which had been just made against them, was relieved after the delivery of half a dozen sentences; and he heard with surprise, and afterwards with admiration, the sharp and telling reply which Lord Granville, who had been sitting calmly all the evening, and not taking a note, let drop in a calm, unexcited manner, which perhaps is only to be paralleled by Sir James Graham's way of saying severe things. Every point, and every sentence was a point, told. When an opponent, forgetful of the decorous regularity of debate, interrupts a speaker in full swing, only once, to make an explanation, it is to be supposed that he is not unobservant of the fact that his antagonist is making a hit. But when the same interruption is repeated two or three times, and when the person to whom the remarks in progress are applicable cannot sit still, but fidgets, and consults with his neighbours, and evidently instructs some friend what to say when he is to go in for his "innings," it is tolerably clear that the result of the discussion is not exactly that which was anticipated by its originator. The truth is that people who make personal attacks are proverbially thin-skinned; and Lord Granville very satisfactorily proved that the present head of the house of Derby is not exempt from that constitutional defect. In brief, though going rather out of his line—which is the sensible and humorous (slightly heavy, perhaps)—Lord Granville made an admirable and demolishing speech; which, if not exactly congenial to the ordinary atmosphere of the Upper House, was quite justified by the tone adopted by the initiator of the debate.

Every man is useful in some way or other; and one of the uses to which certain speakers in either House of Parliament are adapted is that valuable one of relieving the minds of the audience from undue tension, by interposing level and unexciting—perhaps we may say dull—speeches between the high-pressure addresses of the leaders. It was expected that Lord Malmesbury, who, in the exercise of his vocation, performed that valuable part in Monday's proceedings, would have been succeeded by Lord Ellenborough or Lord Grey, who both looked mischievous. But perhaps they were deterred by the very ominous look of the Duke of Argyll, who was evidently prepared to vindicate the position of the young blood of the Ministry. Whatever was the cause, there was a palpable collapse in the middle of Lord Malmesbury's speech. Peers went away, ladies vanished, and members of the House of Commons deserted their gallery—all of them, probably, influenced by the feeling that there was yet time for a regular, though late, dinner; and as the persistent and long-enduring Strangers' Gallery is not sufficient temptation to bring out the greater orators, they suffered the discussion to die away somewhat ingloriously.

During the time of the Great Exhibition of 1851 a caricature appeared, in which a spacious theatre was exhibited with three persons composing the audience and the manager from the stage earnestly intreating them to depart. The clearness with which emptiness of benches was brought out, and the idea of solitude and stillness which pervaded the picture, were exceedingly well managed. Now, the House of Commons during the last week would have afforded an excellent opportunity for just such a sketch.

SKETCHES IN CASHMERE.

In a recent number of the Friend of India the writer thus glances at the natural resources of this beautiful country, which, he regrets, are in great part lost to the people through acts of misgovernment:—

Nowhere has Nature lavished her gifts with a more bountiful hand than she has done in Cashmere. The valley has a climate wonderfully adapted for the European constitution—a climate varying, according to altitude, from the genial warmth of Italy to the frigid temperature of Lapland. The fruitful soil is capable of producing in abundance everything the heart of man can desire: rich meadows of lucerne and clover, watered by never-failing rills; gently undulating hill-sides covered with a sweet pasturage far excelling that of Australia. The mountains are clothed with magnificent timber, and are rich in mineral ores. There is a perfect natural inland water communication, connected by the Jhelum with Kurrachee. The water-power which descends from the circle of snow-capped mountains is sufficient to turn the wheels of all the manufactories and mills of the world. Cashmere is itself the high-road by which the merchant may send to the vast regions of Northern Asia the manufactures of England, the superabundant cereals of the valley, the sugar and spices of India, the salt of the Punjaub, receiving in return their unrivalled wool, their borax, their furs, their gold-dust, as well as many other products of the mountains which Anglo-Saxon industry alone can develop.

The three accompanying characteristic Illustrations are from the sketch-book of a Correspondent. The larger view shows a picturesque group of ruins situated at the foot of the hills three miles east of the town of Islamabad, on the north side of the Behut, or Jhelum. In the town and neighbourhood are about 300 shops of shawl-weavers, and chintzes, coarse cottons, and woollens, are manufactured here. The ruins are the remains of a temple, said to have been built 500 B.C. They consist of two large rooms, each about thirty feet long, surrounded by a quadrangular colonnade, about 100 yards square. The granite blocks of which the temple is built are of immense size; every particle has once been elaborately carved; but, notwithstanding the depth of the sculpture and hardness of the material, almost all the figures and hieroglyphics are effaced.

Beneath the Illustration of the Temple ruins is shown the interior of a Lama Temple, with a prayer-wheel at work. These wheels are about ten feet high by eight or ten in diameter, made of large rolls of cloth, on which the Lama faith is written, and inclosed in a wooden case painted all over with facetious and not very correct representations of gods, devils, &c. They turn on a pivot, and are pulled round by a strap in the manner represented; the Lamas fancying themselves on the high road to heaven all the time, pulling day and night, and not having time in consequence to wash.

Major Cunningham, in his admirable work on Ladak, more minutely describes this prayer when as he witnessed it in operation in that country.—

The prayer-cylinder, or manichhos-khor (the precious religious wheel), is a very ingenious instrument, and does great credit to the genius of the Thibetians. The body of the instrument is a metal cylinder

TARTAR OF LADAK, AND YARKUND PONY.

RUINS OF ANCIENT TEMPLE, NEAR ISLAMABAD.

about three inches in height, and from two to two and a half inches in diameter. The axis is prolonged below to form a handle. The cylinder is filled with rolls of printed prayers and charms, which revolve as the instrument is turned round. Every Lama carries a chhos-khor, which he keeps perpetually turning by a gentle motion of the hand, assisted by a cubical piece of iron fastened by a chain to the outside. As every revolution of a prayer is equivalent to its recitation, the chhos-khor is a very ingenious instrument for multiplying the number of a man's prayers. * * * These instruments are found of all sizes and in all positions. Cylinders about one foot in height are placed in rows around the temples, and are turned by the votaries before entering. Larger cylinders are found near villages, turned by water, which keeps them perpetually revolving.

The uppermost characteristic Sketch shows a Tartar of Ladak, mounted upon a Yarkund pony—the usual mode of journeying through these mountainous districts.

In addition to the long-haired bull, and the kiang, or Thibetian zebra, with horses and other animals of common species, Ladak produces the celebrated shawl-goat, yielding that curly, soft, and glossy wool used in the fabrication of the most costly shawls. The best kinds are only manufactured to order; but the commoner sorts are sold in Yarkund, at prices varying from £10 to £60 the pair. The number annually exported is usually about five hundred pairs, worth altogether £50000. The great sheep of Thibet, however, are its most valuable creatures, supplying food, clothes, and carriage.

It is lamentable to find the country blighted by the misrule of Ghulab Singh, whose sole object appears to be the increase of his private fortune:—

From the purchase of a Cashmere shawl to the sale of a basket of apples, from the auction of an elephant to the barter of a kid, no transaction can take place without payment of his commission. No native traveller can pass into or out of his territories without everything the man possesses passing through the taxgatherer's sieve. The pony he rides on, its saddle and bridle, the clothes he wears, the money in his purse, the ring in his wife's nose, all are rated as merchandise, and taxed accordingly. The gatherers plunder the trader at every river, at every pass, and at every town. Whole villages are deserted, the country not half cultivated, the grand high-road to Central Asia deserted, and the nations north of the Jhelum supplied by Russian traders. No observant traveller can pass through Cashmere—we write on the testimony of an eye-witness without being struck by the wobegone look of the population. No one ever sings in Cashmere. The bright clothes and natty turbans of the British cities are exchanged for mean and filthy garments. The trappings of the horses, the silver jewels for the women in which the citizens of Delhi and Agra, Umritsur and Mooltan, delight, are at Jummoo made of tinned iron.

The Lamas of the neighbouring regions of Thibet were but recently despoiled of their accumulated treasures, now stored up in forts to which no European is allowed access. Lamas without noses, coolies mutilated for attempting to escape, old sepoys reduced to starve after losing toes and fingers in the cold of Iskardo, appeal to the traveler, beseeching him to hasten the advent of the British raj. The people, crushed down to utter apathy, are ceasing even to toil, and in a few years the traditional arts of Cashmere will be almost extinct.

"PRAYER WHEEL" IN CASHMERE.

THE WAR IN CHINA.

CHINESE MODERN JUNK OF WAR: SECOND CLASS.

CHINESE VESSELS OF WAR.

In connection with this subject we this week illustrate the War-junks of China in past times, in comparison with those of the present day; showing the important advancement and extensive alteration that has taken place in the forms of the Chinese fighting vessels. Twenty years ago their ships of war were short, misshapen masses of timber, quaint and ungainly in appearance, almost unmanageable, and the wonder to seamen of other nations how a craft of the character of the junk was able to make headway, or combat the dangers and intricacies of the sea and coast. Since then the progress of naval architecture in China has advanced far beyond what the people of that country might have been given credit for; and, though still carrying out their eccentric tastes in the more prominent features of their vessels, the shipping of the present day is of excellent and seaworthy character. In the place of the deep-waisted craft of former times, with head and stern forming nearly a half-circle, they have now vessels in which this peculiarity is greatly modified, and in some vessels entirely dispensed with. In the lorchas, snake-boats, smuggling craft, pirate junks, and other boats peculiar to the China Seas, the lines of the vessels are of the most beautiful character, and they exhibit the greatest speed in all their movements and performances. The armament of war-junks, twenty years ago, consisted principally of matchlocks, mounted on the rails of the bulwarks; at the present time, the junks of the first class carry guns between decks, like our frigates, and of a calibre that has astonished the officers of H.M. ships now in their waters, many of the guns taken being larger in bore and weight of metal than any we manufacture in this country. Great improvements have also taken place in the material of their sails, and in the general handling of their vessels. But one great peculiarity in the regular legitimate Chinese junk, outliving all other improvements and advances, is the large eye in the headboards of the vessel, without which the Chinese firmly believe that no vessel can see how to sail.

Travellers in China all agree that this extraordinary people are calculated and ought to be a great maritime nation. M. Huc, who has furnished us with one of the most interesting works extant on that country, says:—

China would present also inexhaustible resources for a navy. Without speaking of the vast extent of her coasts, along which the numerous population pass the greater part of their lives on the sea, the great rivers and immense lakes in the interior, always covered with fishing and trading junks, might furnish multitudes of men, habituated from their infancy to navigation nimble, experienced, and capable of becoming excellent sailors for long expeditions. The officers of our ships of war that have visited the Chinese Seas have often been astonished to meet, far away from any coast, their fishermen braving the tempests, and guiding their miserable vessels in safety over enormous waves that threatened every moment to swallow them. The Chinese would very soon be able to build vessels on the model of those of Europe, and a few years would enable them to put to sea with such a fleet as has never been seen.

CHINESE REBELS.

No doubt the reader will think the notion of this immense army, this avalanche of men descending from the high tableland of Asia, as in the time of Tchingis Khan, these innumerable Chinese vessels ploughing all seas and coming even to blockade our ports, an exceedingly fantastic one, and we ourselves are certainly far from thinking it likely to be realised. But when you become acquainted with this empire of 360,000,000 of inhabitants, when you know what are the resources in soil and population of these rich and fertile countries, you cannot but ask what should prevent such a nation from exercising great influence over the affairs of the human race. What it wants is a man of genius, a man truly great, capable of assimilating the power and vitality of this nation, more populous than all Europe, and which counts more than thirty centuries of civilisation. Should an Emperor arise among them possessed of a great intellect, a will of iron, a reformer determined to come at once to a rupture with the anoyle traditions, and initiate his people into the progressive civilisation of the West, we believe that the work of regeneration would proceed with rapid strides, and that perhaps those Chinese who now appear such a very ridiculous people might be thought of somewhat more seriously, and might even occasion mortal uneasiness to those who covet so eagerly the spoils of the ancient nations of Asia.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, March 22. 4th Sunday in Lent.
MONDAY, 23.—Treaty of Vienna signed, 1815.
TUESDAY, 24.—Portobello taken, 1742.
WEDNESDAY, 25.—Lady Day.
THURSDAY, 26.—Duke of Cambridge born, 1819.
FRIDAY, 27.—Peace of Amiens, 1802.
SATURDAY, 28.—Raphael born, 1483.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 28, 1857.

| Sunday | Monday. | Tuesday. | Wednesday. | Thursday. | Friday. | Saturday |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| M h m 11 5 | A h m 11 35 | M h m - 0 30 | A h m 0 50 | M h m 1 15 | A h m 1 35 | M h m 1 55 | A h m 2 15 | M h m 2 35 | A h m 2 50 | M h m 3 10 | A h m 3 30 | M h m 3 50 | A h m 4 10 |

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Monday, March 23, and during the Week, the New Drama, in Four Acts, with new Scenery, &c., entitled A LIFE'S TRIAL; after which, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, and first time at Half-price, DOUBLE-FACED PEOPLE; on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, after the Drama, A WICKED WIFE.

ROYAL PRINCESS' THEATRE.—On Monday and during the Week will be presented Shakspeare's Tragedy of KING RICHARD II.: King Richard II., by Mr. C. Kean; Queen, by Mrs. C. Kean. Preceded by Music Hath Charms.

PRINCESS' THEATRE.—Passion Week, commencing April 6, HENRY RUSSELL, Composer of "The Cambee's Wife," "The Maniac," "The ship on Fire, and many other popular Songs, will give his Entertainment entitled THE FAR WEST: or, Every-day Life in America; in which he will relate his Anecdotes Descriptive of American Life and Manners, and sing his most celebrated compositions. The Second Part will consist of a Series of Sketches entitled NEGRO LIFE. Mr. Russell will accompany himself on one of Collard and Collard's magnificent Bi-chord Pianofortes, made expressly for him by that eminent firm. Tickets and places may be secured of Mr. Mansfieldman, at the Box-office from Eleven to Four. Doors open at Half-past Seven; commence at Eight.

ADELPHI THEATRE ROYAL.—On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, by Desire, "Irish Assurance," with "Barney the Baron." In and Out of Place," "A Night at Notting-hill" on Friday "The Happy Man" will be revived for the Benefit of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams. Madame Celeste will Reappear on Easter Monday.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Monday, March 23rd, and all the Week, Shakspeare's KING HENRY IV., with Equestrian Illustrations. Hotspur Mr. James Holloway; Prince Henry Mr W Cook; Falstaff, Mr. Anson. After which Equestrian Exercises by the Clerks. To conclude with a "Moresco Choir" of an entertaining nature. Commence at Seven o'Clock. Dress Boxes, 4s.; Upper Boxes, 3s.; Pit, 2s.; Gallery, 1s.; Upper Gallery, 6d.

GREAT NATIONAL STANDARD.—The greatest amount of talent ever witnessed in London.—Mr. Pope, Mr. Robinson, and Miss Jackson.—At Sadler's Wells, with the SPANISH MINSTRELS, seven in number, and the SPANISH DANCERS, by permission of J. B. Buckstone, Esq.; every evening, and no advance in the prices.

CANTERBURY HALL, Westminster-road.—The above Magnificent HALL is Open Every Evening for Musical Entertainments, consisting of Selections from all the popular Operas, Choruses, Madrigals, Glees, Duets &c supported by Artists of Celebrity.—Commence at 7 o'clock precisely.—Suppers, &c., until Midnight.

MR. and Mrs. HENRI DRAYTON have the honour to announce their new and successful entertainment, ILLUSTRATED PEDESTRIANISM, at the REGENT GALLERY QUADRANT, Every Evening (Saturday excepted), at 8 o'clock. Saturday Morning Performances at Three o'clock precisely. Admission, 1s. and 2s.; Stalls, 3s., which may be secured at the Gallery; or at Cramer, Beale, and Chappell's Pianoforte and Music Warehouse, 42, New Bond-street.

THE SISTERS SOPHIA and ANNIE, in their Original Entertainment, entitled SKETCHES from NATURE, will appear at GOSPEL, March 23rd; BATLEY, 24th; HECKMONDWICKE, 25th; WAKEFIELD, 26th and 27th.

MR. W. S. WOODIN'S OLIO of ODDITIES, with New Costumes and various novelties, Vocal and Characteristic, EVERY EVENING (Saturday excepted), at 8. Morning Performances every Saturday, at Three. Private Boxes and Stalls may be secured, without extra charge, at the Box-office of Polygraphic Hall, King William-street, Charing-cross. The Hall has been entirely redecorated.

THE BROUSIL FAMILY respectfully announce that they will give a Series of FOUR SOIREES MUSICALES, at their own residence, 23, Nottingham-place, New-road, on THURSDAYS, March 19 and 26, April 2 and 9: to commence at Half-past Eight o'Clock. Subscription, One Guinea. Single Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each, at Robert W. Olivier's, Musicseller and Publisher, 19, Old Bond-street, Piccadilly.

HERR ERNST PAUER has the honour to announce that he will give THREE SOIREES MUSICALES, at Willis's Rooms, St James's, on WEDNESDAYS, March 25, April 22, and May 13. To commence at half-past eight o'clock. Subscription tickets for the series, one guinea; single tickets, half-a-guinea each; which may be had at the principal Music Warehouses: and of Herr Ernst Pauer, at his new residence, 5, Stanley-place, Onslow-square.

OKEY'S PARIS and the PARISIANS—St. Cloud, Versailles, Salon, &c.—Cartoons—Piano—Hogarth Sketches Wednesday, Thursday, Friday Evenings, at Eight. Tuesday and Saturday Mornings at Three. Seats, 1s., 2s., & 3s. 21, Swallow-street, Regent-street, facing New Burlington-street

MR. J. L. TOOLE, of the LYCEUM THEATRE, respectfully announces to the PUBLIC his BENEFIT on TUESDAY, 31st inst. THE WONDER, Mr and Mrs Dillon. Miss Woolgar, Mr. Stuart, Mr. Toole; "Dandizette the Dancer," Mr Toole; "Good for Nothing," Miss Woolgar, Mr. Toole. "My Friend from Leatherhead," and the Dazzling Farce from "Conrad and Medora."—Tickets at the Box-office; and of Mr. Toole, 19, Cecil-street, Strand

GALLERY of ILLUSTRATION.—The LAST NIGHTS of Miss P. HORSON'S (Mr. and Mrs. Gorman Reed's) present Entertainment. On MONDAY, 23rd MARCH, and During the Week, the Last Performances of "Our Wife's Governess," and "Deranged Musician." On MONDAY, MARCH 30th, and During the Week the Last Performances of the Original Entertainment introducing Mrs. Keeley, Mr. Robert Keeley, Frank Matthews, the Charley Boy, &c. In Passion Week One Performance only—PASTHEAD MORNING, APRIL 3, at Three. In Easter Week, Every Evening at the New Gallery. Mr and Mrs. German Reed will Reappear at the Gallery of Illustration, Regent-street, on Monday, 27th April—Admission 2s., Stalls, 3s. May be secured at the Gallery, from Eleven till Four daily, and at Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street.

ROYAL SURREY GARDENS open during PASSION and EASTER WEEKS.—Mr. THACKERAY will deliver his Lectures on the FOUR GEORGES in Passion Week (April 6th, 7th, and 8th). Miss P. HORTON (Mr. and Mrs. German Reed) will give their positively last performances of their POPULAR ILLUSTRATIONS during Passion Week, commencing Monday, April 6th, at Three. For particulars apply at the offices of the Royal Surrey Gardens, and at Keith, Prowse, and Co.'s, 24, Cheapside. Mr. and Mrs. T. GERMAN REED will reappear at the Gallery of Illustration, Regent-street, on Monday, April 27th, in an entirely new Entertainment.—W. ELLIS, Sec.

MR. ALBERT SMITH'S MONT BLANC, BADEN, UP the RHINE, and PARIS, is NOW OPEN every evening (except Saturday) at Eight o'clock. Stalls, 3s.; area, 2s.; gallery, 1s. Stalls can be secured at the Box-office, Egyptian-hall, Piccadilly, every day, between Eleven and Four, without any extra charge.—The Morning Performances take place every Tuesday and Saturday, at Three o'clock.

GENERAL TOM THUMB PERFORMS DAILY at PRINCE of WALES'S BAZAR, 209, Regent-street, from Half-past Twelve to Two, Half-past Three to Five, and Half-past Seven to Ten. Admission 1s.; seats free. Doors open Half-an-hour previous. "Villikins" and "Robbing Around" 11, Bar approval three times in One hour Majesty. Admission, 1s. and 2s.

BALL, HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS.—Miss JAMES, of the Royal Opera, has the honour to announce that her Annual FULL DRESS BALL will take place at the above Rooms on TUESDAY NEXT, MARCH 24th. Adams's Band will attend. The Ball under the direction of Mr. Charles Coote. Gentlemen's Tickets, 10s. 6d.; Ladies' ditto, 7s. 6d; including refreshments. Tickets to be obtained at Jullien's, Regent-street; Sams', St. James's-street; Duff and Hodgson's, Oxford-street; at the above Rooms; and at Miss James's Academy, 54, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, Exeter-hall.—Conductor, Mr. COSTA. FRIDAY, MARCH 27th, Handel's ISRAEL in EGYPT. With Orchestra of 700 Performers. Tickets, 3s.; reserved, 5s.; and stalls, 10s. 6d. each, at the Society's Offices, No. 6 in Exeter-hall EXHIBITION.—Now Open, Messrs. DICKINSON'S GALLERIES of PORTRAITS of DISTINGUISHED PERSONS. Admission, One Shilling. 114, Bond street.

DESIRABLE COUNTRY RESIDENCE TO BE LET, in a delightful Hunting and Fishing locality, in the county of Herts. The House comprises spacious Drawing and Dining Rooms, Five good Bed-rooms, Kitchen, Servants' Offices, Wine and Coal Cellars, with Two Three-stall Stables, Carriage and Chaise House, productive Garden, Orchard, and Meadows fabout seven acres, with a Right of Fishing in the river Colne, a celebrated river for fish; the whole surrounded with large Parks and Seats of the neighbouring gentry. Rent £50 per annum. Apply on the Premises, Mill-end, Hockmansworth, Herts, near the Watford Station on the London and North-Western Railway.

EXETER HALL.—TONIC SOL-FA ASSOCIATION.—A CHORAL MEETING of this Association will be held in EXETER HALL, on TUESDAY Evening, MARCH 31st, 1857. The Chair will be taken by W. E. HICKSON, Esq., Author of "The Singer's Master," and an Essay on "The Use of Singing" The CHOIR, consisting of about 800 Voices, entirely without the assistance of any instrumental Accompaniment, will sing pieces selected from the Works of Mendelssohn, Naylor, Hecker, Spohr, Webbe, and other eminent Composers. During the interval the Rev. JOHN CURWEN will give a brief Lesson on the Method. To commence at 7 30. Doors open at 6 30. Tickets (for the Body of the Hall, Is.; or Western Gallery, 2s. 6d.), and Books of Words (2d. each) may be obtained of Ward and Co., 27, Paternoster-row; Keith, Prowse, and Co., 48, Cheapside; Fabian Saun and Co., 86, Newgate-street; Ewer and Co., 390, Oxford-street; Forster, 76, Strand; Sprague, 7, Finsbury Pavement; Tolkien, 27, King William-street. Clay, Mead and Powell, 191, Whitechapel High-street; Starling, 87, Upper-street, Islington; and of any Teacher of the Method.

EXHIBITION of the SOCIETY of BRITISH ARTISTS, Incorporated by Royal Charter.—The Forty-fourth Annual Exhibition of this Society is NOW OPEN from Nine a.m. until Dusk. Admission, 1s.
Suffolk-street, Pall-mall East. ALFRED CLINT, Hon. Secretary.

THE NATIONAL INSTITUTION of FINE ARTS, PORTLAND GALLERY, 316, Regent-street (opposite the Polytechnic Institution). The above Society's Tenth Annual Exhibition of the Works of Modern Painters is NOW OPEN from Nine till Dusk. Admittance, One Shilling. Catalogues Sixpence.
BENJAMIN SMITH, Secretary.

KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON.—Instruction in the Art and Scientific Principles of Photography, by THOMAS FREDERICK HARDWICH, Esq., Lecturer in Photography at Kew Observatory, commences on MONDAY, APRIL 6th. His LECTURES on the SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES of PHOTOGRAPHY, Illustrated by Practical Demonstrations in the Art.
For a Prospectus apply to J. W. Cunningham, Esq., Secretary, King's College, London.
R. W. JELF, D.D., Principal.

ROYAL WESTMINSTER OPHTHALMIC HOSPITAL, Charles-street, founded in 1816 for relieving the Poor afflicted with Diseases of the Eyes. This hospital was the first institution in London which opened its doors to relieve poor persons on their own application without letters of recommendation. There are 30 beds for in-patients, the wards are large and airy, but the want of means precludes the admission of half that number. The visits of the Chrisman and the benevolent are respectfully invited, and their contributions extreme for this useful charity.
Subscriptions thankfully received by Messrs. Coutts and Co., bankers, Strand, by Messrs. Drummonds, bankers, Charing-cross; and by the Secretary at the Hospital.
The Committee gratefully acknowledge the following contributions

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| William Webb, Esq. .. .. | £40 | 0 | 0 | Mrs. Clement .. .. .. | £50 | 0 | 0 |
| Joseph Stirges, Esq. .. .. | 25 | 0 | 0 | Miss Baily .. .. .. | 25 | 0 | 0 |
| Chas. P. Story, Esq. .. .. | 10 | 0 | 0 | Mrs. M. Arrystage .. .. | 21 | 0 | 0 |
| Joseph Reynolds, Esq. .. ditto | 5 | 5 | 0 | Miss S. M. Brandwood .. | 3 | 0 | 0 |
| The late Miss Caster Longman, Esq. (legacy) .. .. | 5 | 5 | 0 | Mrs. Martyn .. .. .. | 2 | 2 | 0 |
| F. B. Crutchley, Esq. .. .. | 2 | 2 | 0 | Mrs. Courage .. .. | annual | 1 | 1 | 0 |
| Capt. J. W. Fox .. .. .. | 2 | 2 | 0 | Mrs. P. W. Muro .. .. | annual | 1 | 1 | 0 |
| The Rev. J. W. Hammond .. .. | 5 | 0 | 0 | Mrs. Carter .. .. .. | annual | 1 | 1 | 0 |
| G. O. Leicester, Esq. .. annual | 1 | 1 | 0 | H. A. Joseph, Esq. .. | annual | 1 | 1 | 0 |

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MARCH 21, 1857.

UP to the moment at which the necessities of our large publication compel us to go to press, the Prime Minister has issued no address to the electors of Tiverton, or avowed in any way the domestic policy of his Government. In a later edition we shall be enabled to report his Lordship's speech at the Mansion-house dinner, when it is expected that he will declare himself either to have, or not to have, a policy in accordance with the views of the great Liberal party, who are at present well inclined to acknowledge him as a chief. With or without such a policy it is probable that he will obtain a majority in the new Parliament; without such a policy it is certain that he will not be able to retain for any long period the confidence of a body of supporters sufficiently numerous and well disciplined to keep him in office. In the mean time, if his Lordship do not declare himself, it will not be from want of challenges, either from friends or foes, and especially from the latter. Lord John Russell, Sir James Graham, and Mr. Disraeli, have severally characterised him in speeches and in addresses as a man without a policy at home, but not without a dangerous policy abroad. Sir James Graham and Mr. Disraeli are particularly spiteful on this subject, and their spite is none the less seasonable and effective for its purpose in being leavened with truth. But the victory will remain with the Minister if it shall so please him. A few sentences from his mouth or from his pen will leave his opponents powerless to do him injury, and make him both theoretically and virtually, the master of the situation. The Reform spirit may have been in a trance, but it is not dead; and the task reserved for the great statesman of our day is to reawaken it into life and activity, and direct its energies to the social and political welfare of the people. Lord John Russell has principles which fit him for the leadership, but he is uncertain, and wants tact and temper. Lord Palmerston, on the other hand, is not uncertain. He has tact in a high degree, and he never loses temper. He inspires confidence amongst all who are associated with him; but he wants—or, if he do not want, he has never yet expressed and promulgated—those great principles which make people rally around Lord John Russell, even when they do not like him. Lord Palmerston is the man of the present hour; but if he would be the man of the next hour he must speak out. Patriotic, high-minded, and, judged by its remotest results, eminently peaceable as his foreign policy is, the bulk of the people who approve of it—partly from faith, partly from reason, partly from admiration of the truly British "pluck" of which it is so brilliant a specimen—require a spice of home policy, if it were only to season their approval with something which they more thoroughly understand. If his Lordship will undo that little error about Mr. Locke King's motion, and if he will endeavour to realise the hope of the thousands and hundreds of thousands of honest citizens who are now deprived of the suffrage, he will waft himself into an amount of power and influence which any Minister might envy, and which no Minister in England in late years has either obtained or deserved.

THE appointment of the Earl of Elgin as Minister Plenipotentiary to China has been received with universal satisfaction. Lord Derby and Lord Malmesbury approve; Mr. Disraeli is content, Mr. Gladstone—who could speak upon that subject, or upon any other, for seven hours, and still leave it unexhausted for a second day's debate—has nothing to allege against it; and Mr. Cobden himself is as pleased as he can be with anything done by so warlike a personage as the Prime Minister. A man of high rank was needed for a mission of such importance, if it were only out of respect to the Emperor of China. The Central Government at Pekin has taken no step to support the obstinacy of the Governor of Canton; but, on the contrary, if the information conveyed by the last mail be correct, has forbidden the Mandarins, at the other four ports at which the British are allowed to trade, to take any part in the quarrel. If such policy prove to be that of the Emperor, it is well that the choice of our Government has fallen on a nobleman so distinguished as Lord Elgin. The Emperor will thereby understand—if the Chinese are capable in their intolerable conceit of understanding anything European—how desirous this country is of treating him with the utmost deference, and of being represented at his Court by a person who represents not only its high aristocracy of birth, but its still higher aristocracy of talent.

The usual injustice of Englishmen at home towards the Englishmen abroad who are charged with the difficult and generally thankless task of maintaining the national honour against the attacks of civilised and barbarian enemies, has been meted out in no unsparing measure to Sir John Bowring. Those who are still guilty of this injustice rejoice in the appointment of the Earl of Elgin, because they see in it the virtual condemnation of the present Governor of Hong-Kong. But the Government of Lord Palmerston did not intend, and the country in general will not consider, the appointment in this light. The dispute having acquired dimensions not anticipated, it is natural that its management should devolve upon higher agencies than those originally concerned, and Sir John Bowring will be relieved of responsibility, not because he has done wrong or because he might hereafter do wrong, but simply because a local officer is not the proper authority to conduct to its issue a quarrel which threatens to become general.

As for Sir John Bowring, who has been accused by the virulent factions of his countrymen of all the most atrocious crimes which it is possible for a man to commit—of deliberate falsehood, and of reckless destruction of human life—we trust that he has sufficient philosophy to despise calumny, and to trust for his vindication to the verdict of Time, which rights all wrongs, and always does justice to those who are wrongfully accused. The heats of party strife will cool, or will break out in some new direction;—and then, if not sooner, the slanders heaped upon him for the fault—if fault it be—of having been jealously watchful of the honour of his country amid insolent and ignorant semi-barbarians, who mistake magnanimity for weakness, will be no more remembered against him. When Wellington was patiently maturing victory in the Peninsula, he was slandered in England, and threatened with public trial. When the gallant Raglan was dying at his post in the Crimea, and enacting the hero's part in the heroism of silent suffering as well as in the heroism of personal courage, he was slandered by the unthinking as well as by the evil-minded, both in the camp and at home. Without comparing Sir John Bowring with either of these eminent servants of their country, we may trust—as we do—that he has their patient philosophy; and that a consciousness of rectitude will enable him to endure, if he do not despise, the calumnies which have been directed against him. At present he may have the consolation of reflecting that the opponents of his acts have invariably been men who knew nothing whatever of China; and that his supporters are the whole British population in Hong-Kong and the five free ports of China, and all the great merchants of London and Liverpool who trade with China, and whose pecuniary interests are seriously injured by the war. These facts alone may serve as a justification of the course which he, a friend of China and a lover of peace, was reluctantly compelled to take in a very difficult and exceptional position. Such a justification, from the persons most competent to give it, far outweighs any condemnation which ignorant Lords and equally ignorant Commoners—out of office, and anxious, on this pretext or any other, to get into office—may pronounce on a course of proceeding which only requires to be successful to be praised by thousands who are now unsparing in their denunciation.

THE COURT.

The Queen continues to enjoy her accustomed good health. During the week just closed her Majesty has taken almost daily carriage airings, accompanied by her two eldest children.

On Monday the Queen held a Court at Buckingham Palace, at which M. Gonzales Bravo had an audience, and delivered to her Majesty his credentials as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the Queen of Spain. The Earl of Elgin, K.T., was also presented to the Queen by the Earl of Clarendon, and kissed hands on being appointed her Majesty's Plenipotentiary to China. In the evening the Queen and Prince Albert, with the Princess Royal, honoured the Princess's Theatre with their presence.

On Wednesday the birthday of her Royal Highness the Princess Louisa—her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, accompanied by the Princess Amalie of Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst, paid a visit of congratulation to the Queen. In the evening her Majesty and the Prince, with the Princess Louisa, Prince Arthur, and the Princess Helena, honoured the Adelphi Theatre with their presence.

Yesterday (Friday) her Majesty presided at a Privy Council at Buckingham Palace, and performed her last official act in connection with the expiring Parliament, by ordering its prorogation preparatory to the dissolution on Monday next.

His Excellency Feronk Khan, Envoy Extraordinary from Persia, arrived in town on Thursday from Paris, with the intention of remaining some weeks in London. Captain Lynch, of the R.I.C.'s service, will attend on his Excellency during his séjour in England.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston gave a grand banquet on Wednesday evening to his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge at Cambridge House. A distinguished company were invited to meet the Royal Duke: and after dinner her Ladyship had a crowded assemblage of the aristocracy and fashionable world at Cambridge House.

The Countess of Clreptowitch is about to renew the hospitalities of the Russian Legation. The receptions in that house are to be reopened for the first time on the 25th instant, with a grand dinner and evening party, which will be repeated on the 1st of April.

His Excellency Count d'Appony, the Austrian Minister, has just returned to Grandon House, from Germany, where his Excellency has been to attend the obsequies of his brother.

TROOP-SHIPS FOR CHINA.—CLIFFORD'S BOAT-LOWERING GEAR.—In reply to an inquiry from Admiral Walcott, in the House of Commons, on Tuesday last, as to whether the troop-ships, about to proceed on the expedition, were to be provided with this invention in the same way as emigrant-ships are, the First Lord replied, "that in every trial that had been made of it its use had been attended with complete success, and that he hoped it would soon be universally adopted." He contended that the tricolor was the only banner of Italy, and that a law ought to be passed, fixing the national colours once for all. General de la Marmora, Minister of War, replied that the subject needed no new law, and quoted the decree of April 19th, 1848, issued by Charles Albert at Volta, and a circular of the Minister of Marine in 1851, prescribing that the azure band should be added to the three colours. The seizure of certain flags was owing to the obstinacy of some sea captains in refusing to conform to the decree of Count de Cavour deprecated any discussion on the national colours as highly inopportune at the present moment, the question had been settled by the decree of Charles Albert, and the intention of that Monarch had clearly been to give the nation one single flag and not two. The blue was a colour to which many Piedmontese were sincerely attached. "Say all!" here exclaimed M. Valerio, a member of the left "the great hopes awakened by the tricolor must be associated with the glorious and ancient traditions of the monarchy of Savoy!" These words were received with loud cheers; and, after some further observations, the Chamber voted the order of the day.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL IN THE CITY.

On Thursday afternoon, according to public announcement, Lord John Russell met his friends and supporters in the large room of the London Tavern, which was densely crowded. On the platform were Mr. Moffatt, M.P., Mr. S. Warren, M.P., Mr. Edwin James, Q.C., John M'Gachen, Esq., Captain M'Leod, the High Bailiff of Southwark, — Scurlock, Esq., Mr. Hankey, Serjeant Parry, Mr. Wickham, Mr. F. Bennoch, Deputy Harrison, Mr. Whitehurst, Mr. Commissioner Prendergast, Dr. Spark, Alderman Humphery, Alderman Salomons, Mr. Austin, Mr. Beardmore, Mr. J. Baxter Langley, Mr. Goodalls, Mr. Roberts, &c. The entrance of Lord John Russell into the hall was received with the most enthusiastic and long-continued cheering. Mr. Moffatt, M.P., moved, and Mr. Roberts seconded, a motion that Mr. Thomson Hankey take the chair.

Mr. Hankey having taken the chair amidst immense cheering,

The Chairman, after a few prefatory remarks, introduced Lord John Russell to the meeting. They had assembled, he said, to receive and to welcome one of the oldest reformers in Parliament, a gentleman and a statesman whose name alone would be a passport everywhere for his efforts in the cause of civil and religious liberty (Loud cheers). They were met to consider, not whether Lord John Russell was to be turned out of the City, but how they could best secure their own interests in placing him at the head of the poll (Hear, hear). He (the Chairman) had been a constant supporter of Lord Palmerston's Government in Parliament, but he did not think he was chargeable with any inconsistency in his coming forward to support Lord John Russell, upon whom the Liberal party looked as the leader of that progress of reform which he had always shown by his conduct in the House (Loud cheers).

Lord John Russell, who was received with enthusiastic applause, commenced by saying that he appealed to the electors of the city of London against the Registration Association, which had, as he thought, unfairly excluded him from the list of candidates. Having defended himself at considerable length from the charge of having entered into a coalition with those who voted along with him on the China question, he said there were three questions before the country. The first was, ought Lord Palmerston's Government to be supported? The second question he emphatically said, No. The third was, ought Lord Palmerston to be supported irrespective of any opinions he may profess? To that question he said emphatically no. And, last of all, ought the great Reform party of the metropolis of London and of Great Britain to abandon their principles? To that he also said no. Nothing would be more dangerous to that party than to give up any of those principles for which they had contended so long and earnestly. In conclusion the noble Lord said,

"I ask the electors of the United Kingdom to weigh thoroughly on this occasion the merits of the men who are to represent them for election purposes for the next six years to come; to consider, not whether this man calls out for the present head of the Government and Reform, and another for the present head of the Government and the Conservative cause, but to consider what men you can find who, by their past conduct and character, are likely to promote the cause of progress (Loud cheers). That is the cause and progress for it is my conviction that not only is progress healthy, but that it is likewise conservative—as much more conservative than stagnation as the flow of the healthy current is more advantageous than the stagnation of the unwholesome marsh (Hear, hear). I believe, therefore, you ought to look for men who will promote progress, in such a way as not to disturb the interest and complicated relations of men on each other, and to substitute disorder and confusion for harmony and peace (Hear, hear). That progress should embrace an amelioration of the condition of the people carefully considered, on the part of the popular branches, and an increase of popular power, but at the same time accompanied with the increase and diffusion of education. Gentlemen, I look to the diffusion of education as the security for our liberties, as the best and ablest men of the United States look to the diffusion of education as the best security for the peace and order of the community. Gentlemen, I have now explained my views and opinions, and the declarations I have made render me unfit to receive your votes—withhold them at the poll; but if you think me fit to represent you, I hope no indecision or timidity will deprive me of the honour of becoming a member for the city of London." (The noble Lord sat down amidst loud cheers

On the motion of Mr. Francis Bennoch, seconded by Mr. George Moore, the following resolution was adopted, only four hands being held up against it:—

"That this meeting have heard with satisfaction the manly determination of Lord John Russell to the appeal to the free suffrages of the independent electors of the city of London.

"That they hold this course to be such as becomes a candidate for the representation of this important constituency; and, looking at Lord John Russell's whole past career as the popular leader of a religious liberty, and in the full confidence that he will continue to be the advocate and promoter of Liberal measures, they pledge themselves to give him their cordial support."

Three cheers were then given for "Reform, retrenchment, and peace," and Lord John Russell left the room amidst the plaudits of his friends.

CITY OF LONDON.—The adjourned meeting of the Liberal Registration Association was held on Tuesday at the London Tavern—Mr. J. Travers in the chair. A good deal of opposition was manifested to the resolution moved at the previous meeting in favour of Baron Rothschild, Sir James Duke, Mr. Raikes Currie, and Mr. Crawford. Mr. Samuel Morley said he should vote in favour of Lord John Russell, and against Sir James Duke. Mr. F. Bennoch denounced the resolution which was passed at the previous meeting, without the full knowledge of the meeting, and while the press was excluded, affirming that no candidates except commercial men should be invited to become candidates for the City. It was surprising the area from which they chose their representatives, for that area ought to be as wide as England itself. He moved that the resolution alluded to should be rescinded. Mr. Deputy Wire, wishing to bring matters to a point of decision, moved an amendment, to the effect that having heard the sentiments of Sir James Duke, Mr. Raikes Currie, Mr. Crawford, and Baron Rothschild, they considered them to be eminently calculated to represent the city of London in Parliament, and tendered them their support. The amendment was put, and carried.

MARYLEBONE.—The Political and Parochial Association of the borough of Marylebone, which numbers some three or four hundred members, held its adjourned meeting on Tuesday evening at the Colosseum Tavern, Portland road, for the purpose of considering the present state of the borough in Parliament. Mr. Wm. Field (late churchwarden of St. Marylebone), occupied the chair, and the room in which the meeting was held was densely crowded. The resolution which had been proposed by Mr. Brimacombe, and seconded by Mr. Moss, at the previous meeting, was to the effect:—"That this meeting considers Lord Ebrington unfit to represent the borough of Marylebone in Parliament, he having opposed to local self-government a pledge itself to uncall its influence to prevent his speedily being again returned, and further will support those candidates only who will pledge themselves to lessen if possible the powers of the Poor-law Board Mr. Dyke, who moved the adjournment of the previous meeting, moved a modification of the original resolution in the shape of an amendment "That this meeting expresses its deep regret at the present unsatisfactory state of the representation of the borough of Marylebone, and that, considering the great difference which exists in the sentiments of Lord Ebrington and the electors on local matters, it cannot advise the support of his friends at the forthcoming election." Mr. Dyke said that Lord Ebrington obtained his seat for that borough by the help of the Tories, and no doubt the Tories would come to his rescue again; but, be that as it might, he thought that association would not be doing its duty unless it gave expression to its opinion. A long discussion followed, in the course of which Mr. Jacob Bell expressed his regret that either the resolution or the amendment had been moved. Having had upwards of 4000 supporters at the last election, he had a right to believe that would be sufficient to justify him in coming forward to contest the borough of Marylebone, and that, considering the great difference which exists in the sentiments of Lord Ebrington and the electors on local matters, it cannot advise the support of his friends at the forthcoming election.

VICTORIA HONG-KONG: QUEEN'S-ROAD WEST.—(SEE PAGE 265)

THE WAR IN CHINA.

CHINESE MODERN FIRST-CLASS JUNK OF WAR.—(SEE PAGE 279.)

CHINESE WAR JUNKS OF THE OLD STYLE. (SEE PAGE 269.)

TOWN AND TABLE TALK ON LITERATURE, ART, &c.

THE talk of the Art world relates entirely to the vacancy in the rank§ of the Royal Academy of Arts. Richard Cook, R.A., is dead. And who, it is asked, was Richard Cook? Nor is the answer very readily made. Mr. Richard Cook—no, we beg the Academy's pardon; Richard Cook, Esquire—was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in the year 1817, and a Royal Academician in the year 1822. He was a casual exhibitor between 1808 and 1822—sending landscapes not destitute of poetic beauty; scenes not without talent from the "Lady of the Lake;" and a more ambitious effort, entitled "Ceres, disconsolate for the loss of Proserpine, rejects the solicitations of Iris, sent to her by Jupiter." The Ceres was shown in 1817; and after he became a Royal Academician he never again courted public approbation by a single effort of his pencil. For the five-and-thirty years that he was one of forty Royal Academicians he was never on any one occasion a contributor to the annual exhibitions of his brother Academicians. Why he was chosen a member of the Academy we could never learn—except that he was rich, and enjoyed a reputation for giving good dinners—a real Academy qualifications in the year 1822, when the courtly Lawrence was Consul at Somerset House. His position in the Academy was often a matter of personal remark. It was said that h was keeping a working artist out from a post of honour and profit; and it was urged in reply—and with some justice—that, whatever his merits might be, as he did not claim his right to any space on the walls of the Academy, he was doing no injustice to his brother artists. When, or by whom, the vacancy will be filled up we have not heard. By the original law of the Academy a vacancy caused on the 1st of December could not be filled up till the following November; but this dilatory regulation has, we believe, been recently set aside. Many are named for the vacant membership. Rumour speaks favourably of Mr. Sydney Cooper, Mr. Thorburn, Mr. E. W. Cooke, Mr. Egg, and Mr. Frank Stone

Lord Granville takes the chair at the next annual dinner of the Royal Literary Fund; and he is to be supported by all the Mecænases of literature—publishers, booksellers, bookbinders, printers, stationers, and stitchers. A more estimable nobleman could not have been chosen for the chair, when once it was settled that a nobleman in the chair was absolutely essential to the success of the Fund. We are told by the supporters of the Fund as at present instituted—and told, too, with a good deal of unnecessary trumpeting—that Lord Granville is a patron of authors. How detestable is that appellation!—

Toil, envy, want, the patron, and the gaol.

And in what way, let us ask, is Lord Granville a patron of English authors and English literature? His Lordship, or we much mistake him, will not be particularly pleased with the character which the committee of the Fund assign to his Lordship. We make little doubt that had Lord Granville lived in the reign of Queen Anne, and not in that of Queen Victoria, he would have been as much a patron of authors as was "Granville the Polite" of "Anne's reign." But there are no patrons now patrons are not needed—no one person can be a patron. Copyright money has more than supplied the place of dedication fees. Why, then, call Lord Granville "a patron"? What author or authors does his Lordship patronise? Mr. Hallam or Mr. Macaulay, Mr. Dickens or Mr. Thackeray, Mr. Carlyle or Mr. Layard? We cannot call to mind a single dedication addressed to this amiable and able nobleman, and we are inclined to believe that his Lordship will not be too well pleased with this foolish use of his name.

We hear a good deal that is both pleasant and unpleasant connected with the late annual meeting of the Royal Literary Fund, where Lord Stanhope was in the chair, and the conversation took an archæological turn in compliment to his Lordship as President of the Society of Antiquaries. There was some malignity in selecting Lord Stanhope, in his capacity as President of the Antiquaries, for the post of Chairman on that day. The committee, of course, asked his Lordship in ignorance, and thought only of Lord Stanhope as an historian, and not as an antiquary, skilled as he is in both capacities. And this reminds us that a bookseller (Mr. Westerton)—the Row would call him a librarian—is standing to become M.P. for Westminster; and that a well-known wag (we must conceal his name) suggested that Mr. Mudie would be the true "patron" of authors to take the chair at the next annual dinner of the Royal Literary Fund. Mudie's subscription seals the fate of many a book as a pecuniary success—ask Longman and Co., Whittaker and Co., and Simpkin and Co.

Authors are observing with marked satisfaction that Mr. Phelps takes the chair at the annual dinner, on the 12th of April next, of the Royal General Theatrical Fund. Mr. Phelps will be well supported on that occasion.

See in what way, and how extensively, a love for art is increasing among us. Lord Howe is building a gallery at Gopsall to contain his choicer treasures. His Lordship inherited the once far-famed collection of Charles Jennens, Esq., of Gopsall and Great Ormond-street—that sturdy Jacobite, who called in the Crace of the day to decorate a tartan-covered bed in which the young Pretender was to sleep when—after passing Derby, which he did not pass—he was to find a night's rest in the hospitable retreat of Gopsall. There are fine pictures at Gopsall. We can see no account of the collection in Mrs. Jameson or Dr. Waagen. The tartan bed is still to be seen.

The accidental allusion to a Crace of a century ago will additionally justify the publication of the following letter:—

To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

March 16, 1857.

SIR,—I shall be obliged if you will allow me to state, in reference to a paragraph in your "Table Talk on Art" last week, that my own works for the Duchess of Sutherland have been, while my talented confrère, Mr G. Morant, has been very extensively employed by her Grace.—I am, Sir, yours obediently, JOHN G. CRACE.

Morant or Crace, Crace or Morant, it would be very difficult not to achieve excellence with either. Each is a master in his art.

We chronicle with regret the following paragraph:—

In consequence of some mischievous persons having wantonly defaced the statue of Queen Anne in the western area of St. Paul's Cathedral, the Dean closed the gates on Monday through which persons have for some time past been in permitted to pass to and from the north and south sides of the Cathedral yard. It seems the statue has been very much injured, the right arm is completely knocked off, and other portions of the figure much defaced. The Rev. Dr Milman has offered a reward for the apprehension of the author of the mischief.

The whip and the cart's-tail should be revived for such idle and injurious wickedness as this.

Another author, and an able man, is in the field for the new Parliament. James Hannay, known more than favourably in London for his many accomplishments, is a candidate to represent "the gude town of Dumfries." He is full of energy, and of the best kind, and, what will endear him to Dumfries, he is a Gallovidian, and a Scot of the Scottish lion in his independent state.

---

At the beginning of April the French company, Matthis, Magnan, Farrot and Co., will enter into competition with the Austrian Danubian Company, on the Lower Danube. The French are likely to prove very formidable rivals to the Austrians, for their prices are about 30 per cent lower than those now paid by the public.

MUSIC.

THE Lessee of HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE has put forth his prospectus, which gives good promise of a brilliant season. The following are his principal arrangements. The theatre is to open on Tuesday, the 14th of April, and the subscription for the season will consist of thirty nights. The company includes the chief favourites of last season—Piccolomini, Alboni, Belletti, Beneventano, &c. (though we regret not to observe among them the name of Johanna Wagner); besides several new stars of great Continental fame, especially Mdlle. Maria Spezia, Mdlle. Angiolina Ortolani, Signor Antonio Giuglini (said to be the greatest tenor in Italy), and Signor Filippo Vialetti, a basso profondo of extraordinary power. For the ballet we are to have our old favourite Marie Taglioni, Carlotta Grisi, Paul Taglioni, and others, together with a host of names as yet unknown in London. Sig. Benetti is again to hold the office of Chef d'Orchestre and Musical Director. On the opening night "La Favorita" is to be produced, with the ballet "La Esmeralda." Three of the new stars, Spezia, Giuglini, and Vialetti, are to appear in the opera; and Mdlle. Focchini, a new danseuse of Continental fame, in the ballet. Piccolomini is to arrive early in April, and to sing on the 1st of May. This great contralto is to make her first appearance this season as the gipsy Azucena, in the "Trovatore." "Don Giovanni" is promised with an unprecedented strength of cast; but nothing is said about the production of any new opera this season—from which we infer that Mr. Lumley, during all his researches on the Continent, has not found a single new opera worthy of being brought before the English public.

MR. ELLA'S Second Evening Concert, on the plan of the morning concerts of the Musical Union, took place on Tuesday, at Willis's Rooms. The principal instrumental performances were Molique's quartet in B flat, Op. 42; Mendelssohn's pianoforte trio in C minor; and Spohr's sestet in C major. The performers were—violins, Molique and Goffrie; violas, the two Messrs. Blagrove; violoncellos, Piatti and Paque; and pianoforte, Charles Hallé. There were also several pretty glees and madrigals, sung by the members of the Vocal Union. The room was full of fashionable company.

MR. HOWARD GLOVER gave what he himself described as a "gigantic concert for the people" in Drury-lane Theatre on Wednesday morning. It was truly a monster concert. Almost all the eminent vocal and instrumental performers in the metropolis gave their assistance; and the programme presented an immense medley of every description of music. The prices of admission being very low, every part of the theatre was crowded to overflowing, and the concert must have been profitable to the lessee.

A Italian Opera Company, of which Miss Catherine Hayes is the prima donna, is now performing in Dublin. They opened on Monday last, with "Lucia di Lammermoor," and the theatre was crowded with a brilliant audience, including the Lord Lieutenant and a number of the nobility. Lucia is one of Miss Hayes's best parts, both as a vocal performance and a piece of pathetic acting; and she was received with Irish enthusiasm. The parts of Edgardo and Aston were well supported by Volpini and Badiali; and the opera, in its ensemble, was very effectively got up.

OUR distinguished young pianist, Miss ARABELLA GODDARD, gave the last of her series of three musical soirées on Tuesday last. It was so attractive that her rooms were crowded to the doors, there being scarcely standing-room for the amateurs who listened with greedy ears to her exquisite performances. The concert was similar in character to the previous one which we described last week; its principal feature being her glorious execution (we cannot use a weaker phrase) of one of those works of Beethoven's latter days—his Sonata in A flat, Op. 110, which, with the help of a few such performers as Miss Goddard, the musical world is now beginning to understand and enjoy. Ernst, who appeared for the first time this season, imparted a great additional interest to this concert. He joined in Mendelssohn's quartet in B minor, along with Miss Goddard, Piatti, and Blagrove, and also (with Miss Goddard) performed his own "Pensées Fugitives" for the piano and violin. He was full of energy, and we never heard him play more exquisitely. There were also some fine vocal pieces sung by Mr. and Madame Weiss, Mdlle. Solari, and Mrs. Charles Braham. The success of these concerts has been so great that Miss Goddard has announced a second series to commence on the 25th of this month.

THE THEATRES, &c.

PRINCESS'.—In considering the remarkably elaborate revival of the historical tragedy of "Richard II.," it will be proper, notwithstanding the amount of illustration bestowed on the production, to regard in the first place the acting—for, on this occasion, the histrionic excellence maintains an equality with the spectacular, and merits distinct attention. Mr. Kean, for instance, demands recognition on peculiar grounds. It is a portrait-character, not a mere ideal, and requires peculiar treatment. The dramatist had not felt himself called upon to delineate a perfect hero, but presented the historical weaknesses and his vices. He was not solicitous to preserve his dignity, but led him through mean and ridiculous situations with equal impartiality, and, when divested of all other titles to respect, claimed sympathy for him as a suffering human being, and furnished him with whatever was needful to make him pathetic in discourse and action. The genius of Mr. C. Kean adjusts itself with extraordinary aptitude to such a delineation. It rejoices in variety and contrast, and is abundant in resources. The play derives its unity from the character, and owing to this circumstance this tragedy is the most regular of the Shakspearean historical dramas. We have, first, the boy King presiding at the dispute between the son of old Gaunt and the Duke of Norfolk, misled from the beginning by his favourites as to the real nature of the quarrel, and accordingly bearing more hard on poor Mowbray than on his bolder opponent. His conduct at the tournament is natural not only by the same misapprehension, but displays the inherent weakness of his character. That his "kingdom's earth should not be soiled with that dear blood which it hath fostered," he compromises the issue by the banishment of both parties. This, however, might have resulted from his being a lover of peace; but his behaviour at the death of Gaunt proves that it proceeds from an error of constitution and wilful indulgence. When evil days come upon him he would get rid of their pressure by appealing to the divine right of Kings; and, on finding that appeal vain, he indulges in passion and temper, which have no result but that of trying the patience of Bolingbroke and showing how well he stands the test. Vain as these displays of emotion are, they nevertheless strongly interest the spectator's favour, and prepare him to admire the desperate heroism of his death. The faults of the King had not originated in cowardice and wrong motives, but in a bad education and untoward circumstances. It is difficult for an actor to hit the due mean in embodying different phases of the fortune and feeling; but we are bound to say that Mr. Kean not only manifested exquisite judgment, but powerful genius, in the manner in which they were successfully discriminated by him. But Richard's character needs its contrast in the firm will and proud determination of Bolingbroke's; and to no actor could such a part have been intrusted with more confidence than to Mr. Rydar. His natural appearance and demeanour were almost sufficient to carry it through; but thereto he added great intelligence and the utmost care, so that, "take it for all in all," he realised a fine historic portrait. Similar praise may be bestowed on Cooper's Duke of York, whose impetuosity and prudence were blended in true artistic proportions. Another picture that struck us as equally grand and complete was Mr. Lacy's John of Gaunt, whose tragic dignity in action and prophetic impulse on his deathbed were admirably preserved. These characters form a group, and serve as such to throw into relief that of the King as a distinct individuality. Not so, however, the character of the Queen—for her husband's, is a thing apart; but, unlike that, it is not historical. The Queen is a poetic invention, and one that has been treated with little respect by Shakspearean commentators. In the hands of Mrs. Kean its dramatic capabilities were not apparent. She brought to it all that the text suggested rather than supplied; and for majesty, tenderness, and beauty, it may take rank with the best of her dramatic conceptions. Acting like this was worthily supported by the extensive mise en scène and picturesque accompaniments which Mr. Kean's taste and liberality had provided for the archæological illustration of the dramatic action. In this he has exceeded all his former efforts. The exactness and minuteness of the detail, the abundance of antiquarian resources, and the subordination of all to the sentiment and action, in every scene, impress us with the utmost respect for the mind that conceived and the judgment that applied all this wealth of knowledge to the patriotic purpose of illustrating one of our national annals and great dramatic histories.

Mr. Kean has wisely gone beyond the drama to the chronicles, and between the third and fourth acts has presented to sight the humiliating entry into London of Richard II. in the custody of Bolingbroke. This is one of the most gorgeous and effective scenes that we ever witnessed on the stage. Commencing with the Dance of Itinerant Fools, as described in "Strutt's Sports and Pastimes of the English," we are present with the multitudes that crowd the streets, the balconies, and the house-tops, and witness numerous little episodes, skilfully acted out by competent performers, preparatory to the main event of the scene. Nothing can be more impressive than the entrance of Bolingbroke on his white charger, followed by Richard on his humble steed, all sad and wobegone, utterly subdued by the execrations of the mob. The words recorded by the chroniclers are spoken on the stage by the usurper and the crowd, but Richard passes over in melancholy and heartbroken silence. Such an interlude as this Shakspeare would himself have doubtless approved of, as a fitting illustration of historic fact. Its tendency is to realise the whole of the action, and, indeed, the two last acts require such interest from its introduction that otherwise they would not possess

The other scenes, rich and various as they are in their appointments, are strictly confined to their bearing on the actual text. The Privy Council Chamber in the Palace of Westminster presents its walls and roof decorated with the badges and cognizances of Richard II.; and the lists of combat at Gosford-green are graced with the Royal pavilion, containing the King enthroned, attended by his nobles, the effect of the scene being enhanced by its apparent interminability. The bed-room in Ely House surrounds the dying hours of old Gaunt with appropriate grandeur; while the advance of Bolingbroke's army through the wilds of Gloucestershire is actualised to the senses by picturesque incidents and numerous stage expedients. Added to these we have excellent restorations of the entrance to St. Stephen's Chapel, Pembroke Castle, and Flint Castle; with representations of Milford Harbour, Welsh scenery, and certain famous localities of London, such as Westminster Hall and the Traitors' Gate of the Tower. The Dungeon in Pomfret Castle, and St. George's Hall at Windsor, complete the splendid diorama composed by the scenes of this revival.

The costume of the piece is varied and exceedingly attractive. It is principally taken from the illuminations in the French metrical history of King Richard II., written by a contemporary, and preserved in the British Museum; but other works have likewise been consulted with effect. The music also merits notice. It has been composed and selected by Mr. J. L. Hatton, who has consulted the character of the period. The overture and entr'actes are pleasing and striking. One tune, that of the "Itinerant Fools," is as old as the reign of Edward II. —older, in fact, than that of the Morris Dance

The skill with which all this scenic magnificence has been introduced, without impairing the dramatic interest or interfering with the histrionic excellence, deserves more than ordinary praise. That it has been bestowed on a worthy drama, developing much of our national history, full of patriotic feeling, and comprehending a political moral of the highest importance, is a further reason for congratulating Mr. Kean and the public on the revival—the former for his taste and enterprise, so laudably exhibited; and the latter for the patronage by which his efforts have been so consistently encouraged.

OLYMPIC.—"Thieves! Thieves!" is the title of a farce produced on Thursday week. It is a merely occasional piece, suggested by recent burglarious attacks, and sets forth how Mrs. Bashwood (Miss Swanborough), a young widow, living in a retired villa, becomes the victim of admiration to a gentleman, Mr. Lushington (Mr G. Vining), and an apothecary, the former of whom passes himself off as an homœopathic doctor. It is, however, on the latter that the fun depends to wit, Mr. Brown, done by Mr. Rose. The two lovers determine to play on the lady's fears through the medium of a pretended burglary, by which she is finally terrified into accepting Mr. Lushington's hand, and Mr. Brown, still more frightened, is driven to seek refuge in the chimney. He is at length released from his uncomfortable position, covered with soot, trembling with apprehension. This incident brought the curtain down with applause.

LYCEUM.—The tragedy of "Virginius" was revived on Friday week. The performance of the Roman Father by Mr. Dillon was exceedingly impressive, and won on the appreciation of the audience with increasing power. His last three acts were vehemently applauded, and at the conclusion a triumphant ovation was awarded to him. His principal excellence lay in the more pathetic parts of the character.

ASTLEY'S.—Shakspeare still continues in the ascendant, and receives equestrian illustration at this theatre. The first part of "Henry the Fourth" has been selected for the purpose, and the numerous outdoor scenes give abundant opportunity for the employment of Mr. Cooke's stud. The impressment with the Gadshill carriers is full of horses, the travellers, too, arrive on horseback, the Prince and Poins only walk when they cannot help it, and Falstaff has new opportunities of displaying his chess-awkwardness in the management of his steed, which, of course, he mounts and dismounts with difficulty. On the battlefield the horses find an appropriate arena, and the equestrian conflict between Harry and Hotspur, in which the animal is killed as well as his rider, produces a novelty of feeling which it is amusing to experience. The spectacle cannot fail of being immensely attractive.

MR. THACKERAY has entered into arrangements to deliver his lectures on the Four Georges under the direction of Mr. Beale, commencing in London immediately after he has concluded his present tour in the provinces.

MR. W. H. RUSSELL has arranged with Mr. Beale to give a personal narrative of his travels in the East during and subsequent to the late war. Amongst the many distinguished names associated with the Crimean expedition none have been received with stronger expressions of public favour than that of Mr. Russell; and his admirers will doubtless hail the opportunity of hearing from his own lips the story of his interesting adventures—the peculiarity of his position as a newspaper correspondent having naturally precluded him from alluding to many circumstances which he will now be at liberty to disclose.

---

THE CHINA WAR.—In all probability a powerful British squadron, with a landing force, will shortly appear in the China Sea, and will suffice, if not to engage in a general war against the Celestial Empire, at least to guarantee the security of the European navigation along the coast, to protect the island of Hong-Kong from any serious danger, and perhaps, if necessary, to protect the establishment of Shanghae. The factories of Canton, the establishment of Whampoa, and the opium station of Lin-ying, have been abandoned by the Europeans. Should the Court of Pekin take part with the Governor of Canton, foreign merchants will be compelled to evacuate the ports of Fou-tscheou-fou, Amoy, and of Ning-po, where they are too limited in number to organise proper means of defence. The port of Shanghae, to which we have already alluded, remains in the hands of the English; the Europeans occupy a separate quarter, which they fortified in 1853, repulsing the insurgents. They can be protected by the cannon of the vessels of war anchored before their factories, and by a land force which could be transported there by the English squadron without any great obstacles. The defence of the English will be concentrated on two points Hong-Kong, where the merchants of Canton and Whampoa have taken refuge, and Shanghae, which has become the most important port for European commerce. Should the English be compelled to abandon Shanghae, Hong-kong will offer them a certain refuge, and there would be established the headquarters of the new Chinese war. The naval and military forces possessed by England at the present moment in China are about sufficient to resist the attacks of the Mandarins, but they must be strongly reinforced if England should be compelled, by the force of events, or by a sense of her own dignity, to assume the offensive and declare war. It has been said that the Chinese rebels and the pirates who infest the Canton river have joined the Mandarins against the British vessels, and this circumstance has been exalted into a display of patriotic feeling on the part of the Chinese. But the co-operation of the Chinese pirates are not of a character to excite this admiration. The following explanation is far more simple. It is probable that the Mandarins have promised peacocks' feathers and much money to the pirates, who, having no conditions, fight on the side which promises most plunder. The history of China is full of analogous incidents. The profession of pirate, if carried out on a large scale, is the means of attaining the dignity of Mandarin. It has been asserted, and this would be more serious, that the Emperor of Russia has promised to support the Emperor of China in the event of his territory being invaded by the English. It is at this moment the fashion to see the Russians in every political question; but reason teaches that the Cabinet of St. Petersburg is not, and cannot be, mixed up in the question.—Constitutionnel

The estimate for the new Houses of Parliament for the current year is £138,686, and £60,000 is required on account.

NATIONAL INSTITUTION OF THE FINE ARTS.

THE Exhibition at the Portland Gallery, in Regent-street, so far from having any signification as a representation of "national" art is, it must be confessed by all but some of its partisans, one of the most mediocre exhibitions of the season. Several of its more noticeable works are distinguished chiefly by the same pedantry of a schism in art which, even taking its best productions, bears but a small proportion to the general fruits of the nation's artistic culture. The present development of art may have been accelerated by recent movements, but we are inclined to attribute it to other agencies not only co-ordinate but superior to, and which preceded, these so-called reforms. Much talent has been misdirected by certain teachers, but we have no apprehension that it will, like an iron band round a young oak, prevent the continued vigorous growth of art. Perverse genius itself will only cling a feeble parasite, and often pass as an unsightly excrescence. The small space at the disposal of the Royal Academy leads unquestionably to much injustice, especially to landscape-painters; and we sympathise with every protest against exclusive tendencies, but we cannot recognise the claim here set up to found anything like a school of British art while supported so insufficiently. All art should undoubtedly be fairly represented; but the public must decide what has "national" importance. Certainly, after keeping up a smart walk along these lengthy walls and screens, and being so comparatively seldom arrested by works meriting careful examination, the opinion of that public cannot be very favourable. We recommend the "proprietary members" in their next exhibition to select more carefully, and at once to sink their "nationality."

Among 527 pictures there are, of course, some meritorious works, and these we hasten to describe; but before proceeding in detail we may at once mention that upon three of the best pictures in the Exhibition we reserve our observations, as we purpose presenting our readers with Engravings from them viz., "Meg Merrilies and the Dying Smuggler (132), by Mr. Lauder, R.S.A.; "A Family Group" (160), by Mr. Wills; and "Haymaking in Switzerland Lausanne" (60), by Mr. Moore.

Besides the above-mentioned effective picture by Mr. Lander, there is another equally striking. "The Death of Arthur, Duke of Bretagne" (286). The hard struggles and the cruel end of the young Duke of Brittany form the nucleus of interest in the play of "King John," and the fate of Arthur is the great connecting link which binds together all the varied series of actions. In the picture the young prisoner is lying, pale and lifeless, at the foot of the castle wall which he threw himself in despair. Near the body stands Faulconbridge, sternly expressing his suspicion to Hubert of his foul play, although immediately before he defended the crouching Chamberlain from the fury of the Lords who have just retired. The stalwart Knight stands in "the great composition of the man"—a perfect realisation of that Cœur-de-Lion from whom he was proud to claim an illegitimate descent. His giant limbs bear their weight of chain-mail hauberk as easily as a maiden supports satin bodice or silken scarf. He stands leaning on his enormous sword athwart the sunset like a thunderbolt, his head covered with its mail-coif and conical helmet, placed right before the angry sun, his features darkly looming, and his eyes flashing portentously upon the scared and deprecating form before him. Hubert is plainly too weak to be the assassin; and this, contrasted with the inflexible manhood and lofty pride of Faulconbridge, is an equally fine pictorial as dramatic antithesis. It may be objected that the incidental rays are incorrect, but much license in this particular has always been necessarily allowed to painters.

There is an attractive study of a semi-nude female figure (No. 304), by Mr. Mayr, which has much vivacity of colour, although a little wanting in sobriety of tone and anatomical discrimination. The picture is all milk and roses. The white skin is opposed to rich drapery and many-coloured roses; with these, and the flowing black hair intertwined with pearls, the painting seems affluent of beauty, colour, and fragrance. The laughing eye is heavy and voluptuous with its weight of fringed lashes, but the head is too much inclined to admit of a due recognition of the expression of the features.

Of a totally different style in its unpretending simplicity is "A Begged Pet" (70), by Mr. Dukes. The work has much good modelling and pleasant painting. The woman's head with her dishevelled hair and laughing face looking up at the gleeful child is very successful.

A picture by Mr. W. Underhill, "The Mountain Stream" (87), and another, "Harvesters' Repast" (402), by Mr. F. Underhill, are both excellent in general effect and solidity. The touch is also broad and firm; and these being rare qualities (as may especially be seen in this Exhibition), we remark, with some hesitation, that we should like to see more study in particulars.

Mr. Marks has, heretofore, distinguished himself for his appreciation of Shakspearean humour, but "Christopher Sly" (208), approaches rather too near the vulgarity of caricature. In the "Introduction" to the "Taming of the Shrew," after the drunken tinker has been unconsciously surrounded with all the paraphernalia which some think goes far to constitute "a lord," the most humorous trait is when Sly, on waking, begins to entertain the conviction that he is "a lord, indeed," and assumes the consequent importances. This the artist has seized with force of success. All the rest—the awkward attitude; the sottish, bloated face; the pumpkin head, and coarse hands—are, as caricature has been described, more like than the reality. Much of the detail is "packed out," as in many works of the so-called pre-Raphaelite school here exhibited, with a care inversely to its relative importance. These objections apply with much less force to two other paintings by Mr. Marks. "Returning from the Conventicle" (69) is a close-cut, formal-looking Puritan, carrying his Bible or book of "Spiritual Songs" with nauseous ostentation as he leaves the conventicle door, evidently as full of pride as he should be, at the moment, of humility. The other work is entitled "Puritan Barracks" (48). One of those whom Butler calls "a mongrel kind of church dragoons" is sitting, with sinister aspect, smoking in a church, the decorations of which he has helped to demolish. The head is centred before the distant stained-glass window with good effect.

Mr. Rossiter is another artist who aims at realising what he considers the simple truth before him with patient stipple and minute touch. "Modern Minstrelsy" (321)—simply two boys with "bones" and "bango"—is, with much faithfulness, as unambitious in theme as it is intentionally unsuggestive in handling

In a still lower degree of simple imitation we must place "The Dividing Peel" (170), by Mr. Smallfield. We spare our readers any explanation of the trivial subject depicted, but it is our duty to protest against the waste of evident powers of imitation upon an incident so inane.

There are two or three painters who attempt a compromise between the helplessness of that art whose whole experience goes for nothing, and of that in which experience sinks into mere unpleasant conventionality. For instance, in Mr. Egley's picture, "The Taming of the Shrew" (307), we have somewhat pre-Raphaelite textures, colour, and composition; but although the choice of heads is not happy they are not irresponsibly commonplace.

Another example of this union of eclecticism and realism is afforded by Mr Nash, in "The Bride's Sister" (300). The bouquet of flowers, the coronal of pearls and other accessories, have much truthful elaboration; but the face is not exactly a classical profile, is idealised in colour, and in expression at once saintly and silly. The breathing nostril and sighing lips are, however, well expressed, and withal so tenderly and sweetly that you look at them lingeringly almost as you would hang over the flowers were they real and just cut, as indeed they seem to be.

Mr. Passmore's pictures resemble tinted woodcuts. They are rather tiny and frail, because the artist trusts more to lines than masses. Instead of masses and gradation we have a few patches of colour in the lights and the rest made out in outline, with certainly very elegant, though slightly finical, nicety, and filled in with hatches and hatchings. There is, nevertheless, extreme gracefulness in his conventionalities and luxuriance in his fancy. The entire mastery over this particular manner, however, always proves it confirmed. Thus "Love" is seen one of Mr. Passmore's works would lead to the instant recognition of any other. We content ourselves, therefore, by indicating general characteristics, and merely mention that Nos. 9, 125, 310, are also by this pleasing artist, and that the last is the best.

There is little invention in a scene from "The Tempest" (100), by Mr. Nash; and it may be said that most pictures of this class are merely pretty, but the colouring is more juicy, and the forms, though less correct, are more pulpy and fleshlike than in some similar figures by Mr. Frost.

There is a fine powerful full-length portrait (No. 434), by Mr. Worsey; but the fresh atmospheric greys are ignored in the effort at "old-masterish" effects—or say rather those of old Time.

A small picture on one of the screens, by Mr. Lawless, "Ravenswood" (480), deserves attention for its delicacy of perception and refinement of execution, although the figure is hardly the dark, haughty, mysterious, passionate hero of Scott, and something grander and less effeminate held poor Lucy spellbound.

"The Painter's Studio" (120), by Mr. Wingfield, affords a kind of peep behind the curtain sufficiently amusing to the unprofessional public. The composition of the picture is good, and the model, in her brilliant brocade, is a very charming study. We should have expected, however, that the painter would have been a little more ambitious to display his drawing of the antique in the casts of his studio.

Before quitting the figure subject pictures, we must mention the following artists, as their works claim the notice and appreciation of visitors, viz., those of Mrs. Murray, and Messrs. Mann, Wivell, Haynes, Clay, M'Ian, R.S.A., Cowie, Bell Smith, and Wynn.

All the animals are well painted in the "Farmyard—Team Going Out" (416), by Messrs. Rolfe and Herring. The cattle are well grouped, and the cock holds up his head like a veritable Sultan in the midst of his rustic harem.

There is a still-life piece (No. 24), by Mr. Duffield, of great excellence. The Dutch tankard and the corded texture of the carpet are capital. The fresh juicy succulence of the melon, and the dull, more cloying, richness of the pine, are also nicely distinguished.

A few Landscapes, particularly those by Mr. Gilbert, Mr. Percy, and the Messrs. Williams, which possess the well-known qualities and customary excellence of these artists, we must defer the consideration of till next week.

D'ARREST'S COMET.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

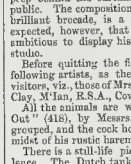
THE telescopic comet, discovered by M. D'Arrest at Leipsic, on Feb. 23, and which has hitherto been visible only during the mornings, may now be seen shortly after sunset in the north-west part of the sky. It is daily becoming brighter, and can be easily detected with the assistance of a telescope of moderate power, although it will require a clear sky and horizon to be able to see it to advantage. It arrives at perihelion on March 21, and will be situated for the remainder of the month in the constellation Andromeda, passing within a short distance of the star 22 Andromedæ on March 22. At the beginning of April it passes into the constellation of Perseus, and on the 9th of April will be situated near the star Iota Persei (of the fourth magnitude). On the morning of March 5 (see Engraving) it presented the usual appearance of telescopic comets—viz., a hazy nebulous mass, nearly round, with a bright head of a pale bluish colour, situated nearly at the centre, which might almost be mistaken for a perfect stellar nucleus at times. The whole nebulosity was upwards of a minute in diameter, and the nucleus was as bright as a star of the seventh magnitude.



J. B.

THE WEATHER.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE CAMBRIDGE OBSERVATORY, FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 18, 1857.

| Day. | Mean reading at 9 A.M. reduced to 32° and the Standard Gravity. | Highest Temperature. | Lowest Temperature. | Mean Temperature. | Dry Bulb at 9 A.M. | Wet Bulb at 9 A.M. | Dry Bulb at 3 P.M. | Wet Bulb at 3 P.M. | Direction of Wind. | Amt. of Cloud (0-10) | Rain in Inches. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Mar 12 | 29.649 | 44.6 | 28.4 | 36.5 | 35.6 | 44.3 | 41.0 | W | 8 | 0.000 |
| ,, 13 | 29.822 | 46.5 | 27.2 | 36.9 | 37.5 | 44.4 | 39.5 | S. | 7 | 0.002 |
| ,, 14 | 29.664 | 54.1 | 30.1 | 41.2 | 40.2 | 44.8 | 54.7 | SSW | 7 | 0.029 |
| ,, 15 | 29.261 | 47.5 | 41.4 | 44.5 | 43.4 | 44.1 | 46.0 | SW. | 6 | 0.006 |
| ,, 16 | 29.005 | 51.5 | 39.4 | 45.4 | 44.5 | 47.2 | 56.8 | SW. | 9 | 0.010 |
| ,, 17 | 29.023 | 52.2 | 29.1 | 42.7 | 41.7 | 45.1 | 49.0 | SW. | 5 | 0.015 |
| ,, 18 | 29.514 | 46.8 | 35.6 | 40.9 | 39.1 | 43.5 | 40.5 | 34.4 | NE. | 6 | 0.000 |
| Means | 29.490 | 49.1 | 31.0 | 42.0 | 41.1 | 44.8 | 49.5 | 41.2 | | 1 | 0.077 |

The range of temperature during the week was 32.6°.

Hoar frost was noticed on the mornings of March 12, 13, and 17, and on the night of the 16th. Rain was falling on the evening of the 13th, on the morning of the 14th, on the afternoon of the 15th, and shortly after midnight of the 17th. The weather was very stormy, and the wind blowing with great violence, on the evening of the 13th, and the days of the 14th and 15th. A dense fog suddenly sprung up at 1h. a.m. of the 17th.

A well-defined solar halo was visible between noon and 1h. p.m. of the 15th, which was slightly coloured at the upper part. The zodiacal light was noticed on the nights of the 15th and 16th. The weather has been changeable, but the sky very clear at times.

J. BREEN.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION

Lat. 51° 29′ 0″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above sea 34 feet.

| DAY | DAILY MEANS OF | | | | | THERMOMETER. | | | WIND. | | | RAIN in 24 hours ending Read at 10A.M. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Barometer Corrected | Dew Point Temp. | Relative Humidity | Solar Radiation | Terrestrial Radiation | Mean of 24 hours | Maximum | Minimum | General Direction | Movement in 24 hours | Force | |
| | Inches | ° | | | | ° | ° | ° | | Miles | | Inches |
| Mar 11 | 29.951 | 41.1 | 76.1 | 75 | 10 | 42.0 | 53.6 | E. S.W. | | 151 | Gale | 0.048 |
| ,, 12 | 30.010 | 36.1 | 70.4 | 81 | 7 | 38.8 | 47.1 | S.W. | | 139 | Gale | 0.129 |
| ,, 13 | 29.705 | 37.1 | 81.1 | 81 | 6 | 41.8 | 48.8 | S. | | 241 | Gale | 0.000 |
| ,, 14 | 29.157 | 49.1 | 89.5 | 74 | 8 | 45.4 | 54.8 | S. SW. S | | 617 | Gale | 0.165 |
| ,, 15 | 29.116 | 40.4 | 81.1 | 72 | 6 | 43.5 | 48.2 | WSW. | | 534 | Gale | 0.129 |
| ,, 16 | 30.005 | 41.1 | 85.5 | 77 | 2 | 42.9 | 52.1 | WSW | | 283 | Gale | 0.112 |
| ,, 17 | 30.156 | 45.1 | 96.7 | 79 | 6 | 41.7 | 55.5 | SSW. | | 229 | Gale | 0.000 |

The daily means are obtained from observations made at 6h. and 10h. a.m. and 2h. 6h., and 10h. p.m. on each day, except Sunday, when the first observation is omitted. The corrections for diurnal variation are taken from the Tables of Mr Glaisher. The "Dew-point" and "Relative Humidity" are calculated from all observations of the dry and wet bulb thermometers, by Dr Apjohn's Formula and Dalton's Tables of the Tension of Vapour. The movement of the wind is given by a self-recording Robinson's Anemometer, the amount stated for each day being that registered from midnight to midnight.

EASTERN CHURCH QUARRELS.—The Greeks are renewing their vexatious proceedings towards other Christian sects. The Copts possess a small chapel built against the monument which covers the Sepulchre of the Saviour, and, as it was recently damaged in the disturbances which took place on the occasion of the Greek ceremony of the "sacred fire," the Copts wished to repair it; but the Greeks demanded of the Governor of Jerusalem to prevent them from so doing, on the pretext that, in virtue of an ancient firman, they alone had the right to make repairs in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, even in the portions possessed by other communions. It was subsequently ascertained, however, that the Latins possessed another firman of a more recent date, which annulled whole or in part, that of the Greeks. Both set regards these rights and others. The Greeks, then, abandoning the firman, declared that orders from Constantinople gave them the right which they claimed. The Copts represented that this was not so, and that the proof of it was that other communions had, within a year, made repairs in their chapels; but the Greeks have appealed to Constantinople; and, as they are rich, powerful, and unscrupulous, it is feared they will obtain a decision in their favour. The Copts have, however, it is said, appealed to the protection of the British Consul at Jerusalem.—Letter from Jerusalem, 16th ult.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE piercing cold of Doncaster followed "the ring" to their Salisbury Plain tryst. Here Mr. T. Parr achieved a double success with Apathy and Fisherman; Lord Ribblesdale, who seems one of fortune's favourites, cleared out all the two-year-old fields with Happy Land by Jericho; and Vaulter, whose previous performance this year had not been promising, made short work of Martinet and Tricolor. Warwick had the first meeting of "cracks" this season in the Trial Stakes. Gemma di Vergy, of whom it was averred by his trainer in the witness-box the week before that he was worth 3000 guineas, was made first favourite for the Trial Stakes; but Fisherman, who gave him 23 lb., over the Mile Course did what he liked with him and Stork, while Wentworth and Melissa finished at intervals of several lengths. The latter made no figure in the race, and, as she was not in the betting, we may take it that she was not "fit," and jump to no rash conclusions about her real 1857 form. Lord Nelson gave note on both days that he may not be such a dear £700 purchase after all. Tame Deer received 5 lb., and gave Gaudy, the first of Lord Zetland's team which has appeared this season, a clever beating in the Great Warwickshire; and Greenwich Fair pulled through a race by a neck against two inferior style of horses. Vedette is still a great 2000 Guinea favourite; Sydney (the gentleman with a temper) at 6 to 1, a point behind him; and Apathy at 10 to 1. Blink Bonny has come to 11 to 1 for the Derby. Kent seems to have a strong party; and there are 50 to 1 nibbles at Skirmisher, whose temper and lack of a strong hand on him will, we think, be fatal at Northampton. This festival of St. Crispin will see all the turf-stars once more in conjunction on Wednesday and Thursday. Skirmisher, Netherton, and Sir Giles, are the favourites of the public for the stakes on the first day; but Adamas, Commoner, and Codrington, are more our ideal order of merit. Madame Chequet, Gemma di Vergy, and Odd Trick, are in the Whittlebury Stakes, where the weights have been very judiciously altered 4 lb. Earl Spencer's Plate, on Thursday, is one of the right sort of handicaps, 9 st. 10 lb. to 5 st. 6 lb. (before the acceptances); but, if there is any improvement in the racing world, the Messrs. Marshall are the first to adopt it, and hence the uniform success of all the meetings where they preside. The Racing Nokes may bring out Sir Colin, St. Giles, and Gemma di Vergy over the mile course; and Happy Land, 5 lb. extra, ought to get rid of all the public horses we know of in the Althorp Park Stakes. Instead of waiting till the Derby week, the Althorp yearlings come to the hammer in front of the Grand Stand an hour before the races on Thursday. Among the five colts there is only one by Cotherstone, a brother to Glenmasson, out of a Prism mare; and of the seven fillies, the one whose blood has annually brought most is the own sister to Pumicestone. Seven out of the lot are young Newcourt's, who seems to have quite superseded Cotherstone at Althorp. On Monday the Masons' eighteen horses are to be sold at Tattersall's, as well as a brother to Hospodar, the Mummy (the last, we believe, of Memnon's stock, and three of his scions, &c. Habena has retired, and roams, along with Blue Bonnet and Cymba, at Kingston's paddocks, where she is very nearly full; and Alice Hawthorn, with a sister to Lady Hawthorn at her foot, is at Sweetmeat's. Kingston is, to our minds, about the most perfect-looking animal at the stud.

Hunting is now rather in the "Ware! vixen!" style; and for some days past the warmth and changeableness of the weather have sadly cut up the scent. Melton is still overflowing with horses, and a new stud arrived there lately; but some of the scarlets are wooing the sweet voices of their constituents instead of the Cream Gorse or Tilton Wood melodies. Mr. Davis, who is now engaged in teaching the Heir Apparent how to cross country, declines a testimonial no season, however, why it should not proceed. The Tyndale foxhounds had their best run of the season on Friday, from Bitchfield Gorse, with only one check occasioned by sheep, to Pinch-my-ear, near Bellingham, where they run into him. Time 2h. 15m.—only Major Bell, the first whip, and three others up at the finish.

Steeplechases will come off at Birmingham (Jean du Quesne, 11 st. 7 lb., top weight), on Tuesday; Gainsborough and Llandillo, on Wednesday; Moreton in the Marsh, on Thursday; and Charlbury, on Saturday: while Ireland will bespeak itself at Ballymore, on Monday; Cashel, on Monday and Tuesday; the Irish Metropolitan, on Wednesday; and Kilmallock, on Thursday.

A very capital coursing season fast approaches its close. In England it is virtually over, and a bumper at Biggar (where Mr. Herron has four Open Cup nominations) on Monday, &c., will end it in Scotland; whereas Ireland has its North Union (Antrim) on Wednesday, and will not think of giving up its "see-hows" till May 7th!

The University boat race is fixed for Friday, April 3rd, the day after the "Metropolitan." So anxious is Alma Mater to let the world know the respective weight of her sons, that the present list descends to half pounds, and in fact one Corpus man is registered at 12 st. 2½ lbs.! If he does not rigidly obey the anti-potato and pastry rules of training, this fine balance may be disturbed.

WARWICK SPRING MEETING.—TUESDAY.

Handicap of 10 sovs.—Lord Nelson, 1. Early Bird, 2.
Trial Stakes.—Fisherman, 1. Gemma di Vergy, 2.
Sweepstakes of 5 sovs.—Cockatrice's dam colt, 1. Auricula, 2.
Willoughby Handicap. Mysterious Jack, 1. Poodle, 2.
Farmers' Plate. Warwick, 1. Jenny Jones, 2.

WEDNESDAY.

Welter Handicap.—Prince of Orange, 1. Typhon, 2.
Two-year-old Stakes. Greenwich Fair, 1. Patience, 2
Great Warwickshire Handicap.—Tame Deer, 1. Gaudy, 2.
Debdale Stakes. Royalty, 1. Brigadier, 2.
Sweepstakes of 5 sovs.—Castaway, 1. Laura Selina, 2.
Handicap Plate. Lord Nelson, 1. Octavia, 2.

THURSDAY.

Handicap Plate, £40. Plausible, 1. Garnet, 2.
Annual Steeplechase.—Weathercock, 1. Minerva, 2.
Hurdle Race.—Jean du Quesne, 1.

HOW AMERICA TREATS HER ARCTIC HEROES.

THE latest news from the United States informs us of the honour paid throughout the country to the memory of Dr. Kane, who departed this life at Havannah, on the 16th ult., from paralysis and apoplexy, having just completed the 35th year. The body of Dr. Kane was, on the 16th, attended to the place of embarkation by the chief authorities and American citizens, and placed on board the Cahawba steamer, where the governor of the city pronounced a very elegant address in Spanish, paying honour to the merit of Dr. Kane, to which the United States' Consul replied.

The Cahawba arrived at New Orleans on the 23rd, and the remains of Dr. Kane were at once conveyed to the Townhall, where they laid in state until removed to another steamer for Louisville, en route for Philadelphia, the native city of Dr. Kane, and the residence of his family. At New York the flag of the capital was directed by the State Senate to be hung at half-mast for two weeks, as a token of respect to his memory.

At Philadelphia the reception would be still more solemn and impressive, and it had been decided that the body should lie in state in the Old Hall of Independence, where the Deed of Independence was signed. We copy from the report of a meeting in the town of Louisville (one of several resolutions) remarkable for its suggestive reference to the duty of England towards her missing sons—

"Resolved, that the English people owe and we doubt not will gladly pay to Dr. Kane that especial gratitude, that he, more than any other, by the power of his pen and the influence of his example, awakened the interest of America to the career and fate of those heroic men whose undeserved destiny is yet the problem of this age of active enterprise."

The last resolution affirms that a copy of the proceedings of the meeting-duly engrossed and authenticated, shall be communicated to such British and other authorities as best represent those whose kindness to Dr. Kane it is desired to commemorate.

THE "RUSSELL."—(From at Correspondent.)—By our latest advices from America we learn that the recent treatment by the Admiralty of this renowned ship, the gift of the United States to this country as a token of sympathy in the search for Franklin (such being the motive given in the resolution of Congress) has produced some severe and not undeserved comments.

RUSSIAN INTRIGUES IN BULGARIA.—The custom-house officers of Galatz lately seized a great number of Sclavonian books, which were about to be smuggled into Bulgaria. They contained among other matters prayers in which it is asked from Heaven to destroy the Ottoman empire, and to give it to the orthodox Emperor. What is singular is, that these books contain a notice, according to which they have been printed by order of the Emperor Alexander II., and with the consent of the synod of the Greek Church."—Trieste Gazette.

SKETCHES IN SOUTHERN AUSTRALIA.

As the aboriginal tribes of Australia disappear before the march of civilisation, it may be interesting to chronicle pictorially a few of their peculiarities and characteristics. This we are enabled to do by aid of the sketch-books of travelled correspondents and the assistance of photography—the two accompanying Portraits, fine specimens of the natives of South Australia, being engraved from photographs recently received from that colony.

The taking of the Emu is a favourite sport of the aborigines: The emu is caught in very large nets, twenty yards long and five feet high, which are here made of the roots of the marsh, baked and chewed, and then spun. Several natives will watch the emus as they go to drink at the lagoons, having heard the birds whistling, and set their nets in readiness; they then drive the emus towards the nets, where other natives are lying in ambush; the birds get frightened and entangled, the natives rush upon them, and when in the net seize hold of them and kill them with spears and wirris. They catch the wallaby with nets about fifteen yards long and two feet high: parties go out and set these nets across the paths which the animals take when they come out of the bush to feed, and women are sent round to the further end of the thicket, where they make a loud noise, and drive the wallaby into the nets. The larger View presents a specimen of the romantic river scenery of the interior of Australia; the cataract and mountain vegetation forming a very picturesque illustration.

WOMAN OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

Mrs. Clay, in her very agreeable volume of Australian experiences, gives the following characteristics of the aborigines:—

I have heard some intelligent colonists remark that the low condition of the aborigines may perhaps be traced to the peculiar state of the country they inhabit. There is nothing indigenous like rice or corn—no grain; so that the greater portion of their life and ingenuity is devoted to the capture of the kangaroo and other animals. Instead, therefore, of their mental organs being called into action by a variety of wants, objects, or pursuits, the necessity for invention or construction has been lessened, and their whole energies concentrated upon the one great object of their existence—the chase. This must degrade man to a mere creature of instinct; and to such a state the aborigines of Australia appear reduced. * * * *

As regards the religion of the natives, I believe their principal belief is in an evil spirit, of which they have a great dread, imagining that it walks about of a night; and they therefore avoid, when dark, the vicinity of their burial grounds. These burial-grounds I have attempted to describe elsewhere. They frequently burn the aged dead; and, should a woman die, having a young infant, the living child is buried with the mother. The name of the dead is never mentioned; and any one in the same tribe having a similar name is obliged to take another.

The aboriginal method of courtship would not be admired by white ladies. The native, having determined on his future spouse—who is generally selected from another tribe—steals upon her secretly when she is at a little distance from the protectors, and stuns her by striking her with a wooden club or wattle, and then drags her away to his own tribe. This is often the cause of their going to war.

Naturally, the natives wear no clothing; but, if any article of dress be given them, they are proud to array themselves in it. The manner in which they wrap a blanket around them, fastening it over one shoulder, is very graceful. The women are exceedingly susceptible to gay colours. I suppose the nature of the sex is the same in all climes—and accept a bright pocket handkerchief or a few beads with as much delight as an English girl would receive a Parisian bonnet, or a souvenir from Howell and James's.

The greatest passion of the aborigines is revenge; and, even if one of them dies a natural death, they fling spears at one of his friends until blood appears—hence their universal testify to the white man. They can never forget nor forgive the atrocities perpetrated upon them by some of the early settlers, who at one time used to hunt them down like wild beasts, and fire at any they came upon, however inoffensive they might be.

The features of the aborigines are not pleasing, being very coarse. Their lips are thick, with flat noses and low, receding foreheads. They are not, generally speaking, tall or well made, neither are they particularly strong. Their going about in such numbers alone makes them dangerous.

THE DEAD EMU.

The number of aborigines is not gradually decreasing. Several tribes have already wholly disappeared. Many efforts have been made to protect them, and to induce them to adopt settled and industrious habits, but with various success. Native [illegible] established by the Government, but the young people almost invariably when passing out of childhood, throw off their clothes and return to their native haunts and habits. A few girls become house servants, but they are easily induced to leave for the woods. Of late there has, however, been a somewhat important change. The impossibility of obtaining a sufficient number of white shepherds and labourers caused many stock-keepers to offer good money wages to the natives, instead of merely giving them food and clothes, as was before the custom, and to adapt the service to their feelings. The result is said to have been very generally beneficial. They show little inclination, or rather considerable dislike, for manual labour; but they make very good hut-keepers, are careful and gentle as shepherds, and make excellent stock-washing, and other work connected with sheep and cattle farming. It remains to be seen, however, whether it will be possible to overcome to any extent their migratory habits, which have hitherto always prevented any permanent settlement.

MAN OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

In South Australia there seems to be much satisfaction felt at the change in the aborigines. The "Protector of the Aborigines" in that colony states that upwards of 500,000 sheep were in June, 1852, under the sole charge of native shepherds. A training institution for aborigines has been established at Adelaide, chiefly by the exertions of Archdeacon Hale, who resides on the establishment. He says that even his "own sanguine expectations did not lead him to anticipate a success so complete and triumphant as that which has attended our efforts, nor so rapid an increase in the number of our inmates." Besides the school-room, mess-room, &c., there are twenty huts occupied by native married couples. There is also a small farm, the work of which, with herding, cattle-keeping, &c., is done by the inmates of the institution, who are also taught brickmaking, building, and other useful occupations.

RIVER FALL IN THE INTERIOR OF AUSTRALIA.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

THE HOUSE IN WHICH CHATTERTON DIED, IN BROOK-STREET, HOLBORN.

IF any one were to go into Brook-street, which runs in a line below, and for some distance parallel with, Gray's-inn-lane from Holborn-hill, and inquire of the shopkeepers which house in that street it was in which Chatterton the poet for some time lived (or rather starved) and unfortunately died, you would be told that no one of that name was known there; and if, in endeavouring to refresh the memory, you mentioned the now generally-recognised ability of the struggling lad, and the sad means he was driven, in a great measure by stern necessity, to use, some of the neighbours would say, "Bless me! Sir, I have not read anything about it in the papers." Before making search for Chatterton's house we looked over the Gentleman's Magazine and some of the contemporary newspapers, thinking to find an account of the circumstances of the young poet's death, but found no mention of it, his fame was not then of sufficient note to attract much notice. However, we managed to learn that it was in the house of Mrs. Angle, a sackmaker in Brook-street, that Chatterton, a day or two after he had by accident tumbled into an open grave in Old St. Pancras graveyard, died, and was removed for interment to the burial-ground belonging to the parish in which paupers were chiefly interred. The house, a little while ago, formed part of Steffanoni's furniture warehouses, and was in a tattered and ruinous condition, but has recently been repaired. It would be well if some inscription could be put on the houses which are so often passed without notice in the London streets, for we much want all aids to break the long monotonous rows of bricks and mortar.

CHATTERTON'S HOUSE, BROOK-STREET, HOLBORN.

TOMB OF THE INFANT DAUGHTER OF JAMES I., IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

IN the north aisle of Henry VII.'s Chapel—in which is the grave of Addison, a stone to whose memory was put up not long since—is the simple and somewhat appropriate tomb here noticed. This monument, as will be seen by referring to the Engraving, is in shape like the old-fashioned cradle, and is composed of cream-coloured marble, parts are ornamented with the richly-carved drapery pattern so much in use in the days of Queen Elizabeth and King James. In the cradle, the head resting on a cushion, is the effigy of the little child, very finely sculptured, and which looks like a portrait. Over the lower part of the figure is a coverlet, also covered with profuse ornament. The whole has probably been highly coloured and gilt, and must have had a very beautiful effect.

TOMB OF THE INFANT DAUGHTER OF JAMES I., IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

At a short distance from this characteristic specimen of the artist's design and workmanship of the period is a plain yet elegantly-formed marble tablet, surmounted by a vase. A Latin inscription states that this memorial was placed here by Charles II. to mark the spot to which some human remains had been removed from the Tower. These bones were said to have been all that remained of the unfortunate Princes who were murdered by order of the Duke of Gloucester, and were dug up at the basement of that grim yet picturesque gateway called the "Bloody Tower," where this double murder is said to have been committed. If any of our readers should feel inclined to visit this spot, and judge for himself of the probability of the traditionary account being correct, he would do well to apply for leave to see the interior of the upper part of the gate, in which are the ropes, pulleys, and wheels used for raising and lowering the portcullis. The apartments are now occupied by modern furniture. The chief room—in which the tragic scene is said to have taken place—is strongly panelled with wood. In one part is a sort of closet, access to which is obtained by steps in the upper part of the building. This agrees with the idea we have of the "lug," or listening-place, described by Sir Walter Scott in "The Fortunes of Nigel," to which King James resorted for the purpose of overhearing his prisoners. This closet is at such a height from the floor that it has evidently not been intended for the use of the inmates of this room. Whether or not this is the place in which the Royal children died, it is clearly shown that various dark and terrible deeds have been here perpetrated; and it is impossible to look about the passages and dark nooks with unmoved feelings. But, however, having borrowed a large key, the visitor will be directed to go below the archway of the gate, and, on the east side, pull, if he can, the huge door of thick hard wood and iron. This is no easy matter for one person to do, owing to its immense weight. Behind the gate there is a small door, which the key opens, into an arched chamber, lighted by a small window. Here the bones were found, in Charles II.'s days, at a short depth below the surface.

THE OLD ARSENAL IN DANTZIC.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

There are some other monuments in this corner of the Abbey to which we may have an opportunity of referring on some future occasion; but we will at present only glance at the canopied tomb of Queen Elizabeth, for the purpose of observing the evident fidelity of the figure to nature. The figure is not robed in Greek and Roman costume, but in the farthingale, ruffs, and other portions of the dress which she actually wore in her lifetime. The head does not show Elizabeth in the spring time of her days, but as the crafty, self-willed, and, in some respects, foolish woman she became towards the close of her time. It is worth while to look at the monuments of the infant Princes, of Queen Elizabeth, and of Queen Mary in another chapel in the Abbey, and examine those of some of our ancient Kings, Queens, &c., and it will be seen that the sculptor has in each instance, to the best of his ability, carved each personage as much like the original as possible. The Greeks and Romans did not dress their statues in the robes worn in other countries, and we did for upwards of a century. It is pleasant, however, to look at the statue of Wilberforce and some others and know that this ridiculous fashion has almost gone out of use.

ASYLUM FOR THE TEMPORARY RECEPTION OF INSANE SOLDIERS, AT FORT PITT, CHATHAM.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

THE OLD ARSENAL IN DANTZIC.

BUILT in 1605, and renovated in 1834, is a curious specimen of the architecture of the time. The front is profusely decorated with stone carving and gilt ornaments. It is a peculiarity of this building that not a single door or window is in the place it ought to be according to all the rules of art. The reason of this strange irregularity is not known; but the whole is skilfully arranged that at first sight it does not strike the observer at all. When the French occupied Dantzic the building was used as a hospital. Its museum formerly contained several historical relics of value—among them the dagger with which Ravaillac stabbed Henry IV. of France, and the armour of Count Egmont.

ASYLUM FOR INSANE SOLDIERS AT CHATHAM.

THIS establishment may be described as having originated in the experiences of the late war in the means of better providing the soldier against the many ills to which he is liable.

The Asylum is a well-planned and capacious building at Fort Pitt, Chatham, for the use of soldiers arriving from foreign stations, and who are, there is reason to believe, labouring under insanity. Here patients of this class are temporarily received, and, after a short but strict observation, are discharged—the quiet, industrious, and harmless to their friends or parishes, willing to receive them; the dangerous and helpless to Gun Hall Asylum. The Chatham Asylum is placed within the ramparts which surround Fort Pitt, and is in a fine open situation, commanding a beautiful prospect in every direction. A corridor extends the whole length of the building for the use of the patients, who are thus enabled to take open-air exercise daily, regardless of the weather. The main gate, a barrier to the rear of the Asylum; and in the front is a tastefully-arranged garden, railed off, in which the patients will be allowed to walk, and from which they will be able to see and converse with their convalescent comrades. The Asylum was completed and opened for the reception of patients of last year; it is constructed for two officers and thirty-two men.

CEREMONY OF PLACING CRIMEAN COLOURS IN WELLINGTON CHAPEL.

THIS impressive ceremony took place on the 26th ult., at Wellington Barracks, St. James's-park. Orders were issued by Major-General Lord Rokeby for the colours of the brigade of Guards carried during the war, six in number, to be marched under guards of honour, with the respective bands of the regiments, so as to meet at Wellington Barracks at eleven o'clock, and there to be placed in the military chapel adjoining. The parade was formed by placing the guards of honour in line facing each other in open order, so as to make an avenue from the open parade to the steps of the chapel. A special guard was in the mean time formed on the parade at some little distance, with the six colours, headed by the united bands of the three regiments. When it was reported to Lord Rokeby that all was ready the special guard were marched up, led by the field officer commanding the parade, the band clearing the front of the colour escort as they approached the troops, and forming at one side, as shown in the Illustration. The company forming the escort halted so as to form the third side of the square of troops in front of the chapel, the ensigns and colour-sergeants marching alone to the steps; on reaching the top of which the colours faced about so as to face the troops on parade, and standing in a cluster under the portico, when, under a Royal salute, followed by three cheers, they were taken into the chapel and placed over the communion table. The scene was altogether very animated and picturesque.

OPENING OF THE NEW SCHOOLS OF ST. THOMAS CHARTERHOUSE, GOLDEN-LANE.

ON Thursday these Schools, building for the free education of the children of the costermongers and poor inhabitants of Golden-lane and Whitecross-street, were formally opened by his Royal Highness Prince Albert. The first stone of the new edifice was laid by the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone (officiating for the Marquis of Lansdowne, K.G.), on the 8th of May last, and a report of the proceedings, with an Illustration, will be found in our Journal for May 17. The building, which was erected from the designs of Mr. Tarring, is pretty good on a freehold site in Golden-lane: the architect is Mr. Robert Hesketh, of Welbeck-street; the only attempt at ornamentation in the façade, which we engrave, is in the door and window heads, which are of Byzantine character. The plan contains three school-rooms, capable of accommodating 1000 children; and, when we recollect that the building is in one of the poorest districts of the metropolis, it must be allowed that the welcome seed of free education has here fallen in good ground.

Shortly after three o'clock his Royal Highness and suite arrived, accompanied by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Marquis of Abercorn, and Major-General Grey; and was received by the Rev. W. Rogers, the treasurer, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, the Deans of Worcester, St. Paul's, and Salisbury, and a large number of the clergy and gentry. A procession having been formed, his Royal Highness was conducted over the schools, and expressed his gratification at the whole arrangements. In the infant school, on the ground floor, were assembled the 270 children in the school, who were placed on rows of seats forming an amphitheatre, and their neat appearance and gentle behaviour called forth the admiration of all.

His Royal Highness was then conducted into the girls' school-room (a commodious apartment, well furnished with maps, charts, &c.), where a large number of noblemen, gentlemen, clergy, and ladies were assembled. His Royal Highness (who on entering was most loudly cheered) took his seat on a magnificent chair placed in the centre of a raised dais covered with crimson. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Marquis of Abercorn, and Lord R. Grosvenor, M.P., supported him on the right, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, and Major General Grey on his left. The Rev. W. Rogers, the treasurer, then advanced to the foot of the dais and read an address to Prince Albert.

His Royal Highness, in reply, said: Mr. Rogers and gentlemen, promoters and supporters, I thank you sincerely for your kind welcome. I regret the opportunity which has thus been afforded to me of visiting this noble establishment, and my satisfaction in doing so is increased by the circumstance that my visit occurs at a period of its existence when the state of society is favourable to watch by your exertions, attained in about, by a continuance of the same exertions, to receive a still wider extension in the progress of these schools, struggling, I may say from the most lowly and humble beginning up to the present noble dimensions, we find a striking exemplification of the Divine truth—that the principle of good once sown is not destined to lie dormant, but that, like the grain of mustard-seed, it is calculated to extend and develop itself in an ever-increasing sphere of usefulness; and we may confidently hope that what you have so ably effected, following the universal law, will not be limited in its result to the immediate objects of your charitable exertions, but that it will prove the means of diffusing untold blessings amongst remote generations. For you, Mr. Rogers, who have been made instrumental, and in great personal sacrifice, bringing about this great good, and for those who have stood by you and contributed by their support to the success of your efforts, there can, I am sure, be no higher source of gratification than in the contemplation of your noble work. The reflection that you have been the instrument under Divine Providence of conferring on the poor and needy of this vast district that greatest of all boons, the means of obtaining the blessings of education and of religious instruction, without which any lasting change in their very permanent amelioration of their lot could seem hopeless, and still further the feeling that this inestimable boon will be secured, and in a yet higher degree, to their children's children, will carry with it a very great reward. Still it will be a source of legitimate pride and satisfaction to you to know that your labours have not been unobserved, but that your noble and Christian-like exertions to benefit those who cannot help themselves have attracted the notice and admiration of your Sovereign, and of those who are deputed under her to watch over and promote the education and moral welfare of her people. The means which you have adopted to effect your work of benevolence appear no less deserving of commendation than the object itself. You have not been content with the bare attempt to force, perhaps, on the recipients a boon the value of which might not be appreciated; but you have wisely sought to work upon the convictions and feelings of the children you wish to benefit, by extending your assistance to those who, by a small contribution out of their hardly-won earnings, have proved that they are awake to the sense of the vast importance it is to their offspring that the means of being fitted to pass successfully through life, and by honest industry to better their worldly position, should be brought within their reach. It is a source of high personal gratification to me that I have been enabled by my presence here this day, and by that of the Prince of Wales, to mark, not only my own appreciation of your labours, but also the deep interest which the Queen takes in the well-being of the poorest of her subjects; and that gratification will be greatly enhanced if, by this public expression of the sympathy of the Queen and of her family and Government, this noble cause shall be still further advanced. Most earnestly do I pray that the same success which has blessed your labours may continue to attend your future progress, and that your example may stimulate other localities to emulate your useful efforts.

Prayers were then offered up by the Bishop of London, and the singing of the National Anthem closed the proceedings.

His Royal Highness was loudly cheered as he left the building by a vast concourse of persons who had assembled in the neighbourhood.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE squadron on the China station and the reinforcements will jointly muster a large and powerful armament for operation in the Chinese waters. The ships and vessels now on the station, or on their way out, are the following:—Sailing vessels: Calcutta, 84; Raleigh, 80; Winchester, 50; Sybille, 40; Pique, 40; Spartan, 26; Amethyst, 26; Comus, 14; Racehorse, 14; Camilla, 16; Acorn, 12; Bittern, 12; Hinaldo, depôt ship; Alligator, depôt ship; and the Sapphire, depôt ship. Steamers: Tribune, 31; Pearl, 20; Esk, 20; Highflyer, 20; Cruiser, 17; Hornet, 17; Niger, 14; Encounter, 14; Seagull, 6; Fury, 6; Inconstant, 6; Barracouta, 6; Bustard, 2; Janus, 2; Haughty, 2; Opossum, 2; Plover, 2; Starch, 2; Starling 2. The reinforcements now going out with troops, stores, and munitions of war comprise the following ships and vessels (all steamers):—Calcutta, screw, 84; Retribution, 22; Furious, 16; Transit, 6; Assistance, 6; Himalaya, 6; Adventure, 6; Nimrod, 6; Surprise, 4; Cormorant, 4; Viper, 4; Algerine, 2; Brave, 2; Firm, 2; Beaver, 2; Janus, 2; Drake, 2; Watchful, 2; Woodcock, 2; Kestrel, 2; Lee, 2; Clown, 2; and Teaser, 2. The Himalaya will be at Spithead by the 25th, to embark the 42nd and other troops. Transit will be ready in July or two to embark the 33rd Fusiliers; and the Furious will embark the 90th Regiment. Lloyd's have been applied to by the Admiralty to provide transports for the conveyance of the other troops, camp-equipage, munitions, and stores.

The Shannon, 51, got away from Spithead under steam on Tuesday morning, at a quarter before eight, for China, with munitions of war, reinforcements of men, &c. When a mile to the eastward of Nab she made sail and shaped her course down the Channel under topsail, jib, and foretopmast-staysail, with a strong easterly breeze. She was shortly out of sight.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

OWING, in a great measure, to the continued activity in the demand for money, and the late large purchases of gold for shipment to France, the transactions in the market for Home Stocks this week have been limited, and a further slight decline has taken place in the quotations. The extraordinary movement in the precious metals has induced the Bulls to pause ere they operate to any extent; but the Bears have also shown no inclination to sell stock, under the impression that the exports of gold will shortly fall off. We, however, entertain a different opinion, even though our relations with China are in a disturbed state. Our quarrel is, apparently, confined to Canton—as we learn that the northern ports remain open to our commerce—and it is admitted by those immediately interested in the trade that heavy balances against us have yet to be settled. We must not forget, likewise, that the formation of numerous and important lines of railway in India will absorb many millions of British capital, which, from there being only one standard in our Indian empire, must be paid in silver. We are still drawing that metal from every available source in exchange for gold, and it has become a serious question for consideration whether future supplies will be equal to the demand, and whether it will not be found necessary to introduce a double standard in India. The French Government, alarmed at the enormous drain of silver, has appointed a commission to investigate the matter, and, if possible, to adopt some means of checking the outflow which threatens to drain not only France but the whole of Germany of the silver currency.

Several parcels of gold have been landed from Australia, but the whole of the supply has been purchased for the Continent. The total arrival of bullion is about £400,000, in which is included £120,000 in silver from France and Italy for the Australian trade, the carries out £700,000; and a large quantity of silver is expected to be sent away next month. Sales of dollars have been readily made at 60¾d., being a rise of ¼d. compared with the previous week's quotation.

We have no actual change to notice in the rate of discounts, the lowest rate in Lombard-street, with very few exceptions, being 4 per cent, the supply of money at that rate being quite sufficient for the wants of the mercantile community. On the Continent money is still scarce and dear, yet we learn that at Hamburg loans may be had at 4 per cent.

The amount of gold withdrawn from the Bank of England for the Continent has been comparatively small this week.

The affairs of the Eastern Banking Corporation are being wound up. The losses appear to be trifling.

Home Stocks were very inactive on Monday, yet the fluctuations in prices were not important. The Three per Cents, for Money, were 93¾ to 93⅞; for the Account, 93⅝ ⅞. The New Two and a Half per Cents realised 76⅛. India Stock was 223. Exchequer Bills sold at par to 3s. prem.; Exchequer Bills, 98¾ ⅞. On Thursday prices were inactive and the quotations were a shade lower. The Three per Cents for Transfer were done at 93⅝ to 93⅞. Ditto, for Account, 93⅜ ½; India Bonds, 2s. to 2s. prem.; Exchequer Bills, 1s. dis. to 4s. prem.; Exchequer Bonds, 98⅜. Wednesday's business was trifling, as follows:—Three per Cent Consols, 93⅝ to 93⅜; Ditto, for Account, 93⅜ ½; Long Annuities, 1859, 2⅛; India Bonds, 2s. prem.; Exchequer Bills, 1s. dis. to 4s. prem.; Exchequer Bonds, 98⅜ ⅝. The Funds were nearly stationary on Thursday. The Three per Cents, for Money, were 93⅜ ½; and for the Account, 93⅝. Bank Stock, 221 to 223; Exchequer Bills, 2s. dis. to 2s. prem.

Some particulars of the loan of £3,000,000 by the United States to Mexico have come to hand within the last few days, from which we learn that a large portion of our claims upon the Mexican Government will be paid out of the proceeds of the loan. The Bonds have, consequently, been very firm this week, and some large transactions have taken place in them, although it is not very clear to us that the holders of Mexican Stock will in any way be benefited. For a considerable period great difficulty has been experienced in obtaining money from Mexico to pay the long arrears of dividend, although a portion of the Customs duties has been set aside for that purpose. The present arrangement, which makes over to the United States the best and most available income of the Mexican Treasury, will render it difficult to make further remittances; hence we regard the advance in the value of Mexican Stock with much suspicion. Most other Foreign Securities have been inactive, and many descriptions have fallen in value. The quotations for Brazilian Five per Cents have marked 103¾; Mexican Three per Cents, 20⅝ 24½; Portuguese Three per Cents, 45½; Russian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 94½; Spanish Three per Cents, 47¼; Spanish Three per Cents, 4½; Spanish New Deferred, 25; Turkish Six per Cents, 97⅛; Turkish Four per Cents, 101; French Three per Cents, 71 fr.; Belgian Four and-a-Half per Cents, 98 per Cents, 66; Dutch Four per Cents, 98⅜; and Sardinian Five per Cents, 93.

All Joint-Stock Bank Shares have been very firm in price; but the transactions in them have continued limited: Australasia have realised 9⅞; Chartered of India, Australia, and China, 5; City, 70½; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 18; London and County, 27½; London and Westminster, 43; New South Wales, 49½; Ottoman, 16⅝; Union of Australia, 59½; and Union of London, 26.

Most Miscellaneous Securities have been dull. Canada Company's Shares have sold at 136; Crystal Palace Preference, 5½; Electric Telegraph, 96⅞; European and Indian Junction Telegraph, 6; London Omnibus Company, 4½; London Docks, 100; Grand Junction Canal, 44; Stock, 34 ex div.; Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee 7; Great Northern 93½, Ditto, B Stock, 121¾; Great Western, 67⅜; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 99¾ ex div. and ex New; London and Blackwall, 6¾; London and Brighton, 108¾; London and North-Western, 104⅝; London and South-Western, 104¾; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 37⅞; Midland, 81¼; North Staffordshire, 45; North-Eastern, Berwick, 89⅝; Ditto, Leeds, 92; Ditto, York, 63; Scottish North-Eastern, 25½; Vale of Neath, ½ ex div.

LINES LEASED OR FIXED RENTALS.—London, Tilbury, and Southend, 10¾; Wilts and Somerset, 8; Wimbledon and Croydon, 9 ex div.

PREFERENCE SHARES.—Eastern Counties New Six per Cent Stock, 12 ex div.; Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, 7½; Great Northern Four-and-a-Half per Cent, 102; Ditto, Five per Cent, 60½; Great Western Four per Cent, 84½; Ditto, Chester Shares, 16½; Ditto, Birmingham Stock, 73; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 8; Midland Consolidated, 97⅝; North British, 103 ex div.; North-Eastern—Berwick, 89½; Ditto, 1½ dis.; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 110⅝; South-Eastern (Reading Annuities) 23 ex div.

BURTHAR POSSESSIONS.—East Indian, 112; Grand Trunk of Canada, 54½; Ditto, Six per Cent Debentures, 85; Great Indian Peninsular, New, 5¼; Ditto, 3; Great Western of Canada, 26½; Ditto, New, 11¼; Punjaub, 38 prem.

FOREIGN.—Antwerp and Rotterdam, 7; Belgian Eastern Junction, 1¼; Eastern of France, 3½; Euphrates Valley, ½ prem.; Namur and Liége Preference, 21½; Northern of France, 39½; Sambre and Meuse, 10; West Flanders, 4½.

MINES.—Mining Shares have been dull, and prices have been with difficulty supported. On Thursday Tin Croft were 6½; Wheal Edward, 5; Mariquita, ¼; Santiago de Cuba, 2½; and United Mexican, 3½.

Friday Afternoon.

The transactions in home stocks to-day have been limited, yet very little change has taken place in prices. The Three per Cents, for Money, have been 93⅝; for the Account, 93⅜ ½. Foreign Bonds and Railway Shares are about stationary. The dividend declared by the Directors of the Bank of England is at the rate of 9 per cent per annum

THE MARKETS.

CORN-EXCHANGE (Friday).—Only limited supplies of English wheat have been received up to our market this week, and the show of samples to-day was small. For all kinds, however, we have a very slow trade, at prices barely equal to those realised on Monday. The imports of foreign wheat are under 7000 quarters. That grain met a dull inquiry, but without leading to any change in value. Floating cargoes of produce were rather dull. Fine malting barley sold steadily, at full quotations, but inferior barley was neglected. Malt sold to a fair extent, at full prices. We had a dull sale for oats, beans, peas, and flour, at Monday's currency.

Arrivals this Week.—English wheat, 1750; barley 1670; malt, 4990; oats, 340; flour, 1960 Irish: oats, 3420. Foreign: wheat, 6760; barley, 8820; oats, 8140. 4310 barrels of flour, 9600 sacks.

Prices.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 40s. to 60s.; ditto, white, 50s to 68s.; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 48s. to 60s.; rye, 36s to 40s.; grinding barley, 30s to 33s.; distill ng ditto, 30s to 32s.; malting ditto, 39s. to 42s.; Kingston and Ware, red, 56s to 60s.; white, 60s to 64s.; Kingston and Ware, 68s. to 70s.; Chevalier, 77s to 78s.; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feeding oats, 19s to 20s.; potato ditto, 22s to 23s.; Lincoln and Cork, black, 20s to 20s.; ditto, white, 22s to 23s.; tick beans, 32s. to 33s.; grey peas, 37s. to 38s.; maple, 38s. to 40s.; white, 39s. to 42s.; per quarter. Town-made flour, 45s. to 47s.; Suffolk, 40s. to 41s.; Stockton and Yorkshire, 41s to 42s. per 280 lb. American flour, 29s. to 37s. per barrel

Seeds.—Cloves seed has sold slowly, and prices have had a downward tendency. Other seeds, as well as cakes, have ruled exceedingly dull.

Linseed.—English sowing, 56s. to 58s.; Mediterranean and Odessa 70s to 72s.; hempseed, 42s. to 44s. per quarter. Coriander, 18s. to 19s. per cwt. Brown mustard seed 20s. to 22s.; ditto, white, 12s. to 13s.; tares, 5s. 6d. to 6s. 6d. per bushel. English rapeseed, £20 to £21 per last. Linseed cakes, English, £11 0s. to £11 10s.; ditto foreign, £11 0s to £11 10s.; rape cakes, £5 0s. to £5 10s. per ton. Canary, 70s to 72s. per quarter

Brands.—The prices of Scotch spread in the metropolis are from 62s. to 63s., of household ditto, 7d. to 8d. per 4 lb. loaf

Imperial Weekly Averages.—Wheat, 55s. 6d.; barley, 36s. 1d.; oats, 24s. 4d.; rye, 39s. 10d.; beans, 39s. 4d.; peas, 39s. 7d.

The Sale Hords Averages.—Wheat 55s. 10d.; barley, 35s. 6d.; oats, 23s. 4d.; rye, 40s. 4d.; beans, 39s. 5d.; peas, 39s. 4d.

English Grain Sold last week. Wheat 109,274 barley, 53,912; oats, 18,676; rye, 290; beans, 7118; peas, 1,086 quarters.

Tea.—The transactions in all kinds of tea this week, have been very limited, and the market is for the most part rather lower than last week. Sugar has changed hands at 12½d. per lb.

Sugar.—Importers have been firm in their demands; yet dealers have purchased all raw sugars with much caution. In the general quotations very little change has taken place Mauritius has sold at 47s. to 53s.; and Bengal, 46s. to 54s. per cwt. Refined goods move off slowly, at 63s. 6d. to 65s. 6d. per cwt. Crushed is dull in sale

Coffee.—Our market may be considered steady; but the business is confined to small parcels. Good old native Ceylon, 58s. per cwt.

Rice.—We have no change to notice in the value of this article and the business doing is very moderate. The stock is 46,700 tons, against 16,500 tons in 18.6.

Provisions.—The best kinds of butter is scarce and worth 124s per cwt. In the value of English and Irish qualities very little change has taken place. The bacon market is tolerably firm; but other provisions command very little attention

Tallow.—Our market is steady; the prices are very uncertain, owing to the pressure of Australian qualities for sale. P Y C, on the spot, nominal at 68s. to 68s 6d. Town tallow, £4 1s per cwt.

Linseed oil, on the spot, is quoted at 32s. 6d. to 41s per cwt. Rape is rather dearer. Cocoa-nut oil, £54 to £55 per ton. Palm oil, £36 to £38. Palm nuves £ 10s. to £47 to £45, sperm, £98 to £100. Turpentine continues dull, at 42s. to 43s per cwt.

Spirits.—There is a fair business doing in rum, at full quotations. Proof Leewards, 2s. 6d.; Jamaica, 2s. 8d. per gallon. The brandy market is less active, yet fine old pecries are worth 16s. per gallon. Malt spirit is unaltered in value

Iron and Steam.—Shadow bars, £8 10s. to £9 0s.; clover, ditto, £9 10s. to £9 0s.; and straw, £7 0s. to £7 10s. per load

Wool.—The public sales of colonial wool, at which 49,184 bales were disposed of, have been brought to a close. Cape wools sold at an advance of from 1½d to 3d.; Australian, 2d to 3d per lb. The private market is very firm.

Potatoes.—The supplies are seasonal good, and the demand is steady, at from 60s. to 120s per ton

Coals (Friday).—Tanfield Moor, 12s.; Eden Main, 16s.; South Hetton, 17s.; Lambton, 17s.; Hetton (Lyons Main), 16s. 3d.; Russell's Hetton, 16s.; Stewart's, 17s. 6d.; Hartlepool Hetton, 16s 6d. per ton

Hops (Friday).—Not the slightest change has taken place in the value of any kind of hops, the show of which is extremely meagre, and the demand is nearly confined to small parcels. Mid and East Kent pockets, £3 15s. to £5 12s.; Weald of Kent, £3 5s to £5 5s.; Sussex, £3 3s to £4 0s.; Yearlings, £1 10s to £3 10s per cwt

Metropolitan Cattle Market (Friday).—Although the supply of beasts was very moderate, all breeds moved off heavily, at a decline in the quotations of 4d per 8 lb. With sheep we were scantily supplied. So yet the sanitive trade ruled very dull, and the veal trade was with Monday's fully 2d per 8 lb. The show of calves was moderate, and the veal trade was dull, at 4d. per 8 lb. Inferior pigs were quoted at 6s. 6d. to 7s. 4d.; but in pigs nor to nothing was doing, on easier terms Milch cows were almost nominal in value.

Per 8 lbs to sink the offal:—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s. 8d to 3s. 4d.; second quality, 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d.; prime large oxen, 3s. 10d. to 4s.; prime Scots, &c., 4s. 2d.; and prime small ditto, 4s. 4d. Coarse and inferior sheep, 4s. 4d. to 4s. 8d.; second quality ditto, 4s. 10d. to 5s.; prime coarse-woolled sheep, 5s. 2d. to 5s. 4d.; prime Southdowns, 5s. 6d. to 5s. 10d.; large coarse calves, 3s. 8d. to 4s. 10d.; prime small ditto, 5s. 0d. to 5s. 4d.; large hogs, 3s. 8d. to 4s. 4d.; neat small porkers, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 8d.; lambs, 6s. 0d. to 6s. 8d.; and quarter-old store pigs, 21s to 28s each. Total supply—beasts, 1000; cows, 120; sheep, 9500; calves, 210; pigs, 300. Foreign—Beasts, 200; sheep, 1000.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—The supplies of meat were made stir, and the trade ruled heavy, at drooping prices.—

Per 8 lbs, by the carcass:—Inferior beef, 2s. 10d. to 3s. 4d.; middling ditto, 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d.; prime large ditto, 3s. 10d. to 4s. 0d.; ditto small ditto, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 4d.; large pork, 3s. 8d. to 4s. 4d.; small ditto, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 8d.; veal, 4s. 0d. to 4s. 10d.; prime ditto, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 8d.; and prime lambs, 6s. 8d. to 7s. 0d.

ROBERT HUNT.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

FRIDAY, MARCH 13

WAR-OFFICE, MARCH 13

3rd Dragoon Guards: Paymaster T. M. Cockerill to be Paymaster.

5th Light Dragoons: Lieut E. C. Cockburn to be Captain, Cornet A. H. Bingham to be Lieutenant. J. A. Stewart to be Cornet.

Paymaster C. P. Erskine to be Paymaster

Military Train: Capt. W. R. Gray to be Captain.

Lieutenant Guards' Lieut.-Col. T. Ha... to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Lieutenant-Colonel Hood and Capt and Brevet-Major W. H. B. de Horsey to be Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel. Ensign and Lieut. F. W. L. Wynn to be Lieutenant and Captain. 4th Foot: H. Hatter to be Ensign.

5th Lieut. W. Macdonnell to be Paymaster.

Lieut. J. Gethorne to be Lieutenant ... ing to be Lieutenant. Lieut H. W. Drought to the 1st Regiment Lieut. J. B. Hall to be Lieutenant. Lieut. J. Peach to be Lieutenant. Lieut. J. Jackson to be Instructor of Musketry. Lieut. J. H. Archer to be Lieutenant.

BANKRUPTS

R. N. DAY, Bermondsey-street, Southwark, fish merchant.—H. WISE, Cowcross, Aldersgate, Glerkenwell.—R. HASSELL, Oxford, merchant.—J. ... Bristol, ... corn, seed, and flour merchant.—L. SPILSBURY, Wolverhampton, ... and ... —J. WATKINS, Gloucester-square, Pimlico, cheesemonger.—O. FOA, Old Broad-street, merchant.—J. and R. CATTERTON, Horncastle, Lincolnshire, millers and bakers.—J. BROWNING, ... Bristol, ... —J. ... Plymouth, victualler.—J. ... Liverpool, commission agent.—H. DYER, Bristol, ... —J. ... Bristol, ... —G. R. SMART, Bath, wholesale ... —W. S. GOODING, Manchester-... —G. WILLIAMSON, Saint Hill, Broadwater, Cumberland, woollen manufacturer.—... MICHELL, Leeds, merchant.

TUESDAY, MARCH 17.

WAR-OFFICE, MARCH 17

BREVET.—Major-General the Hon. J. Bruce, K.H., to have the local and temporary rank at Lieutenant-General while employed upon a particular service.

BANKRUPT

J. CURTIS, ... Dereham, Norfolk, tailor.—W. TILBURY, Great Tichfield-street, and ... J. and J. CHASE, ... carabine-grate, butcher.—J. C. MEIWIN and C. H. ... Rochford-road, engineers.—J. S. HARVEY, Birmingham, grocer.—J. COLEMAN, Wolverhampton and Coventry, draper, bookseller.—W. SMITH, Northam, grocer.—T. SMITH, Nottingham, ... —... Sheffield, cheesemonger.—... manufacturer.—T. BIFKISS, Sheffield, scale cutter.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS

J. FLEMING, Corpar-Angus, Perthshire, posting-master.—C. CRICHTON, Fort William, ... —E. SLACK, Glasgow, manufacturing chemist.—D. NOOME, Glasgow, ... —J. COUTLAND, Dumfries, ...

BIRTHS.

On the 7th inst., at the Vicarage, Manaccan, near Helstone, Cornwall, the wife of the Rev. Edward Spry, of a son.

At Collingwood, near Melbourne, on December 7th, the wife of C. B. Payne, Esq., of a son

At Funchal, Madeira, on the 12th ult., the wife of Mr. W. Broughton, of a son

On the 7th February, at Quebec, Canada, the wife of Alexander Davidson Bell, Esq., of a daughter

On the 19th inst., at 5 Hyde-park-place, Cumberland-gate, the wife of Henry B. Hohler, Esq. of a daughter

MARRIAGES.

On the 11th ult., at the parish church Preston, by the Rev. W. Watling, B.A., Incumbent of St. Ethelred, Mr. Frank Hamilton, to Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the late Mr James Parkinson, of Preston.

On the 16th inst., at Christ's Church Southsea by the Rev. Thomas Brownrigg, William Munro, Esq., M.D., Surgeon 93rd Highlanders, to Dora Laidlaw, daughter of the late James Bell, Esq.

DEATHS.

On the 11th inst., at 31, Ladbroke-square, Frances Anne, the dearly-beloved wife of Thomas Mcfadzean, youngest daughter of the late Admiral Sir Rose Domeily, K.C.B., and sister of the Baronese Heytesbury and of the late Lady Audley.

On the 16th inst., at the Manor House, Great Sanaence, Middlesex, Charles Otway Mayne, Esq., late Commander in the Hon. East India Company's Maritime Service, aged 77.

On the 13th inst., Anne Sarah, Dowager Lady Talbot de Malahide, in the 89th year of her age.

At Beigh ton, in the 81st year of her age, the Hon Margaret Erskine, daughter of the late Thomas, Lord Erskine.

At Scaleswath, near Carlisle, on the 14th inst., Peter Sydenham, eldest son of Peter Dixon, Esq., aged 39.

On the 18th inst., at the residence of her grandfather, E. Mason, Esq., 59, Finsbury-road, St. John's-wood, in the 21st year of her age, Lucy Emma, second surviving daughter of H. David C. Satow, of Upper Clapton, and 16th-lane, Great Yarmouth.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Now ready, imperial 8vo, cloth, 12s., 127 Lessons, 155 Pages of Text, 48 Plates, and 100 Models.

LESSONS on ART. By J. D. HARDING. By means of which all may teach themselves Drawing and acquire a practical knowledge of Art.

Now ready, by the same Author,

The GUIDE and COMPANION to LESSONS on ART. Imperial 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d., 178 Pages of Text, 76 Tinted Plates and 87 Woodcuts.

LESSONS on TREES. 2nd Edition, imperial 4to, cloth, 1l., 63 Lessons descriptive, and illustrated on 30 Lithographic Plates.

ELEMENTARY ART; or, the Use of the Chalk and Lead Pencil Advocated and Explained. 7th Edition, imperial 4to cloth, 15s., 97 Pages Text, 24 Plates, some Tinted, and 43 Wood Engravings.

DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

---

In March 8vo, price 6s. 6d., cloth boards,

AMERICAN SLAVERY and COLOUR. By one of the Family. With an Introductory Letter by the Author of "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN." Author of "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN."

Wertheim and Macintosh, London and Edinburgh.

Worth Notice.—What has always been wanted is just published, price 4s., free by post (the 18th Thousand is now selling),

THE DICTIONARY APPENDIX, with upwards of 7000 Words not found in the Dictionary, com prising the Participles of the Verbs, which per se all writers No person that writes a letter should be without this work. Post-book in cloth boards. Words wanting in all. The 4000 Words are as necessary as Walker's Dictionary. The 4000 Words are as necessary as Walker's Dictionary.

J. F. SHAW, 36, Paternoster-row.

---

USEFUL BOOKS, INDISPENSABLE TO ALL. Eighth Thousand, price 3s. 6d. cloth, by post.

INDISPENSABLE, LIVE and LEARN. A Guide for all who wish to speak and write correctly. "Live and Learn is an excellent book We look upon it as really indispensable. We advise our readers to purchase one example. promises to be a useful book, and will be at once a favourite."—Bell's Messenger.

READ AND REFER.—Complete, price 5s. 6d., cloth, post-free. The NEWSPAPER and GENERAL READER'S POCKET COMPANION, being a familiar explanation of nearly 4000 classical and foreign phrases, and quotations, of the most frequent occurrence in newspapers, periodicals, reviews, and publications of the day. By the Author of "Live and Learn."

London: J. F. SHAW, Southampton-row and Paternoster-row.

---

IMPORTANT to LADIES.—On Saturday, March 28, will be published, No. 1, of an Illustrated Exposition of THE LADIES' COLLEGE, containing every and interesting Lessons in Music, Fine Art, Domestic Economy, Needlework, Dancing, Deportment, Modern Languages, &c. It is hoped this work will be found the most complete and comprehensive of the kind ever published. The first Number will contain Six Lessons, with six portrait engravings, and will be sent post-free to any address on receipt of Six Postage Stamps. Publishers will oblige by giving an early order to their Booksellers, as only a limited number will be printed. Order of all Booksellers on the day of publication.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

---

On the 28th, price 5s., 320 pp., 8vo, with numerous Engravings of Scenery and Incidents by Sargent, Harvey, Weir, Harrison, Hall, and other artists,

DR. LIVINGSTON; his Life, Adventures, and Missionary Labours in Central Africa. By H. G. ADAMS. With fine Portrait, engraved by Smyth, and a well-defined Map of the District Round.

London: HOULSTON and WRIGHT, 65, Paternoster-row.

---

This day, complete in Three Parts, price 1s. each, numerous Illustrations, 3s. 6d.

ELEMENTS of CHEMISTRY. By WILLIAM ALLEN MILLER, M.D., F.R.S., F.C.S., Professor of Chemistry, King's College, London.

PART I. CHEMICAL PHYSICS. 10s. 6d.
PART II. INORGANIC CHEMISTRY. 15s. 6d.
PART III. ORGANIC CHEMISTRY. 20s. 6d.
London: JOHN W. PARKER and SON, West Strand.

---

This day, price One Shilling, post-free,

HOW TO PUBLISH: A Manual for Authors. Containing Hints, Cautions, Specimens, Illustrations, &c.

London: PARTRIDGE and CO., Paternoster-row.

---

A MANUAL of METALLURGY; or, a Practical Treatise on the Chemistry of the Metals. In JOHN ARTHUR PHILLIPS, F.R.S., Professor of Mining in the Government School of Mines, &c. In 1 vol. 8vo, with 42 Wood Engravings, 18s. cloth.

Longman and Co., Paternoster-row; and Griffin and Co., Glasgow.

---

Price One Shilling (post-free),

HINTS on DRESS to LADIES. By Mrs. ALAMS.

CONTENTS:—How to Save a Dress—How to Cut Out Waste Pockets—Hints to Young Hints on Making a Shirt Apron Making—Economical Warm Petticoats—Jackets How to Buy—Hints on Hats—Hints on Shoes—Petticoats—How to Buy the Proper Dressmakers, &c. &c.

London: WARD and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row London

---

100 PARIS SPRING FASHIONS and Full-Sized Cut out Pattern of Child's Costume, in the LADIES' GAZETTE of FASHION for APRIL. Price 1s. post-free 1s. 6d. 1, HERBERT, 189, Fleet-street, Strand.

---

WINTER at BRIGHTON. See TITAN for MARCH. Price 1s. post-free. Home Address MILDRIDGE and SONS

---

CHEAP BOOKS.—Surplus Copies of "Marsala's History of England," "Mrs. Hall's Stories of Ireland," "Shadow's Sinai and Palestine," Dr. Kitto's Pictorial Bible," and many other Books are now on SALE at BELLE SAUVAGE YARD, at greatly Reduced Prices. Catalogues gratis and post-free on application.

BELL and DALDY, 186, Fleet-street, and 13, York-street, Covent-garden, London, W.

---

REEVES' WATER-COLOURS in CAKES, and MOIST WATER-COLOURS in TUBES and PANS 155 Cheapside and 109 Regent-street.

---

ROYAL PANOPTICON.—TO BE SOLD, pursuant to a Decree of the High Court of Chancery, made in a cause of Massey v. the Royal Panopticon of Science and Art, with the approbation of Sir Richard Torin Kindersley, the Judge to whose Court the said cause is attached, some time in the month of APRIL next, on which day notice will appear in the public papers, the Magnificent Edifice, THE ROYAL PANOPTICON OF SCIENCE and ART, in Leicester-square, absolutely adapted either for the Basis of Scientific Objects and Mechanical Inventions, or for a Theatre or Music and Lecture Hall.

A more time, or short, afterwards, will be notified to the public, and invited to one of the finest instruments in the world and the Gallery, the Organ, the Gigantic Refreshment Saloons, the Saloons Supper, Hydraulic and Gas Apparatus and Fittings, and numerous Instruments connected with the Microscope, Chronometer, Kaleidoscope, Dioramas, Cosmoramas &c.

Particulars may be had shortly of Mr. St. B. Wheeler, Solicitor, 11, Parliament-street, Westminster, Mr. N. C. Cooke, Solicitor, Hatton-buildings, Temple; Messrs. Dowling and Co., Solicitors, 3, Serjeant's-inn, Fleet-street; Messrs. Mallett and Co., Solicitors, 10, Bedford-row; Messrs. Lee and Pemberton, Solicitors, 44, Lincoln's-inn-fields; Messrs. Sole and Son, Solicitors, 6, Basinghall-street; Messrs. Clarke and Galsworthy, Solicitors, 5, New-square, Lincoln's-inn; Messrs. Chilcott and Galsworthy, Auctioneers and surveyors, 29, Regent-street; Waterlow, Place, London, and at the Auction Mart, City.

---

HORSEMANSHIP.—PARK or ROAD.—Mr. DLAHAR, Professor of Riding, gives INSTRUCTION in the art of Horsemanship, also for the cure of Vicious Horses, Horses Shy, Restive, Jibbing, Kicking, Rearing, Bolting, and Horses at Mr. Payne's, 8, Milton-street, corner square

---

LAWN-MOWING MACHINES, Scythes (Boyd's Patent Vulcan and Self-Adjusting), Garden Engines Garden Rollers, Trimming Knives, and every description of Horticultural and Garden Implements. Priced List, with Engravings, free by post. BOYD, 12, Upper-East-Smithfield, and 109, Cheapside (Opposing to the Monument), London-bridge, E.C.—Established A.D. 1799

---

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS for EARLY SOWING post free at the annexed prices:—100 fine hardy Annuals, 5s.; 60 ditto, 3s.; 50 ditto, 2s. 6d. Descriptive Catalogue with remarks on the Culture of Flowers, WILLIAM KNIGHT, Bagshot Heath, Surrey.

---

IMPORTED FLOWER-SEEDS.—Splendid French Fancy Rosemot, French Boneset, Pyramidal and Dwarf Asters, each sort in packets of two varieties, 1s. per packet. Chinese Lotus-flowering Brompton and Emperor Double Stocks, each sort in packets of two varieties, 1s. per packet. Wallflowers and German Asters, each sort in packets of two varieties, 1s. per packet. Beet for post on receipt of 12 stamps. Catalogue of flower and vegetable seeds with a selection of 100 varieties for free by post.—H. J. MULLOCH, Covent-garden Market, London.

---

TO ANGLERS.—CHARLES FARLOW, 191, Strand, Manufacturer of superior FISHING RODS and TACKLE, at moderate prices. Catalogues gratis.

---

GOODRICH'S SISAL CIGARS! at his Tobacco, Snuff, and Cigar Stores, 407, Oxford-street, London, a few Sole-square. Box, containing 4, for 1s. 6d. Post-free 4s stamps extra. Pound Boxes, containing 100, 17s. 6d. Notes are now in use signed "H. N. Goodrich."

NEW MUSIC, &c.

REFLECTIONS on CHURCH MUSIC, for the Consideration of Church goers in general. By CARL ENGEL. Price 2s. 6d

"Although this volume is published at the low price of half-a-crown, its contents are of great value."—Clerical Journal.

"In it is pointed out how devotion and musical art may be combined without partisanship, baldness or enthusiast: superstition."—Athenæum.

London: GUSTAV SCHIRMANN and CO., 86, Newgate-street

---

WHERE SHALL WE WANDER? Duet, price 3s.; Prey Call Again, and Ask." Song, price 2s. Written and Composed by MRS. HOUGHTON.

D'ALMAINE and CO., 20, Soho-square

---

HOME and SCHOOL HYMN-BOOK.—The Music and Words of 167 Hymns, arranged on a novel plan, every word being placed on the music a, so to suit the children, the teacher, and the accompanyist. Price 1s. 6d. in cloth cover

London: DAVIDSON, Patere-row, 26, Finsbury-circus, and all Booksellers

---

ALL MUSIC HALF PRICE, including all the new and fashionable Music of the day, with the exception of the cheap Music and bound works, at EVANS and CO.'s, 77, Regent-street, Portman-square. Country orders punctually executed.

---

MUSICAL LIBRARY.—The New St. Pancras Supplement to CATALOGUE for 1856, just published, contains more than 10,000 Works. A useful Book of Reference for Librarians, Musicsellers, and Amateurs, price 2s.; Complete Catalogues, 6s. 6d.; containing above 20,000 Works. An Annual Subscription of Two Guineas entitles Subscribers to select as their property One Hundred Pounds worth of Music.

London: L. SCHUBMANN and Co., 86, Newgate-street, E.C.

---

MUSICAL BOX REPOSITORY, 32, Ludgate-street (near St. Paul's).—WALES and M'CULLOCH are direct importers of Nicole Frères's Celebrated MUSICAL BOXES, playing brilliantly the best Polkas, Waltzes, &c., at Sacred Music. Large Airs from Operas, &c., at 2s., 3s., 4s., 5s., 6s., 7s., 8s., 9s., 10s., 12s., 14s., 16s., 18s., 20s., 25s., 30s., 35s., 40s., 45s., 50s., 60s., 70s., 80s., 90s., 100s., 120s., 140s., 160s., 180s., 200s., 220s., 240s., 260s., 280s., 300s., 320s., 340s., 360s., 380s., 400s., 420s., 440s., 460s., 480s., 500s., 520s., 540s., 560s., 580s., 600s., 620s., 640s., 660s., 680s., 700s., 720s., 740s., 760s., 780s., 800s., 820s., 840s., 860s., 880s.,

CEREMONY OF PLACING THE GUARDS' CRIMEAN COLOURS IN THE CHAPEL OF THE WELLINGTON BARRACKS.—(SEE PAGE 268

THE ROYAL OBSERVATORY, CAPE TOWN.

DR. LIVINGSTON'S ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATIONS.

ROYAL OBSERVATORY, CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Geographical Society of London, there was read the following—

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER ADDRESSED BY THOMAS MACLEAR, ESQ., H.M. ASTRONOMER AT THE CAPE, TO THE SECRETARY.

Royal Observatory, Cape of Good Hope,
November 3, 1856.

The object of this letter is to report progress in the reduction of the astronomical observations which that remarkable and excellent man, Dr. Livingston, made for geographical positions, on his track from Loanda across the continent to Quilimane. He has sent them to me for reduction, and I am anxious that they should be in Sir R. Murchison's hands, according to Livingston's request, with the least possible delay; or rather, I am anxious that they should meet him in England at the right time—the time when the society and the public at large will be doing him due honour for services without a parallel.

1. To expedite the reductions, I had skeleton forms printed for the computation of time from altitudes, for altitudes from time, and for Greenwich time from the lunar distances.

2. His observed lunar distances were compared (roughly) with tabular lunar distances, in order to detect errors of date as to the day of observation a common source of error where civil clashes with astronomical reckoning.

3. The watch error was computed from each altitude, whether observed for watch error or for the [illegible] of parallax and refraction, to detect errors of [illegible] or of transcribing; and while this was going on, another computer was following closely, calculating the parallaxes and altitudes for the times of lunar distance measures.

The total number of altitudes computed for time is 214, exclusive of repetitions or checks.

To this point the reductions were brought up on Saturday. To-day we commence the lunar distances, which will be computed by the rigorous trigonometrical process, viz., the final computation; for I find they must be repeated, as the assumed longitude sometimes is a degree in error; therefore at least two, but generally three, approximations will be needed.

Thus you will perceive that the only residual errors will be chargeable to the eccentricity or index errors of the sextant, and to the errors of the lunar tables; and, as Livingston unfortunately did not visit the Cape, I have had no chance or opportunity for examining the instrument.

I do hope that Livingston may be [illegible] lodged by the Crown in a substantial form. He is a poorer man than he was [illegible] landed in Africa. Without reserve [illegible] has rendered services to [illegible] commerce, and [illegible] constitution has been seriously injured by [illegible] attacks of fever. In fact, it would be [illegible] another whose claims on public gratitude are so strong.

Yours, dear Sir, truly,
T. MACLEAR.

Dr. Shaw, Secretary of the Royal Geographical Society.

THE CAPE OBSERVATORY.

THE scene of the reduction of our distinguished traveller's observations was founded in the year 1820; and the Rev. Fearon Fallows—remarkable for having made his way, at Cambridge, from an obscure origin to a highly honourable position, and remarkable alike for his practical scientific skill and for his mathematical acquirements—was appointed the first Astronomer.

Thus was realised a consummation long and devoutly desired by astronomers, not only of England, but of all Europe; for, however numerous observations may be in the northern hemisphere, they will be unable to complete many of the most important researches unless they are supplemented by similar observations on the southern side of the world's centre.

To this end many express, but temporary, astronomical expeditions were sent out, from time to time, to the Cape or its neighbourhood, and of them, those of the Abbé La Caille, of Halley, and of Maskylene, were the most important. Still, although these did much good, the advancing character of every branch of astronomy demanded better and more frequent observations, and established the necessity for a fixed public observatory.

On arriving at Cape Town, Mr. Fallows found the great local mischief to be avoided when choosing the site of the observatory was sand sharp, cutting, silicious sand—rendered up freely by the dry and heated soil to the everlasting winds and whirlwinds of the never-ending storm which blows so unceasingly, even with clear skies, at that windiest corner of the earth. With this object, he at last selected a station on a rising ground, four miles east of Cape Town, on the low tract of land which connects the mountainous peninsula of Cape Town and Table Mountain with the main continent. Here he fixed the observatory, on a foundation of green-stone, with a firm clayey upper soil, unvaried by either the red cloud of dust seen daily to come along the high road, on its way into Cape Town, on one hand, or on the other the great cloud of white sand flying along the plains of the flats, and destroying all the vegetation in its progress into Table Bay. The situation had, moreover, the advantages of an unlimited, almost a sea, horizon north and south; the eastern as clear, and the western only partially obstructed by mountains, and that not to the extent that would have been the case nearer to Cape Town or any of the adjacent villages.

Here, then, the Observatory was built, containing the best meridian instruments of the day in well-apportioned apartments, with accommodation for the astronomer and two assistants. And here poor Mr. Fallows laboured and died: here his successor, Mr. Henderson, made an immense number of observations, and deduced many important results; and here the present ardent astronomer, Mr. Maclear, has lived, and observed, and computed, and printed, for more than twenty years.

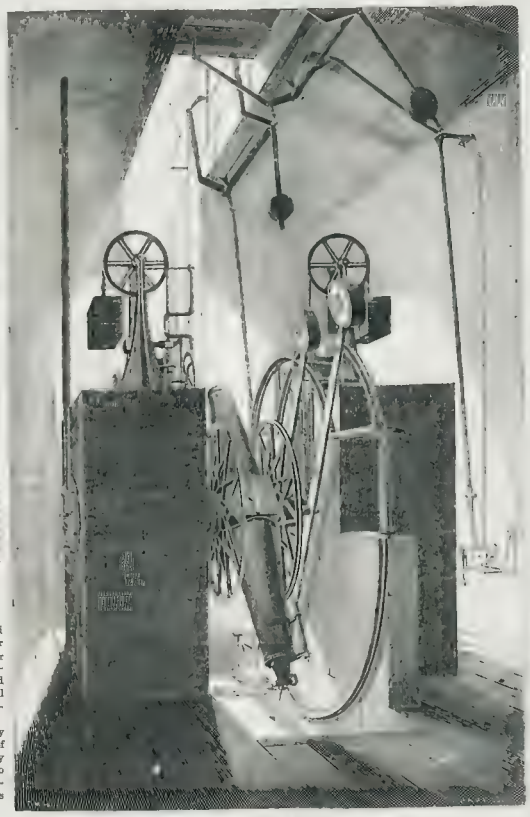
During this period many additions, alterations and improvements have been made from time to time, but none so important as that which we are about to describe viz. the substitution of a new Airy's Transit Circle in place of the former Mural Circle with which all observations of declination have hitherto been made.

The Engraving shows the situation of the Observatory, with the Table Mountain in the distance capped by the "table-cloth" cloud. In the foreground appears a pump with shifting sails, erected and erected by Professor F. Smyth during his residence at the Cape.

The Transit Instrument, which we engrave, was constructed from the designs of the Astronomer Royal, Professor Airy, and is in most [illegible] to the large one in the Greenwich Observatory, also designed by Mr. Airy. The instrument is constructed principally of cast iron, in the smallest possible number of pieces. The pivots on which the instrument turns are cast with the cube forming the body of the instrument, and are extremely hard; whilst the rest of the body remains soft. This essential point was attained by the use of chilled cast iron, which was the only material by which such a combination of qualities could be secured. The circles are about six feet in diameter, and have each graduated rim of silver dovetailed into the edges. By a very ingenious arrangement of microscopes in the stones which carry the bearings of the instrument, eight readings are taken of each observation, and may all be taken from one point, without the observer having to actually visit the different points of the circle. The instrument weighs nearly a ton, but is so accurately balanced that it is under perfect control, and may be easily moved by one finger. A very beautiful system of parallel motion carries a trough full of mercury for taking observations by reflection. This trough being filled from the bottom of a bottle, the surface of the mercury is always clear.

The optical parts of this and the Greenwich instrument were made by Troughton and Simms, of London; and the engineering work by Ransomes and Sims, of Ipswich.

England now can boast of having the two finest transit instruments in the world - one in the southern, and one in the northern, hemisphere.



TRANSIT INSTRUMENT AT THE CAPE OBSERVATORY.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS—MONDAY.

THE GOVERNATIVE MANIFESTO.

Earl GRANV[illegible] moved the second reading of the Income-tax Bill.

The Earl [illegible] said it was not his intention to oppose the bill, however much he regretted that it had not been thought [illegible] to postpone a measure of such importance to the consideration of a new Parliament. [illegible]est work of such an assembly must be a general consideration of the finances and the taxation of the kingdom. He regarded the finance of the country with [illegible] anxiety. [illegible]ax had been the cardinal point of the political [illegible]ment. It never was considered otherwise than as a war tax [illegible]e of a direct [illegible] kept only for the purpose, and struck off the list when its exigency had been accomplished. [illegible] was the pledge of 1853, and its fulfilment he looked forward to in 1860. [illegible]e [illegible]. It had been understood that the [illegible]d was last year to have been reduced to 5d., as a step towards [illegible]tion in 1860. The war that had supervened increased [illegible] the tax to 16d., but on the peace it should have fallen at once to 5d. [illegible]ancellor of the Exchequer however, had kept the 7d., by taking advant[illegible] mistake in the Act of Parliament declaring the period of time, and now looked forward for the [illegible] a surplus of £500,000. But the Persian war, the Chinese war, with the many calamities that followed around it, have not been [illegible] £6,000,000; and it is upon this assumption that the [illegible] of a surplus of £500,000 is based. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] £1,amounting [illegible],000,000? This will have ended in 1858, and with [illegible] million from the change from 7d [illegible] the deficit will be [illegible] between [illegible] Would [illegible] have been reduced to 5d., as a step towards [illegible]tion in 1860. The war that had supervened increased [illegible] the tax to 16d., but on the peace it should have fallen at once to 5d. [illegible]ancellor of the Exchequer however, had kept the 7d., by taking advant[illegible] mistake in the Act of Parliament declaring the period of time, and now looked forward for the [illegible] a surplus of £500,000. But the Persian war, the Chinese war, with the many calamities that followed around it, have not been [illegible] £6,000; and it is upon this assumption that the [illegible] of a surplus of £500,000 is based. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] £1,amounting [illegible],000,000? This will have ended in 1858, and with [illegible] million from the change from 7d [illegible] the deficit will be [illegible] between [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Memorabilia,

LITERARY, ANTIQUARIAN, SCIENTIFIC, AND ARTISTIC.

"A little's chink may let in much light."—OLD PROVERB.

ROYAL JEWELS: WHO LOST? WHO FOUND?

The following cutting is from an old newspaper of the year 1815. Where is the valuable sceptre at present preserved? Have Mr. Swift's conjectures been since verified?

"THE SCEPTRE LATELY FOUND IN THE TOWER.—Mr. E. L. Swift says:—It was discovered last year behind a massy oak press, which is apparently several hundred years old. It was in a case, covered with crimson velvet, extremely decayed; many of the jewels had dropped out of the settings, but none were lost out of the case. The sceptre is of gold, richly ornamented with diamonds and other gems, but in a style of workmanship extremely antique; the jewels—some of which are very large—amount to considerably beyond the number of 200. On the top is a white onyx dove, with her wings expanded, and the feet resting on a cross. I have examined the records of our several Coronations, and find in none any notice of this fifth sceptre. There are two with a cross for the King and Queen, and two with a dove. At parts of the ceremony they held a sceptre in each hand; but in no part are they required to change these sceptres, and cannot of course hold three. My own opinion is—which I offer with much deference—that the ancient regalia were considered by the Parliament, in the time of Charles I. to be broken up and sold, this sceptre was concealed from their ravages, and that the secret was lost before the Restoration. At that time a new regalia was made for Charles II., and I conjecture that a new sceptre, with the dove, was then provided in lieu of this ancient one, which was supposed to have shared the fate of the others. Assuredly its existence remained unknown during 175 years, until I had the good fortune to restore it to its place among the Royal jewels of Great Britain. The style of its workmanship appears of high antiquity, and I have little hesitation in believing it to be the original sceptre of Edward the Confessor, consequently more than 750 years old, and the most ancient of our whole regalia."

With respect to the following ephemeral paragraph (the date of which is 1820), can any of your correspondents inform me whether the Royal Star and Garter were so discovered? Were they secreted by George III. himself or removed by some disciple of Colonel Blood?

Apropos of Blood, who achieved an unenviable notoriety from having stolen the crown and regalia from the Tower, can any erudite contributor to "Memorabilia" explain how it was that Charles II. not only pardoned the desperado but bestowed upon him the annual pension of £500?

"THE KING'S JEWELS.—We are authorised to state, that the only jewels of his Majesty which are now missing are his Star and Garter. The former was very splendid, being studded all over with diamonds, and the buckle of the Garter was also richly studded in the same manner. Their value is estimated at between six and seven thousand pounds. A close search has been made for these jewels, and though it has not yet been attended with the desired result, yet no apprehension is entertained of their having been irrecoverably lost. It is generally believed among the officers of his Majesty's Household, that they have been deposited in some place of secret safety by the King himself."

W. J. FITZ-PATRICK.

NOTES

SHAKSPEARE AND ARISTOTLE.—Aristotle, in enunciating the truth—τὸ πολιτικὸν οὐκ ἐστὶν οἰκείως ἀκροατὴς ὁ νέος—evidently considers the political science as embracing the Ethical, simply using the term πολιτικὸν in a comprehensive sense; for, as the Political science has reference to the State, so the Ethical science has reference to the individuals who compose the State;—Aristotle, in short, regards the Political science as that which has for its object the welfare of man. Thus there exists no necessity for flying to the conjecture that in former editions of Aristotle's Ethics πολιτικὸς was read πόλεως; nor need we accuse Hobbes and others of want of scholarship.—C. C. H., OXON.

THE ARCTIC MEDALS.—In the Gazette of the 30th January the public read with much pleasure her Majesty's most kind and gracious recognition of the services of the Arctic navigators in the official announcement that her Majesty had ordered a medal to be conferred on every person who had been engaged in any of the expeditions since the year 1818. In the many grants of medals made by her Majesty for naval and military achievements, it has hitherto been the rule that the medal has been accompanied by a clasp specifying the particular service for which it was conferred; and, when the individual had been in more than one action, then additional clasps were added, so that we frequently observe many clasps to the same medal. From the wording of the Admiralty notice I infer that a medal will be given to each Arctic investigator, without any clasp specifying the time of his service, and, still less, clasps distinguishing those who have been engaged in several of the twenty expeditions sent out by the British Government since 1818. Now it is a matter of common notoriety that many distinguished Arctic officers made their first acquaintance with the northern regions as midshipmen, and in that service have passed through the successive grades of lieutenants, commanders, captains. I think, therefore, that if (as I suppose) the Admiralty have not ordered clasps specifying the distinct services of each individual, they will not carry out her Majesty's beneficent intentions to her meritorious and severely-tried servants, through whom (to use the words of the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Arctic Expedition) "the long-sought for problem has at length been solved by this country, and another ray has been added to the maritime glory of the British Empire".—R. S.

QUERIES.

ENIGMA.—Perhaps you will be kind enough to allow a corner in your widely-circulated paper for the following enigma, which I have had by me for more than thirty years, without being able to solve it myself or to find any one to do it for me. I doubt not, however, some of your numerous readers may be able to find a solution for it.—A GLEANER, Edinburgh

The best subject in the works of art,
The brightest scene which nature can impart,
The well known signal in the time of peace,
The point essential in a tenant's lease,
The prize which merit never yet has won,
The planet sun between the earth and sun,
The ploughman's comfort while he holds his plough,
The soldier's duty and the lover's vow,
The miser's idol and the judge of Jews,
The wife's ambition and the parson's dues.
Now, if your noble spirit can divine
A corresponding word for every line,
By all these letters clearly will be shown
An ancient city of no small renown

FIRST ENGLISH PANTOMIME.—What is the date of the first pantomime ever performed in England?—MARK.

CLERICAL SMOKERS.—Can any of your clerical or lay readers give me the name of the Bishop (and the date of the year it happened) who so unceremoniously "put out the pipes" of the clergymen of his diocese? A writer in the Lancet says it is within the last eight or ten years. CLERICUS ANGLICANUS.

ANSWERS.

AN ENGLISHMAN WITH A WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN NAME.—In answer to Mr. Walcott's question I beg to send him a few instances. William Anne Keppel, Earl of Albemarle, died 1754. George Augustus Henry Anne Darby, Baron Darby, Life, born 1756. Sir Henry Anne Lawley, Bart., born May 3, 1767, succeeded his father in 1803. Sir Frederick Anne Heron Evelyn, Brandon Park, Wilts; succeeded his brother, Sept 24, 1819. The late Viscount Strangford's youngest son, born, 1825, was christened Percy Ellen Frederick William. A CONSTANT SUBSCRIBER, L. K.

I beg to state, that the Earl of Essex who lived in the middle of the last century, was named William Anne Holles Capel. The same thing occurs in the pedigree of the Earl of Albemarle, William Anne Keppel; but this latter family are of foreign origin.—A. W. COOPER, R.A.

I beg to inform you that one of the Christian names of the late Lord Ranelagh was Anne; and also that there is an instance of an Englishwoman with a man's Christian name, in the person of the Hon. Mrs. Biber, a granddaughter of the Earl of Buchan, whose Christian name is John.—A SUBSCRIBER.

The late Lord Ranelagh's names were George Ann Parkyns. The late M. G. Sir Ferdinand Amelia Lecamus[illegible] F. S. PIERREPONT.

THE WORD CREE.—In reply to "F. H. F.," Doncaster, the word Cri, pronounced cree, is a common Welsh word, and signifies fresh, unleavened, raw. Bara Cri, primarily unleavened bread, is used to denominate a kind of cake, of flour and water, baked over a fire, which is still the usual mode of prepar[illegible] bread among the most primitive peasants of the Principality. No doubt the Yorkshire verb is derived from this Celtic adjective.—P. G. E., Ruthin.

In answer to a query in last week's ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, as to the word. "Cree," I beg to state that no doubt it takes its origin from the Gaelic Chree, heart; Ben-na-chree, in the Manx language, being "woman of my heart." In the Isle of Man the word is constantly used amongst the natives as a term of endearment, such as child chree, &c. J. G. F.

A MAN'S CALLING.—The conjecture of your correspondent "Dublin" is neither original nor correct. The word "Calling" is evidently derived from the Latin. It means a vocation, or that state of life to which it has pleased Heaven to call us.—MARCUS. Liverpool.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

ABRACES, Euston s Hotel.—Your best course will be to join the St. George's C[illegible] Club during your leave of absence, and practise there daily

H. A. SCRUTT.—Your Problem admits of an obvious solution in one move! Kt takes K [illegible]

A. R.—An easy mate in three moves

C., Jersey.—Such games have little interest. The players are evidently unconscious of the importance of starting with a settled plan of operation. Know little of combination or [illegible]ession, and are wanting even in that first principle of Chess strategy the art of [illegible]ding one another. They should study six months hard study of the finest [illegible]removes of play procurable, [illegible]t mere openings, but real games, and then they would just begin to have an inkling of how much brainwork goes to make a first-rate Chess player

D. S., OMEGA, SCRUTCHER.—All impediments have been surmounted. The Chess meeting intended to have been held in Birmingham is now finally settled to take place in March next. We must not [illegible] to possess it of any particulars, but have good reasons for believing that the assembly will be upon a scale of magnitude quite unprecedented since the great Contest at the Westminster Club in London, during the Exhibition year

F. W. S., Matlock.—Shall call on [illegible] about a Chess magazine. The chief organ in France is the [illegible] subscription twenty shillings a year. In Germany, the "Schachzeitung," which the annual subscription in England is about 12s.

C. T. SAUNDERS, Honorary Secretary of the Birmingham Chess-Club is thanked for his annual return, which shows the Club to be healthy and improving

THE MANCHESTER CHESS-CLUB is desirous of playing a match by correspondence with some other provincial club

J. D. W., Enfield.—The [illegible] for the American "Chess Monthly" are received by Messrs. Bohnn, of Parliament [illegible]

P. H. T., Hoboken.—Your [illegible] the height of Chess problems and intelligence has safely [illegible]

G. T. SAUNDERS, Honorary Secretary of the Birmingham Chess-Club is thanked for his annual return, which shows the Club to be healthy and improving

THE MANCHESTER CHESS-CLUB is desirous of playing a match by correspondence with some other provincial club

J. D. W., Enfield.—The German "Chess Handbuch," and the [illegible] Lasker's "Leitfaden" (the [illegible] Chess player's Handbook," and "Chess-player's Companion," published by [illegible]

THE CHOIR OF THE CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF ST. MARY, CARLISLE, RESTORED.—(SEE PAGE 276)

THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS' LEVEE.—SEE NEXT PAGE

THE SPEAKER'S DINNER AND LEVEE.

THE Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons gave his usual Parliamentary full-dress dinner on Saturday evening, the 14th of March, at his mansion in Eaton-square. The following numbers were present:—The Right Hon. Lord Alexander Jeremy, the Right Hon. Viscount Barrington, the Right Hon. Lord Osculston, the Right Hon. Lord Henry Cholmondeley, Sir Charles Coote, Sir Archibald Campbell, Sir John Carnac, Admiral Sir George Tyler, Sir Baldwin Reynold, Admiral Walcott, Captain Jolliffe, Mr. Miles, Mr. Compton, Colonel Boldero, Mr. Royal, Hon. Gen. Dundas, Mr. Baker, Mr. Moody, Mr. George Butt, Q.C., Mr. Gathorne Hardy, Mr. Pocock, Mr. Christy, Mr. Edward Ball, Mr. Baldock, Mr. Grogan, the Rev. Thomas Garnier, and the Hon. George Waldegrave.

The right hon. gentleman afterwards held his farewell levee, which was attended by nearly every member now in London, some hon. members having come back from their constituencies on purpose to pay this last tribute of respect to the right hon. gentleman. The following were present:—His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, his Grace the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Abingdon, Colonel Adair, Mr. Alcock, Sir Andrew Agnew, Lord Broughton, Mr. Beggs, Mr. C. Bailey, Mr. Baldock, Mr. Edward Ball, Mr. T. Baring, Mr. Barnes, Viscount Barrington, Mr. Beaumont, Mr. Bennet, Sir Samuel Bignold, Colonel Boldero, Mr. Bonham-Carter, Mr. Bowyer, Right Hon. E. Bouverie, Mr. Brumley, the Hon. Henry Brand, Mr. Butler, Mr. George Butt, the Hon. George Byng, Lord Calthorpe, Sir Fenwick Cleik, Sir Archibald Campbell, Sir John Carnac, Lord Robert Cecil, Viscount Chelsea, Lord Henry Cholmondeley, Mr. Christy, Lord Robert Clinton, Mr. Clive, Mr. Cobbold, Sir William Codrington, General Codrington, Mr. Compton, Sir Charles Coote, Mr. Currie, the Right Hon. Henry Carew, Lord Barpherch, Mr. D. Davies, Mr. Deedes, Mr. De Vere, the Hon. Henry Duncombe, Col. H. Duncombe, the Hon. William Duncombe, Mr. George Dundas, Mr. Frederick Dundas, Mr. De Pre Viscount Somerton, Sir Philip Egerton, Viscount Emlay, Mr. Estcourt, Mr. W. Ewart, Mr. J. Ewart, General Fox, Mr. Fagan, Mr. Farrer, Mr. Fenwick, Mr. Franklyn, Sir John Fitzgerald, Right Hon. Colonel Forster, Colonel Gilpin, Right Hon. William Gladstone, Mr. Glyn, Viscount Goderich, Mr. Greenall, Mr. Thomas Greene, Mr. Gregson, Mr. Grenfell, Mr. Grogan, Lord Robert Grosvenor, Lord Grosvenor, Mr. Gurney, Mr. Gwyn, General Hall, Mr. Hardy, Sir W. Heathcote, Mr. Hindley, Hon. G. Heathcote, Mr. Henry Herbert, Lord Hotham, Lord Edward Howard, Mr. Hume, Mr. Hutchins, Mr. Hutt, Mr. Ingram, Earl Jermyn, Mr. Jolliffe, Admiral Jones, Sir Literoy Kelly, Mr. David Ker, Mr. Richard Ker, Colonel Knox, Hon. P. Locke King, Mr. W. Gore Langton, Mr. Layard, Lord A. Lennox, Lord H. Lennox, Mr. Locke, Mr. Mullins, Sir George E. Bulwer Lytton, Lord John Manners, Earl of March, Mr. Dudley Marjoribanks, Mr. C. Martin, Mr. Miles, Mr. Monckton Milnes, Right Hon. William Monsell, Mr. Moody, Sir George Shaw Lefevre, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Mundy, Sir Denis Le Marchant, Mr. Mowatt, Sir Denham Norreys, Mr. North, Mr. O'Brien, Lord Ossulston, Mr. Packe, Mr. Robert Palmer, Mr. Roundell Palmer, Colonel Patten, Mr. Peacocke, Sir George Pechell, Mr. Frederick Peel, General Peel, Sir Lenham Perry, Mr. Portal, Mr. Pritchard, the Rev. G. Repton, Lord C. Russell, Viscount Raynham, Mr. Rebow, Mr. Rice, Mr. Rich, Mr. Ridley, Lord John Russell, Viscount Sandon, Mr. Scholefield, Mr. Henry Seymour, Mr. Shafto, Mr. Sheridan, Major Sibthorp, Mr. M. Smith, Mr. Abel Smith, Colonel Somerset, Mr. Starkie, the Marquis of Stafford, Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, Mr. Sutton, Mr. Thornhill, Mr. Tollemache, Sir Lytton Tyler, Sir John Tyrell, Mr. Vance, Lord Harry Vane, the Right Hon. C. Vane, Mr. H. Waddington, Admiral Walcot, Sir John Walsh, M. Watts, Colonel Wilkins, Mr. Whitbread, Mr. Wickham, Sir William Jolyon Williams, Sir Henry Willoughby, Mr. Charles Grenfell, Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood, Mr. Antonio Panizzi, the Rev. Thomas Garnier, and the Hon. G. Waldegrave.

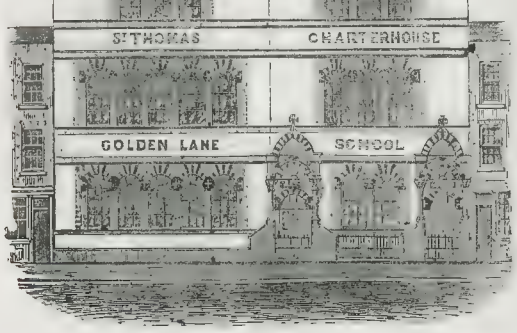
THE CHOIR OF THE CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF ST. MARY, CARLISLE

THE View which we present to our readers of Carlisle Cathedral, is the choir looking east. The dilapidated state of this ancient fabric had long called for some renovation and repair. Accordingly, in the autumn of 1852 Mr. Christian, architect, of Whitehall-place, was called upon to furnish a report of the then state of the edifice. Before enumerating the various points which have been attended to during the repairs, it will be as well to say a few words as to the building itself. As it at present stands the Cathedral is not complete, a large portion of the nave being wanting—the fragment which remains of it and its ante-chapels, serving as and used as a parish church. The most ancient portions of the Cathedral itself are those parts erected in the eleventh and twelfth centuries—viz., the nave, south transept, and lower part of the tower. They are in the bold Norman style, as is also part of the north transept, erected about the same period. There is a clerestory to the nave and south transept; but the original roof does not remain. The walls on the north and south sides of the choir are Early English.

The pillars of the choir and the whole of the east end to the springing of the great window are of the period of Edward II. The arches are Early English; the old mutilated of these as well as the groining of the side aisles having been used in their construction.

The great east window seen in our View is placed at the middle of the fourteenth century, as well as the two north side, and is one of the finest in the kingdom. Returning to the north aisle we shall observe that great care has been taken in every particular at its complete restoration. New stones have been inserted where the old had perished. The elegant semicircular oak ceiling, which had from 1764 been hidden from view by an ugly ribbed and plaster one has been brought to light, and appears in its pristine glory, being now richly decorated in gold and colour. The great east window has been entirely restored—the old pieces having been so great as to allow for complete repair. The old stained glass in the tracery lights has been restored, and, where wanting, has been supplied with new glass of corresponding colours. The south aisle walls there has been, and the roofs of every portion have been completely restored; and the entire fabric is now a magnificent specimen of ecclesiastical Gothic architecture. We should not omit to mention the beautiful new doorway in the south transept, which has been placed where there originally was a Norman one. It is to be hoped the lower lights of the great east window will be filled with stained glass, in memory of the late Bishop of the diocese. It is gratifying to learn that the estimate of the cost of alteration has not been exceeded: this sum was about £19,000. The time occupied in the restoration was about three years, under the able direction of Mr. Christian and Mr. C. H. Purday, his clerk of the works.

The organ is quite new—made by Willis, of London, at a cost of £1100—and is placed on the rood screen.



NEW SCHOOLS OF ST. THOMAS CHARTERHOUSE, GOLDEN-LANE, OPENED ON THURSDAY LAST.
(SEE PAGE 285.)

FINE ARTS.

THE PEACE CONFERENCES IN PARIS. Painted by EDWARD DUBUFE.

The transactions closed by the Paris Peace of 1856 were unquestionably the most important of any that have taken place since 1815. That the Conferences virtually terminated by the signature of the Treaty of Peace should form the subject of a picture of portraits was, therefore, not only a public want, but in accordance with the well-known precedents of the Treaties of Westphalia and Vienna, the representations of which must be in the memory of many of our readers. The result is a picture (now the property of the Emperor of the French) which fully gratifies the curiosity, not only with regard to the locality of the Conferences, but the personages who sat in council.

This is by no means a feat easy of accomplishment by the generality of artists. The portraits of prominent living men must be successful. A vague likeness subordinate to the general effect of a picture representing dead personages will not do in the case of men with every peculiarity of the expression of whose countenances thousands are familiar. Then the action must be easy and natural, with neither over-expressed figures histrionically arranged for a tableau, nor automata who do not know what to do with their arms. Few, very few, groups of portraits make a good picture, comprising the rigid accuracy we have first demanded, and then the naturalness of style which marks the artist who may be called a master.

We have been much pleased by this picture of M. Dubufe. The likenesses, as far as we know them, are of the most striking resemblance. Count Manteuffel is perhaps somewhat too young, but perfect as regards expression; Lord Clarendon is perhaps the most aristocratic-looking of the group; and Count Orloff has the strongest tinge of military tournure. Count Buol's intellectual countenance, with its undercurrent of quiet, strong will, is quite successful. Count Walewski and M. Benedetti, the Secretary of the Conference, are also striking likenesses. We have not the advantage of being able to speak as to that of Ali Pacha, the Turkish Plenipotentiary, not having seen that personage; but his figure is well painted, in spite of the Europeanised costume capped by the fez, which most unpicturesque portion of the Oriental dress has unfortunately been retained in the new habiliments of the Ottomans. Count Cavour, the representative of Sardinia; Lord Cowley, the resident British Ambassador; Baron de Bourqueney, who has fulfilled so many diplomatic missions in our time; Baron Hübner, the resident Austrian Minister; and one or two other auxiliary diplomatists, complete the group, which is partly seated and partly standing round the table on which the treaty was signed.

The chief feature of the apartment is a noble chimneypiece in the style of Louis XVI., or the Empire, as far as we could make out. Accuracy in every particular was within the reach of the artist, all facility having been given him in making his sketches.

The figures, fifteen in number, are the size of life, and the picture fills the whole wall of the saloon of Messrs. Leggatt, in Cornhill. The subject is a great one, and the artist is, to use a diplomatic metaphor, à la hauteur de sa mission. The colouring is nowhere ambitious sober, in fact, to English eyes; but the painting is firm and sustained; and in the composition, the distribution of so large a space evinces unquestionable skill.

The moral and political signification of this picture is such as may well make an Englishman proud. The lineaments of the British Statesman who so worthily represented his country on this occasion recall a tenure of the Foreign Office marked by extensive intelligence under the controul of a sober judgment and firm tenacity of right, regulated by conciliatory procedures, which constitute the most essential qualities of the practical diplomatist.

PRINTING IN COLOURS.

CHICKETERS. After J. RITCHIE. Lithographed in Colours by VINCENT BROOKS. London: Boys.

The great extension that printing in colours has latterly received is well worthy of attention. It is true that there are many things which it cannot as yet accomplish. It dare not depart from a fundamental tone, or give united gradations from cold to warm, or from warm to cold, and when a variety of colours are introduced there is a great risk of spotty confusion. Rock, foreground, meadow, and water, as well as architectural masses, can be given with effect: but the skies are generally muddled, and foliage in a foreground very vague. On the other hand, high lights of brilliant colour, if inserted with judgment, come out with marvellous effect. The great rule of the printer in colours ought to be, not to attempt too much, to keep within safe bounds, and gradually to feel his way to those complex effects of painting or drawing by hand. His tone of the cricket-field has all the agreeable warmth of nature in the beginning of autumn, and the grouping of the spectators is easy and natural. The companion subject is "A Picnic Party"—with the water and the ground on the left of which we are particularly well pleased. The right side of this picture, comprising the dark trunks of trees, is not to us so agreeable as the obstacle being more in the imperfect procedures hitherto established than in the incapacity of the artist, because it is with an embryo art that we are dealing.

THE ENJOYMENTS OF PEACE AND THE MISERIES OF WAR.

These are larger and much more ambitious efforts; they are by the same artists as the above. What strikes us in the former plate is a great inequality of effect and execution, some portions being admirable, and others betraying that embryo state of the art of which we have spoken. The lines oak is certainly very clever; and the tiled roof of the old roadside inn is brilliant and effective as in a scene of Teniers or Tobias. There are also delicacies in the tint of the pond which have all the illusion of a diorama; but still the spottiness and uncertainty mar the general effect as a vehicle of truth. In parts we are under the illusion—in other parts, to use a French expression for which there is no equivalent, we are désillusionnés. "The Miseries of War" is the most elaborate of all these efforts. The conflagration of the village, and the whole illumined by the distant bank in the clouds, might do if it was the whole we would say qui trop embrasse mal étreint.

ENGRAVINGS.

THE PIPER. Engraved by EDWARD GOODALL, after FREDERICK GOODALL, A.R.A. Art-Union of London, 1857.

We have here a domestic scene in the manner of Teniers, Wilkie, De Brakelaar, Thomas Faed, et hoc genus omne. A peasant's hut is enlivened by the presence of a blind piper led by his dog. The young mother stands with her children around her, and the aged grandmother holding a grandchild completes the group. The expression of this last figure is full of homely truth and heartiness. Age renews its youth in such scenes—to which the forlorn, wobegone appearance of the aged itinerant piper forms so striking a contrast. The locality, with its humble still-life, and its rafters begrimed with the smoke of generations, gives fine scope to the engraver, who has performed his work magnificently. Not only are these details done in a manner that recalls the best efforts of the eighteenth century, but the slight atmospheric veil is preserved with a delicacy which is utterly beyond the conception and execution of many engravers. This is a print which the most fastidious collector may add with satisfaction to his portfolio or cabinet.

THE BANK CHARTER ACT.*

THE appointment of a Committee of the House of Commons to investigate and report upon the Bank Charter Act of 1844 has fairly revived discussion on the Currency question. On various occasions the disciples of Mr. Huskisson have confidently announced to the world that the controversy was settled for ever; but, though more than half a century has elapsed since the famous Bullion Committee of 1810 published their memorable report, diversity of opinion still exists in undiminished antagonism. Colonel Torrens, one of the earliest writers on the subject, seems to prudent again to buckle on his armour in defence of bullionism. Mr. Combe has appeared as a champion of metallic money, and found an opponent of no ordinary prowess in Colonel Macdonald. As secretary to the late Sir Robert Peel, Mr. Arbuthnot has taken the field in defence of the principles of that lamented statesman; and from the mercantile ranks comes forth Mr. Hamer Stansfield, of Leeds, as an opponent of the doctrines advocated by Lord Overstone. The followers of Mr. Huskisson stand firmly to his fundamental proposition, that it is "the essence of money to possess intrinsic value," however they may differ as to the mode of securing the convertibility of the notes and in this unity of purpose resides their strength. On the other hand they who repudiate his monetary creed differ widely amongst themselves, and thus their opposition assumes a sectional character.

Many of the objects to the Act of 1844 adhere to the Act of 1819; but when Sir Robert Peel adopted the former he necessarily as a complement to the latter, he virtually abandoned the earlier measure. A wider difference arises as to the division of the Bank of England into the Issue and Banking departments, and there is a still more striking disparity as to the amount of bullion which the Bank ought to hold—in securities, unsecured by bullion. Others object to the limitation of banks, enforced, by the Act of 1844, which established a monopoly in violation of the almost universally-accepted principles of Free-trade. In this diversity of details the main subject is too frequently overlooked or reduced into a subordinate position. It is, therefore, satisfactory to find in Mr. Duncan's publication that he presents the doctrine he seeks to establish fully without any reservation whatever, and distinctly without circumlocution. In his introductory chapter he lays forward the leading arguments, both of the bullionists and of their opponents, so that the reader perceives at a glance the broad outlines of the controversy.

Mr. Duncan draws a broad and deep line of demarcation between the moneyed instruments required in the home and foreign trade. In the former, gold is the money; in the former he would use representatives of money; in the latter, bullion. By his plan he believes that gold would be economised, as it would not be needed in any of our domestic exchanges, so that, whether it were hoarded or exported, discounts would not rise; nor would any disturbance, or even inconvenience, arise in our internal trade. Our international trade, or imperial, money would be in the nature of an Exchequer Bill, which is not payable in gold on demand; or in the nature of a postage-stamp. It would never be sent out of the country; for, though valuable among ourselves, it would be valueless to foreigners. The foreigner would still trade with us on the same basis he now trades—that is, according to the measure of intrinsic value, estimated in bullion. He there fore, would never raise an objection to a change of system which would be a purely domestic arrangement, in no respect interfering with international exchanges.

Mr. Duncan—whose views we have endeavoured thus briefly to epitomize, without a leaning either in support or in condemnation of his theory gives us an historical sketch of the origin of coin and of the variation in English money from the earliest period down to the days in which we live. In this inquiry many points in the bullionist controversy are examined—as the depreciation of the pound, John Law's Bank, French Assignats, the continental money of America, and the Scotch system. The suspension of cash payments in 1797, and the acts of 1816, 1819, and 1844, with the several panics caused by those measures, are minutely discussed. This mode of treatment necessary leads to a criticism on the doctrines propounded by the more eminent writers and speakers on the currency question, in which the author displays considerable research. Lord Overstone's theory of trade is subjected to a rigid analysis and condemned in unqualified terms.

Speaking in general terms, the main object of the writer of this book is to restore gold to its character as a commodity, to deprive it of its mint price, and to permit it to find its market price in national representative money under the law of supply and demand. Whatever difference of opinion may be entertained as to the premises or conclusions insisted on by Mr Duncan, it must be acknowledged that his book is honest, and that he has not evaded any difficulty or concealed any argument that militates against the system he has espoused. He is thoroughly in earnest, and no one can mistake his meaning. All partisanship he repudiates; and it is evident that what he has written is the result of patient study and matured reflection.

* "Ought the Bank of England or the People of England to receive the Profits of the National Circulation?" By Jonath. Duncan, R.N., Author of "Aladdin's Letters on Monetary Science." 12mo. Cokby, Paternoster-row.

DEPARTURE OF THE ALLIED TROOPS FROM GREECE. The Moniteur of Monday last publishes a letter from Athens, dated the 4th inst., stating that the English and French troops which have been in occupation of the Piræus took their departure on the 28th of February. The vessels on board which they had embarked the previous night, weighed anchor at seven o'clock in the morning, and after they got out of the harbour saluted the Royal flag of Greece, which was hoisted upon the Palace, with a discharge of twenty-one guns. The French Minister at Athens, having written to M. Rangabé, the Greek Minister of Foreign Affairs, to inform him of the embarkation of the Allied troops, received a letter in reply, in which M. Rangabé says:—"I feel it a real pleasure to be enabled to concur in the honourable testimony which has been so generally borne to the good conduct of the troops during their stay in Greece, and the care which has been taken by them never to depart from those rules of order and discipline which distinguish the soldiers of the nations that stand foremost in civilisation. By their irreproachable conduct, by the example of good order and industry which they have given at the Piræus, and by the improvements and public works which they have carried into execution there, these soldiers have earned the esteem and gratitude of the inhabitants of the city. It is most agreeable to me, therefore, M. le Ministre, to be enabled to state, that the King's Government joins, for its own part, in the well merited eulogies which have thus been obtained by the troops who quit the soil of Greece to-day."

THE COMING COMET.—PARIS, March 13.—At the last reception at the Tuileries, which took place the night before last, the coming comet was one of the subjects of conversation. Her Majesty the Empress seeing M. Leverrier, the well-known astronomer, among the guests, determined to make fun of the unsuspecting savant, and, feigning great alarm at the destruction of our globe, which this "extravagant and erring" luminary is, according to a German stargazer, to accomplish on the 14th of June, consulted him on the subject. M. Leverrier, both greatly annoyed at the guests, entered into a long explanation of the orbit, and his embarrassment in endeavouring to point out to her Majesty, who naturally would not be persuaded to be satisfied without explanation, made the evening pass off much more merrily than is usually the case with Imperial soirées generally solemn stiff affairs.

